

CHATTERGRAMS

BY JEAN SUITS

And has this columnist been given the raspberries this week about not knowing how to spell "mesquite" (mosquito) tree which appeared in the column of the last issue. "Honest confession is good for the soul" (But not one's pride.) I was sincere in the spelling of mesquite and will admit my complete ignorance of the proper arrangement of the letters in the word. I might excuse myself on the fact that there are no real mesquite trees in this immediate vicinity, but then neither do we have elephants, palm trees, or alligators and who would think of getting them all wrong.

The natives and former citizens of the village will be roused this week and next from their long winter months of tranquility by the urge to sally forth in search of new scenery and surroundings for the summer. Winter college students will trek homeward to enjoy the freedom and carefree atmosphere that follows a year's work of constant application to books of knowledge. Those students and teachers who have remained by the fireside during the winter will be departing soon for numerous colleges. A new set of people will slip in and the old will slip out haunting the institutions of higher learning in quest of more knowledge.

The home town will settle down on all four corners and resume its normal mode of living as soon as the hurly burly exchange is made. Life will go on as if nothing had ever happened. The new people will gradually fall in the inhabitants' accustomed line and the old ones will be forgotten.

The country weekly is cussed, discussed, abused, and misused a hundred different times while you're in and around home, but when you are far away from main street, the home paper becomes something sacred and divine. The little old five or six column ill-printed publication begins to take on a new light. It tells you all about your old pals, what they are doing, and why Tom is still down on the farm.

Your country newspaper is nothing more than a medium of relating the simple life of simple people from the first to the last inky page.

An old timer of this section has requested that I ask what important historical event happened in September on Black Friday, 1869. He was ten years old at the time and does not remember exactly. All of you pioneers get to thinking and see if you can remember this important date.

79 Per Cent Favor Wheat Program In Floyd County

514 Eligibles Vote In Wheat Referendum Last Saturday

Casting a fairly large vote, in consideration of the inclement weather, Floyd County wheat farmers voted in favor of the continuance of the wheat program Saturday, 422 voting in favor of continuance and 92 voting for non-continuance, according to official figures in the office of A. H. Kreis, secretary of the Floyd County Wheat Production Control Association.

The counting of the ballots was divided into signers and non-signers, signers being those who already had wheat contracts and non-signers being those who had not signed contracts but had land with a wheat history. Three hundred and eighty three signers were for continuance and 40 against continuance.

In the non-signers group 139 were for and 50 were against.

Votes cast in twelve balloting places over the county, with the signer and non-signer votes shown the first number being for and the second against, are as follows:

Cedar Hill: Signers, 29-5; non-signers, 7-1. South Plains: signers, 26-2; non-signers, 16-0. Fairview, Signers, 31-1; non signers, 2-1. Floydada: Signers, 54-10; non-signers, 26-14. Pleasant Valley: Signers 28-2; non-signers, 4-4. Dougherty: Signers, 13-2; non-signers 13-2. Aiken, Signers 48-6; non-signers, 4-2. Lockney: Signers, 51-7 non-signers 14-15. Harmony: Signers, 40-1; non-signers, 1-0. M. Coon: Signers, 12-2; non-signers, 9-2. Pleasant Hill: Signers, 26-4 non-signers, 17-8.

These figures show that seventy nine percent of the wheat farmers in the county are in favor of continuing the wheat reduction program and twenty-one per cent favor non-continuance.

Hale Center and Plainview Defeated—Lockney Second In League, Petersburg First

Lockney ball club is continuing its "March Through Georgia" by eliminating Hale Center Sunday at Hale Center to the tune of 5-1 and wiping out Plainview on the Lockney lot Wednesday of this week by the wide margin of 13-3.

T. Mitchell, the hard hitting lad that parades around in center field for the local boys, lead the assault here Wednesday when he hammered the offerings of Plainview mound tossers for four hits including a home-run.

T. Robinson, who is "Piziv Ivey" to all of the teams in the League, did mound duty for the locals. They were putty in his hands. Sam Langford was the only one that got to him. He chalked up a single and triple.

