A STATEMENT FROM H. G. HAMRICK

With only a few days left before the primary, I wish to thank the people of the 92nd Representative District for their encouragement thus far in my race for Representative.

I have said, repeatedly, that I believe there is plenty of money under present levies to run our state government if the legislature will make wise allocations. And that from 5 to 10 million dollars of state funds can be saved by eliminating useless boards and commissions. We must make our government more responsible to the interest of the people and put an end to the job creating racket and raids on the state treasury. We should have a thorough going system of state budgetary control, so as to properly supervise all phases of state spending. The budgetary plan would save the state millions yearly. We must eliminate the politics and unnecessary waste in pension administration, this can best be done through county administration. We must find a way to equalize the states biggest item of expense, public education. This can best be accomplished by lowering local taxes and raising the state apportionment. The legislature should do more of its work in the regular session and avoid the expense of called sessions.

SAMPLE BALLOT

In order to acquaint the people with the ballot they will see at the polls a week from tomorrow, Saturday, July 23rd, we have published as "sample ballot" in this issue, look inside, study it, if you have not quite made up your mind on some office, go out and find out all you can about every man in the race, pay no attention to political "mud slinging", don't vote on a man's promises, vote for the best man on each office, and if you are not sure you need the position. May the best man win.

There are nearly 1,500 paid poll tax in Coke County and around 400 over and unders. Then why can't Coke County poll between 1,800 votes on July 23rd.

GRANDMOTHER WATKINS DIES IN CALIFORNIA

Mrs. Margaret M. Watkins, Texas pioneer and former resident of Robert Lee, died July 8 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mattie Daniel in Santa Barbara, California. Mrs. Watkins, known to everyone as "Granny" was 93 years 10 months old at the time of her passing.

Margaret Montgomery was born September 4, 1844 in Fayette County, Missouri. At the age of two she moved with her parents to Texas where she lived for 89 years. As an early pioneer she did much toward helping to settle unorganized territory.

She was married in 1869 to Charles S. Watkins. In 1888 she became a member of the Church of Christ and had lived a Christian life since.

Surviving Mrs. Watkins are five children. Mrs. Mattie Daniel, 1417 San Andres St., Santa Barbara, California; Mrs. Annie Hunter of Chowchilla, California; Charles W. Watkins of Lubbock, Texas; J. Alton Watkins of Los Angeles, California; and Mrs. Lena McMullen of Oroville, California. Also surviving are two brothers, 33 grandchildren, and 29 great-grandchildren.

METHODIST Meeting Progresses

That people are really hungry for simple gospel preaching and that they can be drawn and held by heart felt sermons without the "side show" attractions is plainly evidenced that have attended the Methodist church each evening this week to hear Rev. W. Harrison Baker, pastor of the Munger Place Methodist church, Dallas. Preceding the sermon each evening, Rev. Baker gives an interesting talk on Palestine, taken from the notes he gathered during a three months stay in the Holy Land.

Sunday night will be the last of the services. Tonight Rev. Baker will speak especially to the young people.

Bobbie Lee Davis was taken to a San Angelo Hospital for an emergency appendicitis last Saturday. As we go to press it is reported he is improving.

YARBOROUGH MADE GREAT RECORD AS ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL

Forty million dollars in cash and mineral rights that District Judge Ralph Yarborough of Austin won for the State Permanent School Fund while he was assistant attorney general--1931 to 1936--constitute one of the main features of the record on which he is running for attorney general, Yarborough in a speech in San Angelo a few nights ago.

"It was my privilege, while assistant attorney general, to carry the banner of the people into sixty battles in the courtroom," Yarborough said, "in one case, recovering $1,073,500 for the school fund--the second biggest cash judgement ever collected by the state."

Yarborough promises to take an active part in the trial of major cases involving the rights of the people; to enforce the laws against trusts, monopolies and anti-trust suit that is now pending.

Judge Yarborough was born in Henderson county, graduated from Tyler high school, earned his way through Sam Houston State Teachers College and the University of Texas law schools by waiting on tables at a student boarding house, teaching one-room schools in the piney woods, working as a harvest hand in the wheat fields and as a tank-builder in the oil fields. He is judge of the 53rd district court and presiding judge of the 32-county third administrative district, but is on leave of absence without pay during the campaign.

While Assistant Attorney General, Judge Yarborough became well known in West Texas for the fights he made for the rights of West Texas land owners. In a poll taken by a newspaper in Houston recently, Yarborough was given the lead, even though Houston is the home town of one of his opponents.

The families of a number of geologists and helpers moved into town last week and men are working on a block of land in south west Coke leased by the Plymouth Oil Company. Core tests are being made with a prospect of drilling for oil, gas or other minerals.

TO THE PEOPLE OF COKE COUNTY

The following statements and explanations seem to be appropriate:

First, my failure to make a personal call on each and every one of the voters of the county has been due to some unusual misfortunes and not from the lack of interest in them.

