Myra's Valentine

Clarissa Mackie

MYRA WATTS' black eyes darted busily to and fro as she sorted the mail on St. Valentine's day. Myra had been postmistress at Littleford for 12 years, and it was said that she knew the handwriting of every man, woman and child in the village. And gossip whispered that Myra always read messages on picture postals before handing them through the window to their indignant recipients.

Outside the closed window was an expectant crowd pressing close to the pigeon-holes, watching Myra and her assistant as they poked letters into the boxes and twisted their necks in a vain endeavor to read addresses, for Myra had a most aggravating way of putting letters in, with the addresses upside down.

All the time Myra was sorting the mail her eyes were wistfully searching for a letter addressed to herself—for Myra Watts had never received a valentine during all her 40 years.

"Humph!" she sniffed impatiently, as she thrust a large embossed envelope into a box. "That Timpkins boy has sent a valentine to Lissy Edwards—I wonder what her ma'd say if she knew it?—and ...'s one ... sent to May Weeks—the impudent young puppy—and here's one—for Ella—I wonder?" Myra deftly tucked the fancy envelope into her own private box, and, having finished distributing the morning's mail, pushed open the window and proceeded to hand it to the eager girls and boys who pressed into the tiny post office.

The last one to appear at the window was Ella Flagg, the little milliner whose shop was next door to the post office. Ella was a faded blond, with light blue eyes and a face that once had been ravishingly pretty, but now was sad and wistful. People had decided that Ella Flagg had begun to droop from the moment that Will Chandler left Littleford and went to California. Some wondered whether Ella ever heard from Will, but Myra could have told them that she did.

"That Timpkins Boy Has Sent a Valentine to Lissy Edwards."

not only Myra didn't have much to say about Ella Flagg. Once they had been close friends, but for many years they had been estranged.

Ella's mute, questioning face appeared at the post office window. Myra nodded curtly, handed Ella a newspaper and a letter containing a circular. Then she turned her back and began to close up the office for the noon hour.

When she was all alone Myra locked the door and took Ella's valentine out of her own box. It was postmarked from a town in California and the handwriting was unmistakably that of Will Chandler. Myra knew it at once. She had had several notes from Will before he fell in love with Ella Flagg.

The envelope was addressed to Ella Flagg.

Myra's black eyes blazed jealously as she held the missive up to the light and discerned through the thin paper the dainty decoration of a lovely valentine.

A little printed verse could be plainly read:

Amid these wilds I wander in despair,
I sigh for her, so faithless, yet so fair,
Ye streams, ye woods, ye breezes tell
The agonies of soul for her I feel.

A bit of doggerel verse—yet it set Myra's heart to beating rapidly.

Will Chandler had sent this valentine to Ella Flagg—what wonder-working thing was this Love which could bridge the long years of estrangement?

Year after year Will Chandler had sent a similar message to Ella Flagg—and Ella had never received it! Still, Will had doggedly sent the valentines. Nothing in between, but on the days devoted to the kindly saint, Will sent some message to his old sweetheart—and Ella never got it!

Myra Watts might have explained, but she didn't.

Today her eyes glowed fiercely as she hid the letters away in her bureau at home.

"They ought to be my valentines," she defended herself. "So I'll keep 'em here!"

That night Myra closed the post office at eight o'clock and started for home. Her way led past the little house where Ella Flagg lived with an invalid mother. When Myra passed Mrs. Jacob Hill's house that good lady ran out with a paper hat bag in her hand.

"Oh, Myra," she panted, "do you mind leaving this at Ella Flagg's house? She's promised to fix my mourning bonnet tonight so's I can go to Uncle Benny's funeral tomorrow. I'm much obliged," she called over her shoulder as she hurried into the house.

Myra turned into the Flagg gate and went around the path to the side door. There was a light in the sitting room and Myra peeped through the glass panels of the door before she knocked. What she saw there stayed her hand.

Ella Flagg was all alone in the room. Myra knew that Mrs. Flagg was asleep in the adjoining bedroom. Ella's fair head was pressed disconsolately into the cushions of the soft and her thin shoulders were heaving convulsively.

Clenched in one thin hand was a crumpled envelope and Myra shrewdly guessed it might be some old love letter from Will Chandler.