Crossland, Langford and Garner did the tossing for the visitors. Lockney will journey over to Petersburg Sunday and Hale Center will play here next Wednesday. If you are not attending these games you are missing some real ball games. Manager Jimmie Hodel has a fast working team and Lockney now stands next to the top in the League and Petersburg is leading.

MORE MOISTURE RECEIVED PAST SEVEN DAYS

Planting Is Getting Under Way—Real Summer Time Weather Is Here

When it begins to rain in this country it keeps on raining and then rains some more. Friday of last week we received .73 of an inch and then again Sunday evening another .61 inches, making a total of 1.34 inches.

We now have a splendid season in Floyd county and every farmer in the country is either planting cotton, and feed or getting ready to plant and will be in the field just as quick as it is dry enough.

Cotton farmers tell us that we have ample time to make a bumper cotton crop if we can get the seed in the ground within the next ten days.

A little more wheat will perhaps be made in the county than was thought ten days ago, but it will not make unless weather conditions are very favorable so wheat men state, and then only a light crop.

THE FLIGHT OF TIME IS A SERIOUS PROPOSITION

... on the veranda of a hospital a few evenings ago in company with a woman of ... middle age and watched a red sun behind a pale of dust, rapidly disappear from view. She remarked as the last flaming tip disappeared from sight that the world did not take serious enough the flight of time and that every time the earth revolved we were thrust firmly on, one day closer to eternity. Scientist tell us that the earth is gradually slowing up and that in a million or so years it will come to a complete standstill, thank goodness we don't have to worry about that for we probably won't live long enough to see it, but if we should it shouldn't worry us for the "brain trusts could surely fix it so there would still be three hundred and sixty-five days in a year and if the average citizen lives to be forty-five or fifty years of age, think how long he would live if our days were forty-eight or ninety-six or even one hundred and forty four hours long. Figure it out for yourself, while you are wondering if it would be as hard to pay the grocery bill then as it is now. —This and That by Robert Meason—Roaring Springs Reporter.

LUTHERN NEWS

Church and Sunday school was well attended here Sunday. Sunday school was conducted in English. Church services in German. The ladies of the church surprised Rev. Sager and bride with a dinner, served on the church lawn. They have just returned from their wedding trip. After the dinner, the couple were given a spool of thread and asked to go a treasure hunt. After winding about over the lawn, into the church house and out again, they came to a small cedar chest of money and several beautiful gifts given them as presents and a remembrance of their many friends who wish them happiness as they go through life. Rev. and Mrs. Sager are now at home at the parsonage of the Lutheran Providence Church.

FACE LIFTING MAKES IT DIFFICULT TO WIPE OFF YOUR CHIN

When the specialist determines the distance the face is to be raised, he turns on the power and the face moves up to its new location. It is then nailed down, or perhaps to be more scientifically precise, we should say it is then nailed up, and the subject is ready for the new life and low mind.

Face-lifting is rather a new wrinkle which has only one serious drawback, and that is that it makes it a little more difficult to wipe off your chin. In general practice it has been found wise to wipe off your chin before proceeding with the operation. In this way you save food which may have lodged thereon, and which you otherwise might not be able to retrieve.

Another time we shall discuss the science of lowering the nose and wiggling the ears. Our thought on the latter subject would dovetail nicely into the fore going, but too much heavy discussion is not our purpose on these nice spring days.—As We See It.—By William Hale Chilton (Wis.) Times Journal.

FOR PROFIT

Now Is The Time To Plant Every Available Acre To Cotton

With the unprecedented moisture received during May we now have a season in the ground unequealed since 1926, which, with little additional moisture during the growing season, should assure the best opportunity for a Cash Crop this territory has had in many years.

With no possibility of the great majority of wheat land producing enough wheat for even seed requirements, there is no Cash Crop in sight for the Plains territory—Other than Cotton or Feed.

To those growers who are not restricted by contracts we offer the suggestion, for consideration, that you have the best opportunity in years to pull out of the hole by your own boot straps—at the same time helping this territory regain its prosperity, and the Nation its position in the world Markets—with COTTON.

