City council meets to consider termination of Administrator

In an agenda posted at City Hall on Tuesday, February 11, a called meeting is to be held on Thursday, February 13 at 8:30 p.m. The first item on the agenda is "Consideration of termination of City Administrator and action thereon."

The regular meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening, February 10. In this meeting, an executive session was included to review the Administrator's job performance and to receive a response regarding the review. James Blankenship, City Administrator, was absent from this Council meeting.

Discussion of the Administrator's job performance and possible action by the council was posted as an agenda item for the regular meeting but these items were tabled.

Blankenship was out of town on Monday and Tuesday of this week and efforts to contact him failed.

The called meeting on Thursday also has listed as an agenda item the discussion of hiring a consultant on an interim basis until a city administrator is appointed.

Also scheduled for the February 13 meeting is the appointment of a new police chief.

In other business conducted at the regular meeting the council discussed possible action regarding the lakekeeper residence and the lakekeeper position. It was suggested that the trailer be cleaned up first and then the council will determine if anyone is interested in the job as lakekeeper.

OIL BIIDNESS . .

By Reg Boles ©1992

An interesting thing is happening on the way to the bank for major oil companies who are attempting to sell huge chunks of their domestic oil & gas portfolio.

An in-bred conflict of interest has arisen that is slowing down the sale of many properties.

Do you want to know more? Read on...

It seems that minimum acceptable prices (MAPS-for short) are so high, in many cases, that propsective buyers cannot meetor-beat them. Properties are being put up for bid, but no satisfactory bid is being found for the properties, so the inventory of ready-tosell properties is staying high.

This doesn't seem to make sense, since the majors are very anxious to sell. It would seem that MAPS would be at an all-time low reflecting a strong desire to sell. Yet, minimums are well above what anyone is willing to

As it turns out, it is not so much that propspective buyers are discounting the properties' value (which, if it were the case, it would result in not meeting MAPS, also). It has more to do with the attitude of the folks who manage the properties and put a value on them.

Those folks, in true corporate culture fashion, are scared stiff that some savvy independent oil company will come along and enhance the value of an inexpensive property to an extent that will embarrass the major. That will then lead to questions about the intelligence of the person who valued the property, and, well, you can guess who would pay the price for that embarrassment.

In order to prevent this embarrassment, those folks who work for the major oil companies will tend to set the value of a property as high as they reasonably can. This is a direct conflict of interest.

The conflict is between the valuator's desire to set a fair price for the property to sell it quickly, and his/her desire to prevent embarrassment, accomplished by padding the value a bit.

The result is a glut of properties at slightly over market prices. Exacerbating the problem is the flood of properties hitting the market on a daily basis, as majors fly the domestic coop. Add to that the squeeze on independents' cash flow (the main purchasers) caused by very low gas prices and sinking oil prices, and you have a problem.

Eventually, everyone will become wise to the internal problems of this massive sell-off of domestic properties-I think. The pressure to sell will start to outweigh the desire to cover one's own hindquarters, and more reasonable prices tied to desire to sell will start to emerge.

If that doesn't happen, look for widescale pluggings and abandonments of profitable properties-don't laugh-it could happen. Some companies are just big enough and entrenched enough in a selling procedure that common sense may never enter the picture. In my relatively short tenure in the oil patch, I have seen properties abandoned rather than sold for really dumb reasons. In several cases, tax consequences of a sale were the culprit, but in many more, the standard MAP evaluation process said it is better to plug than sell at below-MAP prices.

Never mind that the decision resulting defies logic. If the computer-generated MAP says it is better to plug at a cost than sell with cash flow (albeit at a loss from previous sunk costs), then so be it. That is the way corporate oil companies work many times.

I think that way of doing things prevailed when accountants moved into CEO spots...but I'm prejudiced in that respect and that is a topic better left for another It's Olympic excitement. The Winter games. I check the TV Guide, and when I can get a few minutes, sit down and watch. Skating. Hockey. Luge. Ice and snow. Men and women. We don't see a lot of gold medals for the Americans. But we do see a lot of fine athletes, many of them from smaller countries. And we see skill, discipline, and excellence. For centuries there has been Olympics—way back to ancient Greece. And that is quite a tradition!

