BEST EXAMPLE of optimism comes from the pen of Gordon Baxter in his "Bylines." We are indebted to Harwell Barber of Abilene for this story which we would like to share with our readers, Baxter says:

I may be a fool, but I cannot be pessimistic about this country or the future of mankind nor go along with those who cry "We are doomed", and hang crepe upon the living. Every springtime this old heart has its resurgence to soft breezes, blooming flowers and the goodness of God all about us. The Creator and His creatures lift up my soul and I say to you that things are not at all bad. And you say "Bax, you idiot, you must not be aware of what's going on!" I say, "Naw, I'm just looking for a shetland pony!"

Its like this: Once upon a time there was a kid who believed that there was a shetland pony. There was a clutch of doctors who were very wise and one day in their neurological gardens they were confronted by two lads, one optimistic and cheerful, the other bent beneath his self-made cloud of gloom.

The psychiatrists decided to conduct some tests. Taking the depressed youngster, they put him in the midst of all that could possible delight the heart of a small boy; food, toys, treasures galore. Observing through a one-way mirror, they soon discovered that the child's mood was unchanged.

When questioned as to his reaction, the child replied: "I know that this is only a test, that if smile, you will only take them away so it's better to stay this sad than risk being sadder. With my luck, I'd probably break the stuff and get punished. I see no use in trying to be happy."

Meanwhile, in another room, they were testing the cheerful lad. They put him in a dimly lighted, dark, windowless room filled with barnyard fertilizer. He immediately began to laugh and sing and with aid of a spade, began moving the fertilizer from place to place. The singing continued and finally the doctors opened the door and asked the lad the question "How can you be so happy in such surroundings?" The lad looked up, his face radiant with hope and happiness as he replied "Doctor, with all this stuff, there's just got to be a Shetland Pony in here someplace."

Leon Plant History Told in TESCO Roundup Issue

Hugh Hulsey started his career there. So did a long list of others around the company. The Leon plant was a training ground for no telling how many employees during its years of generating electricity. People in the power department put their heads together and could name the 54 present employees who either worked there or worked there at some time. And this doesn't include number of retired employees who put in a stint at the plant. Two plant superintendents today, Larry Kinard at Organ Creek and Jim Kuykendall at Graham, are past superintendents of Leon. Walter Payne of GO engineering and Paul Chaney of marketing also held down that spot once upon a time. And now the Leon plant is no more. At least, as a generating unit. The building still stands. The two tall stacks still point skyward. But the last of five generating units is rapidly being dismantled. Only a handful of employees remain. The others have been transferred to other jobs and plants around the system, and those remaining will follow them soon.

"The response of Leon plant employees to the necessity of shutting down the plant has been most gratifying to me," President Hulsey said.

"They have cooperated in excellent spirit and with understanding to closing down the plant, even though a number of them have had to relocate with their families in other areas on our system."

It's rather sad to see the old soldier "fade away." Once the pride of the company's power system, the efficiency of the new generating units of today made it impractical and uneconomical to continue its operation.

Its construction was a feat in itself. According to the records, the first work on the plant began in January, 1920, and two units were installed fired up and generating by the latter part of that same year. This included building the dam on the Leon River, several times that year and probably slowed down construction. And much of the work was done with mule-drawn equipment and mostly man muscle power, quite a contrast to the cranes, hoists and bulldozers of today.

The May 8, 1921 issue of the Dallas News carried pictures and an article about the plant and had this to say: "The recently completed master plan of the Oil Cities Power Company at Eastland comprises immense 10,000 horsepower turbine engines. It is said to be the largest engineering project of its kind, so far, in the Southwest, and the fourth largest in the United States. The lake will be known as Lake Leon and will be stocked with game fish and made into a place of recreation and amusement."

The company named in the article was one of the predecessors of Texas Electric Power Company, and the 10,000 horsepower included the two 3900 kilowatt generating units installed first.

The plant was built to supply power for the rapidly growing area around Eastland and Ranger in the midst of the oil boom days. It was later enlarged and had five generating units during its peak. A 7800 kw unit was added in 1923, a 7900 kw unit in 1925, and a 15,600 kw unit in 1928. The first three units were retired and removed in 1966, the fourth unit removed in 1967, and No. 5 shut down the end of May of this year and is being removed.

Ten employees still remain at the plant to see that activities are closed down in orderly fashion. They are M. K. Beazley, plant superintendent, J. L. Owen, L. D. Harris, E. M. Simpson, S. W. Herring, T. M. Ailford, W. L. Wright, P. A. Orasco, D. R. Nicholas and W. J. Stone.

