Southeast Asia Nations Want To Work With West

Delegates Of Seven Countries Demand West Consult Them
 BAGUIO, Philippines, May 29 (UP)—Seven nations of Southeast Asia asked today for a closer working relationship with the West.

Winding up a closed conference, they demanded that the Western powers consult them before deciding on matters dealing with this part of the world. The demand was contained in a resolution that will be approved at a matter of course at tomorrow's closing plenary session. Observers believed it was an implied criticism of the recent London conference and other gatherings which discussed Asiatic problems although no Asiatic representatives were present.

The delegates recommended to their own governments that they "insure that in consideration of the special problems of South and Southeast Asia, the point of view of peoples of this area is prominently kept in mind by and conference dealing with such problems, so that better understanding and cordial relations may subsist between the countries in the region and other countries of the world."

The resolution did not mention the Western powers as distinct from the Soviet bloc but observers said it obviously was addressed to the democracies, whose desire to stop Communism in Asia is shared by this conference.

In the other main points of the resolution, the delegates called on their governments to seek closer cooperation and improved living conditions, work for peace through normal diplomatic channels, and take joint action through the United Nations.

The declaration was said to refer obliquely to the semi-colonial status of French Indo-China and Malaya although neither was named specifically. It also reaffirms the faith of the seven participating nations in the United Nations.

The conference was attended by representatives of the Philippines, Australia, India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Indonesia and Thailand.

Greek Girl Asks For Spare Taxicab

DETROIT, May 29 (UP)—Dimitra Pachki asked the Automobile Manufacturers Association today to please find a spare taxi cab and send it over to Athens. The Greek girl wrote that her father became Greece's first cable in 1914, but that his car was wrecked when it collided with a German military machine during the Nazi occupation. The car had been "my sole inheritance when my father died," she said. "I beg you to buy for me a rebuilt taxi cab which I shall be obliged to pay in intervals fixed by you," she wrote. "I cannot help to hope that you will be kind enough to help the poor daughter of the first owner of the chauffeur diploma of Greece."

Police Turn Cowboys When Brahma Bulls Escape Pens At Dallas Fair

DALLAS, May 29 (UP)—Police patrolmen and detectives turned cowboys in the pre-dawn hours today to herd successfully a group of 41 wild Brahma bulls back into their pens after they escaped and had headed for the downtown section.

The bulls, from scattered ranches throughout the state, were in a wooden pen at the State Fair grounds when one of the animals broke down a gate and the others streamed to freedom through the opening.

Using flashlights, shouts and honking squad car horns the officers herded the bulls back into their enclosure within an hour and before the heavy early morning traffic hit the streets. The bulls repeatedly charged the policemen on foot, driving them back to the safety of their cars, and made many runs for the cars themselves. Only one, however, ever actually tangled with a car. He caused $75 damage by crumpling a rear door.

Veep Makes 2 Speeches That Raise $174,650

CORPUS CHRISTI, May 29 (UP)—Vice-President Alben W. Barkley made two speeches in two days that brought in $174,650. Last night he made an impassioned plea for Israel at the Corpus Christi United Jewish appeal campaign and then sat back and watched them collect $74,650. He started his week end in Texas by rousing Lone Star Democrats at an Austin barbecue Saturday night to a $100,000 response.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Barkley who beamed at his introductions, chuckled at his jokes and forgot the words but hummed the tune when "Star Spangled Banner" was sung.

They relaxed today at the home of Lt. Cdr. and Mrs. Gaylor Lyon at the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station. Mrs. Lyon is a sister of Mrs. Barkley. They will leave at 1 p. m. tomorrow for Washington.

Speaking before 500 persons at Corpus Christi for 72 minutes last night, Barkley related stories of his visit to German concentration camps after World War II and of trips to Palestine in 1934 and after the war.

"The cause is just, the need is urgent," he said. "If Israel is allowed to go down it will be a reflection upon the people of America."

After he finished he and Mrs. Barkley sat at the head table in the Robert Driscoll Hotel while the campaign workers collected from the guests. Co-Chairman, A. A. Lichtenstein and his brother, Morris, started things off with $5,000. Publisher Conway Craig of the Callertimes contributed $2,000 for his papers.