I do like sports. I like to play. In high school, I took my lumps playing football. In that small South Dakota city where I grew up, we had a great coach. He had character. He was a stickler for the rules and insisted that we all never break training. He almost lost his job the first year he came to town and kicked off the team two of the "stars" from the previous year for smoking. When the school board questioned him about his action, he said, "I can't have on my team people who need something other than themselves for support. Anybody who is dependent on smoke or drink for stimulation is simply ineligible". His favorite expression in the locker room was, "Winners never quit, and quitters never win." He knew the game. He knew people. And he especially knew young people. He inspired us to do our best. We didn't win all our games that year, but we won most of them. And the next year we were state champions. Not in football, but basketball. Our winter game.

HEALTH for the whole family

Youth Sports Injuries Can Be Prevented

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that 4 million children are treated in hospital emergency rooms each year due to sports injuries. Another 8 million are treated by family physicians for sports injuries.

With little league, summer youth soccer and summer football and basketball camps underway, children will be more active than at any other time of the year. And that means more scrapes, cuts and bruises. While these injuries are minor and may not be preventable, many injuries that result in trips to the doctor or emergency room are, according to Leonard A. Wilkerson, D.O., F.A.A.F.P., Director and Founder of the Center for Sports Medicine in Kissimmee, Fla.

The best insurance against injury in a sport is to be well informed, Dr. Wilkerson, an osteopathic sports medicine specialist recommends.

"Know the potential risks of the sport your child is playing," he says. "Ask the coach what these risks are and how to protect against them. Know what safety equipment is required or available to ensure maximum protection against injury. And, don't let your child play in pain.'

Dr. Wilkerson, along with The National Youth Sports Foundation, suggests parents provide the following tips to their children to avoid injury during sports activity:

by KIM DEIKE

The WHS Student Council presented the "Love Connection" assembly this past Thursday at 2 p.m. Participants were chosen from voting boxes that had been placed in the front hallway of the school. Eligible bachelors and bachelorettes were questioned by an interested party concerning their personality, hobbies, etc. The matched up dates will be treated in the cafeteria on Valentine's Day to a special candlelight dinner.

The Student Council met for a regular meeting on January 29 to discuss upcoming projects and decorate the hallways with hearts in preparation for Valentine's Day. Members also decorated the stage for "Love Connection."

At the previous meeting, members decided to carry out the "Save A Sweet Heart" campaign. Materials are now in and the nosmoking drive will begin the first week of February.

The upcoming District Student Council Convention is scheduled for March 3 at McMurry in Abilene. WHS members plan to attend and present a couple of projects for judging.

Letters to the Editor..

Dear Editor:

I read the article printed on January 30th about the former Clarks of Winters that took their child to the North Runnels Emergency room. The child had a temperature of 103.8. Then I read the article printed February 6th from a lady who expressed her opinion about the Clarks and the two doctors here in Winters. She praised the doctors and put down the Clarks for "panicking" when the Clark child was running high temperature. I don't believe a parent that takes their child, that is having a very high temperature, to an emergency room should be considered "panicking." The word should be "caring."

If I hadn't been so "caring," or her word, "panicked," my child would not be here with us today. She too had a fever, but at that time of only 101.8. I took her in and the doctor confirmed she had Spinal Meningitis. Something Tylenol would not not and will not cure. Luckily our "caring" or "panicking" saved her life.

As far as Dr. Lee and Dr. Biddix, I too hope that they stay here in Winters. I like them and feel very fortunate that they are here for us. Oh yea, the deal with the insurance, that is something everyone should complain about, doctors included.

I did not write this to offend anyone, just to make a point. When it comes to our children, we cannot afford not to be "caring."

Linda Calcote Winters, Texas

Dear Editor:

I wrote a letter for your last edition, but did not get it in on time, and now I'm glad. It gives me the chance to respond to the letters in your last two editions.

To the Clarks, "Bravo" for speaking out on a very important subject.