For those growers who, from experience or study, realize the importance and economy of planting the best seed available—we offer:—

Lockview Farms was established for the purpose of developing and improving a variety of cotton particularly suitable for the Plains and West Texas. Experiments were began in 1928 with eleven varieties and as a result this strain was selected as the most desirable. BEVERLY HILLS.—Well all I know is just what I read in the mail. The other day I wrote some little gag, and it mentioned Will H Hays when he was Postmaster General. Well sir I got the nicest long letter from him, and he paid the present Postmaster General a fine compliment, and the thing that was so interesting and so astonishing to me was just what a big thing this Post Office business is.

Will quoted all the following statistics on it. And he is mighty proud of it.

He says, the last year I was down there in every single hour of the 24, one million four hundred thousand letters were mailed. In every day 33 million. Fourteen billion postage stamps. One billion two hundred and fifty million post cards were sold and over two billion stamped envelopes. There is 326,000 postal workers serving our 110 million people. 43 rural mail carriers serving seven million families. The P. O. is 800,000 miles, (not yards) of twine to tie packages of letters, enough to circle the earth 32 times. 6,500,000 sheets of paper are used just to manufacture post cards, debts totalling one billion five hundred million are paid by the Post Office money order department. There are five hundred thousand visitors on Postal Savings Accounts more than in any other bank in the world, and 75 per cent foreign extraction. Sixty-five million checks are in use all the time. Six million yards of twine are used just to replenish the Post Office as much business as the Post Office of New York City.

There are 250,000 letters mailed in New York City are received. Nine million go to the Post Office. It is the most efficient office in the world.

So it is that friends often hurt each other and in the end their enemies help each other. The least idea of an enemy is a friend.

sweetening is a great convenience, as it sweetens at once and does not drop to the bottom like sugar and has to be stirred to be dissolved. Those who like honey use it often in preference to sugar, as it is the best sugar to give children, being easily digested.

When company drops in and needs quick refreshment on a hot day, try an orange ginger ale. Orange juice with lemon juice is liked by many as a combination drink. Iced coffee served as an ice cream soda drink is most delicious. Drop in the ball of ice cream and serve at once. POULTRY

PFN BOOSTER WHEN NEEDED NO LONGER

Poultrymen Should Consider Breeding Stock.

By Roy S. Dearstine, Head Poultry Department, North Carolina State College. —WNU Service.

When the hatching season is over, the flock is changed from a breeding flock to a laying flock and only fresh, infertile eggs are desired by the trade.

This means that the male birds should be moved to separate quarters. In doing this, however, the poultryman will consider his prospects for breeding work next season. All those male birds which do not measure up to the owner's standard for type, color and breeding ability should be discarded. If the birds are below standard they will be a dead expense during the period they are producing no returns to the owner. Sometimes, it is necessary to remove the males because in-breeding has begun. In such a case new blood will be needed.

If the owner does have some desirable roosters, however, adequate places to keep them, it might be well to build summer range houses. These are constructed at low cost and will answer the purpose very well.

In removing the male birds, it is well to keep in mind that eggs from some of the hens will be fertile 21 days after the male bird has been removed. A fertile egg will start incubation at a temperature of 70 degrees and in a few days the embryo chick will begin development. Such eggs are objectionable.

Another economy measure to put in to practice after the hatching season is over, is that of culling. Every economy is needed to make the flock pay in summer.

Then Hooty the Owl and Mrs. Hooty arrived in a tree close by and Danny overheard Mrs. Hooty tell Hooty that she had seen and heard some one moving down below and that she intended to stay right there until she found out who it was. For some time nothing happened. Then he heard Hooty's voice way off in the distance. He crept just a wee bit closer to the doorway and peeped up in the top of the tree where he had heard Mr. and Mrs. Hooty talking. He was just in time to see a great dark shadow sweep silently down. He heard a spiteful snarl and knew then that Mrs. Hooty had tried to catch Billy Mink and had missed him. And he knew, too, that, having escaped, Billy would waste no time hanging about there, but would seek a safer place.

