LIFE'S ONE STRIKE AFTER ANOTHER FOR STATE TROOPERS

Detail of Pennsylvania state constabulary ready for emergency call. It's a case of strikes to the right of 'em, strikes to the left of 'em, as far as the Pennsylvania state constabulary is concerned. These men were busy with the steel strike when along came the miners' strike, affecting many thousand more workers. The state troops, it may be added, are handling the situation efficiently co-operating with the federal troops.

ation which relied more upon the shell than upon the substance. The people have distinguished between the mere protestations of patriotism and those performances which are its only proof. They have refused to be misled by such catch words as "entangling alliances" and such misrepresentations as the "six to one" "allacy. They read the treaty and failed to find the flaws which existed in the minds of those little Americans who could not see their country as the great and powerful nation destined to the world leadership in peace to which it is being invited by a world weary of war.

Jockeying Now Condemned by Treaty Friends

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: A new peace treaty blockade is threatened in the senate by a new phase of the fight between the pros and the antis. The new phase is a parliamentary jockeying for advantage in the process of voting on the treaty and the reservations. It is a war over Parliamentary tactics and technicalities. We believe we speak truthfully when we assure the fighting senators that the people are not interested in parliamentary jockeying, as they are no longer interested in treaty debates.

or put the United States into a temptible position of evading its obligations, responsibilities and duties. Jockeying will not help the senators who are trying to kill the treaty, nullify President Wilson's great work of war and peace and humiliate him before the world. The responsibility for killing the treaty cannot be evaded by jockeying nor by any parliamentary trick which induces supporters of the treaty to vote against a ratifying resolution containing deadly amendments disguised as reservations. The responsibility for the destruction of the covenant, which bears the hope of mankind for justice, liberty and permanent peace, will be placed and fixed where it belongs. The people want peace; they want the treaty ratified, with or without reservations. Above all, they want the senate to vote on the treaty quickly. They do not want a tricky, jockeying vote, but a straight honest vote, which will dispose of the document and show where every senator stands. An end to all the senate jockeying the final decision on the treaty, is the ardent desire of the public. J. R. (Bonex) Latham, manager of the Western Union at Abilene, was a business visitor to Ranger Friday. Mr. Latham is interested in oil lease in Ranger and Desdemona fields.

PEACE SHOWS SHE HAS HER OWN VICTORIES

San Francisco Bulletin: Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war, and none has been more decisive than that in which the League of Nations finally triumphed over its many enemies in the Senate. The voice of the people has prevailed. The partisans and propagandists have gone down to defeat. Real Americanism has vanquished the im-

DRURY, ONTARIO'S NEW PREMIER-ELECT, CHOICE OF FARMER AND LABOR GROUPS

E. C. Drury, Mrs. Drury and three of their five children, Mabel, Eth and Harold.

E. C. Drury, Ontario's new premier-elect, is already experiencing opposition because of some of his cabinet selections. He is a family man, having a wife and five children, the youngest of whom is two and one-half years old.

YOUNG SCHOOL DOING BIG WORK FOR RED CROSS

The school children of the Young school are making a drive to go over the top in the Red Cross campaign now under way in Ranger. They decided that the minimum contribution should be twenty-five cents and many have given as high as $1. About $65 was raised Thursday and Friday and the pupils are now working to raise the amount to $100 or more and make the gifts 100 per cent strong.

Many volunteer workers went out to secure donations from pupils who are members of the school and were not present Friday. There is strong rivalry between different rooms to see which room will be first with a 100 per cent record.

Miss Norma McIntyre, principal of the Young school, is enthusiastically lending her support to the movement, and she is anxious to beat other ward schools in the race for Red Cross money.

'Tainted Money' Causes Baptist to Refuse Offerings

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: An echo of the late Washington Gladden's "tainted money"—that verbal shot which rang round the world a dozen years ago—may be heard in the indignation of the Baptist clergyman who charges the churches to spurn the donations of profiteers. More laudable than the horse thief is the profiteer, says this preacher, and the church that accepts his largesse makes itself a partner in crime.

Dr. Gladden's wrathful injunction, it will be recalled, was directed against the colleges into whose outstretched, soliciting palms "a certain rich man" was then scattering crumbs. It may be remembered, too, that the commencement program of one famous university was enlivened by the gathered alumni who stood up and vigorously sang "Take back your gold." It is not recorded, however, that benefactors were obliged to cool their heels in the anterooms of college treasurers because of the Gladden philippic. College presidents found sanction in the cynically edited proverb to look a gift horse thief in the mouth.

The Baptist preacher's present appeal may evoke a better response. It is more specific. Dr. Gladden mentioned no names. He simply condemned the academic practice of approving and sharing in rapacity. The Baptist preacher identifies the criminals. The plea of ignorance is barred. Every church, he declares, should know whether any of its members are engaged in this nefarious business of profiteering. The mark of the beast is upon them. They should be scourged from the temples. They "sure" should.

Moreover, this Baptist preacher may have found an answer for which the churches have been groping. If church members will identify and oust profiteers those who are not church members will, we believe, rise to the same heights. And finding himself resermoned both inside and outside of the churches, the profiteer will be the predicament of all dressed up and nowhere to go. A very proper finish.

BO-ING BY AIR IS LATEST STUNT

DALLAS.—How a small boy stole an airplane ride clinging to the landing gear of the big Martin-Wright bombing machine, which is making a flight around the rim of the United States, was told by Lieutenant E. E. Hazmon of the crew of the bombing machine, when the airplane landed here recently.

The bomber was leaving the field at El Paso and was several hundred feet in the air when Lieutenant Col. R. S. Hartz, in command, and members of the crew, saw several smaller machines below, their pilots waving frantically and pointing toward the bombing machine.

Colonel Hartz, thinking that he had broken or lost an essential part of his "ship," returned to the field and landed. The boy crawled out of his hiding place much pleased with his adventure and none the worse for it, although eventually he would have become exhausted and fallen.

MERCED, Nov. 8.—Americans who formerly made annual trips to Europe have at last found that there is much country that they hardly know. Thousands of these people have visited California during the past year, and San Joaquin valley has not been overlooked by them.

The greatest interest now is in the Medina Fig farms property, a tract of 10,000 acres, which in the short time of about six months has been about half sold out in farms of twenty and forty acre tracts principally. The firm of Umben, Kerner and Eisert of San Francisco, through whom the property is being subdivided, has upon an attractive plan in offering these small farms including the planting to figs and care for the first year, at $250 an acre. Very little land adapted to fig growing is obtainable in this vicinity even at $175 an acre. In the face of this the Medina Fig farms here is selling at $100 an acre.

Since the state water commission has recently signed the water order for the completion of the Medina irrigation district, engineers have begun work on the project and the assurance of water in abundance will soon become a reality. The Medina irrigation district, including some 370,000 acres in this neighborhood, is also nearing complete organization.

CORSICANA'S $400,000 LAKE WORK HELD UP IN INJUNCTION
CORSICANA, Nov. 8.—All work on Corsicana's new water project here held up as a result of $400,000 was stopped today when an injunction issued by Judge James C. Wilson at Amarillo was served on Mayor Halbert.

The injunction was issued upon presentation of complaint by the Trinity & Brazos Valley railroad company of threatened damage.

Bishop Attacks Modern Idea as to Spiritualism

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: The theme of spiritualism and communication with the dead was discussed yesterday by two church dignitaries in Lindell boulevard pulpits. Bishop Charles H. Brent of Buffalo was the preacher in St. Peter's Episcopal church and Archbishop Glennon delivered his monthly sermon in the New Cathedral, the day being All Souls' day in the Catholic church calendar.

Bishop Brent said the war had greatly increased the field for exploitation of the talents of spiritualistic mediums. He said it was to be regretted that a number of persons of high reputation, among whom he mentioned the English author A. Conan Doyle, had endorsed the claims of spiritualism and had encouraged others to take up its practice as a profession.

The bishop said it was to be hoped that the soul, after leaving the body, should pass into a realm of higher intelligence. Instead, he said, the so-called messages from the spirit world would indicate a lower grade of intelligence. "Can we believe," he asked, "that the disembodied spirit of an intelligent person would adopt such a stupid means of manifesting itself as to rap on a table?" He said there were some striking phenomena in telephony, in the minds of living persons, and that many of the spirit manifestations went beyond the scope of telephony.

Archbishop Glennon said: "Some, through the anguish of loss or through curiosity, have sought to pierce beyond the veil and to hold converse with the dead, and many of them have succeeded in their quest, though never with satisfying certainty regarding form, fact or persons."

"Our religion teaches us, of course, the resurrection of the spirit world—of life after death, of a soul's immortality—but it teaches also with equal firmness that the Omnipotent who rules, being Master of life and death, also, and more immediately, rules and governs the world of spirit, that the souls of the departed are in his keeping, and that it would be derogatory to His power and infinite holiness were He to permit a traffic of thought and indiscriminate communication between these souls and a curious-minded living, who in many instances even openly realizes a supernatural divine agency."

"These spirits of the just are in the hands of God, and we can well trust them there. Other spirits there may be who are not just and who, led by the spirit of evil, have and do still exercise a potency in this world of ours. But their voices if heard by the living, echo only the voice that tempted the Saviour of the desert, and to which Christ said, 'Begone, Satan; thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.'"

The Reward
Jinkson, visiting a small Western town, lost his pet dog. He rushed to the newspaper office and handed in an advertisement, offering $100 reward for the return of his companion. Later he returned to the office to have inserted "No questions asked." When he arrived at the office only a small boy was in the room.
"Where is the editor?" he asked.
"Out."
"The assistant editor?"
"Out."
"Well, the reporter?"
"Out."
"The printer?"
"Out."
"Where has the staff gone to?"
"Back look for your dog."

MOLLUSKS IN OFFICE CAUSE MUCH OF RIOT OF UNREST IN NATION, SAYS ABLE EDITORIAL

The Country Gentleman: You'll find mollusk defined in Webster's Unabridged as a kind of soft nut with to thin skin. This definition, unhappily, fits a common type of office-holder now to be found in control of community affairs in our big cities and towns. We trust that their tenure of office is short and that an aroused public sentiment will soon give them the gate. Nor is it too much to hope that the American Legion will turn its attention to the mollusks in office at coming elections.

The men entitled to membership in the American Legion have demonstrated overwhelmingly that there is still iron in the blood of our race; that we are not too proud to fight nor to squamish to treat 'em rough when the emergency pinches.

And the emergency is pinching the entire nation at this moment. Scarcely a day passes that we do not read of some new outbreak on the part of "organized unrest"—riots, strikes, lynchings, plots against the government, police cowardice or police mutiny—while mollusks in office do nothing but quake or twitter or exhort "their brethren" to rise. It is only too shamefully true that most of these are jellyfish politicians, highly skilled in winning votes and holding them by the grace of quibbling and compromise, but hopelessly minus in qualities of real iron-nerved leadership.

Organized vicious unrest of the Bolshevik type is notationally new in the United States, but the remedy for quelling its manifestations is not the cure for attempted revolution and anarchism as old as the hills, only it is a he-man to apply the dose.

New York City, with all the venal politics and systematic greed that may be charged against it, has made itself nearly riot-proof by the efficiency of its police system. Physical cowardice is almost unknown among its sturdy guardians of the peace. The view of a policeman who looks into the muzzle of a menacing weapon and quails is made a public example of; fear of disgrace often drives even a weakling to duty where death is almost certain.

Let us suppose a riot is hatching in any large city. Suppose further that the mayor is the wise, resourceful, determined leader that such an official should be. There is at hand the police. There is the militia. If these fail, the government will respond to any call for help.

On the mayor's desk is a telephone. With that telephone he can call about him a bunch of staunch citizens. Many heroes of the Spanish-American and European wars he knows by their first names. There are other men who go down into the toughest wards of the city at election time in the interest of good government. There are men whose mettle has been tried in many ways. Who of these men would refuse to follow the mayor's lead to protect lives and property? Americans are long-suffering and slow to right public wrongs, but never have they failed to answer the call to duty when danger threatened.

It is lamentably true that the mollusks in office prefer playing politics to forcing stern and drastic action when such becomes the last resort. Is it a riot of nooses? Perhaps the negro vote nullified them through at the last election. Is it a pool riot? Mollusk is playing to the Red labor vote.

Somebody, who wants to be United States senator, wires the mayor, who wants to be governor, offering to send troops. The mayor indignantly sends the idea that he should keep order; he does not propose to divide honors with any one. If finally he has to call for troops he can justify his reversal by discovering some wide-spreading plot to overthrow the city government. So it goes.

What has been said about the mayors goes for all public officials from constable up. Leaders who are willing to forget politics and friends to protect life and property will always find loyal followers. Our unrest menace is not due to any lack of public courage, but to lack of courageous public leadership.

A good deal of our trouble is due to a very active minority of enemy radicals who preach crime, revolution and treason. The remedies for these are not unknown. Among the most public are deportation and imprisonment. Here again courageous devotion to duty is required, for even such sealways always seem to have a following that can "deliver" valuable votes.

It was recently charged that three hundred alien radicals, ordered deported as dangerous to the nation's peace, were out on bail, working against our government—because congress had failed to provide funds for deportation. Whether this be true or not, the nation knows that congress plays politics while the enemies of the government are playing hold.

The same fuddled while the world smoldered with the embers of an unsettled war.

Cities, states and nation lack leadership and self-interest and march against the forces of national unity, disorder and treason. In each new strike and riot the public is the victim; and a real champion of the innocent bystander seldom appears.

Along with courage as a remedy for our national disorders, we need to take a big dose of common sense. The first thing is to quit shivering at mention of radicals who are the cause of most of it. They are only a small group of foreigners who should be treated to the boot and of parlor Bolshevik who could talk needs dusting with a club. The American Legion will soon be ten times as strong numerically as all the organized Reds on this continent.

