Boy Scout Fall Roundup For New Members Begins

Over five hundred new members are expected to be recruited this fall in the Boy Scouts of America during the Roundup which closes Dec. 15.

"It is the aim of the Scouting movement that all boys ages eight through 17 have the encouragement and opportunity to be members of the organization and we must all people will share in this undertaking" according to Firman H. Smith, Chairman of the Organization Committee of the Comanche Trail Council.

Each Cub, Scout and Explorer who recruits a new member during the Roundup will receive a pair of miniature cowboy chaps for a neckerchief slide. Each Cub Pack, Scout Troop and Explorer Unit that recruits six new members will receive a recognition banner and their leader will be awarded a Plaque for this achievement. Each Unit that is responsible for the organization of a New Unit will receive a Special National award.

Plans to strengthen each Scouting Unit so that each den, patrol and crew will have eight boy members is the hope of Scout Officials. Special programs have been arranged to include western style barbecues will be held throughout the eight counties in November.

This is a part of the National program to enlist more boys and leaders in Scouting, the aim and purpose of which is character building, citizenship training and physical fitness through "learn by doing" methods.

Conservation Pay Off Shown

A combination of proven conservation practices and a lot of determination resulted in a fine maize crop for Johnny Aaron.

Aaron harvested an average of 2,000 pounds of maize on 50 acres of dryland southwest of Eastland. E. E. McAllister, head of the Upper Leon Soil Conservation work unit in Eastland, pointed out that the yield was excellent, considering planting conditions.

"Maximum safe returns from cropland is possible only when the soil is maintained in a good condition," McAllister said. "A combination of proven conservation practices is required to meet the needs of the land and to insure a permanent agriculture."

Conservation practices on the Aaron field included (1.) construction of 9180 feet of terraces during August, 1956; (2.) farming the field on the contour, parallel to the terraces; (3.) seeding of a winter cover crop of oats and vetch each alternate year; and (4.) leaving of maximum crop residue on or near the surface for soil protection and improvement.

"The application of the above practices as reflected in Mr. Aaron's conservation plan with the Upper Leon Soil Conservation District has done much to improve the yield and soil condition of this field," McAllister pointed out. "It is recognized that conservation farming is a continuous operation, making it necessary to maintain permanent type practices and to replace the various vegetative practices from year to year in order to maintain an increased production."

National Letter Writing Week October 4 to 10

The 22nd annual Letter Writing Week will be celebrated in Ranger during the week of October 4 to 10. It was announced today by Acting Postmaster, Ella White.

Posters, depicting a mailman in a new postal vehicle called the mailster, will be displayed in post offices throughout the country. Colorful streamers, proclaiming that "Letters are fun to send and exciting to receive", will be displayed on postal vehicles.

Acting Postmaster White stated that the special week should serve as a reminder to write long-overdue letters to servicemen, hospitalized patients, foreign acquaintances, faraway friends and relatives, and others who will welcome a personal letter.

Water A Limiting Factor In Milk Production

COLLEGE STATION — Water is not really a feed but it is one of the most important and usually cheapest factor in milk production. Yet, all too frequently, milk production is limited just because old Bossy cannot get enough water.

Water makes up 75 percent or more of the animal's body, carries food nutrients into the body and carries waste materials away, says A. M. Meekma, extension dairy husbandman. Also, he adds, water helps control body temperature and makes up about 87 percent of the composition of milk.

On all farm animals, the dairy cow in milk production requires the greatest amount of water in proportion to her size. The amount of water she will drink depends on her size, her daily milk yield, the air temperature and humidity, and the amount of water in the feed she eats. From 100 to 120 pounds of water (12 1/2 to 15 gallons) per head is an average daily consumption for a dairy herd, including both cows in milk and dry cows. Cows producing 100 pounds of milk a day may drink as much as 35 gallons of water a day—or even more, Meekma notes.

Therefore, dairy herds should have free access to fresh, clean, appetizing water that is conveniently located and of a desired temperature 365 days a year. In other words, it should be known that milk production is not being limited by an inadequate water intake.