Danny let a little sigh of relief escape. Mrs. Hooty had frightened Billy Mink away and did not herself

THE STORY FROM THE BEGINNING

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has befriended. He defeats Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested and finds a friend in Judge Able Armistage. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head. Brandon sends Duval to beat up Ben, and Ben works him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Don Stuart, leaving a letter for Elliott, dies when the going becomes too tough. Ben refuses to open the letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the mill. Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers the fire was started with gasoline. Elliott gets an offer of spot cash for logs, that will provide money to tide him over. But a definite time limit is set.

"I saw your trail. That is, I . . . How different, this beginning, from the manner of address he had planned! He felt called upon, now, to explain his presence on her trail rather than to demand a reason for her being there. "I saw your trail," he began again, "and I thought . . . It seemed to me you might be a little lost."

"As a matter of fact, I am completely turned around," she said. "It was silly of me to come into the woods, especially on a day like this, without a compass. But I did . . . and here I am!" She was eyeing him closely, now, as though searching for some special detail of face or figure.

Lost! He thought; a lost Diana! "I kept losing my bearings and had trouble getting oriented and am getting a little tired. It was so silly! Down-stupid! If you know this country you can . . . I should be back in Tincup before they say I'm worried."

Ben wondered quickly and irrelevantly, who they might be. Yes, he could get her out. In a half hour he could have her in his camp and send her on her way to town. . . . But in a half hour . . . And with her manner so clearly hostile for no reason at all? . . . She impressed him as a young woman most desirable to know well and also as one whose confidence would be slow in acquiring.

"Lost, eh?" he asked and laughed oddly. "Matter of fact, I came out without a compass myself." That was truth. He needed no compass for a short swing such as he had made today; his sound woodsman's instinct held him safe.

"Well, my name's Ben Elliott, if that means anything to you. And I was looking for somebody who has no business to be here. Who are you and what brings you into this timber?"

He was bound, now, to break through her aloofness.

"That," she replied, however, "is largely my own affair. But, Mr. Elliott, if you should guess that I was simply trying to lose a certain unpleasant mood in the woods where I once was quite happy, you wouldn't be far from right."

She spoke incisively and unhesitatingly but it seemed to him that behind this brusqueness was something quite different; something he could not fathom. He was about to remind her that she had not yet revealed her identity when she went on:

"Looking for someone who has no business here, you said. Just who are they, what are they doing?"

"As to the first, I can't tell you. For the second, their purpose probably would be to attempt to hold up a timber operation in which I'm rather interested not so far from here."

Her eyes were on him with a curious expression, which might possibly have been personal interest.

"To hold you up? How?"

"Are you from Tincup?"

"I am."

"You know people there? And what seems to be the town's most famous tradition?"

"I don't understand."

"Isn't it that Nicholas Brandon finishes what he starts out to do? That whatever he says goes, come what may?"

Her eyes dropped.

"I've heard that said. I . . ."

"Why I . . . Why, you . . . Why, Able said! . . ." He laughed outright, then, as his misconception became clear. "Oh, if I'd given it a second thought I'd have known! Able first told me about you as a little girl. It stuck in my head; a little girl! But that was years ago, of course. . . . Gee! . . . Why, then you're lost in your back yard, as you might say."

"I was," she corrected. "But a few minutes ago I heard some one sing out; and just now the cook called the crew to supper."

"Then why didn't you—"

"Because I was rather curious to discover what sort of man is standing between me and poverty,—perhaps ironically, this. And, of course, I knew you weren't lost."

Elliott flushed on that.

"I played at being lost myself so I'd have a chance to talk to you. I'm glad I did . . . unless it has offended you."

"No, I'm . . . I'm only ready to go in, now."

She adjusted the harness of her shoes dexterously and they set out. On the way to camp Ben tried to talk to her further but her responses were brief and non-committal. Her interest appeared to be only poorly aroused even on such a vital matter as the operation of her property, and so finally he gave up trying to make talk and broke trail thinking that now the job would have an added zest, that a girl like Dawn McManus was an ever greater incentive than the thought of a small child, alone, with her timber at the mercy of hard schemers, and depending on him to make safe her heritage.