The next thing is to understand fully and to make this understanding part of the public consciousness. The hard laborers have equal but not superior rights to brain workers. There has been so much talk of the New Day that some have been stampeded into believing that both our government and human nature may be transformed in a lightning flash; and many ignorant workers have been convinced that they alone create and so must rule. The basic law is that there shall always be hewers of wood and drawers of water; and if an intelligent majority is to be ruled by a strange-tongued, ignorant or impractical minority, then the Almighty wasted a talent in giving the human race more brains than was conferred upon the ass.

Era of The Motor Truck Visualising In Giant Parade

Brooklyn Crowds See 3,051 Motor Juggernauts in Line Twenty-Five Miles Long; Borough President Calls Demonstration a Most Eloquent Answer to Profiteers.

Visualizing possibilities in modern transportation, exactly 3,051 trucks took part in a Ship-by-Truck parade in Brooklyn, on Columbus day. They made up a train twenty-five miles long, which was three hours winding its way through the streets. It is estimated that a million and a half persons looked on.

Borough President Edward Riegelmann, who is quoted as saying the demonstration was "as eloquent an answer to food profiteers as could be given," was so well pleased with the parade that after reviewing it, he sent the following telegram to H. S. Firestone, at Akron, Ohio, who is sponsoring ship-by-truck demonstrations in all parts of the country:

"Civic and industrial Brooklyn thanks you for your efforts in bringing Ship by Truck to her. It is a wonderful revelation of what can be done in shipping by truck. Its permanency as a movement for a bigger and better Brooklyn is assured."

Calling attention to the fact that two horses rode in one of the trucks as exhibits of a bygone age, one New York City newspaper in its account of the parade says:

"A trolley car clanged defiance at the long line of its menacing rivals, forerunners of a new transit age. And the horses pricked up their ears and seemed to grin mockingly at the clamorous thing on rails, as if realizing it was doomed, as they were, to be swept into oblivion by a new era. The history of Trackless Town was beginning."

"It was a picturesque spectacle, as well as an historical one. A soap company had soap cakes weighing 500 pounds each. A biscuit company exhibited forty trucks, every one of them laden heavily with crackers and biscuits. An ammunition factory showed a huge shining torpedo surrounded by white-clad sailors."

Ship by Truck parades of large proportions have been held recently in Toledo, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Albany, Seattle, Cincinnati, San Francisco, Buffalo, Tacoma, San Antonio, Memphis, and Denver. They have also been features at the state fairs of Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Washington, Texas, and Oklahoma.

International News Service. WICHITA, Kan.—The fad of stenciling the legs as a camouflage for silk stockings may work in California, but take it from the eight "Mack Sennett" girls who were here at the International Wheat Show they do not prove satisfactory in cold weather.

"Silk stockings are so terribly high," explained one of the girls after they had received a "warm" reception when they appeared with their stenciled stockings on the streets. "But goodness! It turned cold here, and silk is a little warmer than stencil work, I'll say."

McKim Motor Co. Take Over Morgan and Robinson Shop

An announcement which will be of interest to the motor world of Ranger and the surrounding territory is made in today's paper by the McKim Motor Co. The repair shop formerly conducted by Morgan and Robinson in the garage building, C. G. McKim, who will manage the new firm is well and favorably known in the automobile circles of Ranger, having been for some time connected with the Ranger Garage as salesman. He is a man of great experience in the motor world having worked in many of the leading automobile plants of the country. Mr. McKim is to be assisted by his younger brother Edward D. McKim, who has just returned from a thirteen month's visit to France, where he went to take part in a little argument which occurred over there recently. He is glad to be back and is buckling down to the work with the same enthusiasm which young America showed in the recent contest.

Those who know both of these boys predict a successful future for them as they both know the game from the ground up and are not afraid to work. The shop is well equipped with machinery and is manned by expert mechanics.

French Dancer Calms An Angry Mob at Paris

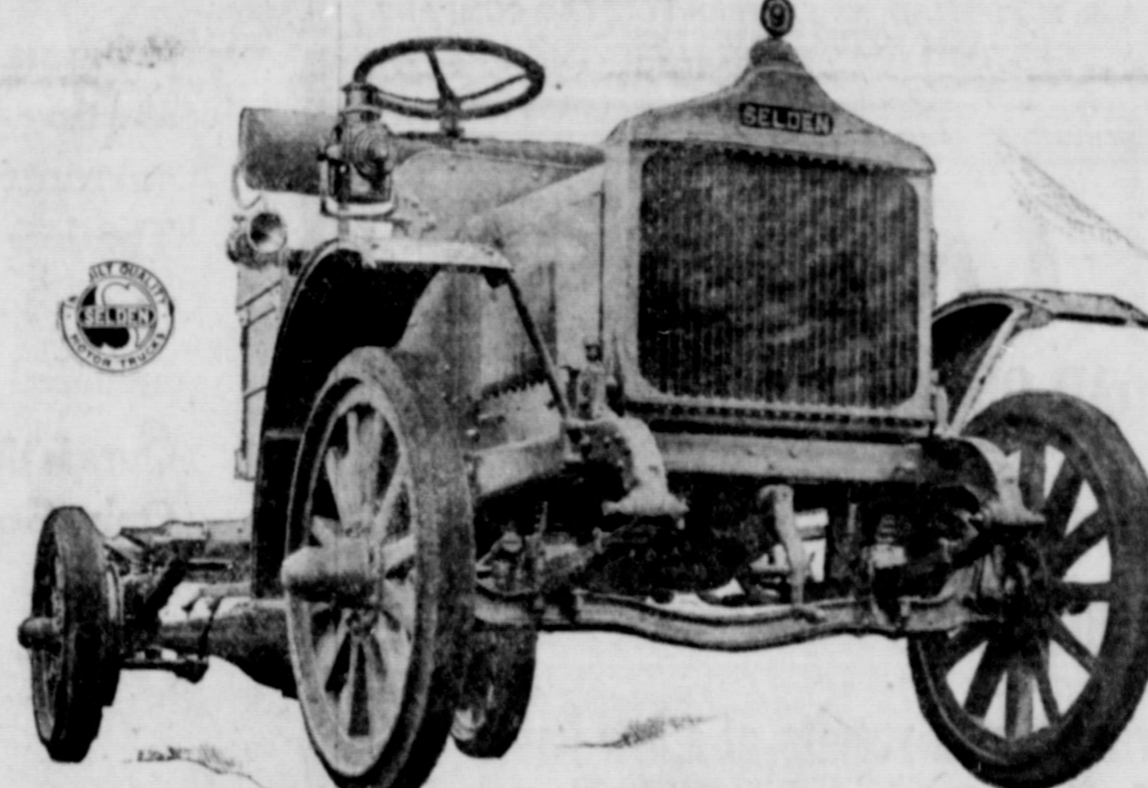

International News Service. PARIS.—The opening of the famous Folies-Bergere concert hall as a dancing palace brought a brilliant collection of French theatrical stars and also hundreds of the poor who crowded in from the fringes of Montmartre to watch the expensive limousines draw up and empty fashionably dressed women and men in evening clothes.

"It's a shame to spend money like that when some people are dying of hunger," shouted one poorly dressed man, as a blond woman swished in furs and wearing a string of pearls stepped from a car. The shouting became so loud that some of the later arrivals left their automobiles a block away and slipped quietly into the theater.

Recently along came a motor car bearing Miss Mistinguet, the French dancer, who had just returned from a trip to the United States. The cry was again taken up.

"I will buy a good dinner for every person here who has not eaten to night," shouted Mistinguet.

No one accepted the offer, and instead the crowd applauded the stage

Others He Made A Big Bumper Crop

DALLAS.—Commenting on published reports that a Kaufman county farmer has been picking cotton from a boat towed by a mule, L. L. Brin, of Kemp, Texas, wrote as follows to a local newspaper:

"I note what you say regarding the Kemp farmer. I own a farm near Kemp and possibly it may adjoin the farm you referred to. Well, everything that could happen to a crop has happened to mine. At one time it looked like it would make a bale per acre and a little later on it looked like it would make two bales per acre, and then the boll weevils, boll worms, caterpillars, grasshoppers, etc., ate up the larger part of the crop and now it looks like the cotton will eat the balance. All the chickens on the farm were drowned and the only thing I have to be thankful for is that all the ducks could swim."

SOLDIERS TELL OF HORRORS IN SIBERIAN FIGHT

ST. LOUIS.—Bringing a story of praise for the bravery and fortitude of American soldiers in Siberia, a party of seven St. Louis veterans of a year's service against the Bolsheviki in the Vladivostok area, returned here this week, after a 34-day trip by boat from Vladivostok to San Francisco. They were demobilized Thursday at Fort Dodge, Iowa.

Despite the hardships due to climate and lack of amusement the two regiments of Americans—the 27th and 31st, known as the "Siberian Wolf Hound Units"—made a remarkable record, the men said.

A majority of them were in the relief expedition sent to reinforce a detachment of seventy-four men of the company, 31st regiment, which was ambushed at Romanovka, June 25, with a loss of twenty-three lives. Among those killed were Private Louis Schlichter of St. Louis, Schlichter's brother, August, also a member of the company, was one of the twenty-four men who escaped.

"It was a massacre," the men said in describing the treacherous attack. "The American positions were in a valley. The 'Reds,' hiding in the foliage on the bluffs overlooking the American camp, opened fire while the Americans were asleep. We saw many soldiers lying in bed, who had been shot to death in their sleep."

Following the night, in which 250 Bolsheviki were repulsed, the men were cut off from their base for eleven days and subsisted on forage rustled from the fields.

From June until the men sailed in September, a vigilant watch was maintained to avoid another disaster, and as a result the men were forced to do long stretches of guard duty.

The attacks on the Americans, in the opinion of the soldiers, were in retaliation for the action the day previous in stripping the homes of peasants of their ammunition. Many of the Russians in the attacking party were known to have been previously friendly to the Americans. They desired to keep their firearms in opposition to Japanese and Kolchak forces for food.

"The peasants are not anti-Bolsheviki," the men said, "but they are anti-Japanese and anti-Kolchak. A Russian caught deserting from Kolchak is made to dig his own grave before he is executed."

During their entire stay the soldiers drank only boiled water. Prevalence of cholera made such precaution necessary.

Other drafted men from St. Louis are expected to return next week.

Rosedale Goodman No. 1, on the Goodman tract, one mile north of Deedemona and 300 yards southwest of the Henderson Gasoline company's 4,000-barrel producer, is drilling at 1,700 feet, and is expected in within ten days. This well is only 500 yards east of the Magnolia-White No. 1.

It's Enough to Live on Anyway, Says the News

Galveston News: One of those puerile commissions which are always in session in or about Washington came out with a formal report the other day in which it was stated that no American family could live decently on less than $2,240 a year. The chances are that the parents of each of these commissioners began house-keeping with less than $90 worth of furniture and annual earnings of less than $1,000 each. Such families used to get rich. It was such as they who made this the wealthiest nation on earth. An income of $2,240 a year, for two parents and three children, is enough today to insure not only a fine living, but a snug balance for the savings bank. But no family can live on that income and ape the rich. They can't live on it and go to a show every night. They can't live on it and haunt the stores every day. They can't live on it and support a flock of automobiles.

Man and Brood Make Long Trip With One Burro

GLEN FALLS, N. Y.—Airplanes may soar above, railroad trains rush over the rails and automobiles whiz by, but the age of rapid transit does not concern A. H. Price, who is traveling with a donkey from Schroom lake in the Adirondack mountains to Virginia.

When Price was a boy he read Robert Louis Stevenson's "Travels by Donkey." The desire of emulation was kindled in his bosom and those embers have never died out during the years that have passed, in which Price was married and acquired a family of two children. After camping all summer beneath the pines on the shore of Schroom, he has sallied forth with burro, babies and wife to seek the balmy air of "Old Virginia." The donkey is a high bred animal and won the blue ribbon at the Colorado state fair in 1915.

But even if this burro did carry away first honors in the woolly-west, it is hardly equal to hauling the Price family over the long distance they aim to cover. So Papa Price, borrowing an idea from the Indian squaw's method of carrying her pannose has fastened a pack-basket to his back and into it is tucked Drew Hale Price, his nine-months-old son whose rugged, chubby face peers over his daddy's shoulder "admin'ow the world was made," as his sire trudges seaward, leading the donkey. At Price's side walks his wife, a pretty, sunburned woman, wearing blue jeans, her legs encased in leggings. The other female member of the brood, Miss Dorothy, aged 2, is the only one privileged to ride. In the two-wheeled cart which the donkey hauls, rigged to resemble a miniature prairie schooner of the days of '49, she nestles beneath the canvas top. She is cooched on the party's duffel, which includes a small tent to shelter them at night when they tether the burro and "squat" by the roadside at whatever point on the broad highway the gait of the animal has permitted them to attain.

Do American Girls Flirt Too Much? Read What the Doctors Say About It

BY MARGERY REX,
Written for the International News Service.

NEW YORK.—Are American girls tired-looking because they waste too much energy in love affairs? Yes, says Dr. Tomo Inouye of Japan, who first made this statement. No, says Dr. Kristine Munch of Norway, and Dr. Alma Sundquist of Sweden, who declare love affairs keep women young and render secure the bloom of youth and beauty.

These scientists are delegates to the International Conference of Women Physicians, and during a recent trip to the national capital delivered themselves of their respective opinions on why our women look "so tired."

In search of an authoritative opinion from an American we hastened to consult Dr. Beatrice Hinkle, celebrated physician and psycho-analyst.

Said Dr. Hinkle:

"If American girls are worn out and look tired the cause is not too many love affairs.

"That tired look, whenever it is present, is caused by the tension under which the girl lives; and in some cases by the enormous output of energy and the unsatisfying conditions of her life. A lack of love affairs would be to my mind more apt to cause that 'tired look' than too great a number.

