Educators Set Up 10 Goals for U. S.

Since 1931 the National Education Association has had a committee working on social-economic goals for America. Their effort is one of many to define answers to the questions "What do we want for America?"

Now the association and its committee have capsuled the whole program in simple form for school discussion. The ten goals, which the teachers believe "thoughtful Americans desire for themselves and their posterity," may be summarized as follows:

- 1. Hereditary strength—that everyone shall be well-born under conditions that will conserve his innate strengths and capacities.
2. Physical security—that everyone shall be protected against accident and disease.
3. Culture-skills and knowledges—that every individual shall master those skills and knowledges that will enable him to use and enjoy the culture of the group.
4. Culture-values and outlooks—that everyone shall be put in possession of the values, standards, and outlooks that reflect the experience of the race.
5. An active, flexible personality—that everyone shall have such opportunities as will foster initiative, ability to meet new problems, weigh facts, resist prejudice, and act co-operatively.
6. Suitable occupation—that everyone shall enjoy the sense of being useful that honest labor brings, shall be enabled to use his skill where it will mean most to himself and society.
7. Economic security—that everyone shall enjoy a minimum income that will provide a reasonable standard of living.
8. Mental security—that everyone, especially in childhood and adolescence, shall have affection, toleration, and understanding of life needs that will foster the best development of personality.
9. Freedom—that everyone shall enjoy the widest freedom that is compatible with the equal freedom of others.
10. Fair play and equal opportunity—that everyone shall act and expect others to act in conformity with the highest good of all.

This is an effort to provide a yardstick by which we may measure any specific proposal. Does a proposed plan tend to bring to reality any of the lofty ideals noted above? Does it tend to hinder the development of any?

By such a standard one may well gauge the multitude of panaceas which swirl about in a confused world. It is good to see that America's teachers are active in offering so bright and so precise a yardstick.

Now that Rheims cathedral has been restored and Germany has signed a new treaty guaranteeing Belgium's neutrality, Europe is right back where it was in 1914—except, of course, for the 8,000,000 dead who haven't yet been brought back to life.

BUSINESS CONFERENCE

From This Wreckage May Come New Air Laws

While Congress started action on new aviation legislation and investigations of recent major air crashes—one in Montana and the other in the South Seas—rescuers brought the bodies of 16 victims from the charred, twisted wreckage of a Northwest Airlines plane, pictured above, which crashed into a mountainside near Igozomon, Mont. En route to this snowbound scene of northwest deck, horses, wooded mountainside and rescuers were members of a special investigating board, headed by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Hooper. The plane crashed in flames as the pilot sought to land.

driving privilege suspended for periods varying from one to six months.
'We know there are definite personality types which have no business driving an automobile,' Judge Braude said. 'With the aid of clinical examinations and the psycho-polygraph—which records the personality like a stethoscope indicates the heart condition—we hope to weed them out and correct their faults before they become involved in more serious accidents.'
One traffic violator, brought to Judge Braude's court for parking on the wrong side of the street, was found to have a "manic-depressive attitude," and was placed on six months' probation.
A speeder who had a "stilted paranoid personality"—meaning his fundamental attitude was that the world had a grudge against him—was deprived of his driving privilege for three months and through the efforts of the behavior clinic induced to give up his "chip on the shoulder" complex which was considered partly responsible for his disposition to exceed traffic limits.
'The stutter type,' Dr. Rotman said, "may not stutter in his talk. He stutters mentally—that is, in crowded traffic, faced with the necessity of making a decision, he stands still and usually gets hit on both sides by drivers who could not anticipate his action."
Two of the offenders brought to the behavior clinic were found to be mentally unsound and were committed to institutions.
One traffic violator's reckless driving, which consisted mostly of weaving in and out of traffic in an erratic manner, was found to be suffering from a home situation which included a nagging wife and an intruding mother-in-law.
'The definite speeder personality,' Judge Braude said, 'is the young man or woman who buys the snappiest car on the market, because it attracts attention, and drives it in a manner that attracts attention of the police.'
'This type, and other fault drivers, can be cured by suggestion and treatment. Solution of our traffic problems lies in curing these sick personalities, not punishing them. Ten per cent of the 3,000,000 car drivers in Illinois commit 90 per cent of the traffic accidents. They can be weeded out and cured in the behavior clinic, before they come serious grief.'