Lucas Says GOP Trying To Raise Huge Slush Fund

CHICAGO, May 29 (UP)—Sen. Scott Lucas of Illinois, Democratic floor leader, says the Republicans are attempting to raise a $1,700,000 war chest to defeat his bid for re-election.

Lucas faces one of the roughest fights of his political career this year against former Republican Congressman Everett M. Dirksen.

Meeting with Democratic leaders to lay campaign strategy yesterday, Lucas said that a state Republican committee is trying to raise $700,000 for Dirksen's campaign fund and that the GOP National Committee apparently will add another $1,000,000.

Lucas said the GOP planned "the greatest slush fund campaign in the history of Illinois." "But they can raise all the money they want to buy this election," he said. "I'll still be victorious in November."

The Lucas strategy committee said he would use television extensively in his campaign and that he would stump the state every week end during the summer. For the two months preceding the election, he will devote his entire time to campaigning.

Hopped Up Idea Takes Boys Miles

DETROIT, May 29 (UP)—Two tanned Mississippi lads, having achieved their "little of hopped up idea" of driving a 1922 Ford to Windsor Canada, chugged homeward today.

Royce Barnes, 19, and Charles Williams, 20, both of Tupelo, Miss., wound up their journey when they squeaked across the Ambassador bridge and jerked to a halt before astonished Canadian customs officers.

The youth started the 750 mile trip Wednesday morning. The tires of the ancient coupe held up all the way, they said, and the Ford averaged more than 30 miles per gallon at a top speed of 30 mph.

"It was just a little of hopped up idea," Barnes drawled. "A lot of the folks down home didn't think we could do it."

Someone asked why they chose Windsor as a goal. "I don't know," Barnes said. "It was just far away."

This breezy got us over some pretty high mountains," Williams said, patting the steering coupe. "We knew we'd make it."

Then after a brief inspection tour, Barnes adjusted the spark, Williams whirled the crank, and back they headed toward Tupelo.

15-Year-Old Girl Planned Robbery Officials Report

LONG BEACH, Calif., May 29 (UP)—A 15-year-old girl was the "brains" of a teen-aged gang that killed a liquor store owner during a robbery, police said today.

The three "crime club" members appear in juvenile court today as officials determine whether their case should be handled by juvenile authorities or by the superior court.

They have signed statements admitting that they shot and killed Domenico Clarco, 26, when he refused to give them his money. Cook allegedly shot Clarco while the Downs girl stood lookout and Miss. Burns sat at the wheel of a getaway car.

O'Daniel Goes For Premiums; Not Politics Now

FORT WORTH, Tex., May 29 (UP)—Premiums, not politics, will be W. Lee O'Daniel's business venture of the immediate future.

The former Governor in a statewide broadcast Sunday said at recent reports he would seek the key to the Governor's mansion again this summer. He said he would not run for the office because he is forming an insurance company, with members of his family as stockholders.

"I am not burning my bridges behind me, however," the ex-flour salesman stressed, hinting that political wars of the future may find him an active participant.

Noting the high cost of Texas state government and "the hotbed of political hooligans in Washington," O'Daniel repeated recent statements that he has received numerous "heartrending letters" urging him to re-enter politics, most of them from "the old folks."

"It is unbelievable that this grand old state... would tolerate such treatment as has been heaped on the old folks," he declared.

His hand opened the program with O'Daniel's own song, "Beautiful Texas," and closed it with "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

Between those selections, the colorful figure lashed out at "the socialistic trend in our federal government," terming it the most dangerous condition in the nation today.

"ROCKET AHEAD" With Oldsmobile Oldsmobile Motor Company, Eastland

Brush-Off

Ranger Rambling

This being Monday morning and a very blue Monday morning from this and that, there's little to write about. Saturday night, walked up mainstreet, finding much dryness, but little excitement. Saw Don Erwin, Fred and Raymond, had a talk with them, while we stood on the street corner talking about the advantages and disadvantages of this and that.

There are two things now that you can't get away from—that is talk about socialism and talk about war. Getting a haircut last Friday—I listen to the barbershop talk and one man says, "Wonder if we'll be in war by Sunday".

Now Sunday is past and so we have another day of grace before we fight the Russians. The war talk has been the only tangible example we've seen or heard to prove people are aware that this country's foreign policy has undergone a radical change.

We are now taking the offensive against the Russians; beating them to the punch. It was a matter of letting the Russians slap us and then we'd slap back. Now we're getting in a few first punches.

