MIRLS KILLED ON TOUR OF HOUSTON

OUT THIS D THAT

Friday a man was talking to a Ranger business man who had a store right here and makes his money with people who trade in Rangers. The man said he had heard that the Rangers in smaller cities had not been able to find it in the future that drove to town to buy it. When he heard about it he looked at the articles they wanted to keep them in stock and to come to him to make the price in the future. He said he would stock any they needed.

Boy Saves Daredevil Father

For more than two hours the barrel in which William Hill was attempting to shoot the Niagara rapids had circled in the whirlpool, leaking and sinking lower and lower. But when it suddenly was carried into an outer eddy the daredevil's 18-year-old son, William Hill, Jr., plunged into the treacherous current and swam out to it with a rope. Here you see the younger Hill attaching the rope to the barrel. His father, safe ashore after being extricated from his cramped quarters, declared he would have drowned had it not been for his son's timely aid.

CATSKILL WAITS FOR TRIAL OF 'LEGS' DIAMOND

CATSKILL, N. Y., June 2.—This community, where Rip Van Winkle had his prolonged nap of storied fame, is preparing for one of the biggest events in its history, the trial of Jack (Legs) Diamond, New York racketeer, on charges upon which the state hopes to send him to prison for life.

For weeks the citizens have been given a foretaste of what it is to be in the limelight, justified by a small army of newspaper photographers, reporters and state troopers.

Diamond, who is recovering from gunshot wounds suffered in the most recent attempt on his life, was to be released from Albany City hospital in time for the trial, which is scheduled for June 8. He will face the court with two of his ablest lieutenants, Harry Klein, who is known to the underworld by the unflattering sobriquet of "Blinky," and Paul Quatrochi, reputed to be overseer of the flourishing beer business directed by his chief.

Face Attack Charge. Diamond and Quatrochi will face a series of charges growing out of an attack on the Parkville, a truckman, who was held up, tied to a tree and tortured by having matches applied to his bare feet. The purpose of the attack, the state contends, was to learn the identity of a man for whom Parks was delivering a load of cider.

Deputy Attorney General John T. Cahill, who has headed the state's investigation, will conduct the prosecution of the trial assisted by deputy attorneys Harry Epstein and August Merrill, who also were active in running down evidence of gangster activities, which are said to have transformed the drowsy Catskill countryside into a veritable racketeers' paradise.

Possible Venue Change. Former Judge Daniel H. Prior of Albany, Diamond's legal advisor, has accused the investigators of creating a furor in the hope they might send Diamond and the other defendants to jail. His statement was taken as an indication he will apply for a change of venue.

Klein is accused of unlawfully appropriating an automobile for his own use, but a more sinister background lies behind the case. Klein was arrested when he claimed an automobile owned by Harry Western, missing roadhouse proprietor, who is said to have contested Diamond's right to dominate the beer business in this section. The car, blood spattered, was recovered by police when, they assert, it was about to be driven off a pier at Brooklyn.

Life for Diamond. Attorney General John J. Bennett announced that his purpose in delving into Diamond's history was to get evidence on which to put him behind bars for the remainder of his life. Diamond already is indicted for kidnaping, assault, coercion and carrying a concealed weapon. If he were found guilty on three of the four charges he would be within the scope of the Baumes law, which makes a life sentence mandatory for a fourth offender on a felony charge.

TESTIMONY STARTS IN RIOT CASE. AUSTIN, June 2.—L. B. Shipp is expected to be the star witness for the state in the first Sherman riot trial which begins its testimony here today. Shipp was a deputy sheriff of Grayson county when the courthouse was burned on May 9, 1920, as a mob stormed it in an effort to lynch George Hughes, negro, on trial for an alleged attack upon a white woman. Hughes had been put in the courthouse vault for safety.