"It is absolutely true that the girl with many suitors looks happier and healthier than the neglected, unattractive young woman. The unsought girl suffers an agony of unappreciation that reflects itself in her unhappy look. It is not at all silly for a girl to be made happy by masculine attentions. It is the normal state, it is involuntary and instinctive and has nothing to do with reason or logic.

"Yet the girl who plays and trifles with men is simply behaving in an immature, actually infantile manner. She carries into adult life a condition acceptable only in the life of the child.

"Such a young woman is keeping herself in the state of mind of the child and physically her condition is one of 'hope deferred maketh the heart sick.' She plays with one young man and another, but none of these loves reaches fulfillment, its natural object.

Before we criticize the girl who is attracted by many men we must always discover what her aim is. Then we can possibly understand her. She is a 'seeker' and we do not know what 'motivation' causes her various quests. The 'seeker' type of individual often is looking for an ideal, and places his or her own halo on each new acquaintance, only to find it does not fit. Then he or she transfers it to the next.

"She is often held back from a sensible choice by the impossibly high ideal that has been held before her both in literature and in the home. She cannot find this ideal man for he does not exist. She rejects one good man after another and has not gained her object.

"There is great good in the worldly wisdom that urges a girl to marry some suitable worthy man who desires her for his wife. But she puts 'I don't love him so very much,' and then refuses. You see she has in her mind that ideal and the man hardly approaches it.

"Now and then great and intense attractions spring up. They come into being suddenly and go out just as suddenly.

"Any psychologist will tell you that these intense passions burn out quickly. A solid and satisfying relation is one based on substantial qualities."

$50,000 Is Asked To Repair Broken Heart of Maiden

CHICAGO—Artemus B. Perrigo, son of A. B. Perrigo, an undertaker, is sued for $50,000 in the circuit court by Miss Lanora Hough, 26 years old, 5206 Union avenue, who charges the young man with breach of promise of marriage.

Young Perrigo, whose address is given as 3916 Cottage Grove avenue, fell in love with Miss Hough six and a half years ago, her attorney, Walter A. Murray, says.

"Then he started to make love to her," he continued. "It was not long before he proposed and after some thought and deliberation Miss Hough promised to become his wife. Then followed a series of dates, parties, dances, and theaters. Perrigo gave his intended wife many presents.

Said Parents Objected.

"On the first day of last October Perrigo went to my client and informed her that the time was off, that his parents objected to her, and that he could not marry her."

Forty-three letters said to have been written by young Perrigo to Miss Hough will be introduced into the evidence. They were written while he was in the army. One reads in part:

"My Petty: I received your dear letter this morning and was more than glad to hear from you sweet-heart. I think of you so many times during the night and day. Petty does it so terribly cold today and these uniforms are the worse matter."

Wanted No Rockford Girl.

"Don't you please don't see any thing more about what the fellows did in attempting to fix on a date for me with another girl. I am not thinking of any girls—and least of all about the Rockford girls—I don't want anyone but my Petty."

"Lovingly forever, ARTIE."

Perrigo was in the One Hundred and Sixty-first Depot Brigade.

Booze Ban Is Cause Of Sugar Scarcity

International News Service
WASHINGTON.—Some remarkable facts have been brought to light in the Senate investigation of the sugar famine.

The most surprising one is that thousands of men who never before entered a soda fountain are now rushing the ice-cream soda as enthusiastically as they formerly "rushed the growler."

Experts blame this new class of sugar consumers on prohibition, pointing out that in the absence of alcoholic drinks men indirectly satisfy the craving for them with sugar. The extent of the inroad upon the sugar supply is indicated by the statement of one food expert that this is a leading cause for the sugar shortage.

Another discovery is that large numbers of girls, getting better salaries than ever before, are on a "spending splurge," as Dr. Alonzo Taylor, of the Food Administration, characterized it.

Dr. Taylor has also reached the conclusion that the American people never characterized generally as thrifty, are even more reckless since the war's end, with its release from tense mental and business strain. He testified recently that he did not believe the price of anything, no matter how high, is a deterrent to the American who desires to purchase the article in question, but, on the other hand, the American is more likely nowadays to pick an article for its high price instead of seeking the lower price.

PLAN A METROPOLIS.

Abundance of cheap gas and proximity to the greatest bituminous coal fields in the Southwest, are advantages which Ranger enjoys over every other town or city in Texas in insuring its future as a manufacturing center. Millions of feet of natural gas now consumed to develop the Ranger field and supply large manufacturing industries at distant points will be available. Other millions of feet later to be brought from subterranean depths will provide an inexhaustible supply. And then just twenty-five miles to the east lie the huge deposits of black diamonds which generate power.

Ranger has already become the principal manufacturing city of West Texas. Its oil well supply houses are large. Its great machine shops out-class those of railroad towns. Its big furnaces and hammers shape almost every conceivable metal. Its ice plant is large. Its other manufactures are growing. Ranger at present may be known far and wide as an oil town, but it is neglecting nothing in the way of factories.

But in our progress we must not forget to build from the inside. We must erect public utilities which will be adequate for the demands to be made upon them a score of years in the distance. We must impress upon corporations the practicability of making Ranger headquarters for great industrial plants. This must be the head of the electrical generating plant of the oil fields. The cheap fuel should attract large candy and cracker plants. Glass factories must be encouraged. Brick and tile plants must be located here. Railroad shops and offices must be brought here. In short, industries of every sort and nature must be induced to come to Ranger.

The "boom" days must be dissipated. We must come to the sound basis of making concessions and sacrifices in prices of trackage property in order to stimulate new enterprises to come and invest to insure the soundness of our city against all eventualities, even against the possibility of the great North Central Texas oil fields being worn out with continual drilling. Ranger can well adopt the slogan which made Galveston famous shortly after the great 1900 catastrophe: "A city not born to die!"

If a packing plant is drawn to regard Ranger as an admirable place for its business, it should be unwarranted for a few private individuals to stand in the way of exceeding the customary price for a tract of ground. There are other places about Ranger which will draw enterprises if we exceed propriety in overbalancing our advantages by unreasonable taxation on new ventures.

Wichita Falls has acquired a number of mammoth enterprises which employ thousands of men. They took advantage of cheap fuel, sufficiency of water, and made concessions. The business heads of the city interested themselves in getting new business.
Ranger must take the same stand.
Wichita Falls recently has been left high and dry from the real oil center of that great producing territory, but its business and industrial interests have expanded, because it was circum-spect enough to see the day when oil would not maintain it. Pending the shifting of the scene of drilling operations its citizenship possessed itself with all the new business enterprises it could collect. Wichita Falls today is one of the best cities of the Southwest. Its great factories are employing thousands who are spending their money in that city.

Ranger has all towns in oil belts bested in suitable location for factories. Not only has it the abundance of gas and railroad facilities, but it has a barely exploited coal field right at its door. It is near Fort Worth and it can serve better than any other city, Fort Worth, Dallas, Waco, Wichita Falls or El Paso, that great expanse of fertile and wealthy territory which is known as Central West Texas. Ranger has the advantage in these respects. The sooner we appreciate the remarkable advantages which we possess in this respect, and the sooner we begin an active campaign to locate new industries, the sooner will we become the largest distributing center in West Texas.

We have become the greatest wholesale center in West Texas, the greatest industrial center and the greatest manufacturing center in West Texas.
But we must have greater aspirations than to be the greatest in West Texas
—we want to become the greatest wholesale, industrial and manufacturing center in all Texas. Ranger has money, it has location, it has cheap fuel, it has a high class people and a little pep on the inside and a little advertising in the North will turn the trick.

Love Is Blind

BY PAUL C. YATES.

I loved her for her eyes of brown,
Sweet Agnes Jones from Cherrytown.
In vain her mother's righteous ire,
In vain her father's gloomy frown;
They threw petroleum on the fire,
I loved her for her eyes of brown.

I called on her one sunny day,
Her father met me at the door.
The things he said I cannot say,
I judge I should not tell you more.

And after our brief interview
* I grabbed my hat and hastened back.
My eyes were once of brownish hue,
Now one of them is black.

CISCO MAY INCREASE POLICE FORCE SHORTLY
Cisco Round-Up: The growing city of Cisco is "getting rougher," the lawless element is increasing in strength and the city will employ four policemen in the near future if the city commission can be shown the need, according to W. C. Hilton, chief of police, who has a plan for increasing the efficiency of the police department, improving appearance of same and nipping in the bud any designs against the laws of the community. Although there is little bloodshed and no crime of a sensational nature at present, the chief says that bootleggers are increasing in number and that poker and "crap" games are busted up quite often. That is the reason he plans to ask for more officers.

At present the city police force including the men at the Humble plant and the chief consists of ten men. The chief hopes that in the near future he will be able to assign two units of officers to Main street and one to the union station. The chief does not approve of uniforms for the majority of the force because "they can see 'em too far off," he says.

This step however, will not be taken until the paving on Main street is finished and the street is completely opened throughout. At the present time the entire force is working over-time.

COW IN STRAW STACKS TWO WEEKS EATS ITS WAY OUT

JACKSONVILLE, Ill. — William White, a farmer living near here, had a cow which mysteriously disappeared more than two weeks ago. The bovine emerged from a straw stack the other day. Mr. White said it ate its way through the stack and that it was inside all the time without water, eating nothing but straw. He declares the animal lost 300 pounds during the ordeal. How did it get in the straw? Well, Mr. White does not know.

HAYAKAWA CAST AS ARTIST IN HIS LATEST PICTURE

Those who marvel at the artistic ensemble of the Hayakawa productions, will find an explanation in the fact that Sessue Hayakawa, the star of these pictures, is himself an artist and connoisseur of no mean ability. "The Gray Horizon," the great Japanese actor's latest Robertson-Cole production, at the Opera House Tuesday, is a splendid example of what can be done when men with artistic brains get together.

Hayakawa, who plays the role of an artist in "The Gray Horizon," is at home in the atelier, having studied painting seriously both at the Tokio University and the University of Chicago. He is an honorary member of the Palette and Chisel Club, which has on its roster some of the greatest artists of the Southwest, and his opinion is eagerly sought after by aspiring painters.

Hayakawa, Director William Worthington and Frank D. Williams, the camera-man, are always working out new effects in photography, and have a bewildering array of special lenses, filters and lights which they use in experimenting. The Japanese star is an art-gallery lizard, and when not at work on some new production can usually be found in the Museum of Art lost in a trance before a Turner, Whistler, Rembrandt, or some other master of chiaroscuro.

AUXILIARY PLANT AT LONE STAR THEATER

An auxiliary plant has been installed at the Lone Star Theater and the patrons will not be annoyed by any lengthy stops when the city current is off, but the show will proceed in the usual manner. This is to be appreciated, for many a good entertainment has been spoiled by the unpleasant stops.

Walter E. Greene, a pioneer in the motion picture industry, Walter E. Greene, is one of the most widely known motion picture men in the country.

Although still a young man, Mr. Greene has been identified with the picture industry for more than twenty years. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Boston when the almost limitless possibilities of the cinema industry attracted his attention and prompted him to forsake trade and identify himself with the "movies." With that thoroughness of purpose which distinguishes him, he resolved to learn the business from the bottom and with that end in view he purchased a projection outfit and started an entertainment tour which, happily, was successful beyond his most sanguine expectations.

His enthusiasm for the art found broader expression later when he opened a booking office in Boston and through which the motion picture theaters of New England were supplied with attractions. He ultimately converted his exchange into a distributing center for Famous Players pictures. Attracted to New York as the center of the moving picture industry, Mr. Greene affiliated himself with Aramont and soon became an important factor in the affairs of that organization. When Aramont Pictures was organized in 1916, Greene was chosen president and capacity he handled with rare productions of the best known in the film world, including Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, M. Cohan and David W. Griffith. In spite of his success, Mr. Greene has lost none of those democratic qualities which endeared him to a host of friends in the days when he was less well known. He does not cling to conventionalities as his course as president of Arcraft Pictures corporation amply indicates. He is a man of ideas and his executive genius enables him to carry out these ideas with conspicuous success. As a result, the name of Arcraft has become the synonym of superiority in the film world, and the high standard he has set for it has met with the cordial recognition not only of the trade but of the motion picture loving public of the world as well.

Jack-the-Clipper Is Operating in Denver! Girl Loses Her Curls

DENVER.—Jack-the-Clipper is in Denver. This degenerate, who has startled mothers and girls throughout the nation by seizing beautiful young women and clipping their hair, made his first attack here recently. Miss Helen Friend, 14, was the first victim. Police believe that the fiend who attacked Miss Friend is the same man who has attacked girls in Eastern cities. It is even possible that he is the same man who attacked girls in Denver, motion picture theaters and clipped their hair ten years ago.

Miss Friend remembered a man following her when she left the store where she is employed. He walked close behind her all the way home. After she had entered the door, she heard a knock and a man asked her for something to eat. She turned to get him some food, leaving the screen door unfastened, and the man stepped into the kitchen. When the girl turned to see why the man had entered the house unbidden, he drew a revolver and pointed it at her, warning her he would kill her if she gave an outcry.

Then, while he held the pistol over her head, he drew a pair of shears with the other. He next caught hold of the girl and started shearing off her hair. When he had finished clipping her hair he packed the long curls into his pocket, told her "it would go hard with her if she put anyone on his trail," and then fled from the house.

photoplay "Stepping Out," which will be shown at the Lone Star theater soon, will be appreciated in more ways than one in this picture. Aside from the story theme it is a matter of film record that Enid Bennett has been rapidly stepping out since her debut in filmland.

Some of her more recent photoplays that have attracted very favorable comment are "Partners Three," "The Law of Men," and "The Haunted Bedroom." As has been often said, Miss Bennett is from Australia, but she is a typical American girl and loves everything about this country. She owns an automobile and spends all her spare moments absorbing the beauty of California. She says if she ever gets a vacation she is going to travel across the continent in an automobile, making many side trips.

