Roper Nominated
As U. S. Minister
By United Press
WASHINGTON, May 1.—President Roosevelt today nominated Daniel C. Roper to be United States Minister to Canada.

The nomination was sent to the senate for confirmation. Roper will fill a post which has been vacant since former U. S. Minister to Canada, Norman Armour, was transferred to Chile.

Roper, who had been secretary of commerce since the beginning of the new deal, resigned from the cabinet last December.

Proposed Defense Network of National Highways

Above map shows proposed 26,700-mile integrated national highway system recommended by U. S. Bureau of Public Roads and presented to Congress by President Roosevelt. Designed to meet requirements of national defense and long range peace-time traffic, the network is comprised of five east-to-west routes, shown by heavy black lines, and seven north-to-south roads, indicated by broken lines.

SENATE PLANS TO VOTE UPON PRICE FIXING

By United Press
AUSTIN, May 1.—The Texas Senate voted 15-4 today to act on the fair trade bill on Thursday.

The bill seeks to prevent cut-price sales of trade named articles, permitting the manufacturer to set the minimum price.

The bill already has passed the house. Several attempts to get a vote on it in the senate have failed.

Although the senate voted to set the bill as a special order of business for Thursday, it may not be taken up that soon.

A rural school aid appropriation was set as a special order for Wednesday afternoon.

It will have the right-of-way Thursday until completed.

Meanwhile old age pension financing was being pushed into the background, in both house and senate, with only nine working days left of the regular 120-day session.

The house of representatives invited Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel to make his regular Sunday broadcast on May 14, Mother's Day, from the house chamber, before the joint session of the house and senate.

The legislature is scheduled to adjourn on May 9, but is expected to hold over for several days.

Banks Not To Be Urged To Risk In Speculative Field

By SANDOR S. KLEIN
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, May 1.—

Comptroller of the Currency Preston Delano, it was learned today, has informed prominent business leaders that while he recognizes industry's need for "risk" money, he will resist any efforts to force national banks into the speculative credit field.

He made his views known during a discussion of industry's increasingly urgent need for equity or "adventure" money at a recent executive session of the business advisory council.

Delano never has made a public reply to criticism that his office has failed to do its part in the recovery drive because of its reluctance to liberalize bank examination policies.

Council Chairman W. Averill Harriman invited Delano to state his position after the council meeting heard a report by reconstituted finance corporation director Emil Schram of the RFC's experience in making industrial loans.

Schram had made a vague allusion to bank examination policies as a factor in the dearth of credit.

According to informed sources, Delano took the occasion to reply to critics that the comptroller's office, charged with the examination and supervision of national banks, was lending every encouragement to banks toward extension of all "proper" industrial credit.

But, he emphasized, he was strongly opposed to the use of depositors' funds for making speculative advances.

Delano said that the confusion over the proper function of commercial banks in the industrial credit field arose from the scarcity of risk money, a situation that might be blamed on the depression and on unsettled world conditions.

This, he continued, has produced what he described as an "undefensible" attempt to force banks into risk loans.

The comptroller told the council that there is no general rule which can be used to measure exactly the soundness of all credit extensions. Each application for credit, he said, is an individual problem and responsibility for approving or denying it rests upon the bank directorate.

EASTLAND BAND TO COMPETE AT SAFETY CONFAB

Time for departure of the Eastland High School band on its trip to the Oil Belt Safety Conference at Abilene has been set at 1 p. m. that day.

The band will participate in a parade and band contest at 4:30. The band will leave from the high school.

The conference, last year held at Eastland, will be two days this year. Friday will mark the second and last day of the conference.

Eastland Boy Scout troop No. 6, of which Bill Jessop is the scoutmaster, will compete in a first aid contest.

H. J. Tanner, secretary-manager of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce, estimates probably over a score of Eastland residents will attend the conference.

The business session of the conference will be at a luncheon Friday at 12:30 p. m. in the roof garden of the Wooten Hotel.

All the officers and directors of the conference, chamber of commerce officials, representatives of all industries, schools, newspaper representatives connected with or concerned about the program for the conference have been urged to attend.

L. H. Taylor, Ranger, is conference president. He and S. M. Gamble were in Abilene today making preparations for the conference.

Sign Booming 89
Moved To Better
Location In Parker
Removal of a sign urging traffic over "Highway 89" at Weatherford has been effected, Chamber of Commerce officials announced Monday.

The sign was moved from a site one mile east of the Weatherford courthouse to the east end of the overpass in that city.

Removal was necessary because a new highway from Fort Worth to Weatherford is due and the sign in the former location would have been of no value.