Clinic Reveals The 'Why' Behind Erring Drivers

BY CORRINNE HARDESTY United Press Staff Correspondent CHICAGO. — If you drive through a red light, park on the wrong side of the street or exceed the speed limit you may be suffering from "speeder personality," melancholy, or the effects of a family quarrel.

Judge J. M. Braude of Chicago's traffic court, outlined his theory that traffic law violators are "mentally sick," not wanton law-breakers, and pronounced successful his six-months experiment in "curing" violators at the municipal court behavior clinic.
Dr. David Rotman, head of the clinic, studied 47 of Judge Braude's traffic violators and on the basis of his findings of "emotionally unstable," "unsatisfactory home condition," "severe melancholy," "borderline intelligence" and "stutter type," 14 had their

Women's Clubs to Hold Bride Schools

CENTERVILLE, Iowa.—A series of "schools" to give tips to prospective brides is being sponsored here.
The purpose of the series, sponsored by the Appanoose county unit of the Iowa Federation of Women's clubs, is to promote successful marriages. The club hopes to see the idea spread.
At the first "school" two young women served as the bride and groom. The bride, Georgia Hart, who soon is to become an actual bride, was given advice by Mrs. J. S. Caylor, a widow who was married 65 years. She said: "It's harder to have successful marriages today; don't quarrel, be loyal companions."
A minister, doctor and a club-woman also presented marital advice. A housewife displayed a hope chest and told brides how to fill it.
The Centerville club women plan to start a "bride's club," to give counsel under auspices of the federation.
Mrs. W. M. Speers, Centerville club leader, said the goal of the unit is to establish statewide "bride schools."

Roosevelt's "No" on War Poll

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON
January 6, 1938.

My dear Mr. Speaker:

In response to your request for an expression of my views respecting the proposed resolution calling for a referendum vote as a prerequisite for a declaration of war, I must frankly state that I consider that the proposed amendment would be impracticable in its application and incompatible with our representative form of government.

Our Government is conducted by representatives of their own choice. It is the duty of those representatives to act in accordance with the principles of the Constitution and to consider the practical means for the execution of the policy of the Government.

I am, Sir, very respectfully,
Yours very truly,
Franklin D. Roosevelt

William Bankhead gesticulates as he reads the letter, in part, from President Roosevelt asking the House of Representatives to kill the Ludlow Resolution for a constitutional amendment that would make a declaration of war impossible without an affirmative referendum of United States voters. The resolution was shelved by a 209-186 vote.

Richest Girl in the World

CAST OF CHARACTERS
CONSTANCE CORBY— heroine;
BRET— her boy; RODNEY— her brother; RONNEY BRANDON— Constance's fiance; KATIE BLYN— Constance's "doubtful rival."

Yesterday Bret accepts Constance's explanation about the jewels she wore her mother's. And Constance has her previous fiance before she is to tell Bret who she is.

CHAPTER XII
 CONNIE had "her hour" for a little while. Her lovely, secret fiance. Each day she told her that the time must come when she would tell Bret the truth about herself. But each day wore on in the next, with her courage slowly failing her, her decision nevering.

Bret's bridge rose and expanded a spread, so that soon it would be a crescent completed in steel and stone, as well as in a man's hand. So different was this life Connie, so complete her happiness and contentment, that she wondered if it had been, if perhaps, she had not really been someone else, during those fleeting months, that were over and done, all too soon. The first faint breath of spring seemed into the low valley among the little sleepy villages of a new activity, awakening the slender dark hills, brushing the tips of the gray trees. Wild birds ventured out to sun themselves, to water at the springs; birds twittered and trilled and darted to look about for a place for their home-making. And Bret invited Connie wear high-topped shoes for fear she might come across a rattler or copper-head during their walks.