Second, I have personally experienced many of the hardships that Coke County people have to endure and believe that I understand them.

Third, I have personally advocated many of the sound progressive moves that have developed and are developing within or involving the people of the county.

Fourth, aside from the fact that I have been a life long Democrat and stand for government for the people, I have never been led by any faction, either religious or political against any other faction within the county and believe that I can be fair and impartial to all.

Fifth, I stand for a program of EFFICIENCY, ECONOMY, and ENTERPRISE. I am a strong advocate of reducing costs rather than increasing the taxes; I favor a system of accurate accounting of the county funds so as to keep absolute reconciliation between the different depart-

Veterans of Gettysburg Celebrate Together on Field of the Crucial Civil War Battle

Here is the new Peace Memorial in the Gettysburg National Military park which was dedicated by President Roosevelt during the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, in which veterans of the Northern and Southern armies participated. On the top of the shaft burns "The Flame of Eternal Peace."

SEVENTY-FIVE years after they faced each other in deadly conflict, some 2,000 old soldiers gathered in friendly concert to celebrate the great Battle of Gettysburg. The Stars and Stripes and the Stars and Bars flew side by side on the once bloody field, and the veterans of the Northern and Southern armies that fought there in one of history's biggest battles wandered together over the hills and meadows or sat in their tented city, exchanging reminiscences and renewing old friendships.

The war department had done everything possible to make the now feeble old warriors comfortable and safe, and the Pennsylvania National Guard and Boy Scouts attended carefully to their every want. There were feasts, parades, and military displays in plenty, but the veterans were not called on to do the entertaining. They were the entertained.

In the Gettysburg National Military park, comprising the battle-field, had been erected a beautiful peace memorial, and President Roosevelt was there to dedicate it on the afternoon of July 3. At the top of the monument's shaft is a burner for natural gas that supplies "The Flame of Eternal Peace." This was kindled by the President as the climax of the day's celebration.

There were no re-enactments of battle scenes. The observance was all of peace, and peace and harmony of all the land breathed all through the talks made by Mr. Roosevelt and other speakers.

From a common platform Commander-in-Chief Overton H. Mennet of the Grand Army of the Republic and Commander-in-Chief John M. Claypool of the United Confederate Veterans spoke to their comrades.

Strike at New York Fair

MORE than 6,000 workers were affected by a general strike of construction men at the New York world's fair, called by the Building Trades and Construction council, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor. All construction work was tied up except structural steel work. The strike was precipitated by a jurisdictional dispute.

Politics in Relief

CHAIRMAN SHEPPARD of the senate campaign funds committee put it up to the members of that body whether they should investigate charges that the WPA had increased relief wages in Kentucky and Oklahoma to aid the candidacies of Senators Barkley and Thomas.

Harry Hopkins

Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins denied that the WPA has been made a political instrument in Kentucky. In a statement accompanied by exhaustive documentary evidence, Hopkins challenged 22 charges that his agency has subjected WPA workers to political pressure. He said the facts do not substantiate the charges, but reiterated his promises of summary and stringent action in all cases where political coercion could be proved to exist. "Every charge in which a WPA worker or official was named has been thoroughly investigated and documentary evidence conclusively establishes that out of more than a score of cases in which political activity was alleged, only two instances of improper conduct could be found," he said.

Real Drive on Depression

WITH the start of the new fiscal year the administration began what the President calls "the real drive on depression." In the coming fiscal year relief agencies, army and navy, public works departments and federal lending corporations may pour out approximately $8,500,000,000.

Administration officials said this huge sum—equal to more than $66 for every person in the nation—was needed because there are approximately 10,500,000 unemployed in the country. This estimate, furnished by a federal economist, was 4,500,000 higher than last October, when the recession's effect became visible.

Officials left little doubt they hope to get business positively on the upgrade by Labor day, although economists estimated it would take a year from the upturn to recover the ground lost since last summer.

Upholds Free Press

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT delivered two speeches in New York, on the site of the world's fair that is being built. First he spoke at the laying of the cornerstone of the federal building at the exposition after dabbling in cement with a silver trowel.

Then the Chief Executive appeared before a convention of the National Education association, and declared that the mission of America is to carry the torch of free thought and free learning in a world in which dictators have smothered the fires of freedom.

He did not mention Nazi Germany or Fascist Italy by name, but he condemned in most positive language such purges as burned libraries, exiled scientists, artists, musicians, writers and teachers, dispersed universities and censored news, literature and art.

"If in other lands the press is censored," Mr. Roosevelt declared, "we must redouble our efforts here to keep it free. If in other lands the eternal truths of the past are threatened by intolerance, we must provide a safe place here for their perpetuation."

In his address to the teachers the President warmly defended the spending of his administration on the ground that the outlays of federal money had increased national and human resources.

