Simon D. Hay Nominated

W. B. (Bart) Denton spoke in behalf of E. N. Burrus, defeated candidate for County Judge, Friday night, at Littlefield. After a number of misrepresentations by the speaker and a dirty attack on the record of an honorable soldier, Denton was called down by the audience and from then on questions were fired at him from every point in the audience. Denton could not give an account of his whereabouts during the war, but tried to explain that he had a brother who had served—thus taking credit for what his brother did.

Among the slurs cast on Simon D. Hay by Denton was his record as a soldier, saying that "General Pershing caught him in a barb wire fence and decorated him for bravery." Such statements against a man whose bona fide record is so well known only intensified feeling against the speaker.

These remarks made were ridiculous in view of the fact that he was not a world-war soldier himself nor had not even been a "Paper" soldier at home and did a great deal in increasing the popularity of Simon D. Hay, whose record in this county and elsewhere is so well and favorably known.

Jack Brannon, postmaster of Littlefield, besides making himself obnoxious during business hours at the post office, upheld these dirty attacks by Denton on Mr. Hay's record as a soldier.

Mr. Brannon supported "Ma" two years ago, voting in Democratic primaries, and is holding the postmastership at Littlefield under a Republican administration, and we would like to know what kind of combination does the gentleman in question represent?

The good people of Littlefield were not in accord with Denton and Brannon's views and readily showed that at the speaking, and also at the election on Saturday, when they gave Judge Simon D. Hay nearly a four-to-one vote.

To the editor of this paper Mr. Denton showed surprise when publicly called down by him and was quite replete with such uncomplimentary ethics as, "Who are you, any way?—I don't remember seeing your 'mug' before."

Trades Day August 20th

At a recent meeting of the Business Men's Association, August 20th was set as Trades Day in Sudan. Committees were appointed to prepare a program and premium list. Two hundred dollars or more will be offered in prizes in the livestock, poultry and hog departments.

First trades trip was made last Friday when a delegation of seventy-five or more of the business men and citizens of Sudan, accompanied by Sudan's Band visited several adjoining towns. The delegation visited Amherst, Littlefield, Fieldton and Earth. Other trips are now being planned and will be made before Trades Day. Six pieces from the Amherst Band joined the Sudan Band at Amherst and made the remainder of the trip with us. We want to stop here long enough to express our appreciation of the Sudan Band, while the band is only about a year old, the organization is one of which the entire citizenship is proud of.

Prof. W. I. Wilkins, newly elected Superintendent of the Sudan Public Schools, accompanied the delegation and made appropriate talks at each stop and received the attention of everyone present. Mr. Wilkins is a man with natural ability and knows how to say the right thing at the right time.

Twenty-one cars, including the big truck of F. M. Shelton, were necessary to carry the delegation, and our reception at each stop was cordial.

Amherst Annual Picnic August 17th and 18th

Amherst' Fifth Annual Celebration will be held Friday and Saturday, August 17th and 18th, with complete attractions far surpassing anything ever held in the towns history.

Horse racing, Dancing, Rodeo, Airplane Stunts and Parachute leaps, fast ball games, cowboy clowns, Carnival Attractions, and many other side-line attractions to amuse the thousands of people who will be in attendance on these days. The horse races carry a purse of $200.00, with races twice daily. The Rodeo is being promoted by Huckberry Slim, the only one-legged cowboy in the world. He is known throughout the States as one of the best promoters and all-round cowboys in the world, regardless of his one leg. He will have a string of buffalo calves for the boys to try their skill in roping. Parachute leaps twice daily, together with stunt flying, and passenger carrying planes. The grand opening will be held on Thursday night, August 16, with a big dance and other features of entertainment. Dances will be held each night in an open air-dome platform. The American Legion Post of Amherst will have charge of the dance, and they promise good music, and one of the best dances ever staged on the South Plains throughout the three nights.

The celebration this year, will by far excell any ever staged in this city, and the business men of the town will leave nothing undone to make it the best, and to entertain the many thousands of people who will be here on these days.

Watch for the big circulars and window cards for complete details of the program.

To the Hon. Mayor, Sudan, Texas. July 27, 1928.
Littlefield, Texas.

Dear Sir—

It has come to our knowledge that the Sudan delegation sponsoring the campaign of Simon D. Hay, your city, for the office of County Judge, Lamb county, was denied the privilege of the streets of Littlefield on this day for the purpose of political speaking in his behalf.