Cisco Prepares to Impound the Sandy's Waters

Further steps to insure the city an adequate and pure supply of water for the future have been taken by the mayor and board of city commissioners and approximately $300,000 is to be spent in damming Little Sandy creek and building a monster reservoir four miles north of Cisco. The dam is to be concrete, will be constructed at a point that will give it a resistant advantage over the stream and will be eighty feet high, according to A. M. Vance, city consulting engineer.

The dam will back water up the creek for more than two miles and will form a lake that will be nearly 3,000 feet across and average fifty feet in depth. Rough estimates of the capacity of the reservoir are that it will hold 5,000,000,000 gallons of water.

Steam or electric power will be used to force the water through thirty-six-inch mains and over the high points to a hill near the city. From this point the water will flow by gravity into the city mains. Although the city engineer has not worked out the plans of the project in detail he states that in all probability work will begin early next spring so that the addition to the water system will be completed before fall.

It is said that Sandy creek flows the entire year and that it will help furnish the growing city of Cisco with an additional supply of better water. —Cisco Round-Up.

NEW MARRIAGE CEREMONY HAS COME TO LIGHT

BOSTON, Nov. 8.-When Dr Charles Fleischer, former rabbi of Temple Israel and now conductor of the Boston commons, was married to Miss Label Leslie here the officiating clergyman used a new and ultra-democratic service written by the bridegroom in the new service the bridegroom verbally recognizes the full equality of his bride.

The Rev. Edward Cummings, a Unitarian, officiated and read Fleischer's ceremony, which is 660 words longer than the famous service. "Wherefore art thou, Gaius, there am I, Gaius." The wedding was solemnized in Dr. Fleischer's apartment, following out the belief that the future home of the couple should be consecrated by the actual union, not some spot which the contracting parties are to leave immediately after the vows have been taken.

"There is no mysterious power in this particular moment which suddenly transforms you into husband and wife. No word uttered by me as a minister in the name of religion which sanctifies your union; no word uttered by another man in the name of the law, which sanctions your union; no word which we speak really makes you husband and wife.

"But your marriage, if it is a true one, began long ago-began when you first met, looked into each others eyes and there the mutual attraction which ripens into love. Your marriage continued as you came to know and to respect each other's personality. It continues past this ceremonial moment through all your joint life, always to be made or marred by you. Not even death can end your true marriage, for the departed one remains with the survivor a beautiful and beneficent influence.

"Permit me a further personal word, namely the request that you do not allow your present poetic relationship of sweethearts to degenerate as in the prosy relationship of mere husband and wife. Never take each other for granted. Never feel that you know each other quite. Never feel that you have exhausted the joy and mystery of each other's personality; continue to the end the days of your courtship; woo each other and win each other, and elude and lose each other always. So you may indeed make your marriage one grand sweet song, and preserve always the beauty and the poetry and the elusiveness of human relationship.

(Then after the couple have clasped right hands.) "Let this symbolize your attitude toward each other, your intentions thus to walk through life, hand clasping hand, heart beating in sympathy with heart; soul feeling the congeniality of soul, each respecting the sacred inviolability of the other's personality. Let your clasped hands symbolize your attitude of boon companionship, of sturdy comradeship, of friendship sterilized, which, at its best, marriage is."

"And now let me ask you: "Charles do you take this woman at your side to be your lawfully wedded wife, promising to try to be unto her always a faithful and devoted husband, doing your duty by her and the home which you are about to found, always as God gives you to see that duty, and respecting the sacredness of her personality; the fulfillment thereof than to exact such service of her? Do you promise?" "Charles: "I do."

The same query is then put to the bride. After this an exchange of rings is made in token of their equality, following which a cup of wine is passed, first to the man to sip, then to the woman.

"This, too, is plainly a symbolic act. The fact that the man has drunk first does not mean that we recognize his superiority. Indeed, in a democratic marriage there is no question of a superiority, of dominance or subordination. The relationship is that of self-respecting mutually respecting equals. Simply, the man drinks first in order to indicate that even among a democratic people the man claims the chivalrous privilege of bearing the brunt of life's shocks. But as you; the woman, drank immediately after, so you have indicated your desire to share with him what ever life may bring to each and both of you! I bid you remember the German proverb, "Sorrows shared are sorrows halved; joys shared are joys doubled."

"And now that you have thus, in word and symbol, pledged yourselves to each other and together consecrated yourselves to all the nobler ends of life, I do, by the virtue of the authority vested in me according to the laws of the commonwealth, which sanctifies your union, and in the name of religion and idealism, which sanctifies your union, pronounce your lawful husband and wife."

SHAKESPEARE HAD ONLY KNOWN SOME CATCHY TITLES

LONDON-Justina Wayne, dramatic actress, finds an explanation of the question as to why Shakespeare's plays seldom win financial reward in what she terms Shakespeare's inability to give his productions catchy titles. She suggests a repertoire of the ward's plays rechristened to meet popular demands for stimulating titles. Here's the way the actress says they should go: "How Could You, Juliet?" for Romeo and Juliet; "Call of the Flesh" or the Merchant of Venice; "Strangled in Bed" for Othello; "The Nutty Princess" for Hamlet; "Hon. Whom Do You Love?" for Henry V.; "Big Dick" for Richard the Third, and "Moonlight and Honeysuckle" for A Midsummer's Night Dream.

RACE SUICIDE LAID AT DOOR OF LANDLORDS

ST. LOUIS.—It is an amazing story coming from Brooklyn about owners of apartments requiring reports from tenants' wives who expect to become mothers within three months. The law forbids election of a tenant with three months after the birth of a child, so the attempted requirement is to obviate this. As a matter of fact, no women need make such reports, even if the terms of the lease prescribe it as a duty. Such a contract is void, because against public policy. But the landlords will regain the whiphand when the lease approaches expiration, for they can arbitrarily raise the rent or let the property to somebody else.

The reluctance of landlords to let apartments to families with children is due to two reasons. One is the greater wear and tear on the premises. The other is the narrow selfishness of other tenants, who protest against the presence of children in the same building. The first reason could be removed by means of indemnifying policy. But there is no way of removing the other reason, unless high education.

In some cities there are apartments reserved exclusively for families with children. Their owners combine profit with public policy. It is strange that the idea has not made greater headway, for it would lessen the various causes that threaten what Col. Roosevelt called "race suicide." It would have been better to devote two-thirds of the Roosevelt memorial to carrying out this idea in various cities, instead of abstract Americanization. Not only the future of the race, but the happiness of the present, is involved. Children in families tend to break up the crust of selfishness and to reduce the divorce curse to the minimum.

It is to be hoped that the housing program St. Louis has under way, says the Times, will provide homes for families with children. They are the families which really count in the future.

L. George Gets Wrong Letter Offering Good Time

By International News Service.
PARIS.—While Lloyd George was spending his recent vacation on the Brittany coast, the mail carrier brought him one morning by mistake a letter simply addressed to "L. George" with this enticing invitation from a Parisienne:
"Dear—Meet me this afternoon for a little plunge. Then we shall have tea, dinner, a little cabaret and some dancing."
"Everyone is trying to find work for me to do," remarked the British premier, as his secretary sent the letter back to the postoffice. This postman is the first who has tried to show me a good time."

Britain Now Has Air Mail Service

By FLOYD MACGRIFF,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.
LONDON, Nov. 8.—England has a regular aerial mail service as a result of the railroad strike. Had there been no such a service would not likely have been inaugurated for six months or a year hence.

Regular daily round trip air mail service was established as an emergency measure from Hunslow, England's aerial "grand central" on the edge of London, to Newcastle, Glasgow, Manchester, Birmingham and Bristol. In addition, overseas service was established with Holland, Denmark and Belgium by one machine operating between Hunslow and Brussels, while another service kept important mails going and coming from France.

"Not until the government reduces charges from two shillings an ounce to sixpence will air mails become popular with the public," said Major Samuel Greer, civilian aviator director at Hunslow, air terminus. "With a sixpence charge per ounce, which is in addition to regular postage, the government can make thousands of pounds on such a service."

"No aerial passenger traffic except to the continent was permitted during the strike, in order to save gasoline. The daily number of civilians carried to France by air averages twenty-five, while the inward arrivals are about that number, too. The Handley Page service to Brussels averages ten passengers and the Airco three to five."

"The Airco brought inland air mails to England months before it had been planned to start such a service. For every machine in the air we keep six in reserve. Over weather conditions make any kind of flying here on a schedule basis, far more difficult than in America."

The Hunslow airbase, destined to be the heart of Britain's air traffic, today presents an unimposing appearance. Located at the edge of a staid suburban district, the aerodrome, formerly a war training camp, has the appearance of a frontier village, with its weather-stained hutments and boarded buildings. The huge, treeless takeoff ground, nearly a mile wide, is an oasis in a deserted pasture field, which it greatly resembles, except when there is a machine about to arrive or depart. Then there is hustle and plenty, from waiting mechanics to customs officials.

MIGRATION TO WEST ENGLAND SUBJECT OF STAGE JESTS

LONDON.—"The Two Bobs," a pair of American comedians in "Bran Pie," a new review, are amusing London by recounting in song and great migration to England of wealthy Americans who find a state of distress unendurable.

The reviewer of the Westland Express doubts as to whether England will be able to find room for all the Americans "who are fleeing from the petty tyranny of the Home of the Free." "America in exchange all her own 'feculent fanatics,'" he says.

5 Robbers About to Reform Poker Players in Iowa

ROCK RAPIDS, Ia.—Poker playing is getting to be dangerous business around central Iowa. The danger is not from town marshals and such. It comes from the opposite direction. Sheriffs and constables don't interfere with "friendly" little games but there's a gang of five men with guns and masks that are making it more unprofitable than ordinary for poker players. They seem to be able to see a game from afar. And just when the stakes are highest and about all the money in the crowd is on the table the five men with the guns and masks have a habit of walking in, holding up the players, pocketing the stakes and departing.

Not content with stealing all the money and jewelry in sight, as well as breaking up a good game, the robbers have the habit of forcing their victims to strip off their clothes in order to prevent a quick pursuit. The cutting of telephone wires is another method used to prevent the alarm being spread. After getting everything of value the robbers leaving their victims usually making their telephone out of order, climb into a seven-passenger touring car which has been waiting and escape before the players can get word to policemen.

Last Holdup at Rock Rapids.
Rock Rapids players are the latest to fall for the five robbers. That was last Tuesday evening. The Sunday previous five men, using identical methods, raided a game at Estherville, Iowa. A game at Larchwood was raided two weeks ago. Blair came in for a robbery's short time before. There were others, but naturally the players are not giving the affairs much publicity.

The Rock Rapids game was in progress in the home of Harry Hickman. Things were getting interesting. It was about midnight. In fact, things were so interesting that the seven robbers forgot everything except the game. They were in the back parlor. The front door was closed, but not locked. Doors are seldom locked in Rock Rapids.

The players did not hear the front door open, but it was opened and they were brought up with a jerk. "Hands up, gentlemen," came a stern command. "I hold the winning hand."

The seven players looked up, to find themselves facing five black masks and five pistols. The pistols were so interesting that the seven robbers forgot their direction. "You win," said Hickman, as four hands caught the ceiling at the same moment.

One of the robbers went to the table and took all the money but swung up a number of "I. O. U.'s."

"We've got through the pockets of the seven," he collected about $1,000 in cash and a number of diamond rings and pins. Watches and other jewelry the robbers refused to take.

"You're 'em," he said. "We don't want 'em."

Denver "Date" Book Takes Wink at Love

By International News Service.
DENVER.—One of Denver's oldest social institutions, the "Appointment Book," in a leading department store, is becoming a reality, a medium in exchange of all sorts of messages, from flirtatious little love missives to dire threats of vengeance.

The "Appointment Book" was established for the convenience of patrons who desired to meet downtown. If one party arrived earlier than expected a notation was made in the book, residing in a convenient booth at the entrance, notifying the other just where to look for the first arrival.

The book has outgrown its original purpose, however, and many humorous and cryptic messages are to be found on its pages.

"Mickey, why didn't you speak to me last night? Are you mad at me? Answer, please, I'm worried," is the plaintive message signed "Frenchie." And apparently Mickey was peeved, as no answer could be found for some days, though it was discovered about a week later that they had "made up," and that, contrary to the impression given by the "monickers," both Mickey and Frenchie were of the feminine gender, as the following exchange on an "Appointment Book" discloses:

"I had a date with the sweetest guy you ever saw last night,—Mickey."
"I'll bet he wasn't as nice as the soldier I dated with, I'll introduce you sometime,—Frenchie."
The "Appointment" book bears great resemblance to the ordinary hotel register, with a pencil tied to it.

A notice in the booth above the book reads: "Make your appointments here."

SAN ANGELO FALL FAIR NOT SO WILL ATTENDED
SAN ANGELO, Nov. 8.—Paid admissions to the San Angelo Fall Fair totaled 5,996, according to the fair management. While this was smaller than in previous years it was accounted for by the fact that only three days of the fair this year were propitious for attendance, the rains interfering with the other days.

LONG STRUGGLE IS AT AN END

"I've had a long hard struggle with ill health, but by the help of Orgatone I have found relief at last," said Mrs. T. E. West, residing at 2839 Hemphill Avenue, Fort Worth, Texas, recently.

"I had stomach trouble and nervousness so bad for two years that my life was miserable," she continued, "but I'm a thousand times better since I began taking Orgatone, and a medicine that is doing so much for suffering people can't be praised too much. I've spent lots of money trying to get some relief, and it certainly seems remarkable, but it's the truth, a few bottles of Orgatone have done me more real good than everything else I took combined."