"I'll make a bill-billy of you," he told her jokingly. He was gay these days, was Bret, and masterful and tender.

"When are you going to make my mind to marry me, like a sensible girl?" This was another thing that Bret said, more than "I can't see why we shouldn't be married right away. Except perhaps, that it might be better— to wait until the bridge is here. You see," he adopted his serious tone, "I don't want to take my mind completely off my work."

yet how altogether delightful—as to whether Mrs. Parsons would be pleased with the luncheon set Connie had bought as a special surprise, whether or not Eloise should ever decide the momentous question as to bobbing her hair. Not until they started to unload the car before the brick house did Connie notice the headlines and the picture on the page one of the Charleston paper that Eloise had bought.

Two pictures were to exact. A portrait study of herself that she had had made for Rodney just before the announcement of their engagement, and another, looking somehow like that same girl, if Connie's polo coat, the girl who was the real Katie Blyn.

"ARE THESE TWO GIRLS THE SAME?" the headline queried. "It is rumored that Constance Corby richest girl in the world, may be in hiding. It is possible," the story continued, "that some other girl has been taking her place on Broadway her million dollar yacht? Rodney Brandon, when interviewed, asserted this girl, supposedly Miss Corby, is not his fiancée."

"What's the matter?" Eloise asked.

"The matter?" Connie looked up from the paper. She tried to make her voice sound natural. But it shook a little. "Nothing... nothing," she said.

EVERYTHING, everything, she meant.

She knew that this was the end of this girl who stood here, shaker troubled, carefully retelling the paper again: the end of this Katie Blyn. She knew she would have to go back, become Constance Corby once more.

She wondered if Rodney was to blame for this—or had the newspapers made the discovery? Rodney might have given out the story because she had run away because she had stayed so long that, undoubtedly, he had become worried. He knew that the paper reporters, the whole world would not rest until the real Constance Corby was found.

If it was Rodney's doings, she could not blame him too much. He had his pride. She could only blame herself for believing she could go on and on, living this new life she had made for herself, keeping her lovely romance secret and apart.

She would have to tell Bret now—tonight. She realized that postponement had only made this more difficult.

Would Bret forgive her? Would he understand?

Sport Glances. By Grayson

BY HARRY GRAYSON
 Sports Editor, NEA Service

CLEVELAND—Steve O'Neill, "shufflin' off to Buffalo, talks about young Robert Feller.

Everybody connected with the Cleveland club—past or present—speaks of the Iowa schoolboy who stands major league hitters on their heads.

O'Neill reveals something about Feller, which never before has been stressed. It is that next to his stuff, the position of his head while delivering the ball is Bullet Bob's biggest asset.

"You will recall that I caught Feller, July 6, 1935, the afternoon on which he made his bow against the St. Louis Cardinals in an exhibition game," beams O'Neill, who has handled the lad's every pitching move since.

"And I'll never forget Leo Durocher jumping clear out of the batter's box, with the remark: 'Another Jeff Pfeffer. Looks at third base and throws to the plate.'"

Feller has everything, but I actually believe that the fact the batter sees only one of his eyes until he is all the way around gives him that extra touch of mystery that spells genuine greatness.

"I recall Eddie Rose, a New Orleans outfielder, saying last spring that to him it looked like Feller was going to throw the ball straight up in the air."

O'NEILL, in the best position to judge, asserts that those who suspect that Feller's motion puts excessive strain on his arm are wrong.

"Bob's delivery is as smooth as corn silk, and he follows through perfectly," explains the famous old backstop. "The new American League motion picture, 'Batter

Up,' removes all doubt about that. They shot the boy for days. "It was nothing more than Feller's youth and his eagerness to make good that caused him to press and hurt his arm. Asking a kid not yet out of his teens to pitch Sunday after Sunday before crowds of 60,000 was a bit too much. I told Cy Slapnicka so, and Feller was vastly more at ease on weekdays."