We wish to take this opportunity of stating that during the past several weeks this city has been afflicted with various individuals and organizations holding street meetings and gatherings of different kinds which have become a nuisance to the business interests of the city, blocking the streets and sidewalks, impeding traffic and clogging the doors of certain business houses so customers could not get in, causing much complaint from business men and autoists and pedestrians; hence the City Marshal has been ordering that the streets and sidewalks be kept clear and such gatherings be dispersed on the Main business street.

We regret sincerely the occurrence and wish to assure the members of the visiting party and the citizens of Sudan generally that the order of prohibition made by the local officer was not sanctioned by the City Commission, nor was there any intention of impeding the political ambitions of Mr. Hay and his ardent supporters.

We are, very truly yours,

JESS MITCHELL, Mayor.
C. O. STONE, Commissioner.

Bureau Meeting at Littlefield August 10th, 2 P. M.

A general farmers county-wide meeting has been called for Friday 10th at the Theater in Littlefield according to an announcement by J. W. Hammock, field service representative of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association.

"The purpose of this meeting" Mr. Hammock said, "is to hear details of the new marketing contract of the cotton cooperative marketing association, which provides for optional or daily pools and withdrawal privileges, as well as a number of minor changes in the present standard marketing agreement, which it is believed will be attractive to members, non-members and business interests generally, resulting in a substantial membership increase and deliveries to cotton cooperative marketing channels.

The Board of Directors of the Association have had this subject under consideration for some time", Mr. Hammock said, "but final approval to the new contract was not possible until several weeks ago when the entire program was worked out from legal angles. At our next meeting we will have Mr. M. S. Hudson of Hale Center, district director of the cotton association present to explain in detail the various features of the new contract, price fixation pooling plan, how the contract may become operative, etc." It is felt that the meeting will be one of the most interesting farmers meetings ever held in the county and farm leaders contemplate an exceptionally large attendance, not only on the part of members

My Appreciation to The Voters of Lamb County

Out of the spoils of battle there comes victory and defeat. I am grateful for being numbered among the victors of Lamb county in the Democratic primary of last Saturday, and take this opportunity of expressing my sincere appreciation to those who favored me with their votes and influence.

It shall be my desire and effort to serve my constituents the coming two years—even better than the during the past. To those who did not vote for me I wish it known that I hold no ill will against them. We are all brothers and citizens of this great country, so let us work together for its betterment.

May I also take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the clean campaign waged against me by my honorable opponent, Roy Gilbert. I consider him a gentleman of the highest order. He tells me he will again be a candidate for the office of tax assessor two years from now, and I commend him to your confidence.

but non-members and business interests closely allied with progressive agriculture.

Lamb County has been counted with the leaders of cooperative marketing of cotton, so we are counting on the membership to be well represented at Littlefield Friday August 10th at 2 p. m.

The Colfax Bookplate

By AGNES MILLER

SYNOPSIS

On a certain Monday morning Miss Constance Fuller, seller of rare books at Darrow's Bookshop, New York, notices that the first customer is a dignified old gentleman, who saunters into the alcove placarded "Medical Works." Peter Burton, one of the employees, amazes Constance by telling her he paid $10 at auction for an old law book containing a Colfax bookplate. Suddenly a girl's shriek of "Murder!" rings out. The elderly customer is on the floor unconscious, with his right wrist slashed. Just before the shrieking girl falls in a faint, she calls out to Peter: "Keep it! Keep it for me!" Peter's sister, Nancy, begins that morning working at Darrow's. Nancy tells Constance of her elopement with Brandon Tower, an elopement which was cut short when Tower attempted to make off with Nancy's suitcase. Constance explains Darrow's card-index system to Captain Ashland, a nephew of Mr. Darrow. They examine the book Peter paid $10 for and find the bookplate to be a forgery. Constance is asked to assist Detective Almy in his investigation of the murder of the elderly gentleman. The girl who fainted, Julia Grosvenor, turns out to be his granddaughter. She can throw no light on the mystery. Constance removes the bookplate from the old law book and discovers a small key secreted in a hollow on the cover. She makes other discoveries, too.

"That's good," said he. "By the way, Mr. Darrow went up to his Westchester place last night for the weekend. Instead of tonight as usual, and won't be here until Monday. He's entertaining Captain Ashland. So have no fears that you'll be checked up in the middle of the catalogue."