PLANE PILOTS FIGHT GIANT PANDA IN AIR

By United Press
PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 1.—

Three transport plane pilots today fought with a giant panda, in mid-air, as the animal, being flown across country, wandered into the control cabin when the air liner came into the Municipal airport for a landing.

The plane was landed safely, although the 70-pound animal hit first officer M. H. Cassing on the hand.

The 10 passengers on the Transcontinental and Western Airlines plane were not aware of the pilot's struggle.

The panda was chained in the baggage compartment when Tommy Tomlinson, a test pilot, attempted to step through. The animal slipped at his trousers and chased him back to the cabin.

After the pilot retreated, the panda went into the control cabin and approached Capt. Don Terry. Cassing then took over the controls while Capt. Terry fought with the panda.

The animal eluded Terry and bit Cassing as the first officer calmly brought the plane to a landing.

PUERTO RICO IS MADE A NEW DEFENSE BASE

By United Press
WASHINGTON, May 1.—The war department today designated Puerto Rico as a separate military department, similar to that of the Panama Canal Zone, as a first step toward strengthening the outlying defenses of the canal.

It was proposed to establish an air base in Puerto Rico and to make the chain of islands bordering the Caribbean Sea a sort of "breakwater" to protect the Caribbean and all Atlantic approaches to the canal.

Secretary of War Harry Woodring announced that, at the direction of President Roosevelt, he will issue orders establishing the new military department, effective July 1.

It will be commanded by Brig. Gen. Edmund Daley, who will have headquarters at San Juan. Daley is now stationed at Easton, in command of the First Coast Artillery District.

All Peanuts Stored
In Warehouse Sold
By Ranger C. Of C.

All peanuts stored in the Ranger Bonded Warehouse have now been sold. It was announced by J. E. Meroney, former secretary of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce, who had charge of the warehouse, and no more are available there for seed peanuts.

Approximately 800 tons were stored during the harvest last fall, and most of those were sold to mills. About four tons were sold as seed peanuts.

Numerous requests for seed and many inquiries about those stored in Ranger are being received, but none remain to be sold, it was stated today.

He said those to help on the program to be heard on KRBC, Abilene, will be Pete Boone of Lone Cedar, Howard Hinman of Ranger and Nell Eaves of Kokomo. Boone will sing and play a banjo.

BRITAIN AND FRANCE READY FOR ANY WAR

By United Press
LONDON, May 1.—A British Government spokesman today declared that "if Poland fights, Britain and France will fight too."

It was confirmed officially that the British Ambassador to Warsaw, Sir Howard Kennard, in discussing Adolf Hitler's speech on Saturday with Foreign Minister Josef Beck of Poland, stressed that Britain is ready to support Poland with all of her armed forces, if Poland resists a threat against her independence.

One other significant move was made to warn Hitler against any attempt to win Danzig or the Polish Corridor by force. The foreign office promptly disassociated the British government from a Sunday night radio broadcast from Paris, carried by the British Broadcasting company, describing France as unwilling to fight for Danzig. It was understood the Polish embassy is reporting to Warsaw on the matter, which may have a further diplomatic sequel.

Britain, meanwhile, pushed negotiations to bring Russia and Turkey into the "peace front" and prepared a national conscription bill to be put through parliament on an emergency basis.

Architects Will Be Given Chance to Design Buildings
By United Press
WASHINGTON, May 1.—The treasury is going to give architects in various sections of the country opportunity to design federal buildings in their own regions.

Admiral C. J. Peoples, director of the treasury's procurement division, announced the first of a series of 11 regional competitions for designs for federal buildings. Architects living in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Kansas, Iowa, Missouri and Nebraska were invited to submit designs for a new $250,000 federal court house and post office at Leavenworth, Kansas.

The author of the winning design will receive $2,600 in addition to $2,600 for serving as consultant.

It was expected that the regional competition will make it possible to utilize localized knowledge of regional traditions, materials and methods of building.

Over 200 Due To

Etheridge, state game wardens; Walton Baum, superintendent of the Cisco fish hatchery, and W. I. Glass, district agent of the extension service.

An inspection tour will be made of the fish hatchery and other projects.

Basket lunch will be served at noon.

Earthquake Felt

TOKYO, May 1.—A severe earthquake occurred in the Akita Prefecture today. Communications were broken and it was difficult to get an estimate of damage or possible casualties.

However, it was known that store windows were shattered in the city of Funakoshima and fires were raging.

The earthquake was described as being of the severe vertical type, the kind which caused the great disaster in 1923.

