HICO

Those pretty blue flowers which have adorned the front counter of the News Review to start off Reunion Week were sent in by Mrs. W. A. Moss, who said they were bluebells, one of the 5000 varieties of wild flowers.

Now aren't you glad somebody made the arrangements to have another Reunion? Or are you?

From the gripping we hear from some of the natives previous to the staging of each year's picnic we are almost made to think that they are in earnest. Then we remember that we personally grieve about lots of things ourselves, and then later find that the comment was uncalculated, and allow our neighbors the same privilege.

The greatest criticism we've ever heard of the Reunion committee is that they make a financial success of the affair. Never has there been any huge profit, but every year on our knowledge the undertaking has paid out with a little left over, which is kept on hand to assure a similar Reunion the next year and to be used for worthy causes upon which the fund is called from time to time.

Naturally there is some grafting engaged in. You can't have anything without some outsider trying to zig the merchants. But the News Review has no apology to make for its publicity efforts. We make a legitimate charge for legitimate advertising, and give away about twice as much as we sell. And we've found that thinking merchants and business men appreciate this fact. They have proved it by supporting our propositions almost one hundred percent each time they are presented. If there are those who yield to some soft-soaping talk of an out-of-town peddler we don't have too much sympathy for them, for if they didn't poop off their money that way, they perhaps would another.

During this Reunion we again ask that the citizens keep their eyes open and see whether the celebration is justified and how it could be improved. Then before another year rolls around, let's get together with the old Hico spirit and unite our efforts for a successful Reunion—or let's just call the whole thing off with the excuse that we were wrong once each year for fifty-nine years, and kill one more project that has given Hico something of which to brag to its neighbors.

No more patriotic set of Americans can be found than small-town newspapermen as a whole, we contend. And when they are called upon for any kind of patriotic or civic service they usually respond to the extent of their ability. But they are only human, and no one could blame them for becoming fed up with giving away their space while the big papers get paid advertising from the same sources.

The Hamilton County News recently editorialized on the unfairness of this situation, followed by an "all-out" issue of the Coryell County News in which there was no local news—only government bureau free publicity. Our neighbors ought to be pleased to note that they have at least one defender in Congress, as demonstrated by the following letter:

Washington, D. C., July 28, 1941.
Mr. Harry L. Stimpson,
Secretary of War,
Hon. Frank Knox,
Secretary of the Navy,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Friends:
I am addressing you this joint letter in reference to a matter that has come to my attention and which I believe has been caused by an unintentional mistake on the parts of the War and Navy Departments in advertising their programs.

According to a recent news magazine, the United States Navy, through a New York advertising agency, is spending $1,500,000 on a Navy recruiting campaign and the Army Air Corps is spending something like $250,000 advertising for flying cadets. The advertising is placed with large daily papers and magazines, while "free" copy and mat services are sent to the weekly newspapers to be carried in their columns without charge. Be it said for the patriotism and fine cooperation of all of these fine little country papers that every article given them has been run if it were possible. These papers consider it a privilege to have these articles, but certainly it appears to me that these weekly papers are entitled to and should receive their proportionate share of this Government advertising, since they not only reach large numbers of people, but because it is the democratic way we have here in the United States to see that all persons and companies are treated equally. I think this advertising is a fine thing and I am for it 100 per cent, and I believe that by calling your attention to this discrimination against the weekly and country papers that both of you fine gentlemen will immediately contact the responsible officials in your departments and see that these weekly newspapers are given their share in this program.

Thanking you for your prompt attention to this matter and with cordial good wishes, I am
Sincerely your friend,
NAT PATTON, M. C.,
7th District of Texas.

Reunion Off to Good Start

Stevenson's Speech Here Will Be First As Texas' Governor

Although Coke Stevenson has been governor since early last Sunday when W. Lee O'Daniel left the State, his Hico appearance will mark another milestone in his career since it will be here that he will make his first public appearance as a representative of the office he now holds.

With favorable weather, a record breaking crowd is expected to hear him at City Park Thursday Evening at 8 o'clock. And whether it rains or not, it is definitely assured that there will be lots of people under the comfortable pavilion to pay honor to and hear from their governor.

Late Wednesday indications were that a record-breaking crowd for an affair of its kind locally also would be on hand for the dinner to be given in Governor Stevenson's honor at the Russell Hotel prior to his speech. J. N. Russell reported that replies were still coming in, and that a large percentage of the invitations sent out had been heard from in the affirmative. He urged, however, that all those who had bought tickets come ahead, even though some of the homefolks might have to "stand up in the kitchen or wait for second table" in deference to the many visitors.

Church Property Moves to Make Way For Service Station

H. E. McCullough announced Saturday that Barnes & McCullough had closed a deal for the property formerly used as the Methodist parsonage, and would move the house off to another lot to make room for a modern new service station to be built to the specifications of the Magnolia Petroleum Company. The contract calls for work to start by August 15. The property is at the intersection of Highways 281 and 67, where the new Chalk Mountain Road, No. 229, branches off.

The Methodists have purchased from L. W. Roberson the residence known as the Mrs. Ida Porter house, and the pastor and his family will move into their new home immediately after completion of remodeling and decorating which is now in progress.

Has Job In St. Louis

N. D. Crow, writing from St. Louis to give his new address at 1338 Goodfellow Street, says he has missed three issues of the paper and is anxious to get the change made.

"I send my regards to Hico and my many friends around there," he wrote. "St. Louis is one swell city and we like it fine. I am here on a Government job."

Monument Erected At Grave of Pioneer, Samuel E. Rogers, Killed By Indians In 1863

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Rogers, who live at 2815 Case Street, Houston, were in Hico last July 4 on their way to the grave of his grandfather near Carlton, to erect a monument to the memory of that hero of early-day life in Texas, when Indian fights were frequent.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers had several pictures in their possession, including besides a picture of the monument, a view of the cabin home of his mother and father, another cabin that figures later in this story, and a tree on the Old Bowie Ranch, Miss Willie Johnson's place, one mile west of Carlton.