"When I first began taking it I couldn't eat anything without it hurting me. Any of the heavy or more nourishing foods would lay like a rock in my stomach, and every liquid diet at times, would sour on my stomach and fill me with pain. At times I would have acute indigestion besides this, the fearful headaches hurt me dreadfully and I was very restless at night. I was fearfully nervous when I fell asleep at night the noise would wake me in a fright and cause me to almost jump out of bed. I was so restless that I would spend most of the night sitting up reading and the thought of going to bed was sometimes a dread to me."

"What caused me to take Orgatone was the high recommendations I had been reading daily in our papers of local people who suffered like I had. I started on a course of the Treatment and now I'm taking Orgatone every chance I get. I can eat anything I want and enjoy it and never feel the slightest bad effects from it. I sleep fine every night, and as to my headaches they are so much better that I hardly notice them any more. My friends say that they can tell by my looks that I have gained several pounds in weight. I don't know whether I have or not, as I haven't weighed, but I do know my increase in health and strength has been wonderful. I am still improving every day, and it's a pleasure to tell others about the Treatment that has done so much for me."

Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific treatment absolutely free from alcohol in any form and is sold in Ranger by the Ranger Drug Company exclusively under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.—Advertisement.

NEW AUTHOR HAS JUMPED TO BIG FAME

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: Of all the works of fiction which owe their origin to the war, the one which up to this time seems to have a promise of the most permanent value was written by an author of a neutral nation. This work is "Los Cuatro Kinetas Del Apocalipsis," and this author is Vicente Blasco Ibañez, who has just arrived in this country for a visit of several months.

Twenty-one editions last March, twenty last February, sixteen last January and thirty-six, or more than one a day, last December, are a part of an impressive record telling the story of the popularity in this country of the author's dramatic and novelistic "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." It is a book which transcends many of the laws arbitrarily laid down for story telling. It opens a few hours after the declaration of war on France and its narrative thereafter moves back and forth capriciously and often rather confusingly over a period of thirty or forty years. But after all preliminaries are arranged and the reader is made acquainted with three generations of dramatic personae, the action moves forward irresistibly and majestically through the tragic developments of the war in Paris and rural France.

Ibañez is, above everything else, a writer of novels with a purpose. One of his older stories is aimed at the Spanish national pastime, bull-fighting. This novel depicts the merits of the allied cause. But although a war story, its hero, if it may be said to have a hero, never saw the war, died years before it broke out. This is old Don Julio Madariga, the Argentinian, who could smile amiably when the death of his dear one or inclement weather of 15,000 or 20,000 head of his cattle was reported to him and to whom was scandalously attributed the paternity of an amazing number of half-breeds, scattered over an estate as large as important European principalities.

As war propaganda it is far more adroit and subtle and effective than any propaganda work appearing in the language of any of the nations that fought on the entente side. Still, as we have been very familiar with the viewpoints of war propaganda of all sorts, even the subtlest, and with the scenes and events attending the war, the first part of the novel dealing with the New World, will seem to us better and more refreshing than the last part, dealing with the Old, in convulsion.

Tens of thousands of Americans, to whom his name even was previously unknown, have read an acquaintance with Ibañez's genius through this masterly book. Thoughtful critics, after a review of the whole field and assignment of merit where merit is due have declared him the greatest novel writer living today. His presence here ought to

Europe's Buying Our Leftover Booze

For the eight months with August, 1919, the value of liquors exported was nineteen times as great as the imports, while in the year 1914 the value of imports was five times the value of exports; or, in other words, exports for the eight months ending in August amounted to—hold tight—$9,989,858.

The Demand Is Greater than the Supply

Practically every manufacturer of standard make automobile tires is oversold. Ask any tire dealer and he will tell you that his factory is unable to supply his demand for tires. "The India Rubber World" in a recent issue says: "It is not surprising that automobile tire manufacturing has become the principal department of the American rubber industry. Fully 4,000,000 cars are in operation in the United States today, a number more than four times the total for the rest of the world, and still the demand for automobiles keeps well ahead of the 40 per cent yearly increase in past years. Figuring five tires to the car per year this means that 50,000,000 in all are needed yearly and the 12,000,000 cars produced every year will require an additional 8,000,000 tires. It is estimated that sixty million tires will be needed in 1920.

The Fordtire and Rubber Company is a new departure in the manufacturing of pneumatic tires. It's puncture proof.

We will specialize in the manufacture of a special tire for Ford cars that is puncture and blow-out proof. This tire will be sold under a positive guarantee of 12,500 miles. Other manufacturers guarantee 5,000. A special process in construction and the use of a metallic protection make this possible.

Stock in this Texas Company is now being offered at par, $1.00 per share.

The big dividends paid by the old companies are no secret. Once we begin operations you surely can easily see the possibilities of even greater returns. The old companies are manufacturing a pneumatic tire while we will make a blow-out and puncture proof tire. Don't wait, but take advantage of this opportunity and buy before the stock advances.

Tire Industry a Steady Growth

When the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company first began the manufacture of automobile tires, its capacity was only a few tires a day. Today it is more than 15,000 a day and will be 25,000 when new buildings are completed. In 1916, its gross sales amounted to $36,000,000. This year it has been over one million a week, or over $50,000,000 for the year. Up to September 1, the sales had increased 72 per cent over the same period last year. The company now has more than 10,000 employes in its home office and factories and 1,500 at its branches in the field.

The rubber industry has made Akron one of the booming towns of the United States, says the newspaper writer, F. G. Carpenter. There is no special reason for it except the enterprise, push and brains of the men at the head of the business. The city is thousands of miles from where the rubber trees grow. It has no waterways to connect it with the ocean, and the raw material and the manufactured goods have to pay heavy freights coming and going. Nevertheless the output is something like $225,000,000 a year and 65,000 men and women are kept employed making nothing but rubber. They get the highest wages. The poorest hands, when they are undergoing their apprenticeship, get 32 cents an hour, and the factory pay rolls now amount to more than $40,000,000 a year. The capitalization of the various companies is about $200,000,000.

Our Plant Will Be Located in El Paso
El Paso is an ideal location for our factory. The uniform warm climate makes the handling of rubber easy all year round. We are close to the supply of crude rubber and cheap labor and the other raw materials necessary.

Prussia Will Be Ignored by Airmen; Berlin Alarmed

International News Service. LONDON—Prussia will no longer be a "port of call" for the crack European express trains, according to a dispatch printed in the London Daily Mail from its special correspondent in Berlin.

A map recently published shows how Prussia will be cut out of the big international railway routes under a new traffic scheme, writes the correspondent, and German officials are decidedly worried, because, as the writer quotes one leader: "Germany must have the best, cheapest and most efficient railway system in the world. It is our only chance."

Then the correspondent continues to explain: "The Orient Express, everyone knows, will run henceforth through Northern Italy to Venice, Trieste and thence via Belgrade to Constantinople and Athens. It will no longer run through 'Pan-Germany' that is, via Vienna and Budapest. Hence its two great feeders, the Hamburg-Berlin-Vienna and Berlin-Oderberg-Budapest expresses, drop out."

"But also Germany's famous Nord express (the Russian and Far East express) will no longer run via Cologne and Berlin. Indeed, it will touch Stuttgart, and thence run via Prague; but it will not be the Nord express, and its feeders, the Frankfurt-Berlin and Hamburg-Berlin expresses, will disappear. Again, the once well known German route to Copenhagen (which was the quickest and best route from London) is to lose its monopoly of the fast sea route from London direct."

"Lastly the Swiss express route along the east bank of the Rhine (Cologne-Frankfort) gives way already to the Belgian-French route, Brussels-Strasbourg. "It is partly with the hope of saving some international traffic (as a Frankfurt official explained to me today) that Frankfurt has started its import fair, which will be held twice yearly. Frankfurt's magnificent station, once one of the finest in the world, and possessing perhaps the best restaurant, is threatened with decay, whereas Stuttgart is busily considering plans for enlarging its accommodation to welcome the Nord express. 'It is our only chance.'"

"At this moment German railways are the terror of travelers. It is almost useless to buy a first-class ticket, for the attendants of the old railway officials to turn out passengers with third-class tickets are met, as often as not, with the reply, 'Have we had a revolution or not? Very well, then.' A true story is told of an attempt a little while ago to persuade a third-class ticket holder to leave a first-class carriage on the eastern route. He produced a medical certificate to show he was lame and could not travel third. The official was not satisfied, and finally OPERATOR COPIES MESSAGE ORDERING HIS ARREST."

International News Service. PUEBLO, Colo.—Because he interpreted the dots and dashes of the Morse alphabet "mechanically," H. W. Lovelace, well-known railroad telegrapher, is on his way to Wyoming to answer charges of impersonating a secret service officer. Lovelace was employed in a telegraph office here when he copied a message to the local sheriff requesting his arrest. Dispatching a messenger with the telegraphic order, Lovelace was surprised an hour later to see the sheriff walking into the office to place him under arrest.

PALESTINE SCHOOL KIDS TO WALK OUT ON STRIKE

They are now planning to go out on a sympathetic strike. Parents of students who use telephones will be taboo with the young gentry, it was stated today. The telephone operators have been on strike since early in August. Palestine is one of the strongest union towns in the state.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Stories of heroism may be told of the Argonne until they are written in the pages of history, the gallantry of the American marines at Chau-Thierry may thrill mankind to the end of time itself, the glory of the western front may pass into the generations, but never will there be a story that can surpass the one brot home by the handful of Americans who battled at Romanofka, Siberia, on June 26, 1919.

Women and Men Fight Side by Side

By LUCIEN JONES International News Service. TRIESTE, Oct. 10 (By mail).—Reports from Italian sources indicate that the situation along the Dalmatian coast is of exceptional gravity. Spalato, Trau and Castella have been the scenes of sanguinary encounters and disorders between the Italian troops of occupation, the local inhabitants, and the Serbian and Croatian soldiers. (These ports are roughly 160 miles south of Fiume.) In taking these reports into account, it must not be forgotten that the Serbian troops are reported to have been pursuing a policy of suppression against the local Croat inhabitants so that in some cases Italians and Serbs are found banded together against the Croats, while in others the Serbs and Croats have found a common enemy in the Italians.

Morover, news coming from Italian sources gives only the Italian side of the question, while reports that are issued by way of Jugo-Slavia are equally unreliable. According to the latest reliable intelligence, Italians have crossed the armistice lines and taken the local Serbian troops prisoner. It is not known whether these troops are D'Annunzio volunteers points to this fact. Croatian bands of brigands, taking advantage of the disorder that ensued, proceeded to vent their wrath on the local Italian population. In Castella, armed troops of irregular Croat soldiery rushed about the streets threatening to massacre every Italian they could lay their hands upon.

In Spalato sporadic street fighting and disorders occur daily. The situation there has been somewhat relieved by the landing of Italian marines from the men-of-war lying in Spalato roadstead. Women take a leading part in the trouble and fight like soldiers. In Trau bloody fighting between the Croatians and Serbian and Italian soldiers followed a political argument between a Serbian soldier and an old native Italian woman. The Serb finished the discussion by running his bayonet four times through the old woman.

The combatants are, for the most part, irregular troops, and their actions are not countenanced in any way by their respective governments. The Italian newspapers, however, accuse Allied representatives in Spalato of encouraging the Croatians at the expense of the Italians, and say that the American Admiral Andrews, who commands the American naval forces in the Adriatic, sent a marconigram from his flagship to the Olympia, lying in Spalato, ordering all Italian ships lying in the harbor to proceed forthwith to Italian ports.

Five others were wounded. Five of the company have been recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross. The Russian had posed as simple country folk, friendly to the Americans. They outnumbered their benefactors ten to one. But when they turned to attack they fired even into their own homes, where some of the Americans had fled for protection against the hail of steel pellets that rained into the camp. Victory finally crowned the valiant struggle of the Doughboys.

"Most of the boys who were killed never had a chance to leave their beds," the officer said. "They were shot while asleep. The others came scrambling out, and fought in their underclothing. I ordered them on to advance in skirmish order. They moved as though on the drill ground. A corporal, already wounded in the foot, led them. He walked, and the men followed. "We reached a low-lying fence, and I organized my defense with two men on each flank, three to protect the rear and sixteen acting the enemy. This is the manner in which the men met the Russians, armed with German and Russian rifles.

"My orderly was behind me, carrying my rifle. My pistol was empty and I turned to him, asking for the rifle. As he handed it to me his head was blown off. I was wounded in the leg by an American bullet, fired by a sharpshooter and received a bullet in the jaw. My teeth flew over the place like so many pellets. Before the victors started to bury the enemy I lay, though, we had them on the run."

"A Russian ran to our ammunition tent I put my head out of a window in a house where I had gone to pick up my rifle. My teeth flew over the place like so many pellets. Before the victors started to bury the enemy I lay, though, we had them on the run."

When the fight was all over the victors started to bury the enemy dead. Lying face down, shot three times in the back, they found the body of the former "buddie" who had betrayed them. He, too, was buried, but no tape bade him rest in peace.

W. C. T. U. WILL START CRUSADE UPON TOBACCO

TULSA WORLD: "Foolish vanity about fine clothes and jewelry is the worst thing about the women today," declared Mrs. Minnie J. Grinstead, member of the Kansas state legislature, who delivered the principal address at the meeting of the twelfth annual state convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union here last night.

"If we could intern Dame Fashion for one year we could deliver old man High Cost of Living a staggering blow right between the eyes. Uniform dress for school girls, stenographers, clerks is a reform that if brought about would be a blessing to the women of the country."

"Common sense in dress is the greatest need of the women and girls of America. The vanity of men is exhibited by their ties and socks, but we must hand it to them for being more sensible about wearing apparel and less subject to the dictates of fashion than we are."

In her pointed epigrammatic style the speaker fired hot shots at the tobacco habit as well as vice in general. Now that prohibition has won she declared that the W. C. T. U. must reach to other fields of uplift and reform.

"We have dealt the liquor traffic a death blow. But we love the drunkard. We must do all we can as an organization to assist him to come back, to restore his manhood and to provide for his family," she said.