First We Must Jealously Guard Our Own Liberties

It is quite true that the United States cannot afford to be indifferent to what goes on in the rest of the world. What destroys liberty in any part of the world tends eventually to destroy liberty in the rest of it.

But our concern with such remote events is a matter of degree, ranging from the almost purely theoretical right up to the imminently practical.

Liberty here and now is our first and most immediate concern. Nothing more true was ever said than that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Freedom is not maintained by the mere fact that 150 years ago our fathers won it. Day by day, in the smallest matters, we must ourselves fight for it if we are to keep it. A sorry joke on the United States it would be to find that by the time we had launched a great foreign crusade for liberty, we had ourselves lost it.

That is why, though it sometimes seems tiresome, it is necessary to keep drumming away at everything that looks as though it might be an infringement on the liberties of free men.

As never before, the federal government seems to be conscious of this. Most of the highest court decisions of recent years have been on the side of freedom, and the Supreme Court has proved itself a real custodian of the people's liberty in several important cases.

The Department of Justice has set up a division specifically charged with safeguarding civil liberties.

Many states, irritated almost beyond endurance by clumsy and stupid Nazi propaganda, are considering laws to throttle it. Yet every legislator considering such laws must carefully consider: how far many such utterances be shut off without throttling every man's right to say or write what he pleases?

There are acts proposed to punish the "libel of races." Such proposals arise from irritation with the especially nauseous efforts to build up racial hatred. But can such a law be written which does not also infringe on many other kinds of free speech?

After all, propaganda is simply the other fellow's free speech.

No set of ideas, bad or good, has ever been permanently suppressed by law. The bad ones die off of their own foolishness, the good ones survive in spite of any suppression.

America's one best defense, in fact its ultimate only defense, against "subversive" ideas is to face the facts, roll up our sleeves, and make life in the United States so much better than it is anywhere else in the world that nobody will listen to agitators.

Operators Drill Fewer, Shallower Wells During 1939

HOUSTON, Tex.—Not only fewer but also shallower oil and gas wells are being drilled this year, largely because of less favorable crude oil prices, according to an article in The Oil Weekly of May 1.

In the first quarter of this year, well completions in the United States were 12.9 percent less numerous than in the corresponding period last year. But the average depth of completions in the country as a whole was 5.2 percent less; and consequently, footage drilled was down 17.4 percent.

The 5,831 wells completed in the first three months of 1939 had combined depths of 17,884,304 feet, indicating an average of 3,070 feet per well, whereas the 6,697 wells completed in the similar period last year involved 21,650,563 feet of hole, or an average of 3,240 feet per well.

However, the average so far this year compares more favorably with that for the full year 1938 than with that for the initial quarter, as there was a tapering off in deep drilling in the latter part of 1938, with the result that the average completion depth for the year was 3,144 feet per well. The 3,070-foot average for this year is only 2.4 percent under that 3,144-foot average for 1938, which exceeded all previous yearly averages.

After 1934, each year brought an increase in the average drilling depth, until the all-time record of 1938 was set. However, the trend actually reached a turning point in 1938, and in the latter part of the year, as well as in the early part of 1939, the average drilling depth was decreasing.

The decrease of the average drilling depth undoubtedly has been due in large measure to the curtailment of drilling, which has resulted from reductions of crude

NEW YORK — The Field Museum's Mr. Harwa was installed in the New York World's Fair today after a fling at the night life of New York that came 2,800 years too late.

The consensus was that Harwa might have been hot stuff in his home town in the pre-Christian era, but he was a 20th century washout in New York.

About 900 E. C. Harwa was overseer of the wine cellar and granaries of the Temple Amon in Egypt. Of late years, his mummified form has been part of the collection in the Field Museum of oil prices last fall. The lower crude prices and the curtailment or elimination of drilling naturally have affected particularly the fields that are deep and expensive to develop.

Green Protests On NLRB Membership

WASHINGTON, May 1.—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, today advocated abolition of the present national labor relations board, accusing it of "dictator tactics" and prejudice in favor of the CIO and recommended establishment of a new five-member board with curtailed powers.

Green testified before the senate education and labor committee on A. F. of L. sponsored amendments to the national labor relations act.

Milk Thief Leaves Hat And Overcoat

WATERTOWN, Mass. — A threadbare overcoat and battered hat are fair exchange for a quart of milk, so far as this thief is concerned.

Patrolman Enoch Keefe saw a man take a quart of milk from a store on the Belmont-Watertown line. The store was on the Belmont side, but Keefe gave chase in an effort to herd the milk thief into his territory.