So the head of the house was gone; and Captain Ashland, excellent creature, was gone; and Peter, fundamentally sound and always set to go off, despite his imperfect nature, was gone. Where were the righteous men left? Where was Mr. Roberts?

I was to learn. Just as Mr. Case breathed his glad tidings into my ear, Miss Wilkes entered.

"You look dreadfully tired, dear," she remarked, stopping at my desk, though I was sure I was not the attraction. "What a shame you have such a rush with the catalogue! Outrageous, I call it, for printers to think of striking. I wonder what workmen are coming to, sometimes, don't you, Mr. Case? Gracious, you look dreadfully tired, yourself!"

"Sometimes I wonder what we're all coming to," responded Mr. Case, with plaintive restraint.

"That really puts it much better! By the way, how did little Miss Burton get along last evening, Miss Fuller? I was sorry I was unable to send you one of my more experienced girls."

"I couldn't have wanted anyone better," said I.

"I am glad to hear she filled in acceptably in the emergency," declared Miss Wilkes, very crossly, "because I must speak to Mr. Roberts about her today. Tomorrow her first week will be up, and to me she hardly seems to be the material one makes a stenographer out of."

"I agree with you," said I; "she'll go much further."

Mr. Case rushed courageously between the flashing rapiers.

"I don't know whether Mr. Roberts will be here today. He's off somewhere on business for Mr. Darrow who's in the country."

I was stunned, but worse was to come, and at once.

"Oh, Mr. Case," said Miss Wilkes, "what about my cousin, Magistrate Juddes, getting that book?"

"I beg pardon?" murmured Mr. Case, not unnaturally bewildered.

And there was the book right on the desk! There was one way to save the situation—by foolhardiness. Before any explanation could be begun, I bounded to my feet and hurried myself on two young damsels who were entering the shop truculently, at a critical hour, five minutes of nine. On their feet were black satin strap-pumps with rhinestone side-buckles; from their coats peeped forth the school middy; each bore in one hand a brief-case, but in the other a brown paper parcel all planned up. It was Friday. Truculence equaled shyness, slippers plus Friday equaled dance, brown paper minus pins equaled party frocks. I swiftly steered the pair down the aisle to the table where effete books were on display. While they were selecting one I observed my desk, Miss Wilkes and Mr. Case.

They talked until the girl friends had hastened on to school to cram for the dance. Then Miss Wilkes vanished upward, still talking; Mr. Case disappeared toward his office; and I thrust that jinx of a book back into the lowest left-hand drawer of the desk, with both haste and reluctance. But I could not well ask to have the safe opened in Mr. Roberts' absence without arousing curiosity.

Several sections of the catalogue had been nicely pinned, unpinned pasted and pulled apart again, when Mr. Case walked calmly up the aisle. "May I see that Clarithew for a minute, please?" he asked. "Certainly," said I, "right away, as soon as I paste this page. I can't let go of it, you see. The book's in my desk, and I'll bring it to you directly. If you don't want to wait."

It was a safe bet that no man alive would want to wait for anything. When Mr. Case had gone, with shaking hands I grabbed my paste-brush and stuck the bookplate on lightly over the key, pressing it down until it presented exactly its original appearance. Then I took it to Mr. Case, and told him I still had to write the notices for book and plate as Mr. Darrow had ordered. He said he would return the book in plenty of time for that.

Back at my desk in a perfectly distracted condition, I was not reassured by feeling a rhythmical swaying in the atmosphere, and perceiving Miss Wilkes bearing down on me.

"I'd never have interrupted, dear, if I'd known you were still doing that catalogue!" she cooed. "Mercy, it does take you a long time, doesn't it?"

"Well, if you insist. Yes, dear, you can help me. Such trouble as I am in! You see, my cousin Magistrate Juddes—you've heard of him, of course?"

"Oh, yes!" I had. Nancy had brought him to my attention for the first time the previous afternoon.

"Well, he saw that a certain old law book—Clarithew's 'Notes,' I think they call it—was bought for us in Richmond last week. You know it, do you? Well, he wants to buy it, right away, and without fail. This morning he sent me this check for two hundred dollars—" she produced one drawn on a perfectly good bank, and signed Wilmer Ponsonby Juddes—"so I might get it for him at once."

"No price has been set on it yet," I remarked. "You'll have to ask Mr. Case about it."