Myra's tough little heart suddenly melted—was this evening a repetition of many other endings of St. Valentine's day? Had Ella Flagg hoped each year that she would receive some message from her absent lover?

And then the full realization of the misery she had caused brought a dreadful feeling of wretchedness to her heart.

"I must tell her," decided Myra suddenly; "I must tell her about the letters I have kept back—and when he comes after her, I must tell him, too, and I must help her get ready for her wedding—it's my punishment!"

Softly she opened the door and went inside.

When Will Chandler came home to claim Ella Flagg for his bride, people marveled that Myra Watts appeared as Ella's maid of honor, and they could not understand what had healed the breach between the old friends.

Myra might have told you that it was a bundle of suppressed letters and valentines which Ella Flagg had burned that memorable night when Myra made confession of her wrongdoing; but she kept her secret, and so did Ella, and Will Chandler refused to listen to her story because he was so glad and eager to hold Ella in his arms again.

And when another valentine day came around Myra sorted the mail, quickly, deftly, and in another spirit. When at last she came to a large embossed envelope postmarked California, where Will and Ella were living with old Mrs. Flagg, a beautiful color suffused her dark face.

"Come out here and live with us," wrote Ella on the back of the valentine they sent. "Will knows of a splendid position for you, and it is summer all the time in California."

Myra went, and she says it is summer all the time in her heart, too, ever since that night when she unburdened it to her friend and brought happiness to three sorrowing souls.

When You Can't Sleep

and you get up as tired as when you went to bed, it is a sure sign that your nerves are out of tune. If this continues long, a nervous breakdown and a train of ills are bound to follow.

The experience of Mrs. H. L. Redman, of New Haven, Conn., will interest you. She says:

"For several months I suffered from extreme nervousness and sleeplessness. My nerves were completely unstrung. After doing light housework I was completely fatigued, and loss of sleep made the nights long and tiresome. I began taking DR. MILES' NERVE TONIC and the first night I slept soundly all night. I can truthfully say DR. MILES' NERVE TONIC completely cured me."

DR. MILES' NERVE TONIC is a safe, reliable medicine for all nervous disorders, such as sleeplessness, nervousness, hysteria, headaches, neuralgia, etc. It is non-alcoholic and contains no harmful drugs. It has been helping nervous, distracted, discouraged sufferers back to health for 30 years. Ask your druggist about it.

The Educational Value of Bible Study

This subject like many others of vital interest to us, is not new, but as we so often say, "old as the hills," or to choose a figure more appropriate for our great Panhandle country, ancient as the prairies or the canyons. The literary value of Bible study—how seriously do we take it in our daily lives? So many feel that to perfect oneself in the use of the mother tongue it is necessary for one to go to college, and if this does not seem possible, he feels that opportunity has barred her door against him. Do you realize that, on the shelf in the dining room or on the table in the living room, too seldom opened, is the means, not only to spiritual growth, but also to cultural development.

If one doubts this, let him turn to the pages of the great English writers. They are filled with references to the Bible—allusions to the Psalms or the parables, references to the experiences of the children of Israel, to David and Saul, and to the beautiful life of the Man of Galilee. Shakespeare is full of such references. Frederick Warde, in a lecture on our great dramatist, has told an interesting incident. A prisoner in a state prison, becoming interested in the study of Shakespeare begun to notice how frequently he used Biblical language. Denied the use of writing material, he devised the following scheme. He read every one of Shakespeare's plays, and every time he found a reference, he punched a pinhole in a scrap of old newspaper. When he finished, he had more than eight hundred pin-pricks. The example of Bunyan is too well known to need mention. What chance had a mender of pots and pans at an education? But the twelve years of unjust imprisonment in Bedford jail were not lost, and those days devoted to the eager searching of the Scriptures bore fruit in the noble and stately prose of Pilgrim's Progress.

The lack of knowledge of the Bible displayed by many students in college English classes would be amusing if it were not almost tragic. One bright student thought that the story of Jason and the golden fleece belonged somewhere in the Bible, though she couldn't give chapter and verse. Another hunted diligently in the Old Testament for the book of Hebrews, while still another sought in vain through Proverbs for the quotation "God tempests the wind to the shorn lamb." What is the trouble? Are the Sunday School teachers to blame? No, I should say not, but rather the superficial way the Sunday School lesson is too often studied. All too often its preparation consists of a hurried perusal after Saturday night's movie, of the few verses making up the mere text of the lesson.