In camp Blackmore, the veneer buyer, was waiting for Ben, and after eating silently in the cook shanty with those two Dawn set out for Tincup with Blackmore, leaving Ben with considerable to think about besides re-vamping the mill and getting out choice logs.

CHAPTER VI

The new piston head for the locomotive arrived and Elliott was at the station when the train bearing it pulled in. More, he was close beside the express car when it halted and carried the part himself to his waiting sleigh. The veneer logs were ready to come

"The pool room's a good place for you to be, limpy. Great center for news. Well . . . You keep on reporting everything that's said there. . . . Good night."

Holbrook limped out and Brandon, alone, puffed for a time on his cigar. Next, he opened a lower drawer and drew out a bottle of whisky. Only one drink remained in it. He frowned. A year ago he had procured that liquor; for nearly twelve months it had been scarcely touched. But since the night that old Don Stuart died its contents had been drawn upon frequently. His hands shook a bit as he lifted the bottle to his lips, now, but after drinking new strength began to surge through his body and he smiled. He looked at his watch after a time and then out into the street. After a time he rose and walked to the wall telephone.

"Give me Miss Coburn's house, will you?" he asked the operator. "Hello! Miss Co— Ah, Dawn! Its Uncle Nick talking. Want to go to the movie tonight?"

She seemed to hesitate and he tilted his head sharply, lips parted. Then her voice came.

"It's nice of you to think of me, Mr. Brandon. But I don't think I care to go with you tonight."

"Oh; sorry," he said genially enough but his brows gathered. "Another time, then."

"Perhaps."

Her receiver clicked up and he turned away from the instrument scowling thoughtfully.

"Mister Brandon, eh?" he said softly. "And . . . No excuse. . . . Well!"

The last word was spoken with a snap, as though a chapter were closed.

He paced the floor slowly. He was brooding, planning, and by the look on his face it was evident that he planned good for no man . . . except, possibly Nicholas Brandon.

Perhaps he was thinking of the matter that was to confront Ben Elliott within twenty-four hours.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—The senate has again indulged in its favorite pastime of straining at the gnats and swallowing the camels. Its latest camel that was swallowed at one gulp and with the same ease as the man on the flying trapeze was passage of the so-called Wagner labor disputes bill. The consensus seems to be that reformers in the senate reached the highwater mark when they capitulated to the labor lobby and put further insurmountable difficulties in the way of recovery for business.

Of course, the Wagner bill still must run the gauntlet of house passage. It appears, however, that the labor lobby will drive it through there substantially in its present form unless smaller communities in the United States awaken to the dangers of such legislation. The probabilities are that house members will not hear from home in time to influence their votes and prevent passage of the legislation.

The bill, drafted by the German-born Senator Wagner (Dem., N. Y.) creates a national labor relations board. This body will have almost judicial powers in settling labor disputes and in connection with those powers the board can actually say to an employer of workers that he must not promote an organization among them other than of the type of their own choosing. In other words, a labor agitator representing the American Federation of Labor will be permitted to enter anybody's shop and organize the workers and the employer will be powerless to prevent it. If, however, he sought to have his workers organize themselves into a union not affiliated with organized labor, the proposed labor relations board can order it stopped. Actually, and there seems to be little dispute of this potentiality in the legislation, it is designed to establish the American Federation of Labor in this country as a class strong enough to control the management of commerce and industry.

Although the senate action in passage of the bill was overwhelming, it was not accomplished until the Democratic Senator Tydings of Maryland shouted over the din the warning that the measure would ruin chances of business recovery. The Maryland senator sought to amend the bill with a provision providing for a referendum on the legislation.

on whatever terms they deem proper. . . . If the legislation creating the labor relations board is bad for big employers of labor, it seems likely to be worse in the smaller communities where employers of a small number of workers constitute the majority of industrial lines. I mean by that, there is usually more skilled labor available in larger industrial communities than in small towns or rural areas. That being true, the employer in a larger community has an opportunity to replace workers who are dissatisfied or who have yielded to the influence of labor agitators, whereas the small town employer of labor cannot always replace workers who would rather be idle than accept terms which paid labor leaders tell the workers are not proper.