District Attorney Henry Brooks announced the state will attempt to prove that J. B. McCasland, 19, the defendant, set fire to the courthouse by throwing a gasoline torch into a window. It is understood that Shipp, who now is foreman of a construction gang at Huntsville, will testify that he was standing at a corner of the courthouse and saw a torch thrown through a window of the tax collector's office.

Office Worker is Big Prize Winner. TULSA, June 2.—Clyde M. Peterson, Tulsa office worker, received the news that he had won $145,000 on Cameronian, winner of the Epsom Downs derby today. He sat at his desk during the race explaining he was too busy to watch the results come in. "A job is a job and a horse race is uncertain," he said.

Firemen Rescue Baby From 45-Foot Well

This unusual picture shows the dramatic scene when Milwaukee firemen and volunteer rescuers lifted Lauretta Fonders, 23 months old (indicated by arrow), from the narrow mouth of a 45-foot dry well into which she had fallen two hours before. A man at the left is holding the wire hook, devised by a spectator with which the child was lifted to safety after workers had started digging a parallel shaft in an attempt to rescue her in that manner.

Bus In Which They Rode Was Entering Factory Grounds.

HOUSTON, June 3.—A young member of the Girl Builders was killed today and two girls were injured when a bus in which 32 girls were being taken on a tour crashed by a gate of the Standard Rice Mills here.

The girl, Lydia Bell Moulds, 12, struck her head out the window as the bus passed through the gate on an inspection tour of the city's industrial plants.

Her head was crushed by a gatepost and two other girls who were looking out the window, Velma Morrison and Mary Gilley, were injured.

The tour was being taken under auspices of the Optimists' club of Houston.

NINE DIE AS BRIDGE COLLAPSES

BORDEAUX, France, June 3.—Ten were killed and 29 injured today when a suspension bridge at St. Denis de Palles over the Isle river, a tributary of the Gironde river, collapsed during tests. Nine loaded auto trucks were dropped.

The accident was witnessed by a large throng of school children who had been given a holiday to watch the inauguration of the bridge.

Nine trucks started across to test the bridge. They were accompanied by about 50 persons, who fell into the river when the structure broke under the strain. Water covered the trucks.

The dead included the bridge builder. One of those employed on the bridge was saved because he refused to participate in the test, having dreamed last night that the bridge collapsed.

ATTENDANCE INCREASING AT REVIVAL

Each service in the Central Baptist revival is marked with increased interest and attendance. At yesterday morning's service a large junior choir led in the song service. Pastor Stephens in his message on prayer framed it in the simplest of language that the children might understand every thought presented. Last evening there were more than 100 in the various prayer services. The juniors and young people's prayer services were largely attended and splendid devotionals were given.

Last night Rev. Stephens spoke to a filled house. "Can We Depend Upon God?" Again the junior choir was in evidence, there being about 75 in it. Central church is ready for a great revival and the people are showing their interest by being in the services.

Tonight's subject will be "Christ and the Sinner." Thursday morning, "Christian Co-Operation and Teamwork." Night, "Profession and Practice."

Dizzy Dean To Wed in Park Tuesday Night

HOUSTON, June 3.—Dizzy Dean, highly publicized young right hand hurler of the Houston Buffaloes, makes his living out of baseball and he is not going to forget his fan.

Yesterday he applied for a license to wed Patricia Nash, attractive young hostess saleswoman here.

Today he, Mrs. Nash and Fred Ankerman, chief of the Buffs, were in a huddle working out details of a wedding that will be staged at the home plate of Buffalo stadium.

It looks as if the ceremony will be held Tuesday night with the flood lights of the stadium centered on the couple and a band blaring sentimental tunes.

Dean, who came here from the St. Louis Cardinals has won eight games this year, half of them via the shut-out route.

More Than 500,000 See 148th Running of English Derby Over Historic Epsom Course

EPSOM DOWNS, England, June 3.—John A. Dewar's Cameronian, the favorite, won the 148th running of the derby before a throng of more than 500,000 on Epsom Downs today.