The only way really to know anything about the Bible is to read it every day—not in a hurried, disjointed fashion, snatching up the book at bedtime to appease an accusing conscience and sticking down a finger wherever the volume happens to fall open—but somewhere in the vivid, wide-awake hours of the day and with at least as much regularity and interest as we give to the daily paper. In this way can parents, not only improve themselves by daily contact with an acknowledged source of literary and cultural value, but also lead their children to a love of the pages that shall never lose their inspiration for the English speaking race.—Hallie D. Walker, Adjunct Professor of English.

CELEBRATE FOUNDERS DAY

The Plainsman has received an invitation to be present at the celebration of the ninth anniversary of Founders Day, which will be held at the West Texas State Normal at Canyon, on February 17th.

This annual event marks the rounding out of each year's accomplishments and its observance constitutes a sort of "stock-taking" of the work done in the preceding twelve months. That the inventory shows a satisfactory progression each year is a source of pleasure, both to the faculty that has been instrumental in bringing about such excellent results and to the people of West Texas, for whose benefit the school was established.

The Normal is the only state institution ever vouchsafed the Plains country and that it is appreciated is amply proven by the constantly increasing attendance. Not only do the home folks accord it splendid patronage but many students from other sections of the state are attracted to it by reason of its excellent work and the advantages it possesses in being located in this most healthful and invigorating climate where it is a pleasure to live.—Southwest Plainsman.

D. W. GRIFFITH PRODUCES MASTERPIECE IN "HEARTS OF THE WORLD" PICTURE

When D. W. Griffith produced "The Birth of a Nation" the world was amazed and said the limit of motion picture possibilities had been reached. When he produced "Intolerance" the critics stood in awe and confessed that the great producer had surpassed himself and when his latest triumph "Hearts of the World" was revealed words failed to express both public and critical opinion. It is the sublime achievement of the age, realizing possibilities that are almost beyond conception and stamps D. W. Griffith as a veritable wizard of dramatic art in pictures. With the great world struggle as a background Griffith has evolved a love story that grips the heart and stirs the soul. Midst the roar of cannon and shrapnel he relates the sweetest story ever told in a manner that moves the spectator from tears to laughter and makes him glory in the fact that he is a man, and above all a son of America. The battlefields of France are revealed in all their awe inspiring realism and one can almost imagine he is moving forward with the courageous sons of France against the perfidious Hun. Surely when the annals of these days are told in future ages D. W. Griffith and his marvelous picture drama will hold a Truett Compliments Y. M. C. A.

Dr. Geo. W. Truett, while passing through New York last week on his way to Dallas from France made the following statement in conference with the leaders of the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. The statement was wired to Dallas from the New York office:

"The work of the Young Men's Christian Association with our American soldier and sailors everywhere has been wide-reaching and helpful beyond all human computation. Through the Association several thousand of Americans, capable and unselfish men and women, have followed our radiant men of the Army and Navy everywhere ministering to their physical, intellectual and spiritual needs in such sympathetic, patient, gladsome and practical way as will forever make such record one of the most praiseworthy and thrilling chapters in connection with the world war. The thoughtful people of America will not only know how to appraise the measureless and vitally blessed ministry of the Associations overseas, but will also know how to interpret the criticisms which have been brought against the organization even as they will know how to appraise and interpret criticisms which have been touching all the war effort of America."

Top Dressing Wheat Land

Top dressing wheat land is practiced very often in this country until the latter part of February or the first of March and the fine weather he past month has been favorable for this work. Some wheat growers prefer to wait until the seed is sown before top dressing. In this way the manure does not interfere with the drill. If enough manure is put on in the autumn to cause a heavy fall growth and this freezes down there there is loss of fertility. If the top dressing is done after freezing weather comes there is not so much loss and the manure serves to protect against alternate freezing and thawing. Care must be taken not to put enough on to smother the crop and in no case should it be applied other than with a manure spreader. Even distribution cannot be done by hand-spreading.—Field and Farm.