To Mrs. Collins, from my understanding of the Clark's letter, their family grew up here and they just moved, so I wouldn't classify them as out-of-towners. Regardless, everyone deserves proper treatment by a doctor when they go to the emergency room.

I know what I speak of because I encountered the same lack of treatment when we drove our daughter to the emergency room to get treatment for her five-month-old baby.

The nurses can only do so much. I know because I am one myself. I did not panic, but this child did not get seen by a doctor or receive the proper treatment by him. Yes, we took him to his regular doctor in Abilene afterward, which we would have done to begin with if it hadn't have been bad weather on a Sunday. After several weeks of treatment, he is now fine. When I went to the office of the doctor on call that day to find out why he wouldn't come to treat a sick child, I was told among other things "If I had of known who you were, I would have been there." So my guess is he knew who you were.

But do you think a doctor should only treat who, when and where he wants to? Unfortunately, we all get sick at times and we can't choose when or where it will happen.

Candidate for Runnels County Tax Assessor/Collector First of all thank you for the support and confidence that have been shown to me for all of my life in this community. I have received much more than I will ever be able to repay. All of this has not been forgotten and is appreciated. Thanks to those who signed my petition and those that have worked for me and those that have given moral and financial support. Thanks to my friends and family for their unending love and support.

I have read the article from Mrs. McWilliams endorsing my opponent and I think that it is a good article and I also agree with most of what she has stated. It seems that the question is, "How much will it cost for someone new to come in, and that I do not have the experience to do so?"

(1) I am not interested in spending unnecessarily. I am investigating the actual cost of this required training and expense and I will answer to this at a later time. My question is - would this amount be spent over a period of 4 to 5 years? Also this could be a small portion of a budget? If elected, I will be looking to see if there are other ways to save. I am conservative and will be looking for ways to save tax money. I believe in shopping and trading at home where it is possible to see that money returns to benefit those that live and work here.

(2) As to having no experience. Naturally I have not had any reason to have any experience in a tax office, I did serve as appointed county treasurer and later ran unopposed for the unexpired term of 1980-82. As county treasurer, I administered six different bank accounts with nearly 100 divisions. We were able at that time to place the "above monthly expense" surplus money in money market accounts. At one time, to the best of my memory, when the interest returns were near 19.75%, a million dollars was on deposit.

I also would like to thank the 3,000 plus voters that voted in the 1979 elections.

I believe that Mrs. McWilliams does have a good and efficient staff. I am asking for your vote and support and that you judge me on my merits and that I feel that the job can and will be done according to rules and regulations that are necessary. FAIRNESS :

Reference - Secular

The Dewey Decimal System has a large number of classifications for the 900's. There is much in them to instruct those of us who have an absorbing interest in history, government and public affairs. The following are examples.

"The American Past, Conflicting Interpretations of the Great Issues," Vol. II, Fourth Edition, edited by Sidney Fine and Gerald S. Brown, published by Macmillian, 1976. Quite often such articles are reprinted in subsequent editions. Over a period of time, articles are deleted and others added. In this volume, the first article is on "Reconstruction," the final one concerns "Women's Liberation." In betwen are issues that gripped the attention of the public for at least a few years. Generally the items were originally chapters in books or articles in magazines.

Another is by professors, named Grob and Billias, as they compiled many discussions. By comparing these two books, you can see how authors used the very same facts, differently. They see things differntly. Yes, but don't we all!

Other Multi-Author Books

These include a 1971 compilation, "The Rising Glory of America, 1760-1820," edited by Gordon S. Wood, whom I heard at a gathering in Plainview (so I know he's real!), and a two-volume grouping edited by Leonard Dinnerstein and Kenneth T. Jackson, called "American Vistas," third edition-1979, Oxford University Press. Its coverage begins with 1607. Its last article is timely: "U.S.-Mexican Relations." Although some overlapping is found in these volumes, you'll miss some articles unless you read all of them. Together, there is one covering the first half of our history; three on the second half.

An honest text-book writer, of course, tries to do justice to his or her themes, but there's nothing like the immediacy of an account, a discussion, such as that written by a person on or near the location, both in time and space, of an event. For, as any historical minded person realizes, "Source Materials" have no substitute!