Falling to get in touch with any members of the News Review force on the holiday, they left the pictures and some very interesting historical data with Mr. and Mrs. Willard Leach, at whose service station they stopped going to Carlton and again on their way home. The pictures, made with a Kodak, were not suitable for reproduction, but the story they left is interesting and worth-while as a historical sidelight.

Samuel E. Rogers Sr. was born in Tennessee in 1809. He married Miss Eliza Sparks in Mississippi and came to Texas in 1832, settling with a colony near Naacogoches. He was a Texas surveyor, fought in the Texas Revolution, and was captured and killed by Indians on May 3, 1863. The small cabin mentioned was a smoke house where

Plans Complete For Stevenson's Inauguration

AUSTIN, Aug. 6.—Plans for the inauguration and installation of Governor Stevenson Friday were completed Tuesday by a committee of the Legislature and others. Although the Legislature will not be in session, many members of both Houses will attend the ceremonies. As Lieutenant-Governor, Stevenson for the last two and one-half years presided over the Senate as its president, and previously he had twice been Speaker of the House.

The program called for Senators and Representatives to assemble in the big hall of the latter and for Speaker Homer Leonard of McAllen to rap the assembly to order at noon.

After the invocation, Leonard will introduce Sen. R. A. Welner of Seguin, president pro tempore ad interim of the Senate, who will call for the administration of the oath of office.

Chief Justice James P. Alexander of the Supreme Court will administer the oath as Stevenson places his hand on the Bible that reportedly has served such a purpose for all the Governors of Texas.

Senator Welner will next introduce Representative Gilmer of Rocksprings, who in turn will present Stevenson for an address. Gilmer is a close friend of Stevenson and succeeded him in the House when Stevenson ran for the lieutenant-governorship.

The ceremonies have been held to a very simple plan at the request of Stevenson, who automatically became Governor Monday when W. Lee O'Daniel took the oath as United States Senator.

Former Hico Newspaperman Finds City Changed; Praises Efforts of Reunion Manager

"Comingled with feelings of joy and sadness, of appreciation and pain, of surprise and disappointment, these are my sentiments upon my return to Hico," remarked A. Garland Adair, former manager of the Hico News Review upon arrival here Wednesday to present for Reunion visitors The Cavalcade of Texas.

Explaining this statement, he added: "I am glad to see many old friends whom the years have been so kind to; I am sad because of the great numbers no longer here; I am grateful for the fact that some remember the Adair family and pained when I remember that many of those who did much for Hico two decades ago have joined that unnumbered throng across the eternal river; I am surprised at the many improvements here, including a better Hico News Review under the most capable management and ownership of Roland L. Holford, and am disappointed in that there is no change in the old story that a few splendid patriots yet have to bear the brunt and burden of public service."

While here the former Hico publisher was reminded by several citizens that their scrap books contained accounts that he wrote in the local newspaper of births, weddings and deaths in their families. He stated that he always did his best when he wrote such items as he believed that it was the duty of the editor to rejoice with those who rejoice and to weep with those who weep.

He came here with his young bride just after the World War Number 1. His first-born, a boy weighing 8 pounds, was born in Hico. The son now weighs 298 and is 6 feet four, his dotting daddy said, and is Southwestern conference champion javelin hurler. Since their removal two daughters have been added to the family circle, Sarah, 18, and Marie, 11.

Coming here at the close of World War I at the invitation of the chamber of commerce, Mr. Adair was elected secretary of that organization, serving two years in that relation. That was his first public service and he devoted so much time to the job that he lost his business. He was chairman of the Hamilton County Democratic Convention in 1929 and a delegate to the national democratic convention the same year. In 1921 he moved to Mexico. In 1922 he moved to Austin. In 1929 when the Mexico post of the American Legion was organized he became a charter member with a number of others who are still there. Since then Adair has been fifth division commander, department historian for five years, editor of the Texas Legion News, assistant state adjutant of the American Legion Texas Centennial Committee, sponsors of the million dollar Texas Memorial Museum at Austin where he is now serving as Curator of History. He originated the Texas Centennial silver 50-cent piece which netted $1,000 for the museum and refused appointment as state department adjutant of the American Legion to put the museum project over. At present he is also serving as general commissioner for the Texas Centennial of Statehood in 1945-46.

"Hico should greatly appreciate Mr. S. J. Cheek," Adair said while here. "The Hico Reunion is now a distinct contribution to the state and his work in that connection is most remarkable."

460 Pounds of Aluminum Collected In This Precinct

R. W. Hancock, commissioner of Hamilton County Precinct 3, took the aluminum collection to Waco Tuesday and deposited it with similar collections from other towns in this district. The truck contained 460 pounds of the coveted metal, which was placed in bins at Hico and Carlton, 350 pounds here and 110 at the latter place.

Hancock said that the total collected from the three other precincts of the county amounted to only 640 pounds, which makes the local showing flattering.

The organizations sponsoring the patriotic movement report that success of the campaign throughout the country has exceeded expectations, and the officers and sponsors wish to thank the citizens for their cooperation.

Congressman Sam Russell Designated Temporary Speaker

Washington, July 7.—Congressman Sam Russell of the Seventeenth District of Texas was designated Speaker of the House of Representatives in this afternoon's session. The elected Speaker may delegate this authority to another Member of the House and Congressman Russell was called to act as Speaker shortly after the order of business had progressed into the afternoon.

Although Congressman Russell is serving his first term in Congress, he is recognized as one of the ablest Members of the Texas delegation. From his record he has demonstrated his ability in the procedure of the House and has, on several occasions, appeared on the floor as a speaker in matters of important legislation. Ordinarily a Congressman must serve his first term, which is referred to as his "Freshman Term," before he is able to gain recognition in this law-making body.

These familiar with Congressman Russell as a presiding Judge in Texas District Courts viewed with interest the ease and efficient manner in which he presided over the sessions of Congress while acting as Speaker of the House.

Football Coaches Attending School At Houston This Week

H. T. Pinson, head football coach at Hico High School, and Fred G. Schwarz, line coach, left Sunday for Houston, where they will be in attendance at daily sessions of a football coaches' training school throughout this week.