Homesteading Increases Land Value

Experience in New Mexico has shown that the state lands are sold or leased to the big cattle or sheep interests, while the federal lands have been homesteaded and in many cases the homesteader has made good, remaining on his quarter or half section making a home for himself and gradually improving his place into a good farm worth many times in value what the adjoining state land, leased to some cow or sheep outfit, is worth.—Encino (N. M.) Enterprise.

Get Busy in That Orchard

One of the lamentable practices to be observed in the Plains country is the lack of attention given to the home orchard. Nearly every farmer has, at one time or another, boasted of a small family orchard set out for the purpose of affording shade and a reasonable supply of fruit to help defray living expenses. Three fourths or more of these trees have been given little or no care since the day they were planted and the home orchard for which so much was planned, has developed into mere scrubby brush of no value. This neglect is all the more to be deplored because it is so useless. It would be unwarranted to claim that fruit trees do as well here as in any other places, but it is well within the truth to say that a small orchard is practicable and successful.

Since this is the best time to get busy renovating neglected trees, and to give the necessary pruning to all trees, I want to outline briefly the proper management for the orchard and show how simple the methods and how light the work required to maintain an orchard. In the first place the ground around the trees should be kept cultivated and free of weeds at all times, and a mulch maintained to conserve all the moisture. The cultivating should be done in such a way as to throw the soil away from the row of trees forming a broad, shallow trench that will direct the moisture in the ground toward the trees. Under such a system an orchard may be kept thrifty without additional irrigation, although supplementary water from the wind mill is an advantage if the ground is also stirred.

The tops of young trees being set out should be cut back one third way, and only three or four main branches left, these selected to give balance by coming from several sides of trunk. When a tree is properly looked after most of the pruning comes in the first two or three years of its life, the proposition of directing growth to form a well shaped top being comparatively easy at the time. Cut back the new growth to a vigorous bud that is pointed in the direction you desire cut out the small twigs and suckers on the main limbs and trunk cut out all dead wood and branches that interfere with each other, and it is easy to shape a tree in a balanced form. The intense sunlight of this country makes an open topped tree, so favored in the more humid regions, undesirable here because an open top is unnecessary to secure a good color in the fruit, and the exposure of the limbs and trunk to so much heat may cause blistering and kill the tree. One more word about young trees, force the heaviest growth to the southwest as the strong prevailing winds from this direction cause the trees to lean to the northwest.

A tree that is still alive and growing can be renovated and made to produce if it is handled wisely. In pruning such trees bear in mind these points: Cut out all dead wood; cut out one or the other of any interfering branches; allow each branch with buds plenty of space to develop; and prune so as to balance up the tree into symmetrical form. Trees do not need to be pruned as severely in this country as in those farther east because of strong sunlight requires that considerable shade be allowed for protection of limbs, and because the sunlight insures high colored fruit in any case, and keep back the injuries of insects and fungus diseases, so much feared in other countries.

A balance must be always maintained between the size and extent of the root system as compared to the top. The roots can supply a certain amount of nutrition to the top, and if the latter gets too large the tree will decline for the lack of food and water. Pruning, if not too severely, always promotes vigor, for it enables the remaining branches and buds to obtain a larger supply of sap.

Where the trees are in a very neglected state and the top growth is rank, it will usually be found more advisable to prune the trees into the desired form in two years instead of one, doing half the work each year. This eliminates the tree from the danger of being corrected in its habits too quickly and gives it a chance to adapt itself more gradually to new conditions.

I will be glad to assist anyone in pruning his trees if it is desired, and will conduct two demonstrations in the county in the near future to show people the proper way to handle their trees. One of these demonstrations will be held in some orchard in Floydada and one in Lockney.—By W. H. Darrow, Floyd county agent.

Hogs Burned in East St. Louis
Sixteen hundred hogs were burned to death in a fire in the hog house of Mosier & Co., at the National Stock yards in East St. Louis, last week. The origin of the fire has not been determined. The damage was estimated at $60,000.

No Worms in a Healthy Child
All children troubled with worms have an unhealthy color, which indicates poor blood, and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the digestion, and act as a General Strengthening Tonic to the whole system. Nature will then throw off or dispel the worms, and the child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 50c per bottle.