Leon Plant History Told in TESCO Roundup Issue

Hugh Hulsey started his career there. So did a long list of others around the company. The Leon plant was a training ground for no telling how many employees during its years of generating electricity. People in the power department put their heads down and could name the 54 present employees who either worked there or worked there at some time. And this doesn't include number of retired employees who put in a stint at the plant. They plant superintendents today, Larry Kinard at Organ Creek and Jim Kay-

kendall at Graham, are past superintendents of Leon. Walter Payne of GO engineering and Paul Chaney of marketing also held down that spot once upon a time. And now the Leon plant is no more. At least, as a generating unit. The building still stands. The two tall stacks still point skyward. But the last of five generating units is rapidly being dismantled. Only a handful of employees remain. The others have been transferred to other jobs and plants around the system and those remaining will follow them soon. "The response of Leon plant employees to the necessity of shutting down the plant has been most gratifying to me," President Hulsey said. "They have cooperated in excellent spirit and with understanding to closing down the plant, even though a number of them have had to relocate with their families in other areas on our system." It's rather sad to see the old soldier "fade away." Once the pride of the company's power system, the efficiency of the new generating units of today made it impractical and uneconomical to continue its operation. Its construction was a feat in itself. According to the records, the first work on the plant began in January, 1920, and two units were installed and fired up and generating by the latter part of that same year. This included building

the dam on the Leon River, several times that year and probably slowed down construction. And much of the work was done with mule-drawn equipment and mostly man muscle power, quite a contrast to the cranes, hoists and bulldozers of today.

The May 8, 1921 issue of the Dallas News carried pictures and an article about the plant and had this to say: "The recently completed master plant of the Oil Cities Power Company at Eastland comprises immense 10,000 horsepower turbine engines. It is said to be the largest engineering project of its kind, so far, in the Southwest, and the fourth largest in the United States. The lake will be known as Lake Leon and will be stocked with game fish and made into a place of recreation and amusement."

The company named in the article was one of the predecessors of Texas Electric Service Company, and the 10,000 horsepower included the two 3900 kilowatt generating units installed first. The plant was built to supply power for the rapidly growing area around Eastland and Ranger in the midst of the oil boom days. It was later enlarged and had five generating units during its peak. A 7800 kw unit was added in 1923, a 7900 kw unit in 1925, and a 15,600 kw unit in 1928. The first three units were retired and removed in 1966, the fourth unit removed in 1967, and No. 5 shut down the end of May of this year and is being removed.

Ten employees still remain at the plant to see that activities are closed down in orderly fashion. They are M. K. Beazley, plant superintendent, J. L. Owen, L. D. Harris, E. M. Simpson, S. W. Herring, T. M. Alford, W. L. Wright, P. A. Orsoco, D. R. Nicholas and W. J. Stone.

Also on Tuesday night a business meeting of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce will be held at Bryan's Steak House. The meeting will be made by Monday noon at the for members of the Chamber and prospective members. It was announced. Reservations for the meeting should be made by Monday noon at the C-C Office.

MOST POPULAR vacation spots this year are the HemisFair in San Antonio, the Olympics in Mexico and Disneyland in Los Angeles. We are sure that a few Ranger residents included Disneyland in vacation tours, that fewer, if any, went to the Olympics, but percentage-wise we doubt if any Texas town has been HemisFair than Ranger.

ALBERINO GARCIA has worked faithfully to make Matthew Memorial Gardens a summer beauty spot. Sponsored by Ranger Garden Club Mrs. Ruby Springer is committee chairman of the project.

The Regular Third Sunday Singing will be held at 1:30 p. m. Aug. 18 at the Congregational Methodist Church at Gorman. Pete Tyrone announced.

Such as waterproof/dustproof brakes and a smooth 4-speed transmission that make the 60 so easy to handle even a beginner can ride it. Constant Automatic oil injection. Here's the expert.

She's your telephone service representative. To many telephone users, she is the phone company. She answers questions, provides personal number booklets, directories and duplicate bills. She helps you get new phones installed. As a service representative, she has to be something of a lady executive, a bit of a diplomat and an expert in phone service. And she is. She was hired from a select group of applicants and put through an extensive training program. And she attends regular meetings to discuss customer service. Next time you need help on a telephone problem, just call the telephone business office. Your service representative will take it from there.