The two most significant moves to illustrate the proof of this is when we told the Russians to prove their sincerity by holding free elections in Germany; and when we decided to sell arms to the Arabs and Jews.

Now we may have made this latter decision on the Arabs and Jews can more effectively kill off each other. I hope this is a canard.

But along with that reason or without that reason, we are also making friends, we hope, of the Arabs and Jews when the war with Russia comes.

The Middle East is one of the touchiest spots in the world at this moment. We are in there and getting much needed oil. Russia would like to be in there.

The Jews want a place to make their home and we are willing to bargain for that. The Arabs wish to recover their old glory.

The U.S. and Britain are in the unfortunate position of trying to keep the Arabs happy and strong enough to resist Russian invasion—yet at the same time we must keep them weak enough so they don't overrun Israel and the rest of Britain's colonies—and our life line and basis when war comes. It's going to be a nice tight rope walking act if we get away with it.

MacArthur Orders

TOKYO, May 29 (UP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters today banned a Communist-organized parade of 100,000 workers scheduled for tomorrow.

The Reserve Officers Training Corps offers a real opportunity to young men in college. Students in the advanced ROTC course receive an allowance of $27 a month, in addition to other benefits. COLLEGE GRAD CROP GROWS

Graduates are pouring out of the nation's colleges in ever increasing numbers, this year's crop being an estimated record 450,000. Today there are about 4,500,000 living college graduates; some educators predict that 20 years from now there will be 10,000,000. One result is increased competition for jobs among graduates, with more and more beginning jobs requiring college degrees.

THE STORY: Falling in love had not been Clemency's idea when she became engaged to Baba, small daughter of Syria and Jon Amberley. Mac little time passed before Clemency realized that she had lost her heart irrevocably to Piers Amberley, Jon's brother. Syria, despairing her weak husband and in love with Piers himself, had wanted Clemency to marry Piers. One evening Syria said she had gone for a moonlight ride and when Clemency returned, Piers was in the garden and took her into his arms.

She had remained there ever since Piers had left her to go in search of Clemency. She had heard them come in together, seen their good night. When she climbed the stairs a few moments later, her teeth were pressed down so hard on her undergird that a spot of blood sprang. Piers had not seen her—but he would have been more at peace if he could have forgotten her existence, rid himself of the consciousness of her, here in his house.

Flinging himself into a chair he filled a pipe, but it remained in his hand unlit. What a fool he had been, he told himself. And now those two and the child were here. Why had he not found another way for Jon? Jon must always have been his responsibility, but Syria—

He could have brought Jon along, but he had been so determined that she should pay a little of what she owed. The result was that Jon hated him; and those two hated each other more than they would have done otherwise.

And now he had to think of Clemency, and keep her free of it all. Remembering the sweet, unafraid surrender of her in his arms, his heart leapt. His love, to whom all his life belonged...

MAKING way for Jon to go upstairs she turned towards the breakfast room which was situated towards the back of the square hall. She had almost reached it when Piers came out, and seeing Clemency took a quick step in her direction.

JUST as Clemency and Baba were finishing breakfast the next morning Louille came in to tell her that the Sidi Amberley wished her to go down to him.

"Hello, darling—I was just coming to look for you," he said. "I thought that we—"

"Good night, my own." She ran upstairs and turned to wave to him and throw him a last kiss.

"What? The question came from above with the sharpness of a revolver shot, and the three in the hall below looked up to see Syria standing at the top of the stairs. (To Be Continued)

THE STORY: Following in love had not been Clemency Norton's idea when she became a runaway bride in Syria and Jon Amberley. She had heard them come in together, seen their good night.

"Come, too!" Baba started to scramble off her chair, but Loulie laid a restraining hand on her.

"No, my flower. Just Miss North."

"I shan't be long, darling," promised Clemency. "Then I will take you to say good morning to Uncle Piers."

"All right," agreed Baba amiably. Clemency was aware of Loulie's curious eyes and, as she went out of the room, wondered how much she missed the servant's quarters. She had awakened quite sure that she must have dreamed last night; but the dream seemed to be holding, and as she ran downstairs her heart was dancing.

The rain had ceased, and the signs were banished already under the sun's rays. As Clemency reached the hall a man came in through the door which stood open to the brilliant morning.