More than half a million people were here today to cheer the winner of the derby, one of the greatest horse races in the world. All classes of society were represented, members of royalty, including King George and Queen Mary, while noble lords and their ladies, in special derby dresses, rubbed shoulders with rich and poor.

From an early hour the crowd began to assemble, and by noon the track was lined with people several deep, almost from start to finish. Special electric trains poured thousands out of nearby Tottenham corner station every two minutes, while along every road for miles around automobiles laden with people converged slowly on the high ground on the downs. Many visitors arrived by air, landing at the Croydon air-drome, a few miles away.

Huge Feed Bill. Catering for the inner needs of the derby crowd was on a gigantic scale. Dozens of marquees were erected round the track and in the center, or free part. Each enclosure had its own special refreshment room or tent, besides bars which sold both alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks. Nearly a million bottles of beer and soft drinks, cases of whisky and champagne by the score, tons of cooked meats of all descriptions, tens of thousands of loaves of bread were provided.

Greater world-wide interest than ever was focused on the race this year, by the Irish Free State (Continued on page 4)

AGED MAN FOUND DEAD IN GARAGE

KERRVILLE, Texas, June 3.—James H. Wright, about 62, retired tailor, was found fatally shot and unconscious in the garage at his home this morning. He died a few minutes after officers reached the place. He had a bullet wound in his temple and a bulge on his forehead as if another bullet had failed to emerge. A revolver lay at his feet.

A note signed by Wright was found in the car a few feet from the garage. Sheriff Frank Moore refused to make public its contents.

Financial difficulties are believed to have caused Wright's death. He is survived by his widow and two married daughters.

TIMES ARE CHANGING.

"At the bottom of the present distress of the oil industry is a fundamental conflict between economic and statute law," says Western Business. "Statute law holds it to be against public policy for producers to agree among themselves to limit production. Economic law makes it imperative that they should so agree. If they do not, oil is over-produced and wasted today.

"In this conflict the oil industry is not seeking to put itself above the law and defy the government. It has for years been trying to discover a middle ground between unlimited competition (with its attendant overproduction) and unified control (which could force production down to the level of demand). But no attempted compromise has achieved anything like effective success.

"This is not simply a question involving oil, vital as it is to the whole petroleum industry. It involves the whole relationship of government to business. Business perforce lives in the present; it cuts the cloth of its action to the pattern of actual conditions. Government must free itself from the dead hand of outworn social and political concepts; it must not expect to apply the rules of 1890 to the facts of 1931. The times are changing with unprecedented swiftness."

VIEWPOINT OF A PETROLEUM GIANT.

Sir Henri W. A. Deterding is one of the giants of the petroleum industry the world over. He is the general managing director and dictator of the Royal Dutch Shell company. His advice to his stockholders is significant. He says, "There is no reason for any feeling of panic regarding over-production of petroleum in the United States."

A LUCKY PUBLISHER WINS HIS FREEDOM.

James B. Brown is a Louisville banker and newspaper publisher. He was acquitted by a jury in circuit court of the city of Louisville of embezzlement of $2,000,000 on a note he gave a local broker which then was cashed by Publisher Brown's big holding company known as Bancokentucky.

Brown had a defense. He said his collateral was more than sufficient to cover the note. He offered no testimony. Indeed, he was willing for the case to go to the jury without argument. Most of the directors of the holding company said they knew nothing of the note until the institution was closed a year after it was made.

"UNCLE ANDY'S" NEW TAX PROPOSALS.

"Uncle Andy" Mellon may propose the adoption of the sales tax and a federal tax on gasoline before he retires as the head of the treasury department and rests on his laurels as the second Alexander Hamilton of American history. "Uncle Andy" is ever making life miserable for the so-called republican progressive bloc of senators and representatives and their democratic allies.