Shortly after their return to Hico they plan to start practice for football, with intensive training and workouts expected from the material at hand which will include a number of new men this Fall.

The schedule for the coming season, recently released, gives dates for the five home games with Stephenville, Galt, Walnut Springs, Comanche, and Gorman, and for out-of-town games with Dublin, Hamilton, Weatherford, and De Leon. The Nov. 11 date is still open.

The calendar calls for dedication of the new stadium at the opening game with Stephenville Sept. 12, although progress of improvements and completion of the stadium will depend upon action taken on application for a supplementary WPA project. Later definite announcements will be made in this connection.

Methodist Church

The regular schedule of services will be resumed at the Methodist church on Sunday. There will be worship services both morning and evening. Church school will begin promptly at 10 a. m. At 8:15 p. m. "Your Faith and Your Life" will be the subject of the pastor's sermon. The evening service for the young people will be at 7:30.

Story Recalls Tragic Death of Hamilton County Teacher At Hands of Comanche Indians

The following interesting story handed the Comanche Chief by Mrs. Teck Whitney, was run in a recent issue of that paper. The story was originally published in the Hamilton Rustler, August 12, 1902, and was taken from the Houston Post, appearing under the heading, "A Texas Frontier Incident," written by A. J. Sewell.

In 1867 there stood on the south bank of the Leon river in Hamilton county a small log house. A beautiful valley three quarters of a mile wide and one and one-half miles long spread out in front—free from obstruction to view. This was called "Worlene Valley." The Howards lived half a mile east of the school house.

Ezekiel Manning and Alexander Powers lived one and a half miles South, but behind a high hill. The Mossengills, Ganns, Strangeline, Cole Kaykendall and James Kaykendall lived up the river within two miles. J. B. Hendrix and sons, Crockett and Abe, lived two miles, Judge D. C. Snow and Uel Livingston lived three and four miles, and the Pierson Ranch was six miles below. The town of Hamilton was six miles southwest of the school house.

At the time the incident took place of which we write, Miss Ann Whitney was teaching this border school. "The time was Thursday, 7 a. m., July 11, 1867." (See Wilberger's Indian Depredations.) The boys of the schoolhouse were unheeded and the spaces between were left open so that it was an easy matter to see inside the building and to shoot at anyone there if they wished to. There was a small window cut in the north side and without a shutter. Olivia Barbee, about 12 years old, daughter of John Barbee, who lived northeast ten or twelve miles, was boarding in the neighborhood. Her father was a stockman and was expected to come by and see her that week, while out hunting stock.

On the day and about the hour mentioned, a daughter of Alexander Powers was at the door, which was on the south side of the house overlooking the valley. While there she discovered a party of men on horseback rapidly approaching and was almost certain they were Indians. Miss Whitney, seeing her standing at the door and looking so steadily, asked her what she saw. The reply was that she was looking at some persons in the valley who were coming towards the school house, and she thought they were Indians.

The school mistress told her to come away and be seated and not to be so foolish as to talk about Indians, as the men were cowhunters. Miss Barbee and the others did not look to see anything about them. The Powers girl, however, was still uneasy, and soon went to the door again and took another look, crying as she did so, "They are Indians," and running back, took her little brother by the hand

Patriotic Theme Predominates In Most Parade Floats

There have been longer parades staged on the streets of Hico and there may have been floats in years gone by that were larger and carried more people, but never was there a parade with more timely entries, or floats that better portrayed the spirit of the times than did that one Wednesday which opened the 59th Annual Hico Reunion.

A patriotic theme predominated in the decorations and stagings, and in a profusion of flags and bunting and tri-colored crepe paper the line seaward its way from City Hall through the business streets and to City Park, where visitors were officially greeted by Mayor Lawrence Lane. The mayor after a few remarks on past and present times, presented J. N. Russell, president of the Hico Chamber of Commerce, who in turn introduced the guest speaker of the afternoon, State Senator John Lee Smith of Throckmorton, on hand for the occasion upon invitation from and through arrangements by Reunion Manager S. J. Cheek.

Senator Smith Speaks
In a talk that reached its zenith of interest when patriotic references to the privileges of living in America were made, Senator Smith reminded his audience that there has never been a government that was as generous with its people, and plead with them to remember that it has a right to expect something of us. "The time has come," he said, "for us to arouse ourselves to the fact that we have the greatest, the most generous, the most beneficent government on the face of the earth." Frequent applause from his listeners interspersed the speaker's remarks.

Wednesday night the crowds were witnessing the first showing locally of the Movietone film, "Cavalcade of Texas," which is being presented free through the courtesy of Karl Hobbittelle, Dallas theatre magnate, under the direction of A. Garland Adair.

Clouds Threaten Briefly
Low-hanging clouds that for a time threatened to break up the parade just before the appointed hour of 2 o'clock arrived, relented as to losing their precipitation very profusely. Undaunted by the angry elements the participants started the parade and all went well until near the end of the trek through the streets, when sharp, sudden gusts of wind wrecked havoc with the more delicate of the presentations.

Worst sufferer, perhaps, was the float of E. H. Henry, Palace Theatre manager, whose choicest cloth-covered frame blew off his Packard just as he turned onto the highway on the last lap of the journey. "Hurricane Henry" took it in his stride, though, and dismounted from his car to start picking up the wreckage from the street. "I didn't intend to use it tomorrow anyhow," he philosophically answered his sympathetic onlookers.

Without the miniature storm detracted from the enjoyment of the parade, since things had to be rushed up somewhat. And certainly the ensuing light shower lessened the numbers who otherwise would have gone on to the park to hear the visiting speaker.

Iredell Sends Band Float
Through an unfortunate misunderstanding, the lovely float prepared by the band mothers of the neighboring city of Iredell failed to make the entire parade line of march. But the decorated truck, resembling a ship and exhibiting the fruits of long hours of toil in its preparation, carried 22 members of the Iredell Band to City Park and served its anticipated purpose of arousing admiration from all who happened to gaze upon it.