"Why, I did, dear. But Mr. Case says he has no orders from Mr. Darrow, and Mr. Darrow won't be here until Monday, so what am I to do?"

"I don't see that anything's your fault," said I, profoundly weary. "Anyhow, Mr. Darrow's last orders are that the book is to be advertised in this catalogue. Too bad, but your cousin will just have to take his chance with other customers."

"But you see," pursued Miss Wilkes, "I gave him my word Wednesday that I would try to see about the book next day. I sent down an inquiry about it to Mr. Case by that trouble-some rattled-up little Miss Burton yesterday afternoon, and this morning she tells he she overlooked giving the message. I am most dreadfully put out by her stupidity, for if she had delivered the message, Mr. Case could easily have asked Mr. Darrow to fix the price, and I am sure two hundred would have put a reserve on it, any way."

"Gracious powers! Mr. Darrow would have wept hot salt tears on the learned neck of Magistrate Juddes for far less than that sum!"

"I had no time to gape again at Nancy's curious conduct, for Miss Wilkes added plaintively:

"And so I'm in a quandary! My cousin Magistrate Juddes is entertaining Congressman Sturgis in his home here over this weekend! Now, what do you suppose would be just the thing to do for him?"

"Stock exchange . . . Fifth avenue . . . Grant's tomb . . . Pen-duck alley . . . Follies . . . supper in Chinatown," I hazarded, but Miss Wilkes gasped as if I had laid down my hand on the Ark.

"My dear Miss Fuller! You don't know who Congressman Sturgis is? He is a Sturgis of Sturgis in Sturgis county—"

"Virginia!" I shrieked in desperation, hitting my faithful desk an uncalled-for whack. "For Pete's sake! Don't tell me!" Miss Wilkes looked considerably astonished, and I didn't blame her, for the effect on my nerves of learning that another representative from the Mother of Presidents was trailing that lawbook must have been a sight to see. I apologized. "I see I'm right. I just have indignation do go on, Miss Wilkes; I love pol-itics."

"So does my cousin Magistrate Juddes," slurred Miss Wilkes. "Here's the secret, dear. He's running for congress, you know, in the One Hundred and Forty-Ninth district. Election's coming, and the One Hundred and Forty-Ninth district is all ways uncertain and the national committee of my cousin Magistrate Juddes party is taking special pains to win it this time. Of course you don't know it, but Congressman Sturgis has great influence on this committee. And the curious thing is, he is the great-great-nephew of the Clarithew who wrote the 'Notes.' Now, you know how much Southerners think of family—"

"I do," I observed. "And so your cousin Magistrate Juddes believes that this unique family memento should be restored to Congressman Sturgis after generations of absence?"

"How well you put it, dear! Now do you see how you can help me? I will be personally absolutely responsible for that book if you will let me take it over the week-end. I'll deposit the check here as a guarantee of good faith, and bring the book back without fail Monday. I will explain all the circumstances to my cousin, Magistrate Juddes, and he will handle the matter suitably. Perhaps it might even be more delicate to present the book after Mr. Sturgis had shown his emotions on seeing it. I know my cousin will buy it at the first possible instant."

"But—"

"And I, Miss Fuller, would be infinitely indebted to you. My cousin Magistrate Juddes and I have all our lives been like brother and sister. His wife and I have been as one sister, with another. I wish to see them prosper, with all my heart. They expect to entertain lavishly in Washington next winter, and I may confide in you, Miss Fuller, that it is my ambition to get a connection in Washington; life there is so pleasant. I should be glad to return this favor to you some time in a useful way."

Having from childhood had an intense interest in fossil vertebrates, I have always thought it would be rather pleasant to be a curator of such subjects in the National museum especially if I could do some intriguing on the side with a handsome young Arverian diplomat every afternoon at a tea-dance. But my sense of duty was such that I passed up the chance without a quiver, firmly convinced that this new Virginian must be a further sort of Caucasian in the woodpile. "Miss Wilkes," I said more firmly than sweetly, "what authority have I to give you that book?"

"Why, I'm a responsible, confidential executive here!" boomed the affronted Miss Wilkes. "Mr. Darrow would let me have it in a minute!"

"I knew that only too well. I said: 'But he's not here.'"

"You refuse to entrust it temporarily to me, to show a prospective customer who has made a heavy deposit as evidence of good faith?"

"Right," said I, succinctly.