She paused involuntarily with a sudden pang of dismay.

"Good morning," said Jon Amberley.

So he was back from wherever he had been. Somehow in that moment when filled with hope and love she was going to Piers, the sight of Jon seemed like a black shadow.

"Good morning," she answered. "Do you happen to know if my wife is back?"

"Yes. She returned last night." "Ah! I am sure she will forgive a late welcome."

There was something in the tone of the remark which made Clemency feel that it did not need a reply.

MAKING way for Jon to go upstairs she turned towards the breakfast room which was situated towards the back of the square hall. She had almost reached it when Piers came out, and seeing Clemency took a quick step in her direction.

"Back in time to congratulate me," he said. "Clemency and I are going to be married."

Your Health

From Memorial Day to Labor Day family meals take on a summer aspect whether they be served on a cloth spread on the ground or in the most formal dining room. You just don't eat the same way in the summer as you do the rest of the year.

Water, perhaps, takes on the greatest significance as the days get hotter. Are you automatically supposed to drink more water when you start perspiring more? And what about adding salt or salt tablets to the water?

Unless you are doing exceptionally heavy work during the heat of the day, the dictates of thirst are the best measuring stick for the intake of water. If you are not engaged in strenuous activity, dosing with between-meals salt or salt tablets serves no purpose and may actually make you ill.

When high temperatures are accompanied by physical work, there may be excessive loss of both salt and water through perspiration. Continued loss of salt may lead to fatigue and later to heat exhaustion or heat stroke.

The office worker, housewife or those not engaged in heavy work will probably find salty foods much more easily added to the diet than other methods of adding salt. Herring, as a summer dish, will appear to the desire of light foods as well as supplying essential salt.

If you drink more than a gallon of water a day, you will need more salt than that contained in the usual diet, which is about a half-ounce. Under ordinary conditions, however, the appetite for salt is a good index for the essential salt.

Charwoman Gets Recognition As Primitive Artist

NEW YORK, May 29 (UP) — A 62-year-old charwoman has a one-man show in a Manhattan art gallery today and a chance at fame as a primitive painter.

But Julia Assmus, who earns $18 a week scrubbing apartments, turned down a subsidy from an art patron which would have permitted her to quit charring and paint full time. She doesn't want to be famous.

"If I was 20 and could put on nice earrings and pretty myself up, maybe," she said. "But I'm too old and ugly. I wouldn't stand that. I just like a plain home life."

As her show opened in the Modern Galleries, Miss Assmus scrubbed floors.

Well-known artist Moses Soyer said she is "one of the few genuine primitives since the great Henri Rousseau."

Now a short, broad-hipped woman with closely clipped graying blonde hair, Miss Assmus started painting in 1923. The 25 oils in the show are a selection from all her work.

Until 1928 she was an attendant in a number of mental institutions. Then she wanted a place to go home to after a hard day's work and began doing housework by the hour.

"When I can't sleep," she said, "instead of reading a book like most people, I get up and paint."

Her work was discovered by a painter who saw one of her pictures in the home of friends for whom she chared.

She describes that painting as a spiritual expression. The other paintings on the gallery walls don't interest her.

"They look pretty," Miss Assmus said. "But I don't know anything about them."

She's skeptical that her art is worth money, but she did tell gallery director Morton Deutsch that she couldn't afford to sell the smallest ones for less than $5 or the next larger size for less than $10.

"Sometimes a week goes by when I can't paint at all and the paints all dry out," she explained. "Then I have to buy more paint. Now a real painter who worked all the time could afford to charge less, because he wouldn't waste paint like that."

Deutsch has priced the paintings at $40 to $400 and hopes to sell at least five or six.

The most ambitious is a 34 by 52 canvass which Miss Assmus has titled "Walking In The Light Of Man." It depicts God as a man with curly gray hair and beard, wearing a dark monk-like robe. He is shown in another painting, driving Adam and Eve from the garden of Eden, but as a blonde man with his loins clad in a bath towel.

Other paintings show landscapes with figures such as a child might draw. There are flat-looking still lifes and portraits from her imagination. Artists have praised their color and texture.

Asked what she would do if her painting made her rich and famous, Miss Assmus couldn't think of anything she wanted for a few minutes.

"Well," she said finally "I would like to get over to London to see the Queen."