Heads N. Y. Exchange

WILLIAM McCHESNEY MARTIN of a St. Louis brokerage firm and chairman of the New York Stock exchange since last May was elected president of the exchange at a salary of $48,000 a year. His selection was the final step in the reorganization of the executive personnel of the exchange which was brought about through the insistence of the securities and exchange commission and the "liberal" group within the exchange membership.

The Miracle of Milk

Noted Food Authority Explains Why It Is the Cheapest and Most Nearly Perfect Food

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

OF ALL the foods known and used by man, milk is supreme. It is a miracle of perfection—a veritable elixir of life.

Milk has powers possessed by no other food. It builds sturdy bodies for infants; strong bones and sound teeth for growing children; helps to maintain vitality in adults; and to delay the onset of old age.

It contains a greater assortment of nutritive materials than any other single food. It is the foundation of every balanced diet. Considering the services it performs for mankind—from infancy to old age—it is the cheapest food we have.

Milk is so many-sided that I always think of it as the Benjamin Franklin of foods. It is a vast treasure chest of nutrients—the most complex product of nature's chemistry. It contains nearly every chemical element of the body itself, in proportions adapted for quick and easy assimilation.

Milk fulfills six essential requirements of a perfect diet.

First: It supplies carbohydrate and fat for heat and energy.

Second: It furnishes protein that is suitable for building new tissues and repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily.

Third: It yields minerals which build bones and teeth and regulate the subtle internal processes of the body.

Fourth: It contains every known vitamin in some degree and is abundantly supplied with the vitamins that are necessary to growth, to the smooth running of the body machine, and to the prevention of many types of infection.

Fifth: It contains water, to act as a solvent, a carrier and regulator.

Sixth: It is easily digestible.

This brief summary helps to explain the unique place of milk in nutrition. Think of it! In one food, we find protein of the highest type; carbohydrate and fat; all the vitamins; every one of the minerals demanded by the human body; water; and an easy digestibility that readily changes these ingredients into vigorous life.

The Biggest Food Bargain

We occasionally hear the charge that milk is too high in price—that it is a luxury to afford enough of this master food to supply a quart daily for every child—at least a pint for each adult. That is ridiculous! The cost of milk is much cheaper than the cost of illness. And milk is not a luxury, but an indispensable necessity.

I contend that no homemaker can afford not to buy milk in adequate amounts—that if she desires health, efficiency and longevity for her family, she must provide a sufficient amount of milk before she purchases any other food.

A Food for Children and Adults

Humankind needs milk as the flowers in the garden and the grains in the field need the blessing of rain.

Deprived of milk, children develop a multitude of ills. They become thin and weak; their resistance is low; they fall easy victims to the germs of disease; there is small hope of their reaching normal manhood and womanhood.

Nor is milk only a food for children. It is likewise essential for adults who desire to live longer, happier, and healthier lives—to fortify their bodies against the assaults of disease—to retain or regain mental and bodily vigor. It is indeed a Fountain of Youth!

Milk for Pep and Power

A quart of milk daily supplies from two-thirds to three-fourths of the total calories required by a year-old child. For a five-year old, it provides about half the day's fuel requirements, and for a ten-year old, one-third. Even a moderately active man could obtain one-fourth of his energy requirements from a quart of this precious fluid. It is also interesting to note that five-eighths cup of milk is equivalent in energy value to one and one-third eggs, or two and one-fourth ounces of lean beef.

A quart of milk yields more than an ounce of pure protein of the highest quality. Moreover, nutrition authorities hold that under normal conditions, it is the most completely digested and absorbed of all food proteins.

Milk for Minerals

As a source of calcium, milk is indispensable. Without milk, it is practically impossible for the body to obtain enough of this captain of the minerals for normal skeletal development.

It has been estimated that when the calcium requirement is met through the use of milk, the need for phosphorus will also be adequately provided.

Though milk is not as good a source of iron as calcium and phosphorus, the iron is present and in a form that can be easily utilized by the body.

Milk for Vitamins

Milk is so rich in vitamins A and G, that the addition of a quart of milk daily to a good mixed diet practically guarantees against a deficiency of either of these precious substances which promote growth, help build resistance to disease, prolong the prime of life, and help to ward off old age. It also furnishes a considerable amount of vitamin B, which promotes appetite, aids digestion and helps to prevent a nervous disorder.

Milk contains a relatively small amount of vitamin D, but this can be remedied in both bottled and evaporated milk by irradiation, or the addition of a vitamin D concentrate. It is less dependable as a source of vitamin C than any other vitamin, as the amount it naturally contains varies with the diet of the cow and is reduced by pasteurization or evaporation. This deficiency is easily made good, however, by adding to the diet fresh fruits and fruit juices and raw leafy vegetables.

In Praise of Milk Producers

As milk is man's finest food, the men who are occupied with its production are engaged in the world's most important pursuit. They labor to provide the nation with a pure, safe, clean supply of the food that makes life worthwhile for children and helps to prolong life for adults.