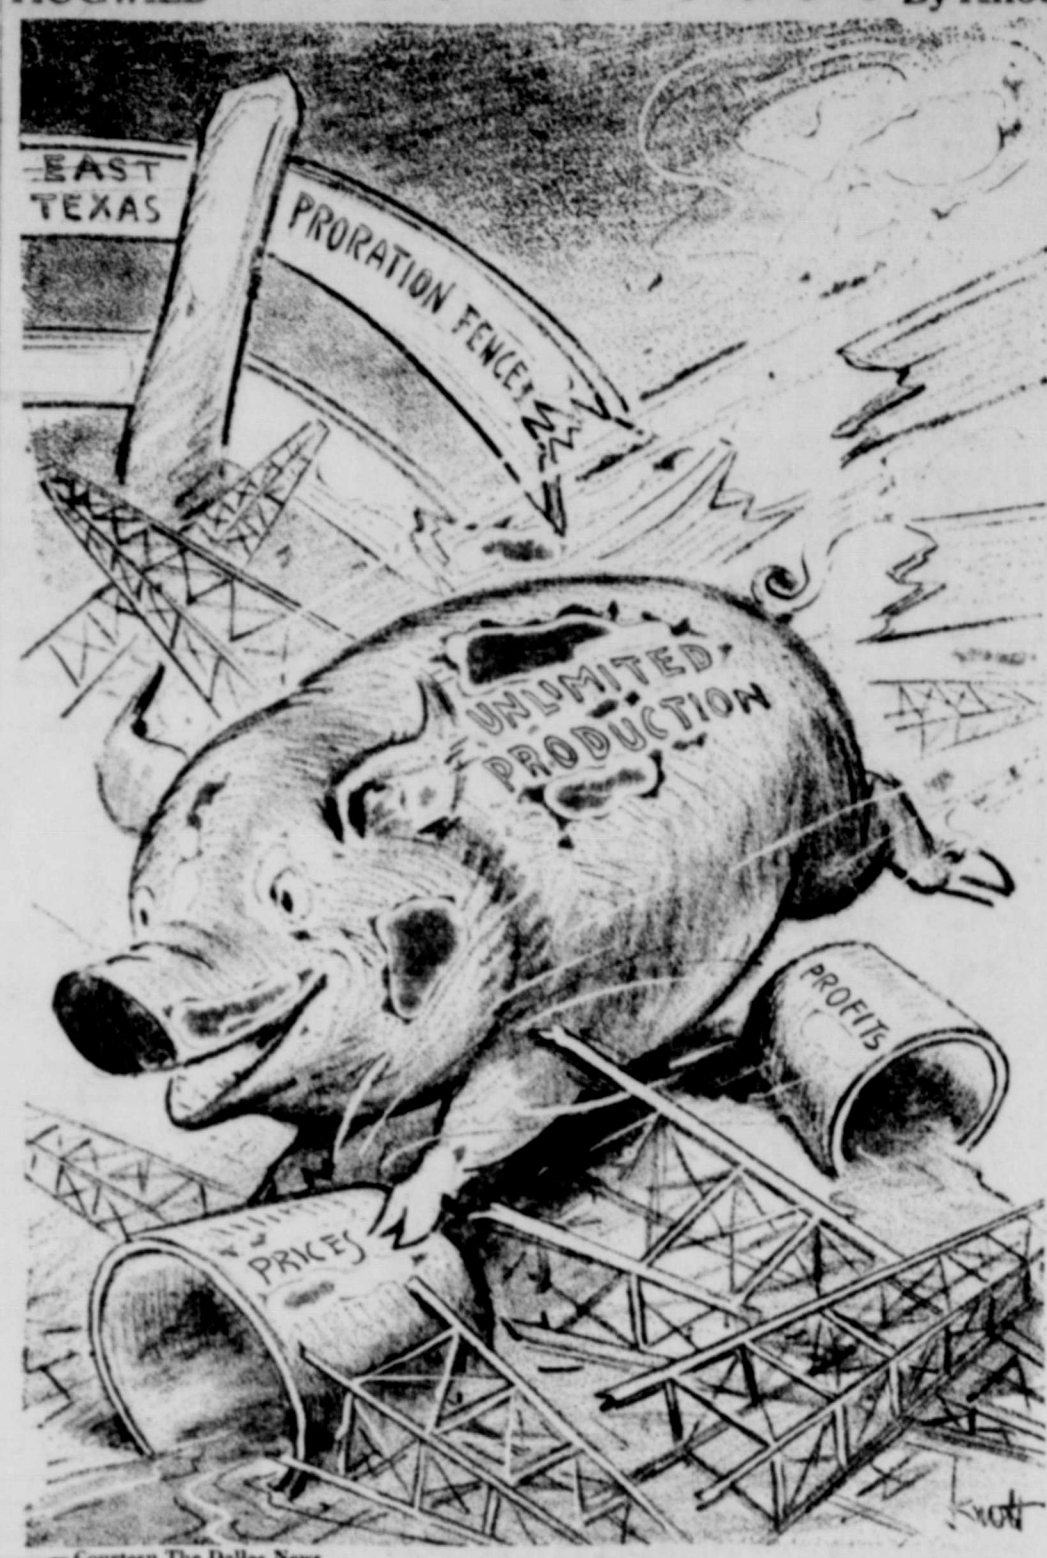

A sales tax would catch all from the tramp to the billion dollar uncrowned prince of oildom.

The MELODY GIRL

By RUTH DWANE GROVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY Beryl Boyd, secretly in love with Tommy Wilson, delays his elopement with her half-sister, Irene Everett, but fails to convince him that it is his duty to finish college.

Irene is jealous when she fails and Beryl succeeds in securing a radio contract. Beryl's debut wins applause and new friends, but she cannot forget her hopeless love, though she goes to parties with Prentiss Gaylor. Irene learns Prentiss has money and tries to win him from Beryl. He is susceptible, takes her driving and to dinner.

Tommy's aunt dies and he sees both money and job through her husband. Tommy tells Irene of his bad luck and she breaks their engagement. When Prentiss asks her to marry him, she accepts. Irene plans a quick marriage, fearing Prentiss will discover her deceit as she has told him it is Beryl whom Tommy loves.

When Irene dismisses Tommy, he yields to despair and drinks heavily. Beryl finds him and tries to cheer him up. She tells Irene she must either reverse her engagement with Tommy or inform Prentiss how she has treated him. Irene promises but plans to outwit Beryl. She receives a telegram from Prentiss asking her to marry him immediately.