WITH THE COLORS

[The following letter from a former Hico boy in the service of his country is published in the belief that it will be interesting to our readers. Others having similar letters are invited to submit them for publication.—ED.]

Julius M. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Jones of Hico, volunteered in the Air Corps from Waco early last October. He was sent to Brooks Field, San Antonio, and later transferred to Ellington Field, Houston. About a month ago he was selected as one of the five men out of a class of 200 to go to Boston for special instruction.

Last week Julius, better known to his many friends in and around Hico as "Peck" wrote to his parents as follows:

Boston, Mass. July 28, 1941.

Dear Mother, Dad and All:

I hope all of you are getting along just fine. I am doing just fine. I passed the first month and have a pretty good average on the new course. We take our final exam on it tomorrow. That will leave us nine more subjects or 18 weeks until I come home.

The school up here sure is interesting. I am enjoying it more every day. It rained nearly all night last night and all day today. We have had some inspecting officers at the school all day. I think they will be here tomorrow too.

Three other boys and I went to York Beach, Maine, yesterday afternoon. We had a pretty nice time. We rode most of the time, but we saw some very pretty scenery. Everything up here sure is old-looking. Practically all of the fences are rock and the ones that are not rock are made of poles. We stopped at one place and gathered a bunch of blueberries. I guess it was the first ones I had ever eaten. I don't remember ever eating them before.

I have been over to Harvard University and the Bunker Hill Monument. We went out to the Lexington Cemetery where all the soldiers of the 1776 war are buried. I have also seen Paul Revere's home, Longfellow's home, the Old North Church, the Old State House and the Museum of Fine Arts. The Museum has some of the prettiest pictures I have ever seen. They have some tapestries hanging on the walls that were woven in 1500. They sure are beautiful and would cost about $500,000.00 if you tried to buy them. They are not for sale. Nothing in the museum can be bought. Some of the pictures and statues couldn't be bought for any price. It is one of the most interesting things I have seen.

This is a very interesting and historic country up here, but I don't think I would ever enjoy living up here.

I guess I had better close for this time. Write when you have time and let me know how all of you are getting along.

Love always,

"PECK"

THE BUS OF WORLD STATE

Hico, Tex., July 21, 1941.

Dear Editor:

The bus of World State has been going badly for more than one hundred and fifty years. England (John Bull) has been at the wheel steering it most of the time. The other kids have been riding on the back seats and fighting among themselves almost all the time. Uncle Sam and Martha Ann (France) have ridden on the front seat with John some of late. Sam has driven some lately, but Martha Ann merely looked on while some of the big boys in the back seat tried at every fork of the road to get John or Sam (whichever was driving) to take the opposite road from what he did. Finally they (the big boys in the back seat) decided that they needed a new bus and a different driver altogether.

About 1914 Fritz (Germany) raised a "ruckus" and tried to take charge of the bus and run it himself. John, Maria Ann, Dago (Italy) and Ivan (Russia—one of the big boys in the back seat) with a little encouragement from Jap (Japan—another big boy in a back seat) undertook to put Fritz back in his seat so they could drive on. Fritz knocked Ivan "as cold as a wedge" and was kicking John, Maria Ann, and Dago around to beat sixty when Uncle Sam stepped in and kicked Fritz's britches; after which they all put poor Fritz back in a back seat and told him to attend to his own knittin' from then on.

All went well (with John, Sam and Maria Ann) for a while. Then John, Sam and Maria Ann all rode in the front seat. John and Sam took it turn about doing the driving. Maria Ann was only an honored spectator while Dago had to ride on a back seat with the other boys. He said that John had promised to let him ride on the front seat if he would help put Fritz back in his seat where he belonged. Nobody paid much attention to what he said. He was as mad as a wet hen about it. Also Jap thought he ought to be on the front seat.

If you will remember, almost all these kids had a disease called socialism which gradually got worse on most of them. They seemed not to be all affected with the same form of it. Fritz had one form of it, Ivan had another form of it, while Maria Ann had still another form of it. Even poor Chink (China) seemed to have it. John and Sam both pretended that they didn't have it. They had been vaccinated or something, they claimed, but they too had a form of it. Maria Ann had an awful form of it, but John and Sam thought she didn't have it at all until it was too late to doctor her. As you know, perhaps, this disease affects peoples' minds. The different forms of it affect their minds differently.

As I said, all went well for a short time, but pretty soon all weren't so well. But John and Sam didn't pay much attention for a long time. The kids in the back seat quarreled among themselves and stole each others' play parties and then told on each other. John and Sam would speak to them about it and then forget. Before a great while each one was grabbing all he could get his hands on. It didn't make much difference who it belonged to, just so he thought he could whip him. They even formed games to whip and steal from others that were too weak to resist.

Eventually Fritz, Dago and Jap ganged up against Ivan and told him where to head in, so Jap could rob Chink without interference from Ivan. They also ganged up against John and Sam and Maria Ann, but didn't come out and tell them so in plain language as they did Ivan. However when two little Spanish boys got to fighting the gang told John to let them alone and that they (Fritz, Dago and Jap) would see that the one they wanted to win won; also Dago slapped a little Nigger boy's jaws (Ethiopia) and took all his play parties, after which they hinted to John to mind his own business.

At last Fritz and Ivan agreed not to fight each other. Fritz immediately went to cuffing around the little kids and taking everything they had. John and Maria Ann both got mad and undertook to put Fritz back in his seat. But Fritz kicked both of them in their pants, and kicked the little kids some more, then turned and knocked Maria Ann unconscious. Also he gave John another kick in the seat of his pants. All of this made Sam so mad that he gave John some of his old britches to pad the seat of his pants with. This made Fritz mad at Sam. He (Fritz) told Sam to mind his own knittin' or he (Sam) might get his own pants kicked. We think Dago and Jap promised to help him do it. Also that was the slant that Sam took of it. Sam sneezed him back, though, and told him (Fritz) that he (Sam) would give his old britches to whomever he darned pleased to.