Let no one say that milk is expensive. Rather let every homemaker come to realize that this magnificent food would be CHEAP AT ANY PRICE!

Questions Answered

Mrs. F. B. C.—Answering your question as to what constitutes the most satisfactory supper for young children, it has been demonstrated that children sleep far more soundly after an evening meal composed of cereal and milk, with a light dairy dessert, than following a meal of heavier foods.

G. R. M.—The amount of fruit which may be taken by an elderly person varies with the individual. Fruits may be used as freely as desired, provided thorough mastication is possible and fermentation or other digestive disturbance does not develop. Otherwise, they should be used sparingly, either cooked or in the form of juice.

Some form of vitamin C should be included in every diet, but this can be supplied by a small amount of orange juice.

CHAPTER I

I became a beggar when I was twenty-two.

The blow was as heavy as swift, for till then I had always been given the best that money could buy. From the day I was born I had wanted for nothing at all, and, though my parents were dead, I had never been led to expect any other estate. And then, one fair June morning, when the silks of the windows of Oxford were gay with flowers, I learned that my sole trustee had gambled my fortune away.

By the help of the Head of my College, I soon obtained work in London for which I was paid just 35 shillings a week, and though I believe that I might have done better than that, in my efforts to rise I met with so much unkindness that I presently withdrew from a battle for which I found myself so ill equipped.

I had another reason for staying in Red Lead Lane.

I had a companion in misfortune—a man of some fifty summers, who, too, had seen better days. His name was Matthew Gering—or so he said: for though he looked English enough, his speech sometimes betrayed an alien blood. That he was of gentle birth was unmistakable and I think that he may have been gifted—till misery dulled his wits. He seemed the better for my coming to share his lot, and after two or three months I moved to the humble lodging at which he had lived by himself for 13 years. It was soon after this that I knew that I could not leave him, if only for pity's sake.

This was the way of it.

The manager of the warehouse at which we were used as clerks was a man upon whose vitals class hatred seemed to feed. Disappointed of bigger game, he preyed with a bitter fury on what he had. For 15 years poor Gering had been his butt, enduring "the slings and arrows" of what I can only describe as "a mind diseased"; but my arrival did something to take the strain, for he had to divide his attentions if I was to have my share of inhumanity.

And so I stayed where I was for nearly two years, when two things happened together, to set me free.

One gusty, April morning poor Gering could not rise, and when I had brought him a doctor, against his will, the latter told me plainly that he was a dying man.

"He has no resistance," he said. "A chill could have put him out—and this is congestion of the lungs."

Of course I did what I could, but when I came back from my work on the following day, I knew at once that Gering had seen his last dawn. And so did he.

"Not very long now, Exon," he said quietly . . .

It must have been near ten o'clock, and we had spoken no word for nearly an hour, when he put a hand under the blankets and drew out a sheet of foolscap, folded in four.

"I would like you to read this," he said. "I wrote it down years ago. But no one has ever read it. It—it would not have been well received. I have even considered all day whether I should show it to you—you who have done so much for a broken man. You see, I am like a dog that has been ill used for so long that he is suspicious of kindness and ready to bite the hand that makes to caress his head."

With his words he began to cough, and the paroxysm which followed frightened me out of my life. At least-five minutes went by before the seizure had passed, and this left him so weak and shaken that even a child would have known that the end was at hand. Indeed, I had forgotten the paper, when his trembling fingers thrust it against my sleeve.

I sat back on my heels and read the following words.

My true name is Rudolf Elbert Virgil and I am the ninth Count of Brief—an ancient Austrian House. My mother died when I was three. Her only other child was my twin-brother, born an hour after myself. He was, as they say, a bad hat. In 1910 I married an English girl and a daughter was born to us in 1912. We lived with my father at Brief, which stands to the east of Innsbruck, from which it is distant a hundred and twenty miles. In the spring of 1913 my father received some news from the English police. My twin-brother was under arrest on a charge of forgery. I left for England that night to see what could be done. Arrived in London, I sought a solicitor, and, on my going surety, my brother was admitted to bail.

The case was unanswerable. And from what the solicitor said it was perfectly clear that if Ferdinand stood his trial, he would be sent to prison for several years. When we were at last alone, my brother fell on his knees and begged me in the name of our mother to help him to make his escape. Like a fool, I agreed to do so.

The day was Thursday. Early on Friday I left my brother in my rooms and went out to make arrangements for him to leave. All I did, I did surreptitiously. A ship was to sail for South America at noon on the following day. I booked his passage in an assumed name. I procured him an outfit and had the things sent on board. That evening I returned to my rooms to tell him that all was well. A telegram from Brief was awaiting me. My father and wife were both dead. They had been killed that day—in a car—on the Innsbruck road. The news stunned me. As a man in a dream, I did as my brother said, for now it was

I changed my name and sought work—I had to have bread.