Now GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXI Mrs. Everett agreed that Irene's plan for frustrating Beryl's attempt to prevent her marriage to Prentiss was perfect. She helped Irene to dress with unusual care, and gave her all the money she had available in the house.

Irene stayed in her room until Prentiss called and then she went down to him immediately so that he would not talk with her mother in the living room where Beryl might overhear.

Irene affected extreme agitation. She wanted Beryl, if she saw her, to think she was upset over her coming interview with Prentiss. To Prentiss she explained nervously that she wanted to talk to him alone—her mother had left the room when Irene entered it, as the two had arranged. She wanted to "go somewhere and talk with him."

"I don't want you to speak to your mother—to tell her that we're going to be married!" Prentiss protested.

Irene smiled vainly at him. "Not yet, please," she begged. "I have something to tell you first."

"All right," Prentiss agreed, "but you know you said you couldn't really say 'yes' until I'd asked your mother." He laughed. "What an old-fashioned sweetheart you are!" he exclaimed happily.

Irene took his arm. "Let's go," she said, and ushered him toward the hall. Prentiss became serious. "Is there something wrong?" he inquired anxiously.

"I'll tell you," Irene said, loud enough for an eavesdropper to hear. In her voice was a hint of tears and trouble, that ought, she thought, to satisfy Beryl that she was on her way to sacrifice herself.