Further, the legislation will put organized labor deeper into politics than it has ever been. It will make elections depend largely instead of just partially on the attitude of a congressman or a senator toward labor questions. In addition, the discussion I hear indicates definite fear on the part of some political leaders that the paid organizers in labor circles will themselves become political as well as economic dictators.

In some quarters, there is doubt that the bill will do for organized labor what of the things the paid leaders . . . It begins to appear that the march on Washington may flareback on administration. Massing of the Colors

THE annual massing of the colors service at Washington Cathedral has become an institution of the Nation's Capital. For years the patriotic organizations of the city have joined in the commemoration of the battle of Chickamauga, and the beautiful southern cemetery at St. Alban is a perfect assembly for the thousands of people who come to attend.

THE battle of Chickamauga was fought September 19-20, 1863, when Gen. William Starke Rosecrans was marching on Chattanooga, with Gen. Braxton Bragg slowly retreating, and expecting reinforcements. These reinforcements came suddenly and unknown to Rosecrans, relates a writer in the Indianapolis News. Bragg halted at Chickamauga, and deployed his troops. Rosecrans placed his troops with Gen. George Henry Thomas on the left, Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Crittenden in the center, and Maj. Gen. Alexander McD. McCook on the right, along the Chickamauga creek. September 19, the Federal forces crossed the creek, and on the 20th, Leonidas

Jane Addams of Hull House
What Is Reality?
Ludendorff Said No
A Woodpecker Sermon

Miss Jane Addams "of Hull House" is dead. She set an admirable example before men and women. She devoted her life and her fortune, all of her time, effort and money, to the welfare of unfortunate women and children. She was one of those that make it difficult not to believe in heaven.

If there were no future rewards for such goodness the entire universe, with its relativities, quanta, electrons and light-years, would be one ghastly joke.

Arthur Brisbane

Learned Professor Einstein, with the also learned Professors B. Podolsky and N. Rosen, all of Princeton Institute for Advanced Study, makes a deep announcement that will interest those that can understand it.

This is it, condensed:
"A scientific theory can be devised which will completely describe reality."

It seems the present scientific theory, supposed to give a description of physical reality by the "quantum-mechanical" method, does not work out satisfactorily, and you are sorry you learned it.

It is pleasant to see scientists on the shore of the ocean of knowledge, playing with one or two little pebbles. Science is far from an "scientific theory that will completely describe reality," for science cannot tell what "reality" is.

In a universe without limits of time or space, made up of particles of electricity variously grouped, in electrons, atoms and molecules, no man-microbe can hope "completely to describe reality."

Chancellor Hitler of Germany conferred upon the fighting German General Ludendorff the title "field marshal general," highest rank in Germany's army. General Ludendorff, greatest, after Von Hindenburg, of the big war, declined with thanks, announced his retirement to a small hunting lodge in the Bavarian mountains. It is suggested that Germany's most distinguished living general did not feel that

HERE'S AMERICAN OF THE FUTURE

As Depicted by Prominent Anthropologist.

Those of us who might be interested in science's quest to determine the exact nature of the typical American so far as his physical makeup is concerned, probably will find some small comfort in the theory of Professor Albert E. Jenks, a noted anthropologist of the University of Minnesota. The gist of Professor Jenks' opinion, is that whatever the number of conflicting conceptions might exist at the moment as to the physical identity of the American, the time is not too far distant when we will have a definite and recognizable racial classification.

The typical American, according to Professor Jenks, will not be a tall blond person, as some might have supposed. He will be only "fairly tall," dark eyed, dark haired and darker skinned than the present average. This, he asserts, will be the ultimate outcome of the interbreeding among the early and late arrivals on this continent. Upon the whole, if Professor Jenks' theory is well founded, the typical American will not be an unattractive person, assuming of course, that he incorporates a portion of the better physical qualities of each of the racial strains that make him.

Man's concern over the question of what he is, as well as what he does, is not motivated solely by considerations of vanity. Curiosity also plays its part. In seeking the Hellenic of the classic and the Roman of the Etruscan line he finds them not in the Greek and Italian of today. He becomes giddy, striving to follow the ancient medley of races that swarmed and intermingled on the Spanish peninsula. In striving to trace his family lineage he is dismayed by the multitude of his own ancestors, enough to populate a small city within a surprisingly few generations.