"Miss Fuller, this is nothing but spite of long standing; nothing but your everlasting conceit!"

She was gone, mortally offended, as the climax to a record morning. Had I, after all, lost a good sale? How would I explain anything . . . to Mr. Darrow? I certainly had not finished the catalogue. And for what purpose had I lent the Clarithew to Mr. Case, who still had it?

The next number on the program was to arrange with the printer for a necessary delay in delivering the copy: a very ordeal, for Mr. Gregory had been in the business fifty-four years out of his total of sixty-eight, and seemed to think he knew something about it. After he had said six or seven times that the catalogue couldn't be printed at all unless the copy was ready by noon; and I had countered with the statement that three o'clock was the first minute he could expect it; we agreed on two o'clock. As I rang off, Mr. Dibdin brought me the law book, with which, he said, Mr. Case had finished.

The matter of invention subject to dispute

Among all the inventors of whom popular history tells, only three, Archimedes, Ericsson and Edison, have been credited with more than one important invention. Others may have equaled them in genius, but not in luck. So, leaving aside these three "great inventors," let us take up the "inventors" who did everything else, and later the question of who were really great inventors.

Who invented the telegraph? Any American who has been through the eighth grade knows that it was Morse and Vail, in 1844. But there was an English commercial line seven years earlier, and the German credit the telegraph to Sommering of Munich, in 1809, and in Switzerland there was

A Clean Mug Agnes, five years old, a little one told about in "Children," had been called from play to breakfast. When her mother told her to wash her face and hands, she replied, "All right, mamma, I'll wash my hands, but I've washed my face once and I haven't used it since."

Nothing New In Crime

The editors of Cappers Weekly have done one thing we like to brag about. They have found a way to make a newspaper interesting without crime news. Only one other newspaper in the United States—The Christian Science Monitor—prints less crimes than Capper's Weekly.

There is really nothing new in crime. All the principal crimes are catalogued in the Ten Commandments. Each of these has several varieties. But whatever the offense, it is the same old thing that happened from time to time for thousands of years. Circumstances vary a little as time changes. That is all.—Capper's Weekly.

Chevrolet Motor Co. Has New Utility Truck

The Chevrolet Motor Company, whose unprecedented sales and production record of placing on the road 750,000 "Bigger and Better" models since January 1, established a new mark for the sale of a new model, announces this week the addition to its line of a new utility truck.

The new truck, which embodies several improvements, chief of them a four-speeds forward transmission, four wheel brakes and channel steel bumper, went into production in the various Chevrolet plants July 2. It will be on view this week in dealers' show-rooms throughout the country.

The four speeds forward transmission will insure a more efficient application of engine power. The extra low speed gear provides maximum pulling power on heavy roads and steep grades while normal driving requirements are met as usual with second, third and fourth speeds. A power take-off port, to which various power devices can be applied, is a further feature of the transmission.

The four wheel brakes are non-locking and supply a total of 317 square inches of braking, aside from an entirely separate and independently operated set of emergency brakes on the rear wheels. The front wheel brakes are of the internal expanding type, the rear wheel service brake of the external contracting type, insuring quick and positive stops regardless of grade or speed.

A new loading height, 41 inches from the ground, is made possible by a special "kick-up" feature of the long chassis. An unusually long frame support, extending behind the center of the rear axle, assures proper load distribution.

Rigorous and exacting tests, covering thousands of miles over all types of roads and under winter and summer climatic conditions, were applied to the new truck at General Motors Proving Ground before the Chevrolet engineering division approved of it for production.

The Moon And Crops

There's one thing we've heard a lot of argument about, yet one thing no one has been able to explain to our satisfaction, and that is what effect, if any, the moon really has on farm crops and garden vegetables. A lot of successful gardeners would no more plant cucumbers or peas when the "signs" are wrong than they'd chase a polecat in their Sunday suit. Yet agricultural college experts argue it is all bunk or superstition. They say the moon doesn't effect plant life.

Yet there are a lot of people around Littlefield who are not willing to agree that these scientific gentlemen are right. They say that if the moon can jerk the ocean around and cause tides to ebb and flow, it can cut some figures in vegetable growth. They've seen cucumbers run to vine and potatoes refuse to sprout or to be a good-sized potatoes if they did sprout because they were not planted according to the signs provided by the moon.