A Civil War tragedy

A telephone call from Winnie Hatley of Wingate revealed that she was searching for some information concerning her husband

Her inquiry concerned an article of Civil War Days that I had written in 1984 which included the name of John Smart and a Mr. Vanwinkle.

The Hatleys were sure that the men in the Civil War tragedy were of the same family, but had been unable to trace the records any

My summary of the tragedy

In 1863, eight men and a boy left Williamson County, Texas to go to Mexico. They were Confederate soldiers at home on a forty day furlough and decided that they had enough of the Civil War strife. The men passed through Bandera, the small county seat of Bandera County, and stopped long enough to buy some supplies. Confederate troops at Camp Verde, twelve miles north of Bandera, followed these men to a point below Hondo, where they were overtaken and arrested. They were brought back to Julian Creek, two miles southeast of Bandera and hanged, one man at a time, with a horsehair

A Major Alexander directed the hanging of these men. It is said they possessed $900 in money and several good horses, which Alexander and his party appropriated. The next day, a group of Bandera citizens went out and buried the bodies of the eight men in one grave. The boy's life was

The lonely grave is now in a dense thicket known as the Frank Pyka pasture. It is marked by a marble headstone which bears the William Shumate, Jack Whitmire, Jake Kyle, John Smart, Mr. Vanwinkle. Died July 25, 1863.

After the Civil War had ended, and courts were again functioning, some of the men engaged in the hanging of these unfortunate men were indicted by a Bandera County grand jury, but none were ever brought to trial.

In May of 1988, Mrs. Hatley received a story from W.D. Travis of Williamson County.

During the wild and tumultuous period of the county's history, the settlers were frequently subjected to horse stealing by Indians. They chose moonlight nights so their spirits could find their way about if they met disaster.

When the moon was full, Elizabeth Van Winkle Cox, sister to one Deida Smart Van Winkle Hatley, always brought her prized black stallion into the "dog run," an alleyway between the two sections of the house, at night.

Once during the full moon, the family was awakened by the stallion making a great noise. They reached the porch just in time to see the Indians making off with every horse except the stallion.

Morning revealed that other settlers had been raided and a posse was quickly formed. Later in the day, after hard riding, the settlers came upon the Indians with their large remuda.

The posse pulled up to make a plan of attack, all except one member. Van Winkle charged, rather the stallion did! Seeing his mares in the Indian herd, he whinnied a greeting and broke into a paleface charging into their midst at full tilt, concentrated their fire on him and still on he came. Bullets and arrows whistled around the stallion and his rider, both of who came through the hail untouched. The Indians assumed that this brave rider had a powerful medie and began to waver. At that moment, the entire posse surged forward to support their foolhardy comrade and the Indians scattered.

The momentum of the stallion's charge carried him through the horses and into the rear ranks of the fleeing Indians before he turned back to his mares. A pale shaken Van Winkle dismounted and without explanation, accepted the congratulations of the posse, just arriving.

Mrs. Hatley would like to hear from anyone who has any information concerning the Smarts or Van Winkles. Her address is Rt. 1, Box 30, Wingate, Texas 79564 or telephone 915-743-2665.

"Easy Readers" available at library

by MELVIN MATHIS

Some of the most popular books have plenty of pictures, and no big words except for animals or playful ones. We call these "Easy Readers." Often they are read to some of our curious and energetic citizens---who may not even yet have learned to read. But they certainly WANT to! The following are new arrivals at WPL on Main Street, made possible by our membership in the Big Country Library System, headquartered in Abilene.