In any event, and whatever we of America might eventually become, there is comfort in the thought that we shall be a definite something. Since we are a nation, there is little reason why we should not also be a race; and it must be acknowledged that there is some excellent material here.—Manchester (N. H.) Union.

Color Dictionary Lists
220 Standardized Tints

A dictionary of colors has recently been published by the British Color Council. It consists of two volumes—one containing 220 silk ribbons each distinctly colored, named and tabulated; and the other presenting a history of each color, including the names which have described it in the past, and giving the authority for the present standardization.

While the primary purpose of the dictionary is to supply industry with a standard reference for colors, the work is expected to give valuable aid to artists and writers through an appropriate and accurate vocabulary for the description of shades and tints.

Colors have been "scientifically measured" and graded, making possible the inclusion of new shades, should they be developed in the future. Imagery, history and names of the words having a fascination and delight of their own. Taken at random from the pages are Cyclamen pink, the gray, battleship gray, bee-eater blue, Chartreuse green, buttercup and banana.

TVA CHARGED WITH WASTEFUL AND IRREGULAR DOINGS—SMITH BOOM GROWS.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SECRET hearings were opened by the house military affairs committee to investigate charges that the Tennessee Valley authority already has squandered $1,000,000 of government money in questionable awards of contracts for dynamite and powder and through other irregularities.

A. E. Morgan

A. E. Morgan, head of the TVA, and his two fellow directors, David Lilienthal and Herbert A. Morgan, were summoned before the committee.

The charges are contained in an audit of the TVA made by Comptroller General J. R. McCarl. Some of the irregularities he claims to have uncovered are:

The awarding without competitive bidding of a contract which obligated the government for an indefinite sum of money, estimated at $615,000.

Overpayments of an original contract by as much as 120 per cent.

Awarding of contracts in contravention of law, to firms which were not the low bidders, with one contract going to a bidder who was seventh from low.

Failure to require one large contractor to post performance bond and at the same time the payment of fees to this contractor in advance, despite a legal prohibition against advance payments.

Solicitation of bids by telephone or circulars among a certain group of private business houses, or in other irregular ways.

The TVA directors were said to be prepared to disprove the worst of the charges, and to be ready to make some disclosures of their own, especially concerning the submission of uniform bids by nine munitions companies.

The inquiry came as the administration was trying to get the house committee to report favorably the bill, recently passed by the senate, providing more money for the TVA and enlarging its scope of operations.

CERTAIN Republicans, most of them business men and financiers, have started a movement for the nomination of Alfred E. Smith for President by the Republican convention.

The idea seems rather fantastic but its sponsors profess to believe that such a fusion nomination would attract great numbers of conservatives and offer the best chance to defeat Mr. Roosevelt. Other Republicans are talking about making Lewis Douglas of Arizona, former director of the budget, their candidate; he also is a Democrat.

Charles C. Hellinger of New York is chairman of a Smith-for-President committee, a non-partisan organization, and he reports that the Smith boom is gaining headway and that national headquarters will be opened this summer. Membership in the committee, he asserts, has more than doubled in the last month, much of the enrollment being voluntary. Mr. Smith has neither assented to this boom nor discouraged it.

and Representative Crosser of Ohio offered in the senate and house identical railroad labor pension bills drafted in a way to meet the objections of the Supreme court to the law it declared unconstitutional. Because of the "must" list of measures demanded by the President, this bill may not be acted on in this session.

As re-drafted, the Wagner-Crosser bill seeks to meet specifically the ruling of the majority of the Supreme court that congress had exceeded its authority by legislating for the welfare of the workers; by invading the field of intrastate commerce, and by imposing drastic pension provisions.

FOUR thousand farmers, gathered from all parts of the country, invaded Washington and told President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace that they were enthusiastic believers in the efficiency of the AAA program and supporters of the amendments which the administration asks congress to make in the agricultural adjustment act.

