Duke Of Kent Is Killed In Crash

LONDON, Aug. 26 (-All Britain, where the grievous message "killed on active service" has darkened countless households, offered understanding sympathy today to her royal family, bereaved by the death of the Duke of Kent, King George's youngest brother, on a wartime mission.

The Duke, fifth in succession to the throne, died in the line of duty yesterday when the Sunderland flying boat which was taking him to Iceland for the RAF crashed in Northern Scotland.

Circumstances surrounding the crash of the four-engined, 20-ton flying boat were held in strict secrecy but an authoritative source said it was in no way due to enemy at this rate.

All 15 persons in the plane were killed and their bodies recovered. The body of the Duke, who was the first member of the British Royal family killed in an airplane and its first to become a fatality of war in a century, was to be brought to London later. Moon's Eclipse interest turned to aviation and he served devotedly with the RAF.

The marriage of the Duke of Kent to beautiful Princess Marina of Greece in 1934 was one of the most resplendent Royal occasions of the century. They had three children, Prince Edward, 6; Princess Alexandra, 5; and Prince George, who was born last July 4 and bears also the name of Franklin for President Roosevelt, his godfather.

Is Advertising Now in The Public Interest?

As debated by Dr. Colston E. Warne Lee Brantly Adv. Dir., Crowell-Collier Pub. Co.

MR. BRANTLY OPENS: Anything that contributes to the war effort is in the public interest. Look through the pages of any advertising medium oday and you'll find one industry after another with no consumer prodduct to sell, subordinating its advertising to the war effort. a time when the military news couraging, advertising brings ews to the public - news of tanks and guns rolling off the n's assembly lines - news that inspires hope and confidence. Through advertising the public learns how to conserve essential materials, how to participate on the home front, the reasons for shortages of goods and services and how to make the best In short, a large and growing crosssection of industry is using advertising today to build and maintain American morale at home by creating an informed and determined

Naturally, companies that still make and sell consumer goods continue to advertise their products. By helping preserve the mechanisms of our economy, this type of advertising will tend to lessen the economic disruption that will inevitably come after the war.

DR. WARNE CHALLENGES: Hitler will never be defeated by whiskey arls, toothpaste ads, or ever by noisy, iotic affirmations of companies with no goods to sell. Manpower and materials are needed for total war, not for disguised advertising bally-

Talk of employing ads to build morale is sheer nonsense. Actually, profit-laden companies now employ advertising to perpetuate their brandnames and dodge excess-profits taxes by deducting advertising as a "cost of doing business," even though their output could be sold without a nickel's we: th of advertising.

Civilian morale is best built by presecting facts from impartial sources and not by tons of self-praise, bought and paid for by industry.

MF. BRANTLY REPLIES: Without propaganda, Hitler's manpower and assuring. n-aterials would never have conquered curope. Without propaganda, ne al. all never defeat Hitler. Why not let the Government decide whether advertising is a means to this end? The Bureau of Campaigns has been se, up by the Office of War Inform. cating and inspiring the public to a cannon, bring on the adve. tisers! maximum war effort. Pres., Consumers Union of U.S. DR. WARNE OPENS: Advertising earned a bad enough name in peacetime through its distortions and halftruths. Still, when honestly employed. it aids in distribution. In wartime, its chief function-selling goods-is al-Price controls, scarcities and rationing testify eloquently to the need for slowing down, not accelerating, consumer demand. Advertising, of course, helps to preserve brand names. But this advertising (like all advertising) requires tremendous amounts of paper, chemicals, materials, transportation facilities, skilled labor and power-all imperatively needed for the nation's survival. Yet advertising is not only continuing but, according to a recent trade report (Tide Magazine), is actually running well ahead of its 1935-

39 volume. At the very least, competitive advertising of scarce goods should be abolished for the duration. Let the necessary campaigns for conservation, War Bonds, etc., be run and paid for by their sponsor, the government; let them be unclouded by commercial pleading. Advertising has not, in fact, shown the capacity to work selflessly in the national interest. And work directed to any other interest is not for these critical times.

MR. BRANTLY CHALLENGES: Selling goods is not the chief function of advertising today. Whatever its long-range purpose, national advertising is fulfilling an important wartime function - the building of civilian morale. Industry is doing this with Government approval and encouragement. As Leon Handerson says-"There is a big job for advertising to do in keeping hope and determination blazing ... until the people feel the surge of rising confidence which the achievements of industry can start." Naturally, advertising absorbs paper and chemicals and labor. But the public morale, built by advertisin; is as essential to the war effort as planes and tanks and ships. DR. WARNE REPLIES: So private advertising is as essential as airplanes or tanks! How modest and re-

Just turn our advertisement-laden Sunday papers loose on Hitler. He will run before the pulchritudinous females, armed with cosmetics and girdles. Beat Hitler with three-color industrial ads saying "forget-me-not." Or, better still, loosen our pontifical tion to enlist the advertising of Amer- | radio announcers to do battle for ican industries as a means of edu- company and country. Forget the profit-motivated hypocrisy, cloaked ect it as a potent war in the flag? If the government needs ent, we are not waging | to build me rale, let it launch a campaign. And pay for it lrectly.