It is an old question, but it has never been explained. Science and the farmer work fairly well together in a lot of things, but when it comes to this thing of the moon figuring in plant life, they simply can't agree. That is why it is still, as it has always been, an interesting subject and one you can stir up an argument with as easy as you can talking politics. Try it on the next fellow you meet and see for yourself.—Lamb County Leader.

Forest Fires Mostly Due to Carelessness

According to the United States forest service, there has been an average of 51,000 forest fires in the United States every year for the past decade. The average area swept by fires each year is 15,000,000 acres, of which 11,800,000 acres have been forest land. This means that during the last decade no less than 118,000,000 acres of woodland have been destroyed by fire. This average annual damage has cost $20,000,000 in addition to the damage done to young trees and buildings located on these lands.

About 90 per cent of these fires have been caused by careless persons. Carelessness is another name for lack of thrift. A people truly thrifty will not wantonly burn forests that have taken decades to grow and which cannot be restored for a long period of years. Through wanton carelessness we are destroying one of the most priceless possessions that generous Nature has given us.

Look to Salmon Supply

One fish for every person in the United States was liberated from salmon hatcheries in Washington state during the year ended May 31. A total of 123,625,000 salmon were turned into ocean tributaries in that time. Since 1900 2,875,000,000 salmon eggs have been hatched by the state so that its third industry, employing 100,000 men and returning $75,000,000 annually, might survive. More than 11,000,000 salmon are caught each year in Washington waters.

Illiteracy Statistics

POULTRY

EGG PRODUCTION SHOWS INCREASE

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Radical changes in poultry management practices the last few years are having a marked effect in lengthening the production season, according to Rob R. Slocum of the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture, addressing the American Institute of Refrigeration at Washington.

Increasing egg production at an earlier date in the winter than usual and the production of out-of-season broilers have caused apprehension in the cold storage industry over the possibility of a decrease in the amount of cold storage space required for poultry and eggs, but Mr. Slocum assured the institute that the volume of these products produced and stored during the normal season will continue to be as great as at present, or even increase with the normal increase in population.

"It is probable," he said, "that both increased production of eggs during the fall and early winter and increased production of broilers out of the normal season will continue to expand. On the other hand it must be remembered that the great bulk of the annual egg and poultry crop of the United States is the product of general farms of the Middle West and only a relatively small part the product of specialized poultry farms. While specialized farms are increasing in number and importance there is no reason to anticipate that the farm flocks will not continue for years to come to produce the greater part of our poultry and egg supplies. Moreover, the eggs from these flocks will be produced largely in the spring months and the poultry raised will be hatched during the normal spring months and marketed during the fall and early winter. This being true, it follows that a large surplus of eggs will be available in the spring and a correspondingly large surplus of poultry in the fall and early winter which must continue to be stored for use at later periods."

Summer Poultry Feeding Plan of Ohio Specialist

Summer feeding schedule for laying hens calls for reduction in the amount of grain and increase in the amount of mash, say poultry specialists.

"Gradually reduce the amount of grain feed and increase the mash consumption in order to maintain summer production," says one of the specialists, P. B. Zumbro of Ohio. "It is wise to feed all the grain in the evening in order to make the birds hungrier for mash during the day."

"Another good plan is to keep the birds confined in the house until afternoon, if the house can be properly ventilated. This will stimulate mash consumption and at the same time allow ample opportunity for green feed."

"Another way is to put mash hoppers where you find the birds during the day—under a tree, in a shed, or wherever they congregate.

"Now is the time to start wet mash. Mix enough milk with the ordinary mash to make it crumbly wet, and feed such quantities as the hens will consume in a half hour."

Poultry Notes

Cleanliness is one of the chief factors in success with poultry.

Keep the coops for the small chicks at a distance from the hen house.

Now that the warm days have come the young chicks will appreciate plenty of shade and fresh water.

The nesting boxes should be in the darkest part of the hen house, and should all face away from the door.

On alfalfa or clover is the best place to raise chicks. Too valuable for that? Shucks, no. An acre, divided in two fields, so the fowls can be rotated, will take care of 500 chicks.

Skim milk and yellow corn meal are good feeds for young chicks if there is plenty of tender green feed within reach.

Inbreeding seems to be more harmful with turkeys than any other species of fowls. A gobler can ordinarily take care of 15 or 18 hens.