When she predicted that the tobacco habit would quickly follow the path of whiskey and voiced the slogan of world wide prohibition in 1925, she received the applause of every delegate.

NEGRO KILLS WHITE MAN AND WOUNDS TWO OTHERS

MARLIN, Nov. 8.—James Greenham and W. W. Williams were seriously wounded late Thursday night in a difficulty with a negro named Will Hibbler, near Mooreville, over discussion of a bale of cotton.

McLennan county officers arrested the fleeing negro at his brother-in-law's near Waco. He was taken to another county for safe keeping. Feeling is running high here.

TAYLOR, Nov. 8.—Bad weather, coupled with inability to secure coal and wood, has precipitated a food famine here. The sugar shortage has compelled bakeries to cease operation. Not a stick of wood or shovel of coal can be bought in Taylor. The situation will become serious with bad weather.

CALLS FIRST MEET OF INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS WOMEN

Miss Lena Madesin Phillips.

Miss Lena Madesin Phillips, executive secretary of the National Federation of Professional Women, has issued a call for an international conference to be held in New York on the evening of April 22. This will be the first conference of national importance called by this federation since its first annual convention held in St. Louis last July.

Waiter Now Lives in Luxury After Rich Mine Strike

MONTEREY, Mexico.—Of all the men who have made fortunes out of mines in Mexico during the last several hundred years none, perhaps, had a more remarkable career than Pedro Pedrazini, who is now living in magnificent style in his boyhood home in Switzerland.

Another noteworthy fact connected with this mine is that no serious interference with its operation has ever been made by hostile Indian bandits or revolutionists. This is a remarkable record for a mine in Mexico.

It is the career and personality of Pedrazini that make the story of Las Chispas mine interesting. He came to the United States from Switzerland when a boy. He was almost penniless when he arrived in America. He made his way to Hermosillo, in Western Mexico, where he found employment as a waiter in a restaurant.

The owner of the restaurant got into financial difficulties and being unable to pay off his employees in cash, distributed his little remaining property among them. To Pedrazini fell the mining claim of Las Chispas, which the owner considered worthless. Pedrazini, however, set out on foot for the mountains where the claim was situated. He had no money and only enough grub and supplies to last a few weeks. He started sinking a shaft on the prospect and almost at the grass roots he struck a vein of silver of wonderful richness. His fortune was quickly made. He installed modern machinery and equipment and the mine was developed into probably the largest silver ore producer in Mexico.

RANGER ELKS OUT IN FORCE TO FT. WORTH

Fort Worth will be in gala attire next Tuesday, Armistice day, and Elks from lodges all over Texas will be the guests of the Panther City and the Fort Worth Elks' lodge at the annual convention.

Ranger will have her part in the show and an oil derby typifying the city's biggest interest will lead the parade on the city contingent. It has been loaned for the occasion by the Elks' lodge.

The Ranger Elks' lodge requests that all Elks who can make the trip purchase their tickets and make reservations at once to leave on the Monday night train, which leaves Ranger at 11:35 p. m. A good delegation from Ranger will be appreciated.

Further information regarding the trip may be had from Moore & Frantz, over the Ranger Drug Company.

Texas Drug Co. Lacks Nothing in Equipment

The Texas Drug Company, owned by E. L. Johnson and J. T. Harwood, opened last Wednesday. It is located on Austin street a few doors north of Main.

The Texas Drug company's store would be a credit to any city in the southwest. Fixtures are of marble, equipment is the best that money can buy and the service is all that could be desired. A complete line of drugs and sundries are carried in stock and a day and night lunch service is maintained. At the time of opening, the new store lacks a few fixtures which have been ordered and are expected to arrive this week. A half inch thick cork linoleum will cover the floor. The window displays show the attractive possibilities of the art of a trained decorator.

The soda fountain is probably the most elaborate in Ranger, and it is expected that Coco Cola can be obtained for six cents at this thirst emporium.

A complete line of the famous Mary Garden candies is carried in stock, and is being spared to give patrons the best possible service.

PERSONALS

Frank J. Burk of Dallas, land commissioner for the Texas and Pacific railroad, was in Ranger yesterday looking after business interests.

Mrs. G. W. Outlaw, of Abilene, is visiting friends and relatives in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Outlaw own substantial property interests here.

W. W. Burger has returned to Ranger from Pilot Grove, Mo., his old home, after an extended trip. He says he has never enjoyed his trip so much as this one.

J. T. Ruddell went to Fort Worth Saturday night to spend the week end with relatives.

Jazzsome Four May Return to Wichita

McCleary cafe patrons will miss the entertainment furnished nightly by the jazzsome boys who came to Ranger from Wichita Falls and who are considering a return to the oil city of the Burk field. They have an attractive offer from the St. James hotel there.

Their interpretation of "Hindustani" made many a diner alter his intention to return to the office for a few hours of important work and sent him out, instead, to some wild motion picture show. Their work in Ranger has given the boys wide publicity and the jazz four, composed of David Behrend, buxio and violin; W. H. Kelly, trombone; O. T. Jancson, drums, and F. Cornelison, piano, is known as far north as Tupteka and as far south as DeWanna.

There is an infectious lilt in their playing, which converts dinner into an occasion. Their passing is a loss.

How Would Steam Ship Line Go Here?

Local real estate men are sitting around their offices and trying to figure out a scheme for leasing some of the streets for purpose of operating a steamship line. They complain that since the airplanes have left Ranger they cannot get out to their property to show a prospective customer the beauties of their particular residential districts.

Their usual line of talk, which is guaranteed to produce results, when the weather plays fair, runs on these lines: "Life insurance agents are said to be doing a record business."

A. E. F. VETERAN, INJURED, SENT TO CAMP PIKE, ARK.

A. C. Gilmore, who had his left leg severed above the knee when he attempted to board a freight train at Tiffin Oct. 6th, was sent to Camp Pike, Ark., yesterday afternoon.

Gilmore, an A. E. F. veteran, was on furlough at the time of the accident. He has been in the Eastern General Hospital since that time. He was brought to the depot in an ambulance of the John E. Milford company and sent off on the 1:25.

HOMESEEKER FINDS DELIGHTS IN TRIP THROUGH GARDNER-DESIGNED HOME BUILT IN LACKLAND ADDITION

Home building activity in Ranger, which has been growing in the past few months, is nowhere more strikingly displayed than in Lackland addition, where homes are going up every week. The change in the "sky-line" of this residence section is apparent each week.

In addition to the many private homes which are being built, general companies are operating there, building houses for the market. The need for this sort of structures has been recognized by development companies made up of builders who are able to supply the wants of the many families which are looking for winter quarters.

One recent structure completed in Lackland addition, there is none more attractive than the first home placed on the market by the Home-Builders. This association, fortunate in securing the services of Niel E. Gardner, formerly designer for the firm of Davis & Castle of Abilene, is embarking on an extensive campaign of building in this addition.

The Home-Builders' first product is worthy of intimate description, and more, of inspection by the buyer who appreciates refinement of design and completeness of detail.

Dutch Colonial in design, it fronts the north. Three cheery windows look out from its living room over a flower box, in which one can picture smiling blossoms. The sleeping porch, on the northeast, is latticed in pattern, and screened, insuring double privacy. The entrance porch at the northwest, also has a simple lattice pattern. Lattice and window box, finished in deep green, present a touch of contrast to the chaste white of the exterior.

The living room, tinted in bronze, is ample in size and is provided with a generous set of furniture. From it opens the sleeping porch, as well as a bedroom and the kitchen. From the cheerful bedroom, with its good-sized closet, one passes to the bathroom, where provision has been made for toilet, wash and lavatory. It is well lighted.

But the room which wins its way straight to the heart of the bride which Mr. Gardner must have had in mind when he first conceived this ideal home is the kitchen and its com-

"Y" WORKER IS NOW MINISTER OF CITY CHURCH

The First Presbyterian Church pulpit Sunday morning and evening will be supplied by its new pastor Rev. Charles M. Collins.

Charles M. Collins, recently of Denton, an aggressive Y. M. C. A. worker for nine months in Bordeaux and Toulouse, France, during the recent world war. Sermons he preached here sometime ago captivated his audience. He is a fearless worker, conscientious in his ministrations, and an upholder of the spiritual state of his congregations. His effective labors in the Y. M. C. A., coupled with his varied experience in the ministry, and his intellectual attainments, make him one of the foremost preachers of Texas. The Presbyterian following in Ranger is being congratulated upon the wise choice of Rev. Collins. He is being thanked for having accepted the local church. Rev. Collins is a native of Illinois. He attended college at Lincoln, Ill. His theological course was studied at the quaint but picturesque town of Lebanon, Tenn. He took a four years post-graduate course in theology in New York while serving efficiently the Steinway factory district as pastor. He has had remarkable experience with all conditions confronting modern day church problems and knows how to grapple and overcome them. He is a forceful speaker, kindly dispositioned, and readily makes friends among all the people. He came to Ranger from the Central Presbyterian Church at Denton, where he served his congregation and the interests of Christians faithfully and zealously. When the great war broke out and America was thrown into the balance to overcome the

Mrs. Linda Roster, aged 25, died Thursday night. The body is being held at the Milford undertaking parlors pending word from a sister of the deceased.

With the exception of a sister living in Michigan, Mrs. Roster has no relatives in this country. She was born in Finland.

A word must be given to "Sweet Hawaiian Moonlight," played by the Columbia Orchestra, conducted by Charles Prince.

It is one of the most beautiful of all the waltz records. The waltz on the reverse side, "A Night in Italy," is equally as good.

Woman Politician Turns West Side Saloon Into Pink Tea

International News Service.
NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—"Sisters, we invited you to be with us today to get you into the habit of coming here to talk politics; and now that you have found the way, we hope you will come often and help us in this campaign."
The speaker paused for a moment as she reached into a pretty samovar that graced the mahogany counter and drew forth a chocolate-coated bombon to act as a chaser for the slice of coconut cake that had just disappeared.
Smiles and nods of approval rippled through the audience of fifty or so aproned women who sat in front of the flag-draped stand, themselves quietly munching cake and sipping tea from dainty, flowered cups.
"At last the women have their chance, and we must show the men that we are more capable than they believed." With these words Miss Bertha Rembaugh, candidate for Justice of the Municipal Court, concluded the brief speech that formally opened her campaign headquarters down in the lower west side, that section of Manhattan that is known to the rounders as Little Italy, where clothes lines, laden with vari-colored garments, and the swarms of children present a peculiar horizon for the uninitiated.
Truly, the new order, the twentieth century order, is under way in Little Italy.
Miss Rembaugh's campaign headquarters are established in the narrow room that was once Spillane's saloon, in the heart of the district where "Battery" Dan used to dispense justice for the old First Ward, the rendezvous of the "Hudson Dusters," one of the most notorious gang of terrorists in the days of the old order.

But if the word heelers who used to pass around hand-shakes, stogies and ponies of "red eye" could step back and take a look at the place they devotedly called "Spillane's" they would be stunned.
The alcohol-stained bar is still there, and a few of the tables have survived the invasion, but the pretty samovar has replaced the nickle stand that held cloves, coffee beans and other things, calculated to camouflage the odor of whiskey and "suds". Flowered cups of thin china were masters of all they surveyed. Clean, pink curtains cover the stained glass windows, and the tables are made almost attractive by crinkly pink paper covers, from which stare kittens, with arched backs, and witches.
Tea pots steamed at either end of the "bar" while dishes of bombons and cake and ginger snaps (the strongest thing in stock) were scattered here and there. Women rested their feet on the brass rail, sipped their tea and ate of the sweets in the place where their husbands had once gathered to talk politics over the "ole scuttle o' suds".
Children swarmed around the swinging doors that were once objects of terror to them and called in loud voices for ginger snaps or candy. Now and then one of the women would step out and distribute rations of silencers.
"Tim" the cop who had worked the Forst Ward in the days of "Battery" Dan, stopped at the corner, glanced at the pink curtains hanging at the windows of the saloon, swung his club once, and yawned:
"Gawd, but bukiness is slow!"

THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY THAT A KING ADDRESSED U. S. CONGRESS; ALBERT OF BELGIUM DELIVERING SPEECH

Arrow points to King Albert talking from speaker's chair. When King Albert of Belgium addressed members of the senate and later members of the house, it was the first time in the history of the U. S. that a king had so appeared before the legislative branches of the government. King Albert's talk was brief. He was given a cordial reception.

No protection is given these animals, which range Lake county in summer and generally through northern Nevada in winter.

He Weeps Best Who Weeps Last, Such Is Slickers' Belief

CHICAGO—The man wept abundantly and publicly as he wandered down the street. He seemed to exult in sorrow and sobe. Joseph Repar and the stranger he had just met were strangely interested.
"Ah," said the weeping fellow, in answer to their questions, "ah, my father has just died and left $15,000, and I am looking for a priest, but cannot find one."
A Good Samaritan.
"My father was a gambler who drank his whiskey clear, but he had a touch of Bright's disease and remorse. He wants a priest to scatter his money among people whose luck was worse than dad's."
Repar offered to aid him. The weeping man just knew that Repar was honest, but it is such a wicked world—he must have tangible proof. Let Mr. Repar deposit tangible assets with him and he would turn over the $15,000 and trust him to go to the priest.

Somebody Else Weeps.
Well, to make a long story short, Repar fell. He went all the way back to Indiana Harbor and took the money out of the bank. The stranger accompanied him—to make sure that he didn't get away.

And when the weeper had the money he sent Repar to a drug store, then ran away with Repar's $600. It was Repar's time to weep.
But at the detective bureau Repar identified James Maloni of St. Louis and John Di Nicolò as the confidence men.

We are prepared to take care of all orders. So don't let the steel strike worry you. We have a full stock of flat sheets—all gauges—and will take care of you.