O'Neill declares that Feller has more baseball sense than any boy with whom he ever came in contact.

"He listens and learns and has an elephant's memory," continues Steve. "For example, he was holding the ball in back of him, where coaches could see the position of his fingers. We only had to tell him once to hold it at his side and hide it."

O'NEILL believes that Feller will win 20 or more games for the Indians in 1938, and advises Oscar Vitt to give him four full days' rest between starts.

"His arm injury last season made him a little afraid to snap off the hook he is capable of throwing," concludes O'Neill. "He'll really let go next season, and then you'll really see something."

O'Neill does not consider Feller as fast as Johnson, but points out that the Van Meter wonder chucks a livelier ball.

"Johnson threw more of a side-arm ball and the ball came into the hitter," he concludes. "Feller's rapid one hops upward as did Eddie Cicotte's shine ball. Hitters everlastingly swing a couple of inches under it."

Young Bob Feller has all of the old magicians' stuff without having to resort to any of their tricks.

WASHINGTON—New Deal victories in the Supreme Court in the power front strengthen previous predictions that conversations between the President and public utilities executives would be without result.

This fact and the aftermath of Roosevelt's message to Congress emphasize one of the points which might have made the situation clearer in the last two or three months if it had been more commonly recognized: the President has been and is unwilling to make any noteworthy concessions in response to vociferous business demand which would mean any retreat from administration positions previously taken.

The message has been widely interpreted as a "demand" for business co-operation. Instead of promising "concessions," its chief new proposition was one for more business regulation. This has the same favor as the real facts of the widely ballyhooed White House utility conversations, in which demands for changes in New Deal power policy were met by presidential requests for lower rates and a large private expansion program.

Roosevelt's confidence in his own position at that time was fortified by a serene faith that the Supreme Court would uphold the government in the PWA power, TVA and holding company act test cases. The court has now approved PWA loan-grants to municipalities for public power plants after a three-year court fight. It has suggested possibility of an overturn in its conservative theory of "reproduction cost" in valuations and agreed to an early hearing on the holding company act test.

It really looks as if the so-called

LET'S KNOW TEXAS—TEXANS

His common answers will be given to those who are in Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayo, Austin, Texas.

Did the first of Austin's colonists wait final ratification of the constitution before settling in Texas?

Many colonists had located lands and were on their way in spring of 1822. The central region given Austin by the representatives of Governor Martinez at Antonio, his welcome when he settled there, and the spirit of state cooperation shown, encouraged the belief that, with such backing, whatever governmental faction might secure control in Mexico would give its approval to Austin's plans.

Q. Whom did Austin leave in charge of Texas colony affairs while he was in Mexico City to get his colonization petition approved?

A. Josiah H. Bell was appointed alcalde at Austin's request and had supervision of the settlement, and Baron de Bastrop looked after Austin's interests at San Antonio, the seat of government for Texas. Josiah Bell came from Kentucky among Austin's first colonists, settling first near Washington-on-the-Brazos, and later in Brazoria County at Bell's Landing near Brazoria.

Q. What other boundary lines than the Gulf of Mexico did Texas claim when it was admitted to the Union in 1847?

A. Its western line, as claimed followed the Rio Grande north to its source in what is now Colorado, thence due north to the De Onis-Adams line on latitude 42 in the present state of Wyoming, following that line east and south, as shown by the Melish map of 1818, to the mouth of the Sabine.

Q. How long and why did Houston remain at Beason's Ferry?

A. The Texas Army remained there until March 26 to await the crossing of the river of all fugitives from the west that might take up the flight for the Brazos at San Felipe, and at the same time to endeavor to bring about a more orderly retreat.

Q. What steps were taken to carry out Austin's suggestion as to a general consultation?

A. Austin addressed another mass meeting at San Felipe, Sept. 12, again urging a general consultation. His program was adopted there and a committee on "correspondence and vigilance" was appointed composed of Wiley Martin, Randall Jones, William Pettus and Gail Borden, Jr., tentative steps being taken for a consultation at San Felipe, Oct. 15.