"That is my story. I cannot prove it, of course. I can only say it is true."
M. G.

As I folded the paper, the dying man caught at my arm.

"Do you believe it?" he whispered.

"Every word of it, sir," said I. "I wish that you had told me of this before."

"Listen. I say in that statement that I have no proof. But I have. I have always had it—a proof that I could not use."

Shaking with excitement, poor Gering raised himself up, and, since had not altered my outlook for good and all, I had settled down in a very pleasant manor, which had been a famous seat, but was now a hotel.

It must not be thought that I had forgotten Gering or the statement of his which I held. I remembered him constantly, and more than once I wondered if it was not for me to take action upon the facts which I knew. And then it always seemed best to let sleeping dogs lie. I had looked up the House of Brief and had found two things—first, that the pseudo-Count was still a widower and, secondly, that on his death the title would pass to his daughter, the Lady Elizabeth Virgil, now twenty-four years old. The dreadful injustice, therefore, was over and done: it had in fact come to an end with Gering's death; and though the wicked flourished, the good was beyond his reach.

And then a strange thing happened.

Summer was coming in, and I had been out in my car for the whole of the day. I entered my rooms in the evening, to bathe and change, when I saw upon my table an envelope covering something, but not addressed. Opening this, I found a passport within—and knew at once that some servant had made a mistake. A guest had arrived from abroad and the office had asked for his passport, from which to fill up the form which the police required. And now it had been returned—to me, instead of to him.

The passport was that of Percy Elbert Virgil, born in London in 1910, and domiciled at Brief. And the face was the face of a clever, unscrupulous blackguard, with as close-set a pair of eyes as ever I saw.

I sent the passport back to the office, lighted a cigarette and sat down to think things out.

Unknown to Gering, before he had been arrested, his brother had had a son. That son was now twenty-six and dwelled in his father's house. And father and son were both evil. How did the lovely Lady Elizabeth fare between two such wolves?

Her position was ugly. I mean, she stood in the way.

I began to feel ill at ease.

It was, of course, none of my business. I happened to know the truth, but that was all. Gering had made no request: he had simply told me his tale. But then he had not been aware that his brother had a child of his own: and he had not expected that I should ever be free to do anything. For all that, it was none of my business.

I put out my cigarette and began to change.

Even if I made it my business, what could I do? It had never entered my head to doubt the truth of the statement which Gering had made. But how on earth could I prove it? By declaring the existence of some secret I did not know? By alleging the existence of a doorway "which no one would ever find"? The thing was absurd. I had no proof. Gering himself had done nothing, because he had known very well that there was nothing to be done. And yet . . .

I Saw Upon My Table an Envelope.

I that was helpless and he that took charge. All I knew was that I must get back.

That night he packed for me and told me what he had done. I was to leave the next day by the two-o'clock train. He had arranged everything. All that I had to do was to go to the Bank the next morning and draw for him the money which he was to have. That he dared not do, though I gave him my check. And when I had drawn the money—500 pounds—I was to bring it to the station from which his train would be leaving at half-past ten.

As he said, so I did. I had no brain to argue. The only thing I could see was the Innsbruck road.

They arrested me on the platform . . . They thought I was Ferdinand. I do not blame them at all. You see, he was my twin-brother. Only my wife and my father could tell us apart. And they were dead.

When they searched me, they found the money—and Ferdinand's ticket for the boat. Unknown to me, he had put this into my pocket—to gain his terrible ends. And he had left for Innsbruck whilst I was still at the Bank. By an earlier train of course. He was across the Channel before I went to my cell.

So he and I changed places.

He took my father's title and all that was mine, and I was sent to prison for seven years.

My daughter became his daughter, my life became his life. You see, it was so easy. Only my wife and my father had known why I went to England. For the rest, I had gone away and now had come back. If my manner seemed in any way strange, the double loss I had suffered was blamed for that. And Ferdinand was careful. He even denied my check for 500 pounds. He said that I had forged it . . .

Seven years is seven years. By the time I came out of jail, my cause, which had always been hopeless, was dead and buried as though it had never been. So it seemed best not to thwart him, I put my arm about him to lend him strength.

"The House of Brief has a secret—which has passed from time immemorial from father to son. Only two persons know this: and they are the Count and his heir. Ferdinand cannot know it: but I who was the first-born—I know the secret of our House. And to you, who have been my son, I will pass it on. It may be that you can use it, but I cannot see so far. My rights, Elizabeth—that was my daughter's name . . . Listen. The great tower of Brief—the great tower. There is a doorway there which no one would ever find. You must go up, counting your steps. And when you have . . ."

And that was as far as he got.

For a moment the poor jaws worked. And then the head fell sideways and the body went slack in my arms.

So died the ninth Count of Brief. And the secret of his House with him.