On Turkey's Line of Defense

Troubled Turkey, caught between the Nazi-Russian rossfire, has at least some fully equipped tank units such as these to help maintain the "neutral" status of her territory. Russia informed Turkish officials that a Nazi attack on the strategic Dardanelles was sure to come so that Germans could gain control of the Black sea.

After this John got back in a corner where Fritz couldn't get to him to kick him any more. John caught Dago off by himself and spanked him good and proper. Also he and Sam told Jap where to head in. All this made Fritz so mad that he decided to help poor Dago a little, which he did. He kicked John some more and then spanked some of the little kids that had been fighting Dago.

All of a sudden Fritz forgot that he and Ivan had agreed not to fight each other. So he swatted poor Ivan one. It seems that his mind is not just exactly normal, poor fellow! Ivan is affected by the same disease (so they say) but it is in a slightly different form. Do you remember how Ivan treated Napoleon once? He might decide to give Fritz some of the same medicine. And so it stands.

Fritz is awfully jealous of Ivan. He (Fritz) thinks that bus service will start soon and he is afraid that Ivan intends to put on a brand new one and drive it himself. He and Ivan both want a socialist bus. Their ideas of the new bus widely differ, but their main difference is, "Who'll do the driving?" ROY DERRICK sources committee, our present reserves of these fuels amount to about 3,000,000,000 tons of coal and over 15,000,000,000 barrels of oil. In addition, there are plenty of unexplored reserves which, if necessary, would undoubtedly produce additional fuel to fill all of our needs for many years.

It is estimated that the average demands for power in America, when all demands for industry, home heating, transportation and other uses are all grouped together, amount to 40 horse power per hour for every four of the year.

Natural gas looks like one of the best bets for the fuel of the future. In the last few years it has become a major source of fuel in certain sections. Because of a plentiful supply and ease of use it is expected to be given more and more preference.

Natural gas is generally found in the same sections as petroleum. Within range of the gas fields it has been found an economical as well as the most simple fuel to use for heating purposes. It seems probable that pipe lines will eventually be built so that natural gas can be sent distances without great expense and then natural gas will be used in countless industries and homes.

But no matter what fuels become most popular, there are no dangers of fuel shortage in this country. Referring to the energy resources of this country, H. C. Dickinson of the bureau of standards said: "Solid, liquid and gaseous fuels will almost certainly be available from stored-up supplies for several thousands of years at the present rate of consumption."

One of the chief reasons the Germans went into Russia was to get oil. Russia is one of the leading producers of oil and has vast fields of it which have not been tapped. But so far as production of oil is concerned, the United States has a big lead over every country in the world.

In 1939, figures of the United States bureau of mines show that the United States produced 61 per cent of total world production of oil. Russia was second, but produced only 10.3 per cent of the total and Rumania, which is world-famous for its rich oil fields, produced only 1.7 per cent. Venezuela was third, producing 10 per cent of the total.

FUEL coal

Our most popular and most used fuel has always been coal—mostly bituminous coal. In recent years, oil has replaced coal in many instances, such as in a lot of home heating, but coal continues to be the leading single source of fuel.

It is estimated by the New York Trust company, which recently made a study of the consumption of energy in the United States, that of the total energy we consumed in 1937, 45 per cent was derived from bituminous coal, 30.4 per cent from oil, 9.8 per cent from natural gas, 9.3 per cent from water power and 5.6 per cent from anthracite coal.

It is not believed probable that oil will continue to replace the use of coal during the next 10 years at the rate it has done it in the past 10 years. The development of the use of either will be determined by ease of transportation, price and taxes, but in general the use of oil will probably be more or less limited to transportation whereas coal will continue to be the most popular fuel in industry.

In home heating the present problem of transporting oil to the East, due to those 50 tankers which we gave to England, is expected to turn the trend back to coal, at least temporarily.

If we look far into the future, the use of various fuels is quite unpredictable. It may even not be too far off when we will have learned to get most of our needed energy from the sun.

RESOURCES . . . unlimited

When we hear about the millions of barrels of oil and billions of tons of coal which this nation consumes each year, most of us wonder when the oil wells will be pumped dry and when the last of our mountains of coal will finally be shoveled into the nation's coal bins.

But actually, there isn't much to worry about for a long time to come, if ever.

According to the national re-

These are production figures and do not give a clear picture of the capacity of the world's oil fields. But they do indicate the comparative output possible with the equipment which each country used before the war broke out and show that by any measure the United States has a big lead over all.

Although there are 13 states in the United States which produce considerable oil, by far the greatest production is in Texas which in 1939, produced 38 per cent of our annual supply. Other states which are known for their oil producing capacity are California, which produced 18 per cent of the supply, Oklahoma, 13 per cent, Illinois, 8 per cent and Louisiana, 8 per cent. The other states which produced the remaining 18 per cent of our oil supply are New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Kansas, Wyoming and Arkansas.

The ROAD to BAGDAD

by GEORGE GIBBS

CHAPTER XI

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful Camilla Dean is touring Egypt and Palestine with a party of Americans, including Slim McManus, in love with Camilla, and Michael Gay, an engineer who hopes to establish a bus line to Bagdad through her order admirers are a wealthy Syrian, Hassan Isar—alias Joseph Asad—leader of fanatical Arabs in Palestine, and Ronald Barker—El Kerkak—leader of tribes opposed to Hassan. Camilla encourages Hassan's attentions to gain information helpful to Barker, but refuses to marry him. Barker warns of danger, but she crosses the Syrian desert with Michael Gay—accompanied by a group from the boat, and Zaagi, Syrian guide. Zaagi drove the car off the road into nearby hills.

She was sure that it was useless for her to struggle, so she submitted, permitting them to lead the horse away.

"Get back to the road," Michael commanded, with a sudden realization that the bus had somehow got into a difficult position. "I'm not going to smash this bus on my trial trip."

Zaagi moved one shoulder slightly and, putting on power, seemed to be finding a way between the jutting stones that would bring them back to safety, when miraculously there appeared out of nowhere among the rocks in front, beside and behind them, groups of mounted Bedouins galloping to the car, gesticulating with their rifles and shouting incomprehensibly.