Hudson Dealer Sees New Low Price Car

C. J. Moore has just returned here from a meeting in Dallas where the new Hudson 112 was unveiled for the first time in this vicinity. Mr. H. F. Byrne from the Hudson factory in Detroit, was on hand for the ceremony and stated that the factory is already swinging into full production, and volume shipments of this new entry in the lowest price field are now being made.

The announcement of this new car, along with the fact that Hudson is restoring jobs to 6,000 men and spending $11,000,000 for material, created a nationwide stir last week. Coming at a time when news of lay-offs and retrenchment had become common, the announcement was hailed as introducing a new optimistic note into the general business situation.

Moore, who, with other dealers from this part of the country, had his first look at the new car, states that a public showing of the new Hudson 112 will be made here. He states that the car is particularly outstanding in the matter of size, roominess and advance mechanical and safety features heretofore confined to higher priced cars.

The meeting at Dallas, was one of 83 which will be held throughout the country from coast to coast during the next ten days to show the new car which has set a high mark in the matter of public interest for such announcements.

From page stories in the big dailies of the largest cities of the country acclaimed the announcement by the Hudson Company, whose organization was doing its bit by putting "men and money back to work." Orders for the new cars have already reached the factory in such volume that steady production for the balance of the winter has already been assured, Mr. Byrne stated.

tion was made by Mrs. Charles T. Tally, Jr., teacher and supervisor of many departments.

Mrs. Hicklin offered for the lesson, "How to pray," taken from the mission study course.

Mrs. H. B. Johnson Takes Lesson From First King:

The Women's Missionary society of First Christian church gathered in the home of Mrs. Harry Warren, Monday afternoon, for the lesson given by Mrs. H. B. Johnson. The interesting text was taken from the lesson for the week, "The Birth of Christ." The lesson was summarized in a readable and refreshment plate to Mrs. L. N. Bryan, E. T. Matthews, L. R. McGill, B. S. Dudley, R. H. West, J. M. Mills, J. C. Carothers, R. A. Jones, J. C. Carothers, and J. G. Bradford, of Fort Worth.

Ranger Represented at Home Dedication

Austin served as host to the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers for the dedication of the home located at 408 West Eleventh street, on Jan. 11, and Ranger was represented by Mrs. F. E. Jacobs, president of the first district of the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers. Mrs. Hal P. Bybee presided over the luncheon given at the junior ballroom of the Texas Union, attended by dignitaries of the association.

The Austin council of the P. T. A. were co-hostesses, issuing invitations to visiting educators and special guests, including all past presidents of the congress.

Approximately 150 guests were present for the luncheon. The room and the E shaped table were decorated in blue and gold, the colors of the P. T. A. Cursesage of Johnanna Hill and tallman roses marked the places for the honor guests.

Prior to the luncheon Mrs. Will T. Decheder made the presentation of the new home of the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers to Mrs. M. A. Taylor, congress president, at a ceremony at 11:30 a. m. at the home. Mrs. Taylor has visited in Ranger at various times, and upon her last visit was the house guest of Mrs. C. E. Ranger High School News

The home economics class of Ranger High school was invited to take a trip through the Southern Ice plant.

First, Mr. Ambrose took us up to the main floor where the machinery was and showed us how the ice was made and how it was taken out of the molds. We went to the room where the ice is kept without any of it melting—it was 26 degrees (we realized it too). Then we went to another room where the meat is kept in cold storage. It was also very cold in there.

We went to the main floor again and Mr. Ambrose showed us the Coolerator which he had on exhibit.

There were two salesmen from Michigan that had an advance model of the new ice refrigerator called Economizer. We thought it attractive and were interested in its new features.

Mr. Ambrose donated an excellent book called, "The Art of Modern Cooking and Better Meals" for the department library. He also gave us an ice cream freezer and passed out chocolate candy.

The wild-eyed people you saw running around madly Saturday were merely Future Homemakers and their guests on a scavenger hunt.