Consequently, adds Cherry, taxes may indirectly work in the opposite direction by influencing land prices upward instead of downward. In 1958, the increase in real estate values slightly exceeded the increase in taxes on a national basis.

Traditionally, economists have always considered that land taxes are "capitalized" in land values, meaning they reduced the value of land in proportion to their effect on earning capacity. In modern times, however, citizens place high values on schools, roads and other services which the taxes support.

When viewed as a percentage of gross receipts, these real property taxes accounted for about 2.2 percent of the total gross income. As a percentage of net farm-ranch income, however, the figure is much higher—amounting to 6.7 percent.

Property taxes are a fixed cost for the farm or ranch owner. In modern commercialized agriculture this tax bite may be a significant item affecting the final figure drawn down as net income, or loss. In 1958 property taxes amounted to an average of 38 cents per acre for the State, a total of 53.8 million dollars. In 1945 the average tax was 21.6 cents per acre.

About one-half this tax bill was accounted for by school district levies, reports Robert G. Cherry, extension agricultural economist. The remainder went for support of county and state governments and to special districts such as water, drainage and navigation districts. Levies by the State government are now a minor part of the total.

When viewed as a percentage of gross receipts, these real property taxes accounted for about 2.2 percent of the total gross income. As a percentage of net farm-ranch income, however, the figure is much higher—amounting to 6.7 percent.

Married Employees At Office Party

Dear Mrs. Post: Isn't it right and proper on occasion for the married employees of an office to go out in a group to celebrate some office event, without inviting the husbands and wives? It is to be a strictly office celebration, but my husband insists that after business my place is to come home, and for a woman to be seen out in public without her husband definitely cheapens her and shows lack of respect for her family. Will you please give your opinion on this?

Answer: The husbands and wives of married employees are not invited to a party which is held in the office, and your husband should not object to your staying on for an occasional one. Quite different however, is a party held in the evening at a restaurant or night club, and if your husband is not invited to such a party he has a right to object to your going.

Seating At Double Wedding

Dear Mrs. Post: My brother and I are twins and we plan on being married at a double wedding. The brides are not sisters, nor are they related in any way. The question has been raised as to which mother is seated last and also seated in the first pew. Will you please tell us how this can be handled so that one of them won't feel slighted?

Answer: The mother of the older bride is correctly accorded the honors you mention.

Accepting A Formal Invitation
Dear Mrs. Post: Will you please give me the proper wording for a formal third person acceptance. I have received an invitation to a large reception which has to be acknowledged and I am at a loss as to how to word it.

Answer: Simply write on your note paper:
Miss Mary Smith accepts with pleasure Mr. and Mrs. Brown's kind invitation for (date)

er with them. They caught me in the midst of a torn up house, preparatory to having painters come next morning. When I opened the door I said I was terribly sorry I couldn't be at home to them, and explained why and asked them if it would inconvenience them to make it another day. They said not at all, left and have since dragged my behavior that day into every conversation they have had when I am not present. What could I have done except be frank? There was hardly a piece of furniture uncovered to be sat on. I would very much appreciate hearing from you on this matter.

Answer: There was nothing wrong in what you did. In fact, it is the criticism of your action by your unexpected visitors that constitutes the only rudeness in the whole situation.

Correct Wording for Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Post: I am about to have my wedding invitations printed and there is a difference of opinion as to the correct wording of them. I say they should read "request the honour of your presence" and my fiance thinks they should read, "request the pleasure of your company." Will you please tell us the correct form, or are both equally correct?

Answer: To be correct the invitations to your wedding must read "the honour of your presence" and not "the pleasure of your company," which is the wording used for balls, dinners, receptions, etc.

Flowers To Wear
Dear Mrs. Post: Is it considered better manners for a man to carry a corsage to the house with him when he calls to take a girl to a dance, or to have it sent earlier from the florist?

Answer: It is best to send it earlier so that she may decide unhurriedly the most becoming way of wearing it.

Mrs. Post offers readers leaflets on a variety of subjects concerning etiquette. If you would like to have her leaflet E-29, entitled, "Buffet Dinners, Lanches, and Suppers," send 10 cents in coin to Dept. E. P., care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.