"What does all this mean, Zaagi?" Michael demanded.

"I don't know, monsieur. It is a branch of the Anazeh and they come to welcome us to their country."

Zaagi opened the door and there was a short colloquy. When the conversation was ended Zaagi turned with simulated despair. "They ask tribute for passing through their lands," he said. "It is the custom of the country, they say."

A man in a red pelisse who seemed to be the leader of the group now raised a hand commanding attention. He was taller than the others, wore a small brown beard and, judged by the standards of his people, was handsome of face and well formed in figure.

"He says," Zaagi translated, "that he wishes to examine your luggage and requests that you all step down while he does so."

"I'm darned if we do," Michael replied.

There was a moment of silence while the sheik sat gravely with an air of great dignity and patience, smiling at last as if in commiseration of their unreasonable attitude. When he spoke it was with a stern expression. "He says," Zaagi interpreted, "that it will be much better if you do what he asks. He will perhaps detain you a very few minutes."

The situation crystallized almost immediately as Michael took Zaagi by the collar of his tunic and threw him from behind the wheel, falling into his seat and turning on the power. Zaagi put a hand into his shirt and drew out a knife which he swung with a dangerous motion toward Michael. But Slim fired quickly and Zaagi dropped, rolling at the feet of an Arab who had come up the steps. That was the beginning of the trouble. Michael was trying to get the car in gear when somebody shot at him. Slim's automatic came into line again and fired several times. The sound of firing now came from all directions. Michael had been hit in the shoulder and crumpled over the wheel, but he fired a final shot at a man clambering up the steps toward him while glass clattered and Janet Priestly's tiny revolver sounded like the yapping of a fox terrier above the rattle of the heavy rifles. Camilla, still bewildered by the sudden conflict, rushed forward to pick up Slim's gun from the floor of the bus, when she was seized violently and carried bodily outside.

It was lively while it lasted, and fatal at least to poor Slim who had fallen prone, bleeding badly from a wound in his chest. Michael Gay still sagged over the wheel, a bullet in his shoulder, and Janet looked disgustingly at her little sixty pistol and let them hustle her out to the ground. Doc Williamson, who was unarmed, obediently followed the directions of the bandits. Torelli was giving aromatic spirits of ammonia to Kitty Trimble, who had fainted.

Camilla was aware of the man in the red pelisse urging her again toward the horse, and as she did not try to help him two men lifted her bodily and put her in the saddle. She was sure that it was useless for her to struggle, so she submitted, permitting them to lead the horse away from the group and over the hill to a flat plain which seemed limitless in every direction, except toward the mountains which they were leaving behind them.

There was no chance of escape. Two men rode with her, one on each side. She spoke to one of them in English, then in French, asking where they were going but she got no reply—unless his forbidding silence could be considered one. She tried the man on the other side with the same result.

ated that it was impossible for them to get at them.

Just as these Indians started to leave the ranch they met Rogers making for the house with the other Indians in hot pursuit. The old man, seeing he was between two fires, turned his course. He made his way to a small bunch of live oaks at which place the Indians closed in upon him, killing him and scalping him.

The clump of live oaks which mark the spot where the old man met his fate at the hands of the savages is located about 400 yards South of where the Rev. Shelby King's dwelling now stands. Anyone now traveling along the road can see the live oaks plainly.

After the killing the Indians struck out across Resley's Creek and were discovered by someone who immediately spread the news, and in a short while a small scout party was organized and took the trail, the Rev. Sam Powers being in command. The Indians crossed the Leon River and went up the North side of Rush and Copperas Creeks, making good time, but the boys were equal to the emergency. They overtook the Indians late in the evening, and a running fight ensued for several miles, but the Indians managed to get away.

The boys wounded several of them and captured all the horses except those the Indians were riding. They also captured several blankets and other luggage that the Indians dropped during the fight.

Millerville

By Chas. W. Giesecke

There was a petition circulated in this vicinity last week praying that the school district be consolidated with the Hico Independent School District. An election has been set for August 21.

Several attended the protracted meeting at Duffau last Sunday. Chas. L. Conner and wife of Pineland are spending a few days with his parents, C. L. Conner Sr. and wife. He has a job at Beaumont, and leaves this week for that place.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Shaffer and daughter, Miss Leola, visited their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Marta Hipp at Unity Sunday. Mrs. Hipp had invited her brother, Earl Shaffer, and family of Old Hico and some other friends. Mr. Shaffer was sixty-one years old and his daughter also has the same birthday. A pleasant day was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Nix of Purves were down Sunday to get their daughter, Naonice, who had spent the week with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Nix.

Mr. Lawrence Thornton left this week for West Texas. Some fellow wanted him to do some tractor plowing.

Mr. and Mrs. Gran Columbus and daughter of Greyville were at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Nix Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Hooks, daughter and son, of Mineola visited his sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Bramblett, Saturday and Sunday. They also visited her brother and family, Chris Nachtigall.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Howerton had several of their relatives Saturday and Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Press Ludwig of Marshall, her brother; another brother, John (Hun) of Berger; Mr. and Mrs. Cardin of Missouri, her sister. All returned to their home Sunday.

His voice was deep but mild and she gained courage. "Nothing, of course," she said, "but the holdup of an American bus and the abduction of an American girl traveling in it."

"Granted, I intended to bring you here no matter what happened."

"And how are you going to answer for it?"

"I don't intend to answer at all. I'm not supposed to know anything about the holdup or about you."

"My government will have a word to say when it knows the truth."

"Who will tell?"

"Dr. Williamson, Torelli, Janet, Josie—"

"And how will they learn that I had anything to do with it?"

"I will tell them after you let me go."

He laughed jovially. Apparently he had determined to get as much pleasure out of the situation as possible. "Come, Camilla," he said.

"Let's wait and quarrel after dinner. I hope the meal will be a good one." He clasped his hands three times and a tall Nubian appeared wearing the linen cap of a chef. He bowed as Hassan spoke, and then the Bedouin girl returned, setting the table with a fine linen cloth and proper silver and porcelain furnishings.