Lists were given to each couple and a time limit set. Objects to be collected ranged from long underwear to three live fleas in a bottle. At six-thirty everybody met at the swimming pool park and made hot dogs and toasted marshmallows.

The new freezer which was donated to the department by the Southern Ice company was initiated and several freezers of chocolate ice cream disappeared as if by magic. A grand time was had by all.

WAR IN CHINA CAST SHADOW ON TO HAWAII

BY WENDEL BURCH
United Press Staff Correspondent
HONOLULU, T. H.

Strain of the prolonged Sino-Japanese conflict gradually is manifesting itself in economic, racial and emotional ways in polyglot Hawaii.

Extent of the Chinese reaction is signified by information that the 30,000 members of the celestial colony in Hawaii will forego usual New Year's celebrations in February, devoting funds obtained by such action to war chest contributions.

Approximately 150,000 Japanese celebrated Jan. 1 with more than usual Nipponese New Year's cheer. Starting Dec. 31, Hawaii—a time when it was already New Year's in Tokyo, 3,400 miles distant—the Japanese enjoyed traditional feasts and ceremonies through Jan. 3. Huge quantities of fireworks were exploded, Roman candles and skyrockets blazed at night, and friends made continuous visits.

Japanese vernacular newspapers, in voluminous special New Year's editions customary to the season, extolled Nipponese accomplishments in 1937, the year of the Bull, and enthusiastically discussed the outlook for 1938, the year of the Tiger. Following are typical excerpts from a translation of the New Year's statement in one Honolulu Japanese language newspaper:

"Welcoming this New Year at such a critical period for our mother country, we residents of Hawaii who are citizens of progressive Japan should enter the new year with a mental attitude befitting such a time. It is indeed a time of greater rejoicing than usual, to be able to welcome this new year as citizens of victorious Japan... We must place special importance upon the mission destined for Japan.

"The objective for which Japan today is operating is for the freedom of Asia, that is, a new era movement for Asia. It is for the freedom of the Asiatic race from the long years of exploitation and oppression by the western nations thus restoring to them self-government and freedom, which they can enjoy. Her objective is to do away with racial prejudice, which is unbefitting to the 20th century, and other irrational matters coming out of it...

"Countries such as Great Britain, France and Holland are maintaining their existence through exploitation of their overseas settlements. The countries which are claiming the awakening of the yellow race is the beginning of their self-destruction, are looking upon Japan as an evil and calling her all sorts of defamatory names. The recent unfavorable criticisms of Japan by American and European nations are but of the first stage, for it is not hard to imagine that these criticisms will take on a sharper aspect in the future. Perhaps it is because the awakening of the yellow race decides their fate. Under such circumstances, we, as Japanese, should understand the great mission for which Japan stands and

Largest Bridge in State Nearly Ready for Highway Traffic

By United Press

PORT ARTHUR, Texas—Engineers on the Neches river bridge, $2,750,000 structure now under construction, predict that highway traffic will be allowed on it before April.

The new bridge will be 7,770 feet long and will tower 230 feet above the surface of the river, high enough to permit passage of ocean-going steamers.

Two huge linking spans were joined on Dec. 31 by John Grandin, superintendent of construction. Steel beams were only a fraction of an inch apart and were placed together with little difficulty.

believe that she will not be moved, no matter how stern criticism may be.

"Japan is aiming to free the Asiatic race from subjugation and tenacious exploitation. This indeed is a great blow to the countries with great overseas settlements, but a humanitarian move, and as it is a demand of the current period it cannot be helped."

Similar editorial statements appeared in other Honolulu and Hilo Japanese language newspapers. Economic effects of the Far Eastern conflict seemingly have not been extensive as yet. Japanese merchants report delays in deliveries and inability to obtain some staples. Japanese imports in Hawaii from Japan totaled $2,114,162 in 1936, only a fraction of the $95,074,500 worth of imports from continental United States in the 12 months ended June 30, 1937.