Two days later I learned that an uncle of whose existence I had been hardly aware had recently died in Australia, leaving me all he had. And he was a very rich man.

Though my adversity lasted no more than a short two years, it would have been strange indeed if it

He stormed her castle . . . and won her heart!

Knights of old had nothing on dashing Richard Exon, the British adventurer who invaded the Count of Brief's castle, toppled the impostor from his throne and wooed his niece, the real title holder! That's the story of "She Painted Her Face," Dornford Yates' romantic new serial starting in this issue. You'll enjoy the romance between Richard and Lady Elizabeth, you'll laugh at the Duchess of Whelp and jovial John Herrick . . . you'll think it's the best story you've ever read.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. See Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed by our country over. In fact, Dr. Doan's Pills are sold at all drug stores.

Blue Bonnet Bridge Club

Mrs. Lamont Scott used a Spanish theme in decorations and bridge appointments when she was hostess to the Blue Bonnet Bridge Club at the regular meeting last week. Potted cactus decorated the mantle in the living room and also was part of the centerpiece in the dining room while the tallies bore scenes from Old Mexico.

Four visitors were included: Mrs. Roy Brey, Mrs. Bailey Russell, Mrs. Julian Batton and Miss Louise Roe. Members present were Mesdames Cortez Russell, W. B. Clift, Delbert Vestal, T. A. Richardson, Fred Roe, Chism Brown, F. C. Clark, J. S. Craddock, B. A. Austin, J. C. Snead, Jr., H. E. Smith and the hostess.

Mrs. W. B. Clift will entertain the club at a night party on the next regular meeting date.

The last vacancy in the school faculty was filled when the school board met recently and elected Miss Lois Danner and Miss English and Spanish teacher for the coming year. Miss Danner taught last term in the schools at Sonora.

Mrs. B. L. Bonner and daughters, Mildred and Mary, and Miss Nettie Barnett, were here here this week from Eureka near Corsicana. Both Mrs. Bonner whose maiden name was Robbins and Miss Barnett were reared at Hayrick and have numerous relatives and long time friends in this county. Miss Barnett, daughter of the late Captain Barnett, has taught in several schools of the county.

Mrs. Sam Shockley visited her aunt, Mrs. G. A. Harmon, Saturday, and went on to Edith to visit a sister, Mrs. Luther Sparks.

Country Press Condemns Punitive Legislation

The National Editorial Association, meeting in convention at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, adopted a resolution of nation wide importance concerning punitive legislation affecting business. The resolution reads:

"Whereas, there has been a tendency both at Washington and at the capitals of many states for legislative measures to be introduced and sponsored which are discriminatory and punitive in their application, and

"Whereas, there is considerable fear and hesitation among business men because of the uncertainties arising from such a tendency, and

"Whereas, we believe it the duty of the congress of the United States and our state legislatures, in view of unemployment and other distressed conditions and uncertainty among business leaders, to encourage, aid and assist business rather than take any action through discriminatory and punitive taxes which, in our opinion, would further retard commerce and would tend to increase living costs, therefore be it

"Resolved that the National Editorial Association goes on record as opposing such legislative enactments and

"We further recommend that the Board of Directors be requested to dispatch a copy of the above action duly signed by its officers to the members of any legislative committee at Washington or at a state capital at such time when united action by the non-metropolitan weekly and daily papers of America is deemed, in the Board's judgement, to be prudent."

That resolution, coming from the country press of America, is highly encouraging. These newspapers have become more and more concerned with legislation and taxation which unfairly penalize business. And the majority of editors have come to the sound conclusion that all such laws and class taxes are indefensible in a democratic country.

A traveling salesman in a one horse buggy! We thought that species was long ago extinct but one rose out of the dim past and appeared right on the streets of Robert Lee Friday. Drove up to the city watering trough, stood patiently while his tired horse drank his fill and then led him to the shade of the boys-d-arc tree just as hundreds of old-timers a generation back... And you should have seen the kids on the street gather around. Most of them never had a buggy ride but one extra nice seventeen-year-old got his first one and W. H. Bell had the horse for two whole days while his master took a quicker means of travel to Sweetwater.

Most Vital Issue

It will be six months before another Congress meets. During that time, the American people must make it known to their elected representatives that the much-talked-about revision of the government's tax system has been too long deferred.

What about those business-killing levies--the capital gains and the undistributed profits tax? What about broadening the tax base--perhaps the greatest need of all? What about our excessively high corporate and income taxes that discourage investors, depress industry, and create more and more unemployment?

These are examples of great questions which must be answered at the next session of Congress, if we are to escape economic chaos. That Congress will have many vital issues on its calendar--but none will be more vital than tax revision and reform.

ADVENTURERS' CLUB

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"The Rolling Stones"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Here's another yarn from a CCC camp. By golly, it looks to me like those camps are swell places to go adventuring. We've had a flock of yarns in this column from members of the CCC army—and all of them good ones, too.