NEW SAFETY DEVICE

Newspapermen in Minnesota recently previewed what could develop into a major change in highway safety supervision—a signboard which automatically tells the automobile drivers when they are going at a dangerous speed.

The sign, which was prominently placed before a highway junction, read: "Junction ahead? Your speed over 40" and as each car approached the sign the speed at which the car was traveling was recorded.

There is no magic about the way the sign works even though the psychological effect upon the motorist is most startling. Two photo-electric cells are placed along the right of way approximately 750 feet ahead of the sign and 36 feet apart.

In addition to cross-sections, the inventors, L. T. Mark of St. Paul and George E. Sykora of Minneapolis, say that it is adaptable to dangerous curves, approaches to cities or towns and can even be used in unison with a second sign to warn motorists that a car is approaching from the other side of a hill.

It all sounds like a great contribution to the safety of the motorist of the future, except for one thing. On a test sign that was used in the first demonstration under the line about the speed were big lighted letters reading: "Home Brand Coffee."

If this safety device is going to be used for highway advertising, then placing advertising at the most dangerous point on highways, it would seem that the danger feature of such signs would more than offset its safety possibilities.

We hope the manufacturers will have a change of heart, however. We can imagine every local police department recommending such signs but if they are just to be an advertising novelty then it would be better to forget them and wait for other safety inventions sponsored by firms with more humanitarian interests.

ENGLAND'S GASOLINE RATIONS

Although in many sections of this country we are being asked to cut down on our consumption of gasoline and oil, our possible sacrifice on that score amounts to little compared with that of the people of Great Britain.

When the British faced a shortage the petroleum board promptly rationed the use of gasoline for all vehicles. The rationing for cars for private use was the most stringent. Each automobile owner was issued a coupon book good for one month, the number of coupons depending upon the horsepower of his car.

Doctors, as well as others with a good reason for having more gasoline, are given extra books. And trucks are permitted from three to as many as 23 gallons a week, depending upon their weight, but even for commercial purposes there has been a drastic reduction.

In most of the world today, the automobile which has become a necessity to Americans, is being treated as a great luxury and in very few countries is it being used at the present time for pleasure driving.

In England, the smaller automobiles, which consume a minimum amount of gasoline, have been the best-sellers for some time. It will be interesting to see, as we gradually tighten our gasoline belts if the smaller, more economical automobiles will replace the large cars on our highways. If bicycles will become a popular means of transportation, or if Mr. Trunk will get our oil problems worked out so that we can continue to use automobiles with the present disregard of gasoline consumption.

Lessons in HEALTH by ARTIE MISGOVERN

Milk Essential in Reducing Diet

If you are trying to reduce, don't make the common mistake of cutting down on your milk supply. It is important for everyone to drink a minimum of one pint of milk each day, preferably twice that much, whether he is interested in gaining weight or losing it.

In view of the fact that it contains all the essential food elements—protein, carbohydrates, calcium and other minerals along with a generous supply of the protective vitamins—milk has frequently been called the most nearly perfect food. No diet is well balanced without it.

For the normal, healthy individual, I never recommend going on the periodical milk diet favored by so many faddists. I do not believe that this is necessary and, in any event, it should never be undertaken except on the advice of your physician.

Time Out to Pep Up

Mid-summer and mid-afternoon are a combination designed for discomfort, drowsiness, and inefficiency. You can combat them nicely by taking a few minutes away from your desk or machine and giving yourself a "bracer" to carry you through the rest of the day.

Go to the washroom and douse your neck, face and arms with cool water. Don't dampen them, but splash the water generously and pat them dry without rubbing. After you have applied fresh make-up or combed your hair, stretch every muscle in your body.

CANADA—OUR NEIGHBOR

While the war restricts European emigration more Americans are migrating to the Dominion this year

By MARTIN L. PETRY

WITH a general European war raging it is obvious that immigration in Canada would be materially curtailed during the last two years but it is interesting to note that while there has been a marked decrease from the continent the influx of Americans into the Dominion has shown an increase of twenty-nine per cent for the fiscal year ending March 31 compared with the same period of 1940.

Another factor for the selection of Ontario would be the close similarity between living conditions there and in this country. English is the universal language, all American products or their counterparts are available, so there is not such a radical change in the general family life.

The point of origin of those leaving this country provides another interesting point. Eleven States, with an extensive rural population, lost fewer residents this year than in 1940.

At the conclusion of the present fiscal year the Dominion opened the gates to 11,496 or a decrease of 29.1 per cent. This drop is attributed to the restrictions upon Europeans coming over but at the same time the exodus from the United States mounted from 5,748 in 1940 to 7,443 in 1941.

Most of the Americans migrate to Ontario. There seems to be a definite link between the tourist movement and the migration, for the figures show the largest number of persons entering Canada from the United States for permanent residence during the months of June, July, August and September.

Table showing migration statistics from Europe to Canada for 1939-40 and 1940-41. Includes categories like English, Irish, Scotch, Welsh, Belgian, Dutch, French, German, Hebrew, Italian, Japanese, Polish, Rumanian, and Slovak.

Engineers and Doctors Needed In Naval Reserve

New Orleans, La., Aug. 4.—Highly trained men in specialized fields of civil life should apply now for commissions as volunteer officers in the United States Naval Reserve, according to Captain T. A. Thomson Jr., Acting Commandant of the Eighth Naval District, who announced today that candidates are being sought in almost all branches, particularly in the medical and engineering branches of the Reserve.

Procurement quotas for Reserve Officers have been increased recently and the eight states of the Eighth Naval District have been called upon to add approximately 1,250 to the commissioned ranks of the Reserve in the next few months. Emphasis was placed by Captain Thomson on the splendid opportunity which this extension of quotas provides for professional men who wish to place their needed services at the disposal of their country in this time of unlimited national emergency.