Sen. Hastings

Mr. Roosevelt addressed, from the south portico of the White House, what he called a "surprise party," and prefaced his remarks with the statement that "a great many of the high and mighty" have been deliberately trying to mislead many people by "lying about the kind of a farm program under which this nation is operating." He went on to deny emphatically that the government has "the weaker legs were ready to come down."

ITALY is willing to make peace with Ethiopia, agreeing to arbitrate their disputes and to cease from further military measures, but on terms that Emperor Haile Selassie probably will not accept. These terms, as reported to London by Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Rome, are:

First—The integrity and independence of Ethiopia are to be respected. Second—Ethiopia must accept a division of the country into three zones of influence. One-third of the country, the Anglo-Sudan frontier, would be in the British zone. It would include Lake Tsana, which is the source of the upper Blue Nile which flows into the Nile at Khartoum. Another third would be within the French zone of influence. It would cover the railway from Djibuti, French Somaliland, to Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia. The third zone, under Italian influence, would include all highlands, which are suitable for Italian immigration and which comprise the only fertile section.

One of Italy's complaints against Ethiopia has been that slavery was still in existence there. This has been rectified by an edict of the emperor setting free the serfs. He also has abolished ancient and unequal taxes on 60 per cent of the land, substituting a fixed and regular payment.

BISHOP John Fisher and Sir Thomas More, who lost their heads four hundred years ago for opposing the marriage of Henry VIII to Anne Boleyn, were canonized by Pope Pius XI in a magnificent ceremony in St. Peter's, Rome, and about 50,000 persons were in attendance.

The chief interest in the proceedings was in the sermon delivered by the pope, in which he urged the audience to pray that England might return to the Roman Catholic faith. The Holy Father said:

"We desire that with your ardent prayers invoking patronage of the new saints you ask of the Lord that which is so dear to our heart—namely: that England, in the words of St. Paul, 'meditating the happy consummation which crowned the life' of two martyrs, may 'follow them in their faith' and return to the father's house 'in unity, faith and knowledge of the son of God.'"

"Let those who are still separated from us consider attentively the ancient glories of their church, which were at once the reflection and the instrument of the glories of the church of Rome."

BY ADAPTING the resolution of Senator Bennett C. Clark of Missouri, Democrat, the senate gave the NRA life only until April 1, 1936, and considerably curtailed its powers. The expressed wishes of the President and NRA chairman Donald Richberg for a two

OUR DAY OF WORSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 100; John 4:23-24, Colossians 2:15-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—God is a Spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.—John 4:24.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Lord's Day, JUNIOR TOPIC—Our Lord's Day, INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Should We Do on Sunday?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What We Do When We Really Worship.

I. The Origin of the Sabbath (Gen. 2:2, 3).

When God had completed the heavens and the earth he desisted from creative action. Since his creative work was finished in six days, he ceased from action on the seventh day, which was, therefore, called the Sabbath or rest day. The Sabbath was not a Mosaic but an Edenic institution. It is older by centuries than the Sabbath given to Israel at Sinai.

II. The Sabbath Given to Israel (Exod. 20:8-11).

It was made a peculiar sign of covenant relation between the chosen people and God (Deut. 5:11-15). It enjoins a twofold obligation:

1. Work through six days (v. 9). Work was God's primary thought for man (Gen. 2:15). It expresses man's normal condition. The command to work six days is just as binding as the command to rest on the seventh day.

2. Rest on the seventh day (v. 10). There must be cessation from work on the Sabbath. Since God gave the example and then sanctified the day, it should be kept holy. It was not only to give relief to the body, but to be a time when man's thoughts would be turned to God. It was designed to keep fresh in man's mind the consciousness of God and his mercies. It was thus made for man's well-being (Mark 2:27).

III. The First Day of the Week (Acts 20:7).

The early Christians met on the first day of the week to break the bread of fellowship and to worship God. Paul used this assembly as an occasion to preach the gospel. Doubtless this became the day of rest and worship in honor of the Lord's resurrection.

IV. True Worship Taught (John 4:23-24).

1. True worship is to be in spirit and in truth.