If your hens have nests where the sun shines on them try to get the eggs as soon as they are laid, for one hour's sunshine directly on eggs will reduce the quality. Gather them carefully.

are the bill of rights," the would-be American replied. To supplement the first question he was then asked how it was that they were known as the bill of rights. "Because Bill Wright wrote them," came the unflinching reply.

New Aid for the Blind

A new invention will enable blind people to read ordinary print. The apparatus uses the photo-electric cell in connection with a loud speaker. The blind person scans the printed page with a beam of light. When the beam falls upon black letters the loud speaker is silent; when it falls upon the white background, buzzing is heard. Thus guided entirely by sound, the reader can follow the letters.—Popular Science Monthly.

Nature Best in July

Behavior of almost any of the preying insects to be found in July are worthy of observation, says Nature Magazine. A digger wasp with its paralyzed prey, an ox warble fly driving a herd of cattle frantic, or a ladybird beetle greedily gobbling up plant louse after plant louse hold our interest readily. On the other hand we may turn to the varied means by which insects protect themselves from their enemies. The caterpillar worms that look so like a twig that they deceive us and birds, the pear slugs that look like nothing living, are only two of the more interesting. July is the month of luxuriant nature splendor.

Discovered Ancient City

Robert J. Casey, American author, returned recently from a trip to Siam, where he said he found the ruins of a great city and believes he is the first white man ever to gaze on the ruins that at one time probably housed a million Khmers from the Fifth to the Eleventh centuries.

Natives feared to penetrate the dense jungle surrounding the city, he related. Unaccompanied, he plunged through bamboo thickets for nearly thirty miles and found the city surrounded by a slimy moat filled with crocodiles. He stated that French archeologists had discovered the remains of cities in which 30,000,000 Khmers lived at one time, but could find no record in France of the city he stumbled upon.

Gathering Wapatoe Root

On Wapatoe Island 60 years ago, in the fall of the year, the last of the Multnomahs harvested their strange crop. To reach the finest plants, productive of the largest tubers, the laughing, gossiping squaws waded breast-deep in the bright waters, says Nature Magazine. They drew behind them a small canoe, and with their bare, brown feet they freed the roots of the wapatoe.

Up from the ooze they plucked it, with its leaves so like a broad arrow-head, and as they stripped it of its tubers they cast these into the canoe until the craft was heavy laden. Of the tubers they made a kind of flour that was stored for winter, and, too, they feasted on the fresh wapatoe, boiled or roasted.

Automobile Etiquette.
Authorities on etiquette agree that when a man and woman are riding together in a carriage or automobile the woman should be seated on the right. If the vehicle is not so placed that the woman, in stepping in, can easily move over to the right side, good form permits her to take her seat and allow the man to step across to his seat. Some authorities regard it as extreme for a man to walk to the left side of the car to enter. In case there is no doorman in attendance the man can close the door as he steps into the car.

Thirty Thousand Cars A Week

One of the most remarkable achievements ever recorded in the automobile industry comes to light today in the announcement of R. H. Grant, vice-president of the Chevrolet Motor Company in charge of sales, that 750,000 "Bigger and Better" Chevrolets have been placed in the hands of owners since the introduction of the new car January first.

With deliveries to customers averaging 30,000 cars a week, Chevrolet in the first seven months of the year established a record for public acceptance of a new car unrivalled in the history of modern motor cars.

Each week, each month, each quarter shattered all marks for the corresponding period of any previous year.

Much of the credit for making possible this remarkable showing is given the efficient manufacturing organization and the tremendous production facilities employed by Chevrolet. Fourteen great factories in various sections of the country shared in the effort that enabled the sales division to make prompt deliveries immediately on the announcement of the car last January. From Oakland, Cal., to Tarrytown, N. Y., factory wheels have been spinning at a record clip since the first of the year, building the various models as fast as the exacting requirements of precision would permit.

The unusual public favor shown Chevrolet in the first seven months through the demand for 750,000 cars indicates beyond doubt that Chevrolet will build and sell many more than one million units in 1928, breaking by a wide margin all existing records for the manufacture and sale of a new model and further guaranteeing Chevrolet's position as the world's largest automobile producer.

Drilling Metals.
Brass, copper, iron, steel and other metals are easily drilled if you use oil or grease as a lubricant. Do not try to drill too rapidly, and when nearly through the metal go very slowly, as a drill may easily be broken by trying to turn it too rapidly as it pushes itself through the surface.