Prentiss helped her tenderly into his car, his hopes at the moment less buoyant than ever they'd been before.

They had not driven far before he told her he'd have to know what was on her mind. Irene had been entirely wordless during the drive.

"It's mother," she said, as though with great reluctance. "She thinks we ought to have a fussy wedding. I'm all tired out arguing with her that the sensible thing is for us to be married quietly and go back to Oakland right away, as your father wants you to."

"Then she doesn't object to your marrying me?" Prentiss asked eagerly.

"Well—she said she'd like us to have a longer engagement."

"I don't believe in long engagements," Prentiss stated firmly. "I couldn't have any kind of wedding at all here at home," Irene said wistfully, "without inviting hordes of people. We know everyone in town."

Prentiss had visions of such an occasion. "Can't we be married all by ourselves?" he asked.

"I think that would be the loveliest way," Irene agreed.

"I've got to leave day after tomorrow at the latest," Prentiss informed her. "In fact I should leave tomorrow. Dad wouldn't send for me if he didn't need me. There was a threatened strike at the factory when I left and I'm afraid it's been called."

"Merely! Can you handle strikes?" Irene breathed reverently.

"Well," Prentiss said, "I have ideas that fit in between those held by the labor leaders. But that's not the topic of the moment," he added hastily. "Will you marry me today, Irene?"

"Today?" she gasped. "Oh, Prentiss—not before tomorrow!"

"Why not today?" he insisted. "Now! You look like a bride. Let's drive right into the city. We can have it over at city hall in no time. Of course, if you'd prefer a church—"

"But today?" Irene gasped anew.

"Doesn't it appeal to you?" he asked. "To me it would be a great way to do it. I think people miss a lot by delaying in order to make preparations. Just think—you left the house for a drive with me—you were Irene Everett. Wouldn't you get a kick out of going back as Irene Gaylor? A sort of surprise for yourself, you know. And it would make the whole thing so much easier for me."

Irene glanced up at him. He was not the lover of the night before. He was thinking of convenience—of business convenience. Well, she didn't mind, but she'd like him to be more ardent before she gave in to him. He'd never be so ready to neglect her then.

So she would not yield until Prentiss had duly coaxed her. She knew, while she was about it, that he was heading for the city, but she did not protest. Soon after she consented to marry him they reached the Queensboro Bridge.

The great city's northern towers spread out before her in a magic mist. It did not seem possible they could be so real. But Irene did not look long at them. It takes some minutes to cross over the Queensboro Bridge and it is always a thrilling experience, those who know to achievement. Irene's vision was filled with pictures of herself as the bride of a rich man's son. The towers of Manhattan, as seen from the bridge, were out of her sight, and she had given them a second thought.

WORKING PACT WITH MOVIE FIRMS SOUGHT

By United Press.

LONDON.—The allegedly low mentality of the average American film fan must be taken into consideration if Great Britain is to save the United States from a movie famine, leaders of the industry here have been warned.

Their advisor, one of London's best known film critics, in discussing a reciprocity scheme with Hollywood and American theater owners, wrote:

"There are two 'snags' in the outlook for reciprocity films. The first is that the average mentality in this country is more educated than it is in America, and British films intended for America must be pitched a little lower on that account."

Speed Production. A movement is on foot here now to more than double the film output of Etrazee. Britain's Hollywood. The leaders in the industry here have had one answer to criticism from all sides on the quantity, quality and general inferiority of their product as compared with that of Hollywood. It has always been that their films did not have the large circulation of Hollywood offerings, and therefore the sum of money that could be spent in their production was of necessity limited.

Experts, however, now point out that the Gaumont-British Pictures Corporation and British International Pictures who control more than 500 theaters in Great Britain are in a position to demand that Hollywood producers take an increased number of British films.

Scheme Worked Out. It is reported that a definite "reciprocity" scheme with the United States has already been worked out, sponsored by Isadore Ostrer, brilliant financier and organizer, and sent to Hollywood for consideration.