Only the quota for the Supply Corps remains filled and vacancies exist in virtually all other branches. Those who have degrees in civil, mechanical, chemical and electrical engineering are especially fitted for commissions in the En-

In "Too Many Girls" At Summer Casino

Miss Paula Stone, daughter of the famous Fred Stone, will head the cast in "Too Many Girls," which follows "The Desert Song" at Fair Park Casino.

The return of Jack Sheehan to the cast at Fair Park Casino has been heralded with enthusiasm throughout the state. Sheehan made particular hits in "Rose Marie" and "Countess Maritza."

Three other new leads will be introduced in "Too Many Girls" among these are Rodney McLennan, Jack Goodie and Nina Olivette, Miss Joan Roberts, who sang the role of Kathe in "Student Prince," also returns to the cast of "Too Many Girls."

gineering branch of the Reserve service. Doctors and dentists are needed for service in the Medical Corps and Dental Corps. Five will be commissioned in the Fifth District as Chaplains. There also is a demand in the aviation branch and it was said these men do not necessarily have to be pilots, since many will perform administrative work at various shore establishments when called to active duty.

Ranks to which individuals may apply for appointments are determined by their age and experience. In general, candidates must have a college education, plus practical experience, but under certain conditions applications are accepted from those who have had sufficient professional experience in certain fields to offset their lack of a college degree. All applicants are subject to a physical examination and minor physical defects may be waived in certain cases.

Full information regarding necessary qualifications, as well as the method of making application for the various branches of the reserve may be obtained at the nearest Navy or Naval Reserve Recruiting Station or inquiries may be addressed directly to the Director of Naval Reserves, Fifth Naval District, Federal Building, New Orleans, Louisiana.

Patrolman Here

G. W. Modest, patrolman out of the Waco office of the State Highway Patrol for this district, arrived in Hico Wednesday morning to assist in handling traffic and keeping order, if needed, during the Reunion.

It is hoped that this record may be perpetuated this year, and that no serious accidents or occurrences will mar enjoyment of the picnic.

Refrigerator prices reduced

The average price of an electric refrigerator 20 years ago was $600.

The average price today is $154—for a lot better product.

One thing that has made this price reduction possible was that millions of people bought electric refrigerators. Volume brought prices down.

And one thing that made volume possible was ADVERTISING, which taught people to want electric refrigerators.

That's how advertising helps bring prices down.

Patriotic Theme

and individuals in the parade was so general that it would be impossible to name each and every one. At the head, as usual, was Tyrus King as standard bearer, while L. A. Powledge carried a large Confederate flag on his mule. Mr. Powledge said that the ages of the pair totaled 107 years. "I'm 82 and my mule is 25," he said. Other mounted riders included Brushy Hill (O. L. Roberts), Mrs. Pauline Hubbard, Mrs. Bryan Carl, Mrs. J. N. Russell, Uncle Dock Alexander, Arch Corbett, Buddy Carl, J. T. King, Perry Clepper, P. B. Bolton, L. A. Hicks and daughter, E. Holley, and a number of others.

These were followed by a car containing the major and president of the Chamber of Commerce. Decorated floats and cars among the entries included those from the Palace Theatre, L. B. Bowman, Hoffman's, a number of bicycles and riders, Barrow Funeral Home, Hico Fire Department, Ladane Attractions, American Legion, Hico Chamber of Commerce, Hico P-T, A. Lynch Hardware, C. M. Tidwell, Barnes & McCullough, Iredell Band, J. W. Rishbough, Duran Motors, Stuart's Pontiac Co., and the Hico School Bus.

"Hico Reunion Are Bust!" was the sign that adorned the back of a hack carrying Bobby Bates, Paul Kenneth Wolfe, Eugene Ramey, and Thomas Ray Coston. They won a prize.

An unanticipated but appreciated addition to the parade this year was a representation of the Texas Defense Guard unit from Stephenville, presented through arrangements with Capt. L. E. Bredberg of that city.

The Hico Band and Drum Corps, under the direction of Roy C. Boaz, added a lot to the carnival atmosphere during the parade.

Indicative of the patriotic trend of the entries was the first prize winner in the division for most attractive floats, won by Barnes & McCullough. This entry featured a "Statue of Liberty," portrayed by Miss Eleanor Metcalf of Belton, with a miniature home in the background and the wording, "Worth Defending."

Hoffman's float, on which Max Hoffman, Henry A. Wieser and Dave Foust depicted "The Spirit of '76" also aroused much favorable comment. The patriotic entries of the Chamber of Commerce, first prize winner, and of Barrow Furniture Co., second prize winner, also were colorful and fitting.

Funeral Services Held Here Monday For Mrs. Hardy

Annie Laura Slaughter was born in Bell County, Texas, January 25, 1862. She died at the home of her daughter in Dallas, August 2, 1941, on the hour previously set for her departure for a visit in her old home, Hico, with her many and beloved friends here.

She grew to young womanhood at the place of her birth, united with the church there, and later met and married William Henry Hardy, Jan. 21, 1881, who preceded her in death, Sept. 2, 1937.

The pioneering couple with a rapidly growing family lived for some time in the Indian Territory before returning to Texas and settling near Hico, where, at various homes they dwelt for nearly half a century, living from 1916 in Hico.

Of the children born to this union, seven reached maturity, one, James Emmett, dying in 1937. Six children survive the mother: Mrs. Otile Gambia and C. B. Hardy, Yuma, Arizona; Mrs. T. J. Johnson and W. B. Hardy, Hico; Mrs. Lyle Golden, Dallas; and George Hardy, Corpus Christi. She is survived also by a brother, Rufe Slaughter of Big Spring, and a sister, Mrs. Lou Sutton, Hico.

She was laid to rest beside her husband and son at Hico Cemetery, Aug. 4, at 2 p. m. Services were held at the grave, Rev. Alvin Swindell officiating. Ike Malone, Arthur Hendricks, Shady Williams, Silas Johnson, P. B. Bolton, and Herman Munnerlyn were pallbearers.

In failing health and constant pain throughout the last two decades of her life, no words can express the deep and abiding love she lavished on her children; no phrase tells of her great goodness; and for the sweet memory of her which blooms in the hearts of all who knew her there is no word.