When he finally managed to edge the culprit over to the Watertown side, the man doffed his coat and hat, but clung to the bottle. Unhampered by the overcoat, the thief outdistanced the warmly-clad policeman.

It's hinted that Dr. Jock Sutherland, who recently resigned as Pittsburgh football coach, will return to dentistry. Probably the cavities will be easier to fill than the holes in the Panther line would have been.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
Noted Angling Authority

NOW that the long-awaited day is almost upon us, it seems only natural that the intervening days seem longer and longer until we eventually can load our gear in the car once more and go fishing.

Most of us have put our tackle in shape by this time. Flies are sorted and stored in their proper places; rods are varnished; reels are cleaned and oiled; all is in readiness. And so, as a deed of Christian kindness, here is a suggestion which not only will help kill off any spare time you may find between NOW and THEN but also, you may find it beneficial when you finally do assemble the tackle and tramp forth to the singing streams.

The first step is to acquire about 30 feet of soft cotton wrapping twine. The kind I use is the twisted cotton string, about 1/50th of an inch in diameter and made of 10 smaller strands which have been twisted together.

THE next step is to stand in your living room and see how much of that soft cotton string you can cast, using only your arm and hand as your fly rod. The softer and more pliable the string used, the tougher it is to cast it.

If your timing has grown a little rusty over the winter, a cotton string will iron out the kinks in a hurry. You just can't do anything with it unless your timing is practically perfect.

After you get pretty good at handling the cotton string you can, if you wish, build a very nice obstacle casting range right on the living room floor and conduct your own tournaments by casting for score.

There are four targets, all easily made from materials at hand. Casting rings consist merely of 12-inch dinner plates—assuming that your powers of persuasion are such that you can overcome your wife's inevitable objections. The targets are these:

1. Open "ring" at, say, 20 feet.
2. "Ring" under "bush." The "bush" in this case consists of a yardstick or a cane placed across two chairs with the "ring" under and slightly behind it so that you must cast under the "bush" to hit the target.
3. "Ring" behind "rock." The "rock" is a kitchen chair. You can see the target through the legs and rungs of the chair, and it should be placed so that only a sharp left curve cast will hit the target.
4. Casting against time. This consists of casting at three targets at varying distances of from 10 to 20 feet. The caster is allowed 15 seconds by the electric clock to see how many direct hits he can make in that time on the three targets, casting five times at each in rotation until his time has elapsed.

BY having the caster take his position in the doorway, the back cast can be thrown back into the hall or the adjoining room. This leaves the entire living room floor available for placing the targets. To more closely simulate actual casting conditions, the caster should be seated or, better still, kneel while casting.

If you choose, you can rig up a small fly rod, not more than 15 inches long and equipped with a tip guide and one snake guide. It is better practice, however, just to use your thumb and forefinger as your "rod." It makes a good way to kill off an evening and, in so doing, brings "opening day" just one day nearer.

Yesterday Betty is put to work in Barro's laundry. Going outside to spread clothes and looking over to El Paso and the huge college "M" on a hill, she hits on an idea to outsmart Barro. Will it work?

CHAPTER XXII
"YOU see, Hope, that she wasn't in her hotel all night!" Sheridan Starr, a few inches taller and several pounds heavier than Hope Kildare, gripped his friend's arm now with fingers like steel. Concern for Betty Mary had moved the larger man deeply.

"That's what I said," Hope admitted soberly. "I couldn't just go to bed, my lord, man!"

Sherry swallowed. He hated to see Hope this way. Cold and formal, and almost antagonistic toward him. He who had been comradely so many years.

"Well—no! Of course not, Hope. I—the fact is, her two white signals, for safety, had been hanging there for several days, and nothing likely would hurt her if she just stayed around town in Juarez. She's smart, I figure. She can take care of herself. Now if there had been three white spots—that would mean trouble! But just a blank window."

Hope spoke impatiently, almost snapping it.

"A blank window, and Betty unaccountably missing now for nearly 24 hours, stupid! Well, you sit here and talk, but I'm going to do something."

Sherry himself was angered a bit by that.

"All right, what?" he barked.

"What you going to do? You were already over there. If you didn't want me to help you, why'd you come here at daybreak? You know well enough we've been teaming together all our life, especially in a pinch like this, Hope! Get off your high horse now, and let's go into a huddle. First thing's to find her. Then any personal business, love and whatever, can be settled your own way. See what I mean?"

THAT made sense, of course, and Hope's inherent good judgment told him so. Actually, he felt a trifle ashamed, and he tried to convey that fact now by co-operating with Sheridan.