It is reported that a definite plan has been worked out, the British producer having access to the American market, it is said, will be able to untie the purse strings and produce on a more lavish scale than would be possible if he were assured of only a limited income provided by the British theaters alone.

Such an arrangement, it is believed, also would have the effect of encouraging Hollywood producers to establish studios in Great Britain and produce films which would rank as British films, giving employment to many and increasing the prestige abroad of the local industry.

even Clara Dannigell, whose father was only a night watchman on a North Shore estate, had a cake a foot high, with a bell on it and artificial orange blossoms that could hardly be told from real.

Irene lowered her face and looked at her rings. The engagement ring affronted her anew and she felt her temper slipping, but it would never do to show how she felt. She had sense enough to realize this and both Prentiss and the maitre d'hotel were waiting for some expression of approval from her.

She swallowed hard and looked up at them. "It's lovely," she said with enough feeling to satisfy them. Perhaps they were both so sure that she would like the beautiful little cake that they did not weigh her praise at all.

The maitre d'hotel tasted the cake with them and then went back to tell his fondest that "the young Monsieur Gaylor had married the most charming young lady in these world." (It was Gallic and gallant exaggeration, but it reflected the sincerest opinion of the bridegroom, if not quite of the maitre d'hotel.)

And when the bride said she would like to go home and break the news to her family he had no other thought than to comply with her wish. It seemed to Prentiss a thoughtful and considerate suggestion. For his part, of course, he'd rather take her away instantly and keep her to himself, but she'd been wonderful to put his interests above all else and marry him without having one of her friends, or a member of her family, present at the ceremony. He owed her much for that.

As they left the table she said: "I'd like to telephone Mama before we start."

Prentiss offered to do this for her, but Irene insisted she must do the talking herself. As she hoped, Beryl answered.

Special Planes For Air Patrol

WASHINGTON.—Forest air patrol planes can be made more efficient if they are specially designed for their work, according to Howard R. Flint, regional forest inspector of the Northern Rock Mountain Region, department of agriculture forest service.

Ample power and carrying capacity, ease of handling, and use of the best instruments are recommended in his annual report on the work of the air patrol in the national forests of the Northern region.

Flint would have an open, two place parasol monoplane used in the work. The observer would be seated on an adjustable revolving stool in a rear cockpit. The plane would have the lowest possible stalling speed—about 50 miles an hour. It would have a cruising range of six hours and a transparent floor in the pilot's cockpit. Flint also would have the plane equipped with an aerial mapping camera, and would have it powered by the latest type 300-horsepower motor.

Piute Gamblers Entertain With Ancient Games

RENO, Nev., June 3.—Picturesque gatherings of Piute and Washoe Indians have been congregating late on the outskirts of Carson City to revive the ancient Indian game of "Passing the Stick."

Drawn by the colorful scene, hundreds of palefaces visit the Indian village every day to witness the game.

"Passing the Stick" is a game peculiar to the redskins of Nevada. A stick about three inches long and of the diameter of a pencil is used. The contestants form two parallel lines, distant about three feet from each other, with 15 to 20 Indian bucks on a side. The leader of each side is in the center of the line and the players kneel and fold their arms over their chests.

Like "Button Button" Agreement is made as to the side starting the contest. The leader of the side taking the offense places the tiny stick in his right hand. Then conceals both hands behind his back and rapidly changes the trophy from hand to hand. Finally he brings both hands to the front, tightly clenched, and foists his arms stonically.

The opposing players then guess in which hand the stick resides. The first call deciding the issue. Ofttimes seven or eight braves will call out the winning hand, or fail to guess correctly. Should the first prove right the stick changes sides, and the leader of the opposition has an opportunity to demonstrate his shuffling abilities.

From time to time other Indians among the players are given the honor of holding the vital stick and endeavoring to outguess the other side. The Indian is aptly termed "poker face," since his expression remains the same and he gives no hint as to the stick's whereabouts.