Beni Montresor, "The Witches names of the men: C.J. Sawyer, of Venice;" Jeanne, "An Around-W.M. Sawyer, George Thayre, the-World Alphabet;" Eileen Christelow, "Jerome and the Witchcraft Kids;" Wendy Smith, "Think Hippo!" Louise Goodman, "Ida's Ball;" Elaine Livermore, "Looking for Henry;" Martin Bay, "Edmond Went Far Away;" Elzbieta (2 books), "Dikou and The Mysterious Moon Sheep," and "Dikou and The Body Star;" Tricia Tusa, "Sherman and Pearl;" Loreen Leedy, "Pingo the Plaid

Panda;" Michael Foreman, "The Angel and the Wild Animal;" Norma Sawicki, "The Little Red House;" Rene Robinette, "The Robin Family;" Margaret Carter and Carol Wright, "Go Away, William;" John Stadler, "On A

Mist-Covered Mountain;" Chris McEwan, "The Little Penguin;" Willemein Min, "The Birdman;" Thelma Caterwell, "Adita and The Forest;" Terry Denton, "Home is The Sailor;" Juanita Havill, "Leroy and the Clock;" Maida Silverman, "The Magic Well;" Mary K. Pershall, "Hello, Barney!" Barbara McClintock, "The Heartaches of A French Cat;" and 'Atrid Lindgren, "Lotta's Bike."

The public is once again reminded that the library has these books due to our membership in the Big Country Library System. We ask you to support YOUR public library, "The People's University," in the public interest. An informed public has a chance to be wise.

I have learned that it is being discussed that the Sheriff's Office and also the DPS will be housed in the vacated office space. This will cost tax dollars for certain changes including extra security measures that will need to be installed to protect such things as evidence, weapons, records and office equipment and other items normally found in a Sheriff's

I WOULD NOT spend tax money just so I can have a new or large office. I would much rather spend the money, if there is in fact extra money in the budget, to fight crime and drugs. I will base the spending of your tax dollars on whether or not the spending of the money will be of benefit in reducing crime and drugs in Runnels County.

I noticed in the Ballinger Ledger that the DARE program in Runnels County is a 10 week course and I know that in San Angelo and other places that it takes 17 weeks. Why is the DARE program different in Runnels County?

As Project Director of the DARE program at San Angelo Police Dept, I also have been concerned about the short course. DARE rules DO NOT allow a 10 week course and if a program is violating these rules it can lose its certification. DARE must be taught exactly as it is learned in the DARE Office Training School and this is made very clear to officers who are certified to teach DARE.

Throughout the election campaign I have heard the current Sheriff tell of his DARE program and how there is no cost to the County. Who pays the salary of the deputy? Also now you have only one deputy who is certified to teach DARE, do you have plans to certify another in order to fully present the DARE program as required by regulations?

I have learned that one County School is considering dropping the DARE program and using other drug education programs. If elected, I will REBUILD the DARE program and will be a part of the program in our schools. I have in the past presented many programs in Runnels County Schools and as your Sheriff, I will continue to give up to date and pertinent information to our children.

In 1990 when Ballinger ISD wanted a drug expert to give a program to the junior high and high school students, they called me and even though I was in a deep undercover assignment I took the time out to talk to our children. YOUR CHILDREN WILL KNOW THEIR SHERIFF AND WHAT HE BELIEVES.

Crews News by Hilda Kurtz

If you're willing to admit that you're all wrong when you are, you're all right.

Linda and Dale Duggan, Selma Deitz and Doris Wood hosted Saturday night's Crews supper and dominoes to a rather smaller crowd due to several families going to the Ft. Worth Livestock Show. President Dale Duggan called a brief business meeting. Linda read the minutes and treasurer's report. It was mentioned that we still have a few leaks on the Crews gym roof. Dale welcomed Keith Collom and daughter, Amanda, as visitors. Eileen Prater and Marque Mathis asked to be hosts for March.

Congratulations to our young folks that won and placed in the Winters Livestock Show. We are proud of our youngins.

Bernie and Rodney Faubion were in Ft. Worth Tuesday and Wednesday with Brian's show swine at the stock show. Afterwards they spent the week nights in Dallas with Uncle Jim and Aunt Lavenia Webb. They also got to visit Pam Webb a while and then on to be with Jack, Joan and John David Webb. Then on Friday, all the families gathered for dinner together. Friday morning, all went to Lancaster and visited with Joe and Wilmer Kaparick (old friends). It was an enjoyable week I say. They came home Saturday.

Pat Hambright came out and got her mother Corra Petrie and took her to church on Sunday.