This one comes from John Martocci of Brooklyn, N. Y. John went out to Camp S-204, near Brigham, Utah, and it was there that he ran into the big adventure of his life—the adventure of the rolling stones.

It was one cold morning in November, 1934, that John got up out of the hay to find a notice on the bulletin board. The notice called for volunteers to carry water pipes to a stub camp about 16 miles away, and John and his buddy, Bob Greene, signed up to do the work.

Long, Hard Trip Around the Mountain.

The foreman told them he'd give them two days off for doing the job, but before they got through with it, they wished they'd held out for a week's leave and a couple of bottles of horse liniment in the bargain. They were given two 10-foot lengths of water pipe to carry, one on each shoulder, and brother, those pipes were tough to handle. The boys were all in before they'd gone 8 of the 16 miles along the trail that wound around the side of the mountain. It took them seven hours to make the entire trip—and then they were confronted with the long hike back again.

It was late afternoon when they started back, and they had gone only five miles when the dusk began to shut down on them. They were afraid they'd lose the trail if they didn't get home before nightfall, so Bob suggested that, instead of going all the way around the mountain, they climb over it. It might have been a good idea in the theory, but those two lads just didn't have any conception of how big a mountain can be. Especially one of those Rocky mountains like they have out in Utah.

Caught in a Landslide.

It only looked like a mile or two across the mountain, so the two lads started to climb. They had only gone a quarter of a mile up the mountain when it started to rain. The skies began to get blacker, and Boulders bounced off the rock above them.

It became harder and harder to see where they were going. But by that time it was too late to turn back, for they would never have found the trail again. So they kept right on going.

They climbed for two straight hours, while the gray dusk deepened into night. The mountain got so steep that they couldn't stop to rest—just had to keep on climbing or roll down to the bottom again. Then, in a flash of lightning, they saw a pile of boulders up ahead of them.

"Those rocks," says John, "were as big as cows. One of them was sort of square, with a flat top, and stuck out over the side of the slope. I thought that if we could get on top of it we could get some rest. I grabbed for the top of the rock, but my hands slipped off it. I yelled to Bob to give me a boost, and he did. It was then that the fireworks started."

And boy, those fireworks sure did start. "As best I can recall," says John, "I felt something tugging at my feet and heard a noise that sounded like the beating of a drum. I yelled to my pal, 'Bob! Bob! where are you?' And then I heard him answer:

"I'm right here at your feet. For God's sake let go of that rock and lie down under it. It's a landslide. I let go, wondering if I was going to roll all the way down the mountain, but Bob made a grab and held me. We were no sooner under cover than the big boulders up above us began to move."

Seemed Like the End of the World.

John says he can't describe what took place after that, but he thought the world was coming to an end. "A couple of boulders," he says, "that must have weighed a ton apiece bounced right off the one we were under. I could hear the crackling and falling of trees down below when those big rocks hit them, and every time one of those big babies bounced off the rock above us, we wondered if our rock was going to hold, or if it was going to crash down on top of us. Boy, was I scared."

For hours those two lads hung there—or at least it seemed hours to them—and then things began to quiet down again. The slides ceased—the rain stopped. They clambered over the top of their rock and headed up the mountain again, but they didn't get very far. For dead ahead, and about 300 feet above, the mountain shot straight up in a tall, smooth-sided cliff.

"It was as high as an ocean liner," says John, "and we couldn't have climbed up it any more than we could fly. We didn't dare go back down the mountain, either, for fear we'd get lost, or caught in another one of those landslides. So we went back to our flat-topped rock and waited for morning."

When morning came, they heard shots. They yelled, and a gang of their own CCC pals came to their rescue. The lads had been missed, and the whole camp was out looking for them. They were taken back to camp, exhausted, and sick as dogs, as John puts it. "And instead of getting two days leave in town," he says, "we spent a week in bed at camp, nursing colds and getting over our exhaustion."

It Was Quite Natural for the Justice to Inquire

Mr. Justice Dunne, of the New York State Supreme court, was presiding over an action for damages, when came this dialogue:
"Did you see the plaintiff knocked down?"
"Who, me?"
"Yes, you."
"No, not me."
"Did you see the defendant at all?"
"Who, me?"
"Yes, you."
"No."
"Then why are you here?"
"Who, me?"
"Yes, you."
"To see justice done."
"Who, me?" asked the judge.

Moths Like Soiled Cloths.—Moths do not attack clean woolen articles as readily as soiled ones.

Filling Nail Holes.—A mixture of sawdust and glue can be used to fill nail holes in woodwork.

The Right Vase.—It is so important to note the colors in the vase and the colors of the flowers to be put into it and be sure they are in their proper settings. The right type and color of vase in contrast to the blossoms is what completes the picture.

Hemming Curtains.—Hems and rod casings of curtains should be made the same width so the curtains may be reversed to distribute the wear.