WILD LIFE IS DISAPPEARING IN NORTHWEST

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 8.—That the draining of Malheur and Klamath lakes is slowly but surely exterminating the bird life on the government reservations about those bodies of water, is the report brought to Portland by Dr. G. W. Field, in charge of the biological survey of Washington.
Dr. Field, with M. S. Garretson, secretary of the American Bison society of New York, has just completed the inspection of these two bird reservations and the antelope in northern lake countries.
The draining of the lake, he asserts, is serving to put an end to the very thing the board reservations were created to protect. The lowering of Klamath lake in particular has had an effect of causing the alkali in the water to concentrate in such degree that the water level is dying in considerable numbers of poisoning. The birds are first affected by paralysis of the wings and legs. This condition progresses until the birds lose all power of motion and drown.
Many others are dying on both reservation from starvation, Dr. Field asserts, and great numbers of fowls were burned to death in the tule marsh fires last summer.
According to Dr. Field, the colony of American egrets, on the Malheur reservation is steadily increasing. This colony, one of the few left in the United States, was virtually exterminated 10 years ago as the result of ruthless slaughter by professional hunters. State protection later resulted in government protection under the biological survey. In 1918 there were 27 nests in the colony, with more than 100 birds, and, according to Dr. Field, the number of nests is now about 40. The white faced glossy Ibis also lives on this reservation, and the colony is becoming larger. There are more than 100 pairs now, Dr. Field says.

In connection with Garretson's work, a survey was made of the conditions on the antelope range. This is one of the animal life species, formerly numerous in Oregon, which is rapidly passing, and no encouraging reports of conservation can be made as a result of the recent investigations, Garretson said.
The antelopes are protected, but nevertheless the killing continues. Much evidence of this was found, and several instances of where the animals had been used as wolf bait were found. According to William L. Finley, state biologist, the sheep herders of Lake county kill the antelope, generally in the spring, and use the carcasses to lure wolves and coyotes into traps.
While examining the remains of an antelope a few days ago, Garretson stepped on two trans concealed in the vicinity. In another place where the investigators found that coyotes had been skinned, there were remains of an antelope nearby.

MAKING THEM SHORTER NOW THE CUSTOM

In Michigan avenue a modiste is discovered in some distress, induced by the tendency toward short skirts; not, of course, her own, but her patrons! Loosely analogous is the mental attitude of coal mine operators and other employers of labor who are alarmed by the demand for short days, short weeks, and short energy.

The universal disposition is toward brevity. Our women cannot seem to get 'em short enough, the steel workers want 'em shorter, so do the stevedores, also the miners; in fact, pretty nearly everybody. How short can we stand 'em?

It is fundamental that the world must have enough—which means a little to spare—of the essentials of life. Thus in the last analysis it doesn't much matter how the coal is mined or the steel is milled or the ships loaded or the railroads conducted. The big thing is that all of these affairs have got to go forward somehow. And the cost of getting them never will be more than the traffic can bear.

When the coal miners' wages get beyond the point of economic equilibrium, why, we'll just have to pick up a scuttle and go to the mines ourselves. If not enough men can be found who are willing to dig coal for what the rest of us can pay without getting ourselves into the poorhouse, it follows that we'll all dig, each enough for himself. And by this time the coal miner will discover that while he is digging for us we are writing and painting and building and manufacturing and raising hogs for him.

In the whole seemingly complex system of work and wages there is one very simple and unswerving principle operating: Fifty-fifty. Some may elude the principle some of the time; it will catch them, never fear. It may be the employer who pays too little or the employe who takes too much; the seller who overcharges or the buyer who underpays; the balance of supply and demand operates just the same; compensation is unescapable.

If some employers can keep going with long hours and short pay they will. If some employes can get away with short hours and long pay they will. But modistes, employes and employers all, fear not: short hours, short pay, and short skirts are only for those that become them.—Chicago Tribune.

ST. LOUIS CHIEF GETS NEWSPAPER COMMENDATION

En route to headquarters in his motor car, Chief O'Brien encountered two robbers, fleeing from the scene of a crime. He instantly recognized the duty devolving on every member of the force, from the youngest patrolman to the departmental head—the duty of community protection and defense of the law, irrespective of personal considerations. He exemplified the best traditions of the department when he left his automobile to the care of the chauffeur and, single-handed and regardless of peril, pursued the robbers into an alley through which they attempted to make good their escape. He set an example in bravery and prompt action which will long have influence on the force. He showed that, in serving the high purposes for which the department exists, he commits to subordinates no duty he is not willing to undertake himself.

St. Louis deploras the dangerous wound incurred in upholding the safety of us all and hopes that its courageous chief will have a speedy recovery and that the desperadoes will be quickly brought to justice.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Senator Offered to Aid Boy Slayer of Young Woman

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 8.—Stories of how Harry S. New Jr., waiting trial for the slaying of Freda Lesser, was cared for by United States Senator New of Indiana, despite the disagreeable circumstances of their relationship, are contained in depositions that are in the hands of District Attorney Woolwine and Lecomte Davis, the prisoner's attorney.

The depositions, contained in Indianapolis and the east, are "human interest" chapters, forming the story of Senator New's alleged companionship with Mrs. Lillie Burger, the slayer's mother, thirty years ago.

District Attorney Woolwine and a representative of Attorney Davis' office are back in Los Angeles with the depositions. The depositions will play an important part in the trial of the new case, as they were obtained for the purpose of showing the slayer's so-called "weak mentality." One of the depositions told how Senator New walked hand in hand through the streets of Indianapolis with New when the latter was a child. Later, several of the depositions stated the youth began to brood over circumstances of his birth. This is said to have reached a point where New refused to speak to the senator when they met.

On one occasion the boy is said to have passed the senator on the street. The senator stopped him and took him to his office, where they talked for nearly two hours. During his talk it was said, Senator New encouraged the boy, begging him to forget the past, and promising him to do all in his power to help him.

Ranger Headquarters Central District Humble Co.

Third largest operating company in the Ranger field and the fields operated from Ranger, the Humble Oil & Refining company has an attractive camp west of Ranger, which will still be headquarters for local operations when the company establishes its new offices.

The company, with headquarters at Houston, saw its origin and found its name in the Humble boom in 1900. It has a capitalization of $8,000,000, which soon will be increased to $25,000,000. The company is operating in Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma.

It has 200 wells in Texas and a hundred strings of tools operating in this district. S. B. Farish is superintendent of the central district.

At the foot of the hill against which the Ranger camp is placed, the residences, seven in number, are as neat and attractive as houses in the city. For background, they have the skyline of derricks, which add the proper oil field flavor even though they are monuments to the rather ill-founded belief that oil in paying quantities encroach upon the city of Ranger, just as it spoils from the hills to the west.

Two hundred employees of the Humble are housed in the Ranger camp, those who are unmarried, or who have not brought their families here, being cared for in the quarters at the west end of the camp. There are three bunkhouses and fifteen boarded tents. Lined up in truck company front, the fleet of motor vehicles of the Humble makes an impressive showing as most any army camp could muster. The trucks are of a swift and reliable make, and the battery is complete, to the S. O. S. car, a huge motor equipped with winch for hauling distressed trucks from the mud which adds such a pleasant zest to travel in the oil fields.

Humble company maintains and operates 125 cars from its Ranger headquarters.

Every need for the numerous operations of the company can be answered from the yards and warehouses at the Humble camp. At one time, eleven oil well boilers, each worth $1,500, waited their call in the boiler yard.

WOULD REDUCE MINE RANKS BY THOUSANDS

TULSA WORLD: Writing from McAlester, where the governor's industrial conference is now in, a staff representative of the World says that the daily wage for mining under the present contract is from $3 to $20 a day, and that there is little concern among the miners themselves whether the strike is called or not. They feel that they "can get along fair" well on the present wage rate, and that not more than six days work a week.

It is this sort of information that the public wants and needs. Much has been said about the starvation wage paid the miners. Here we have unqualified testimony as to just what wage is being paid—in the Oklahoma mines, at least. And the question naturally suggests itself. Why do men receiving such a royal recompense strike? But it appears that there is no great interest in the strike among the men. If it comes at the direction of their leaders, then they feel that they can get along for a time on the dollar a day strike benefit. But they are willing to go right along as it is.

This suggests a very old trait of human character. It is seldom that discontent arises out of our own mind. It requires someone to come along and tell us how we are persecuted or imposed on for us to wake up to the fact ourselves. The family lives in blissful contentment until the older daughter returns from school and sets everything by the ears with her artificial standards.

But in the suggestion that the men are now employed from only "three to six days a week," we suspect there is something to be read. The per diem is $2 a day, but the weekly pay check is not so great as they would have it. Three days a week at $8 a day is certainly a living wage. If the living conditions and standards are very meager. That covers the case of the lowest paid. Three days at $30 a day requires a more sizable pay check on Saturday night. But it is easy to understand why both in the one case and in the other there should be a desire for full employment—even though getting it might defy certain well-known rules of economy.

We think it likely that an investigation will disclose that full employment of the number of men on the payroll of the mines in the Oklahoma district would result in accumulating a supply very much in excess of the demands. This points to be fairly established by the miners' demand that their wages be increased 60 per cent and their working time reduced from 48 hours a week to 30 hours a week. This would work out in practice, in view of the facts set out by our correspondent, about as follows:

"Working three eight-hour days each week the miners are, actually now putting in only 24 hours. By establishing their point they would in future work but 6 hours additional and yet draw pay for a full week. There is evidence here of an attempt to increase an excess labor supply not by reducing it, or directing it to other fields, but by decreasing industrial production so that no man would be forced to change his avocation or lose his job or suffer a reduction in his income.

That just simply cannot be done. If we have correctly analyzed the miners' case, disregarding altogether his demand for increased pay, his problem is to so arrange it that he can be fully employed. The solution

MISSOURI "U" HAS ITS OWN DAILY PAPER

Special to The Times.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 8.—The complete newspaper plant in the old building and equipped solely for the new home of the University of Missouri's school of journalism is completed and equipped.

The building with its equipment cost $80,000. It is the gift of Edward A. Neff of Kansas City, Mo., in a memorial to his father, the late Jay H. Neff, founder of the Corn-Jobbers.

The new building will be a complete newspaper plant. It will include rooms for regular class work in the journalism school. The evening Missouriian, the daily newspaper of the school, will be issued from the new plant.

The mechanical department will be installed on the ground floor of the building. It will include a press, three type-setting machines, a stereotyping outfit, type, and other equipment. The composing and press rooms will be in view of the production of a newspaper for the outside. On this floor will also be the mailing room, room for newsboys, a photo engraving laboratory and a store room.

On the first floor will be the offices of members of the journalism faculty, offices of the student managers. Besides the business office of the Missouriian, there will be a city room with a telegraph and telephone alcove, a conference room, reading room, library, morgue and wash-rooms.

The advertising department of the school will be quartered on the third floor. The remainder of this floor will be used for an auditorium.

The school of journalism here is the oldest professional school in the world. It is also the youngest professional school of the University of curators of the university authorized the establishment of the school as a separate division. The first construction was given in the school on September 14 of that year, when the first copy of the Evening Missouriian was published. The school has Missouri. Mineral Wells Refinery Soon to Be in Operation

Special to The Times.

MINERAL WELLS, Nov. 8.—At a meeting of the officers and board of directors of the Mineral Wells Refinery Products Company the name was changed to the Bull Dog Pipe Line and Refining Co. The new name is the result of the increased plans of the company which include the laying of a pipe line from Caddo to Mineral Wells and the building of a refinery at Caddo.

The capitalization of the new company will remain for the present at $500,000 and the officers and directors will continue their connections.

The original plans of the Mineral Wells Refinery Products Co. were to build a refinery here and either tap one of the nearby pipe lines or utilize tank cars to secure crude oil. Financiers of Caddo became interested and agreed to take a large block of stock with the provision that an additional refinery be built there and a common carrier pipe line be laid from Caddo to Mineral Wells. That provision has been agreed upon and the name of the company changed.

It is understood that more than $100,000 worth of stock has been sold within the past 48 hours and plans are being made for a 100 per cent increase in the sale price of the stock.

NEW YORK—Now comes the "breathoscope."

Chief Revenue Agent Harry W. Mager, in charge of prohibition enforcement in New York, introduced the newest rum detector when he assembled his cohorts in a "school for the enforcement of prohibition" in the custom's house here today.

The "breathoscope" tests the breath literally. Agents will be equipped with the apparatus. If customers wobble when they come from near-by bars, an agent promptly will clamp on the "breathoscope," which looks like a cross between a gas mask and an automobile speedometer—and the "breathoscope" will register the alcoholic content of the victim's exhalations.

Agents tried the apparatus out on a coal wagon driver who imbibed "sassafras tea" at the North River bar and then dumped his coal in a sewer. They said they found the sassafras was 36 per cent alcohol.

LADY DOCTOR SAYS MARRY WHEN YOUNG

Special to The Times.
 BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 8.—For physical, romantic and social reasons parents should marry at 15, because then they have better children and are more happy—they and their husbands growing together with the years.

For the sake of their nerves and general health women after marriage should continue to work and should never marry a man who thinks it a reproach for his wife to work.

Dr. Ada Potter of Utrecht, Holland, distinguished woman physician, suggests these things for the betterment of womanhood.

Her ideas formed a chief topic of discussion at the gathering of women physicians from the world over, a gathering unique in the history of the feminine study of medicine.

Early marriages are being encouraged in Holland because it is rapidly becoming a general belief that those unions are more likely to be love matches rather than marriages for economic or social reasons, according to Dr. Potter, who summed up her entire talk with the advice to "start right, love right, work right."

The woman who marries for solely economic reason is making a big mistake, in Dr. Potter's opinion, for the married woman has three positions to take care of.

She is the home maker, she is the manager and she is the general worker in her household.

Almost any woman could make a far easier living in some other manner than marriage.