"Maybe she moved her room, and figured we'd have sense enough to follow her signal in another hotel or something?" he ventured. Obviously he was desperate, but still did not know just which way to turn.

"No, I doubt that," Sherry said. "But we can sure look and see. The dawn haze has about lifted—what time is it?"

Both looked at their watches and saw it was 7:25.

"The man in the tower will come down at 8. One of us'll slip up for a bit then, take the glasses and study every window in Juarez. Then we'll go a mile or two up river and look from another angle. I reckon we could go look from that angle first, while we wait."

In two minutes they were in a government car hastening out one of the streets near the river. When they topped a rise that gave them a clear view of the town across in Mexico, they parked and studied Juarez carefully.

"There's plenty of white spots but none in any window," Sheridan said finally.

"It could be just two spots, any color. Didn't her note say 'two for safety, three for help, any way any time?' She—she gave the note to you that night, not to me." Hope added this last a little bitterly, coldly.

"Yep, that's a fact. I mean about the signals. She just happened to give it to me is all."

The conversation served, however, to upset Sheridan Starr considerably, in his heart.

When Hope said nothing to that, Sherry spoke again. "It's nearly 8. Let's go on back and take a look from the tower. We better be there in case she phones again, too."

They talked scarcely at all on their way back to the Patrol headquarters and when they had parked, the man from above was just coming off shift. He saw Hope and Sherry as he clambered down his ladder-like steps.

"Hey, you two hams," he halted them good-naturedly. "Weren't you interested in Boy Scout signals or something a few days ago? You asked me about two white spots in a hotel window once."

"Yes! Why?" Hope and Sherry looked intently at him. "What is it? Did you see the signals today?"

"Hold yore hosses! No, I didn't see no two white spots in no window. In fact I guess what I saw was just clothes drying. But away over at that ranch house—the old Terrazas place, you know?—are three white spots, sort of up on the hill, but—"

"Three?" Sherry barked it.

"Yeah. But it's just sheets drying, near's I can make out with the glasses. Still, it's a funny time of day to hang out—"

"But that's Luis Barro's home house, isn't it?"

Sherry and Hope were staring at each other as if a bomb had exploded at their heels.

BETTY MARY JOHNSON, a prisoner, believed far better that her captor might have expected her to.

It was evident that Luis Barro told two of his guards to watch her closely, for often they came to check up on her, and each time found her peacefully at work. Not as scared as she had been, she maintained a front of abject fear nevertheless. At that, it wasn't all pretense.

She labored in the laundry until after sunset.

"It is night," she told the woman in charge there. "Here are still some large lines. Shall I hang them out now, even so?"

"Things dry at night in this air," the woman said. "But do you think you can slip by the guard?"

Betty Mary didn't try to escape. With the clothes lines already full she climbed 60 feet or so up the steep hill—well above the roof line of the house—and tied three white sheets to shrubs that grew there, as she had often seen wash women do in Texas. Indeed, some dark shirts had been pinned there by another laundry worker this day, and that had really helped Betty to conceive her own idea.

She learned that evening that Barro was extremely busy with the aliens who kept coming. More than 100 were assembled now. Barro would have so many men under arms that no Border force, short of a detachment of soldiers, would be able to block him. Daringly, he would fight right on through in the remote event that the American officers had wind of his plan. With Betty Mary, the spy, now helpless, he probably felt that his crossing would be safe, she realized. Barro couldn't even know that she had learned all of his plans, but he was keeping her, just for safety. Then, too, he was attracted to her.

These points and more she picked up from the gossip servants in the kitchens and elsewhere, overhearing part of it. She devoted much time to looking for a chance to slip away unnoticed, but there wasn't the merest opportunity. The cook soon set her to washing dishes, and she had been locked finally in the night, with but little sleep she was working again in the afternoon before dawn.

She crept out a back window one daybreak and felt two men's gratitude—she had not seen Barro again, and her sheets were still hanging.

Television Might Become Valuable In Tracing Crime

AUSTIN, Texas.—The possibility that television, which makes its debut in New York area next Monday, may become valuable in police work interested a state police expert today.

Chief Joe Fletcher of the state identification bureau said the new medium may possibly be perfected for the transmission of fingerprints.

Identification experts for some time, have envisioned transmission of prints by facsimile—sending by radio exact copies of written, printed or photographic material. Where several days are now required to send such matter by mail, facsimile would permit officers to fingerprint a suspect, send a reproduction of his prints to a central bureau and have a reply within an hour.

Such speed, Fletcher pointed out, would be a boon in releasing an innocent suspect or filing charges against a guilty one.