Soaking Clothes.—Do not soak clothes so long that the dirt is distributed through the fabric and gives an ugly color to the clothes. If soaking in hot water, never allow the water to become cold before washing. If you are going to soak the clothes over night, be sure the sudsy water is cold, else your clothes will be a poor color.

HOW to SEW By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THERE is a modern air about the colorful roughly woven table mat and the chair cover and cushion shown here. Does it surprise you to learn that they cost next to nothing? There is a trick in it. The fabric is actually burlap sacking with dyed strips of old silk stockings drawn through. Bright colored yarns may be substituted for the stocking strips or combined with them if desired. Either plaids or stripes may be worked out, and the best results will be obtained with a simple color scheme such as the one suggested here.

Dye the stockings before cutting. Cut the strips 3/4-inch wide and about an inch longer than the space they are to fill. Taper one end of the strip so that it will pull through the burlap easily. If long strips are needed, cut around and around the stocking spirally instead of lengthwise. Now, draw out one thread of the burlap; then tie one end of the next thread to the tapered end of the stocking strip as at A. Pull the other end of this thread as at B to draw the strip through.

Gold Rush Crime Wave

Crime was rampant in San Francisco during the gold rush during the early fifties. Up to 1854 there were 4,200 homicides and 1,200 suicides, while the records of the next few years showed many deaths by violence, the high mark being reached in 1855 with 585. In 1851 the Vigilance Committee was formed to attempt to free the city of most of the lawless element. By 1856, when it came together a second time, order was restored in the community. More than 8,000 citizens served on the two committees.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK—Several years before Romain Rolland finished "Jean Christophe," Leo Tolstol called him the warden of the conscience of Europe. In his quarter-century exile in Switzerland, he has remained "above the battle," warning of war, decrying hatred, pleading for peace and understanding. His has been a voice crying in the wilderness. His exile ended, he returns to France, "an old man, broken and despairing," as the news dispatches report. The world seems to have little heeded his impassioned appeals. He wants to die in Clamecy, the village where he was born.

The greatest novel of a century, possibly of many centuries, "Jean Christophe" has been called by great critics and multitudes of lesser lights. It was published in 1913. This writer has found few young persons, even those majoring in literature, who have read it.

He has found others who have never heard of Romain Rolland, the Nobel peace prize winner exiled from his country, while Carl von Ossietzky, German Nobel peace prize winner, was impoverished, jailed and harried to his death in the same "years between." There is in this age swift obsolescence in the spiritual heritage as well as in machines.

But another, even greater teacher, looking sadly down on the multitude from a hill in Jerusalem, was also unheeded: "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!" But neither He nor His teaching was altogether forgotten. There will also be those who will remember Romain Rolland.

When he was exiled from France, vast sums of money were offered him if he would go to America, to write and lecture. Publicity, or any form of self-exploitation, is to him profoundly distasteful. He withdrew to a secluded villa near Zurich, Switzerland.

There is one definite attitude in all these post-war writings. He had no faith in "movements," in "idologies," right or left. He repulsed Henri Barbusse, his clarte group and the various "united fronts," as he did the emissaries of bloody reaction from the right. He knew that the righteous can be as cruel as the wicked, once they find reliance on force.

Like the great German Fichte, whom he esteemed, he believed only in the "inner light"—never in organization or force. But he was not a "political agnostic." He fought, and suffered, to arouse the world conscience.

He is a tall, spare, pallid old man, with thinning hair and sad, deep-set eyes as he returns to France at the age of seventy-two.

IT WAS reported that Sir John Reith, director general of the British Broadcasting corporation, was badly licked in that international Arabic crooning contest a while back. Virtually all observers gave the decision to Italy. If so, it probably was the only time he ever lost a contest.

The tall, bald, grim Scotsman is upped to the job of running the Imperial Airways, as a civil arm of rearmament, with a sizeable hike in salary. It is now $50,000 a year, instead of $35,000.

He is an engineer, and in 1916 was here with 600 technicians checking on war material contracts. He didn't like America or Americans but eased up on us later on. Running British radio, he has been ex-ecrated as a tyrant, but he has held to his line and confounded all his adversaries. His views on radio programs were outlined by him as follows: "To set out to give the public what it wants, as the saying is, is a dangerous and fallacious policy."

Magnificent Cakes Entered.

The judges report that they have never seen a finer collection of cakes assembled at one time. Because almost all the cakes were so exceptionally good, it was extremely difficult to choose the winners. But a most careful scoring system was used, and the cakes were checked for general appearance, including shape, size and crust, both color and character; flavor, including odor and taste; lightness; crumb, including texture, rated as to its fineness, tenderness, moistness and elasticity, color and grain.

C. Houston Goudiss has said that he regrets that every woman who entered the contest could not win a prize. He offers his congratulations to the winners and his thanks to the many other homemakers who helped to make this Cake Contest such a splendid success.
