Congress To Take Time To Write Marshall Plan Bill

WASHINGTON—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee is planning to ask prominent Americans from all walks of life for their opinions of the Truman, Eustace, Marshall Plan for European recovery.

Democratic Leader Liston (R.I.) a committee member, told reporters this Monday, that the Republicans will offer a similar bill. Senator Liston will probably be the first opponent when the committee begins hearings January 7.

Lawmaker Says ‘Flying Saucers’ Russian Missiles

A member of the House Armed Services Committee, who asked that his name not be quoted, said yesterday that the United States could counteract possible Russian missiles by using “flying saucers” or other advanced weapons.

The member, who had been briefed on the subject, said that the Russians had reportedly tested a missile with a range of 1500 miles, which could hit the United States.

He said the “flying saucers” would be capable of carrying nuclear warheads and could be deployed within months if the United States decided to do so.

The member also said that other advanced weapons, such as laser beams and directed-energy weapons, could be developed to counteract the Russian missiles.

He added that the United States should continue its research and development efforts in these areas to ensure that it can effectively defend itself against any potential threats from abroad.

Modern Farm Machinery Becomes More Simple, Speedy, Efficient

In the past, some of the biggest jobs on farms were done by hired hands, with only a few farmers being able to afford the necessary equipment. But now, with the introduction of multiple-purpose machines, the farmer can do virtually everything on the farm with a power unit tightly built into the tractor. This feature is that a power unit is part of the tractor. The tractor is designed to burn out weeds instead of the farmer finger-tip command of the tractor. The tractor is designed to have more skillfully than the opposition tells lies about the farmer.

Don't Be Afraid Of Bare Walls, Critic Advises

BY CYDIA LIGHT

NEW YORK—12.20—Dwelling-decorating critics do not agree that the mere elimination of all paintings and panels is the way to decorate a truly American home.

To the contrary, they say, the most effective way to decor- rate is to use one element as a means of influencing the other.

The idea of the massed array of paintings and panels as a means of giving rooms a definite character is well known to the majority of housewives.

The critic is at a loss to understand how anyone can believe that there is no place for one or more paintings on a wall.

Paintings are considered to be an integral part of the life of every home. They are the only way to introduce a sense of color and vitality to the rooms.

One problem that the critic has often encountered is the difficulty of choosing a picture that is really representative of the home owner's taste.

The critic suggests that the best way to solve this problem is to use a picture as a means of introducing a new element to the home.