Big Gambling Game Points are scored on the basis of correct guesses, and during an afternoon considerable money changes hands. Blankets, saddles, bridles and even horses are won or lost.

During the time the game is in progress the Indians keep up an incessant chant. The tribal musician accompanies this chant by beating on the tom tom.

The tom tom used here is an ordinary wash tub on the sheet metal variety, bottom up on the ground. A stick with notches about an inch apart, is held in the musician's hand, one end resting on the tub. A second stick is rolled up and down the notched stick. The sound created is weird and barbarous.

Prettily Appointed Shower Compliments Mrs. Green

One of the daintiest and most carefully appointed affairs listed for several months was that of the pretty shower held at the home of Mrs. O. G. Lanier yesterday afternoon, with the lovely occasion complimenting Mrs. E. E. Green.

A wicker floor basket lined with pink satin and finished with tiny clusters of white and pink sweetpeas encircling the top afforded a pretty picture, which was drawn into the living room by little Miss Mary Allen, dainty and adorable daughter of the hostess. The honor responded to the compliment paid her in a most gracious manner as she unwrapped each gift for the guests to enjoy.

Group of Tickvillers were Dr. and Mrs. Harry A. Logsdon, Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Henry, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. (Rudd) Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. McDowell and little daughter, Cecelia Shelline.

Hospitals sweepstake, the promoters of which, for the first time, ran a "sweep" on the derby. So great was the success of the Irish sweepstake in connection with this year's Grand National, and which broke all records for an event of its kind, that the little 10-shilling green tickets found a ready sale in many countries throughout the world.

Derby's 148th Running.

Today marked the 148th renewal of the derby stakes. There were 494 entries made, the largest number in the history of the race. The previous highest was 372 in 1914. Last year the number of entries was 317. All entries for today's event were made not later than Nov. 5, 1929, when the horses were only yearlings.

The winner's prize amounted to approximately 10,000 pounds, or $50,000. Part of the total prize money was drawn from forfeits which owners paid at various stages since the entry list closed. To this sum the Jockey club added 3,000 pounds (or $15,000). The owner of the second horse received 10 per cent of the whole stake; the owner of the third, 5 per cent of the whole stakes, and the breeder of the winner received a consolation prize of 500 pounds ($2,500). All horses which ran today paid 100 pounds ($500) in entrance fees. The distance of the race was the same as in recent years, namely 12 furlongs. Colts carried 126 pounds weight and fillies five pounds less.

American Horse Favored.

Among the entries for today's derby were a number of horses well up to the standard of the quality of post-war runners, though there was no animal of exceptional brilliance, or one which might be expected to emulate the feats of great derby winners of the past. Many horses were backed for the race a couple of months ago although the real betting opened up after the Two Thousand Guineas race at Newmarket on April 29.

Prominent in Kansas City, Mo., police, Miss Rosemary Lyon, above, collector of delinquent taxes, and John Liza, below, president of a north side Democratic club are among those arrested by prohibition agents investigating an alleged gigantic liquor syndicate which they claim was financed by Al Capone. Miss Lyon is accused of keeping the syndicate's books.

Some of the best backed to win today were the American, Marshall Field's Jockey, which was total of the leading two-year-olds last season, but was scratched from the Two Thousand Guineas classic; J. Dewar's Cameronian; M. Marcel Boussac's Goyecens and Sir John Rutherford's Orpen. The three last named finished first, second and third respectively in the Two Thousand Guineas.

Becomes Valuable.

Apart from the big stake which the winner of the derby brings to his owner, the horse is almost certain to become a valuable source of revenue as a sire. In recent years it has been the custom to retire derby winners to the stud immediately at the end of the season. Very few derby winners are kept in training even till four years of age. One reason is that owners are not anxious to risk having their derby winners beaten, thereby lessening the value of the horse from a breeding point of view.