"A woman needs to be three times as strong and well to be married as in any other occupation," Dr. Potter said.

"An efficient, happy marriage, she is working at three jobs.

"She is the wife, the loving comrade of her husband and she is the understanding mother of her children; she is the homemaker, the manager and the worker in her household and surely these three jobs are enough to make her realize that, outside of work, she could make a far easier living.

"The best age for a woman to marry, physically, economically and romantically, is 18," continued the physician, with self-confident emphasis.

"Romance is the flower of youth and if a woman waits until she is 25 or 30 before marrying, her marriage is probably a matter of economics rather than of love.

"When a girl and a man marry young they have better children and a better chance of happiness, for they grow together with the years.

"In my country divorces are very few and I think it is because, after marriage, our women work.

"After love, I consider this the fundamental reason for happy marriages.

"If our women do nothing else they manage their own households and their children.

"I believe we average larger families in Holland than you do here, although doctors in good standing are permitted in my country to limit families if they consider the health of the woman demands it.

"The healthy woman who marries for love chooses the ideal life, for it

RUMOR HAS BABE RUTH ASKING $20,000: LEARNS CIGAR BUSINESS IN OFF SEASON

Babe Ruth, who has entered cigar manufacturing business in Boston, is learning the business from the bottom up. Picture shows him learning to roll cigars.

Old Domé Rumor is spreading the tip that Babe Ruth, world's greatest baseball mauler, will refuse to play with the Red Sox club next season unless he is given $20,000 for the season. Babe is now under a three-year contract calling for $30,000 for the three seasons. Ruth has entered the cigar business in Boston and apparently figures on becoming a cigar magnate when his baseball days are ended through age or refusal of the b. b. moguls to meet his demands.

BABE ADAMS MAKES REGULAR COMEBACK

Babe Adams, veteran Pirate hurler, celebrated his tenth year in the big leagues by staging one of the most remarkable comebacks of the season. Most critics figured Babe about done when the campaign opened. But the final reckoning shows that Babe won seventeen games and lost but ten for the Pirates, a poor team. He hurled seven shutout games. The worst run Babe had was three defeats in a row.

New Royalist Party for England

BY FLOYD MACGRIFF, (International News Service Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, Nov. 7.—A new political organization, the Royalist party, has just been launched to oppose elements of Bolshevism in Britain, to back up the monarchy as against any other form of government, to win back "ancient liberties" and to run candidates for Parliament.

Captain Chitty Thomas, M. C., honorary secretary of the new party, says the organization's program contemplates the refilling of the House of Lords "with the old nobility elected by the people." Seats in the House of Lords are now either hereditary or appointive.

The Royalist party also plans to build more houses, provide cheaper coal, clothing and food and railway fares.

"We are modern in our ideas, though not exactly progressive," said Captain Thomas. "We do not believe in forcing progress like a hothouse plant. Let it take its course. We would like to go back to the comfortable days when a king was a king and the lords had real administrative power.

"We intend to restore the liberty of the subject in the shape of removal of restrictions imposed on civil life in 1914 (defense of the Realm act) and to give labor, so far as compensation are concerned, a real interest in production by means of profit sharing.

"The House of Lords would be a buffer between the throne and the commons."

Captain Wheatley-Crow, leader of the new party, said:

"We stand strongly for the support of the monarchy against Republicanism and Bolshevism. We want to a close bond between the king and his people, and to this end it will be necessary to strengthen the House of Lords."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—They intend to call the Republican the Grand Old Party—G. O. P.—but the disloyal tactics of the present Republican majority in both Houses of Congress has earned it a new name. Now they call it the G. O. G.—Grand Old Gang. A western editor, Will A. Campbell of the Helena Independent, is the author of the new name.

THE TIMES' DAILY SHORT STORY

A SLEEPING BEAUTY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Hullo, Muggins!" Johnny Deeds shouted from the road. The figure in the rocking chair upon the Martin porch did not lift its eyes from the book in hand. Johnny hallooed again—again his answer was the silence of unconsciousness—clearly Louise Martin did not mean to admit that she had ever responded to the name of Muggins. Johnny grinned cheerfully, and paused at the steps, doffing his hat, and saying with an elaborate obeisance: "It he—ah! ahem—lady of the house."

"Not to—vagueous," the rocking chair's occupant returned tranquilly, its eyes still down. Next minute two worn hands fell over them—the hand holding them was drawn gently back and the eyes glanced upon a pair of soft red lips. "That's how you wake a sleeping beauty, isn't it?" Johnny asked glibly. Louise had risen and faced him, a furious scowl flooding her cheeks. She dared not speak—if she did she would either laugh or cry. Either meant triumph for Johnny, the scowl—she knew of old his capacity to torment her. She slowly turned to—inside—then Johnny caught both her hands, and sat her down, not—saying, "No, you don't!" "let me—how—What are you, Muggins? Used to be the best sort of sport, you did?" "You mean—I was a barbarian, the same as you," Louise burst out. "Well, I have learned better manners. Unless you can do the same—leave—keep away from here!" "Hullo!" In that a true word—or just make up?" Johnny asked, the best shade of seriousness creeping into his face. Louise eyed him. "Will you never grow up?" she demanded. "You know you must understand my position here in my uncle's house. His wife is the very nicest person—with her leaving to wild ways under the rose. If she had heard you say 'Muggins' I should never have been anything else to her—of course, in strict privacy, she makes Uncle Ben think her a sort of crown or Snow White. Already she hates me, because I see through her. If she knew anything of those mad, happy old days when we were playful, thinking and knowing no evil, she would have a whip ready to her back, and would use it to put me through my nose!" "She shan't know, girl. I'm willing to kick myself a mile!" Johnny exploded. "I ought to have thought—of—the dual personality of the new Mrs. Benjamin Martin. Still, I honestly didn't dream of making you trouble. Forgive me all my impertinence and let me know if I can help you in any way." "Only in—a very hard way—for me," Louise said, sighing. "That is, by staying away until he sure I'm not here for always. Uncle says Martin blood forbids my working. I have another notion as to that—I'd rather scrub floors for a living than stay here much longer." "You need not stay a day—really?" Johnny began significantly. Louise looked over his head, flushing deeply. "Don't let's think of impossibilities," she said, but sighed as she said it. Johnny laid a brotherly hand on her shoulder, asking: "Haven't you got over anything?" In reply she could only shake her head and turn away, muttering, "I'm not here for always." Johnny strode up and down the porch, his face dark, his brow deeply furrowed. Thus Mrs. Martin came upon him and smiled unpleasantly as she glanced from one to another of the pair. So did the man in her wake, who was by appearance neither young nor old, good nor bad, but tremendously well-groomed and well-dressed, as redelect, indeed, of affluence as the perfectly appointed ear which had brought him and his hostess. At sight of him Louise hurried away, to be recalled, however, by the man hidden in a velvet voice, please to order tea and serve it. Johnny must stay for it, of course—a balanced party was so much pleasanter. Moreover, he had been so long in waiting over, he must be specially well treated in hopes of a return. All this, Johnny said, and while murmuring his six feet one of vigorous young manhood, his handsome "unwed face and vital close-cropped curls. Mrs. Martin, fair, forty, languishing, approved all of them thoroughly. He recalled, however, that her escort, Franklin Ware, seemed so faded and meager. She looked at Johnny, indeed, with much the same "loving expression that Ware gave to Louise. Johnny saw and shivered—for himself, but for the prospect before Louise.

He got no private word with her, though he lingered to the last allowable moment. He could not even watch over her. Mrs. Benjamin was so wholly bent on his captivation, that he had a sense that she was suffering deeply from the glances and compliments of Ware. Small need for Mrs. Benjamin to say, as she did when she went half way down the walk with him: "Matters are arranging themselves so beautifully. We shall have a wedding before we know it. Louise will make the most beautiful bride in the world." He called away, ready to swear at life and things. If only Louise would forget that cursed Melville wedding party which Johnny all things would come right. He was sure she did not love the real Melville, but rather an image she called by his name and set up in her heart's inner shrine. "She really is a Sleeping Beauty," he said to his heart, referring to the happy audacity whose memory made him tingle. "Once she waked up she'd have to know that—wed this. My business is to wake her. I wonder how I shall do it."

After three days of pondering he hit upon something that made him very bold: "The very thing." Then write a letter, hasty but full of details. After he had dispatched it to a distant address he gave his whole mind and time to haunting the Martin establishment, bent on knowing all that passed regarding his beloved. There was need of his constant vigilance. Franklin Ware was a dangerous wooer, and ably seconded by Mrs. Benjamin, who, of course, brought her husband to seeing with her eyes. Therefore he said seriously to Louise, that with no wish to constrain her inclination, he felt bound to say she would both please and relieve him by providing for herself so timely. Franklin Ware was not, to be sure, in his first youth—he had, moreover, had a harvest of very wild oats. To offset that, he was rich, well born, possessed of a standing that gave his wife entire confidence—and eager to make her the most magnificent settlements. Furthermore—here Uncle Benjamin half sighed—he himself could do no more for his brother's only daughter than give her a home and maintenance while he lived. All he had was well tied up beyond dispute in any direction. And it would pain him deeply to think either of leaving his niece unprotected for or to have her go to work. In the name of the blood he begged her to save him such discomfort—she had been sheltered, not over beyond dispute, but left unaided, namely, that Uncle Ben might be now a millionaire, if he had not years back voluntarily paid huge sums to clear his brother of debt, and keep the family name unspotted. Then, too, so long as the brother lived, he had been generous in help to his niece, who was the soul of imprudent kindness. Louise felt the marrow of her bones all she owed the good narrow man, too fine-tuned to recall benefits bestowed. It seemed to her she must obey him—or die. Death, indeed, seemed her only refuge, she could not think of accepting Johnny with all her heart belonging to Melville.

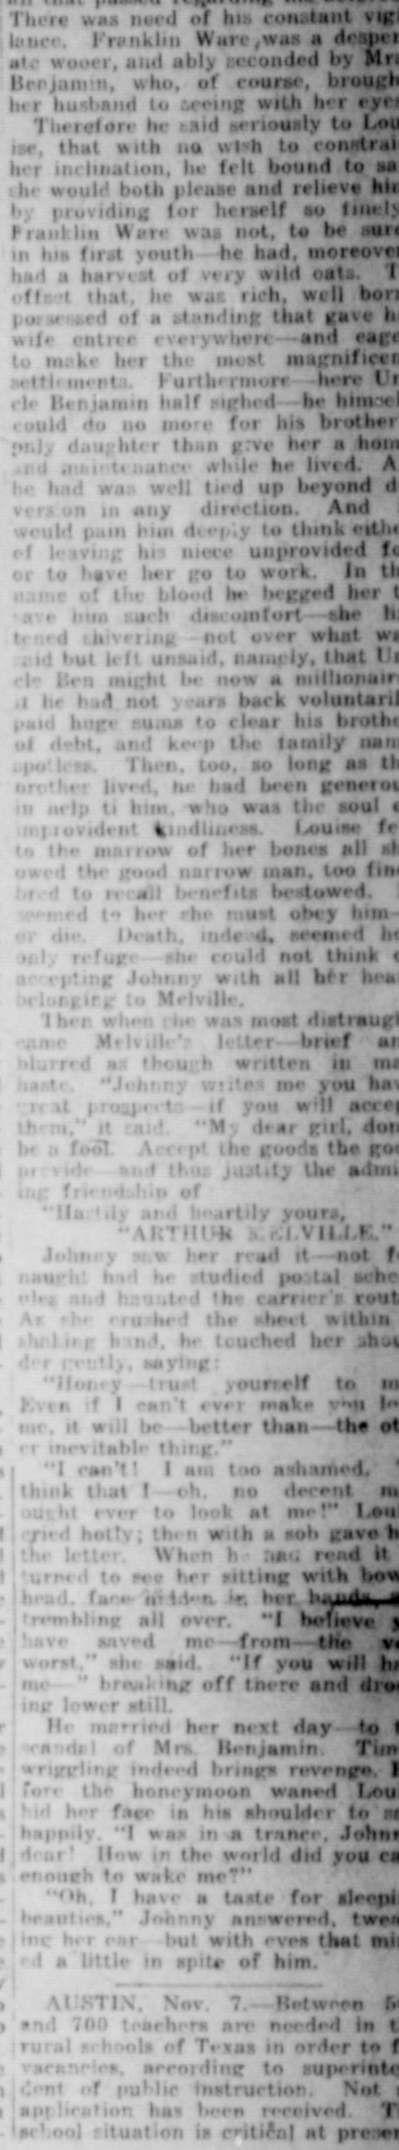

Then when she was most distraught came Melville's letter—brief and blurred as though written in mad haste. "Johnny writes me you have great prospects if you will accept them," it said. "My dear girl, don't be a fool. Accept the goods the gods provide—and thus justify the admiring friendship of—"

"Hastily and heartily yours," "ARTHUR K. MELVILLE." Johnny saw her read it not for naught had he studied postal schedules and hunted the carrier's route. As she crushed the sheet within a shaking hand, he touched her shoulder, saying: "Honey—trust yourself to me! Even if I can't ever make you love me, it will be—better than—the other inevitable thing." "I can't! I am too ashamed. To think that I—oh, no decent man ought ever to look at me!" Louise cried hotly; then with a sob gave him the letter. When he read it he turned to see her sitting with bowed head, face hidden in her hands, and trembling all over. "I believe you have saved me—from—the very worst," she said. "If you will have me—" brushing off there and drooping lower still.

He married her next day to the scandal of Mrs. Benjamin. Time's wriggling indeed brings revenge. Before the honeymoon waned Louise hid her face in his shoulder to say, happily, "I was in a trance, Johnny, dear! How in the world did you care enough to wake me?" "Oh, I have a taste for sleeping beauties," Johnny answered, twinkling her ear—but with eyes that mistled a little in spite of him.