The TV says the ground hog saw his shadow, no way in these parts. In fact we got news of more moisture this week.

Our community was well represented at the Winters Junior Livestock Show and saw Tiffany Prater, Desiree Mathis and Brian Faubion place with their animals. Pat and Earl Cooper and Sherrie Cooper carried three year old J.T. Cooper out for his birthday and lunch on Friday.

Selma Dietz kept a record on our rain which is 10 inches. Some say we had enough.

Wilbert and Fairy Alcorn were in San Angelo Saturday and visited Linda and Johnny Denson, also attended a party for Donald Alcorn on his birthday. More of these birthday parties, Donald.

Wanda McCarty and Adeline Grissom were in Abilene during the week. They went by to pick up Joe Riley Sims at Wiley School and visit with Phyllis and Von Byrd.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Crow came by and surprised Adeline Grissom. The Crows are stationed on K-W-A-J-A-L-EIU Marshall Island. Kenneth was a close pal to the Grissom boy's during school days.

Ruth Pape had a nice long phone visit this week with daughter, Elaine Kennedy in Tampa, Florida.

Mike Hill of Sweetwater spent Sunday with his mother, Claudia Hill.

Carl Faubion of Coleman spent part of Friday with Harvey Mae and Noble Faubion. Melinda Kraatz dropped in also.

Museum trustees host gala opening benefit Valentine weekend

The Museums of Abilene will "swing wide" the doors of the new Grace Cultural Center on Valentine's Day weekend, February 14th through the 16th. Museum trustees will host a private event for major capital contributors on Friday the 14th, host the Gala Opening Benefit Saturday the 15th, and offer all of Abilene its first view of the new facility the following day.

"We hope everyone will join us for this opening weekend," says Museums Board President Bob Nutt. "It's a once-in-a-lifetime event to celebrate three wonderful museums in this very special historic Abilene building." The official ribbon-cutting and public opening of the Grace is set for 3

Small grain report

The area is extremely wet and many of the small grain fields have a yellowish appearance. This is due mostly to the heavy rainfall leaching the nitrogen out of the rootzone. Normally speaking, water is our number one limiting factor for producing high yields. This year is an exception to that rule. Nutrients may be a limiting factor.

Fertility is an essential component of maximizing your small grain yields. Higher yields simply require more nutrients, and adequate amounts of these nutrients must be available when your crop needs them.

ous crops also influence the amount of fertilizer required. All fertility decisions should be based obtained from soil test.

A soil test is the most accurate method of determining fertilizer needs. However, soil tests are no better than the sample taken.

Be sure to take a good composite tells you how much you need to sample.

Yield goals, soil temperature, soil PH, and the amount of soil organic matter all will influence the amount of nitrogen your small grain crop will use. Researchers have found that it takes a minimum of 4 inches of available moisture to grow winter wheat to kernel setting. Each additional inch of available moisture above cides. that 4 inch level will produce 7 bushels per acre more wheat. For example: If your available moisure is 8 inches, the predicted vield potential would be 28 bush-Because some soils are simply wheat requires 2.7 lbs. of availfrom the regired amount and this size and kernel weight.

WEED CONTROL

IN SMALL GRAINS The time is approaching to begin controlling weeds in small grains. Winter annual weeds in small grains can be controlled by applying phenoxy herbicides like 2,4D and MCPA, Banvel, Stinger, and other hormone type herbi-

He will chair the Beef Board's executive committee, which will include Carter as a member. The executive committee oversees several key administrative functions and conducts business between meetings of the full Beef Board. The executive committee's responsibilities include resolving compliance difficulties and providing oversight accounting to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The 1985 Farm Bill that created the beef checkoff program requires accountability to USDA for use of checkoff dollars.

The Beef Board also appointed Beard chairman of its long range planning committee and Sterling as chairman of its foreign marketing committee.

The long range planning committee meets annually to assess past projects and direct future checkoff programs. The foreign marketing committee plays a major role in developing and evaluating beef export projects funded primarily through the U.S. Meat Export Federation. As chairman, Sterling will develop foreign marketing programs and make budget recommendations to the operating committee and the full Beef Board.
