SONS in the SERVICE

Morehead, Ky. Everet Edward Storey, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Storey, Rt. 3, Friona, Texas, was recently graduated from the Naval Training School for electricians...

This intensive six-weeks course he has just finished included instructions in electric theory, wiring, mathematics and general electrical methods.

The following letter from Cpl. Charlie W. Owens is the first letter the Star has received from any of the Friona boys, who are now in North Africa.

Algeria, North Africa, Feb. 14, 1943.

Dear Mr. White: My copy of the Star is reaching me surely but slowly, and I am very glad to get it. In the letters of "Sons in the Service" I am referring to the October 23, '42 copy of the Star, where Frank S. Truitt related his experience with a steak at Kodiak, Alaska.

We deeply regret that post-office regulations now prohibit the mailing of "free" papers overseas. However, the paper may still be sent if the soldier sends in a written request and pays for a subscription or has one paid for (on his request) by friends or relatives here.

We had not heard from our good friend, Frank S. Truitt, for many weeks, but the following letter assures us he is still all right, and still likes HOME best.

Feb. 23, 1943. Dear Mr. White:

I should have written you I know, before now, but we have been asked by the censor to keep our letter writing down to a minimum and in that way assure ourselves of a better mail service from the States. You are doing something of which to be proud, Mr. White, in that you are including in your paper something that all the boys in the service like and look forward to receiving each week. "Sons in the Service," is appreciated by all the fellows; and I, especially, thank you very much for sending me the paper.

Senior Play March 20 The Senior Play, "Demon in the Dark," a mystery comedy will be presented, Saturday night, March 20. Watch for more news in next week's Star.

Farm Credit Facilities Adequate To Needs

With planting time approaching for America's greatest farm production year, an appeal was issued here yesterday to Parmer County farmers who still may need financing to make necessary arrangements without further delay.

Raleigh C. Middleton, rural rehabilitation supervisor for the Farm Security Administration, said farmers today are in a better position to obtain necessary operating credit than at any other time in history.

"This is one year," he said, "when every farm owner, tenant and share cropper in the land can get adequate credit for producing critical food."

"Banks and all of the different public and private credit agencies have plenty of money to lend and they're anxious to put it to work so that this nation and her allies will be well fed," he continued. "It's the best year, from a credit standpoint, our farmers have experienced."

Mr. Middleton explained that those farmers who cannot secure adequate financing from the regular lending agencies, due to lack of security or because of tenure arrangements, can obtain operating funds from the Farm Security Administration.

"The applications for loans received this spring by FSA," he said, "are considered mainly to the extent of how much they will boost food production. This agency has streamlined its procedure and has loan money available to meet almost every conceivable farm need." Under the new war-emergency program, part-time farmers and those residing on small

Radio Helps H. D. Work In 1942

More than 50 per cent of the farm and ranch families in the district were given information on homemaking during the past year, over radio stations at Lubbock, Big Spring, Sweetwater and Clovis.

In addition, the contributing county home demonstration agents prepared 18 special scripts. Miss Elsie Cunningham—Parmer County's agent, was responsible for a weekly homemakers' program from the Clovis station.

This radio service will be continued throughout 1943. Women, also, lent an efficient hand in farm work. Mrs. R. G. Lee, of Parmer County, substituted a pitchfork for a household tool to assist in stacking kaffir heads, which is representative of the effective assistance by farm women outside the home. —From Extension Service News.

Judge Temple, Parmer Pioneer, Died Monday

News of the death of Judge J. C. Temple, which occurred near his home at Farwell, Monday afternoon, brought a pang of sadness and regret to the heart's of his many Friona friends and business associates.

He died suddenly of heart failure shortly after he had reached Farwell, after one of his many business drives out in the county. He had seemed in his usual condition of health during the earlier part of the day, and showed no sign of ill health when he alighted from his car and started walking along the sidewalk.

Judge Temple could hardly be said to be a citizen of any particular place in Parmer County, but was rather a citizen of the county, throughout its entire length and breadth, as his business duties took him to all parts of the county, and there were very few farmers in the county with whom he was not acquainted.

Judge Temple came to Parmer County in 1905 and had for the past 30 years been in the employ of the Capitol Freehold Land and Investment Company of Chicago.

Funeral services for the departed pioneer were held at the Steed Memorial Chapel at Clovis, N. M., Wednesday afternoon.

The Star hopes to be able to give a more detailed sketch of the life of this popular pioneer in next week's issue.

Rev. Joe Wilson Takes Pastorate At Sundown

After having served as pastor of the local Baptist Church for more than five years, Rev. Joe Wilson four weeks ago tendered to the congregation his resignation as pastor.

The pastor's resignation was accepted by the congregation as effective after four weeks, which came to an end last Sunday, and the local church is temporarily without a pastor.

Rev. Wilson has accepted one of several calls that have been tendered him, and has moved his family this week from Friona to Sundown, the pastorate which he has accepted.

During his stay here, Rev. Wilson by his faithful work in his congregation and his ever readiness to help with all his might in any field and in any place where good could be done, has proved himself to be, not only a faithful and kind pastor, but a real citizen and community worker as well; and through the display of these admirable qualities, he has won a large circle of friends and the highest respect and esteem of the entire community irrespective of church affiliations, all of whom regret his departure.

In all his pastoral and community work Rev. Wilson has been nobly aided and seconded by his good wife, whose ability as a worker with young people in religious endeavor, not only in their congregation but in the community as a whole, has been seldom equaled. Her fine standard of culture and refinement has made her influence felt and respected in any and all community efforts with which she has been associated, thus making her husband's work doubly effective; and as they leave Friona for a larger field of service, they take with them the good will and best wishes of all Friona.

Rev. Price in Amarillo Hospital Rev. John W. Price, pastor of the local Methodist church was taken to the U. S. Veteran's hospital at Amarillo last Saturday, and Tuesday afternoon was reported considerably improved by Mrs. Price and son who visited him there. He may have to remain in the hospital for some time.

COGITATIONS and APHORISMS of Jodok

I am feeling just a little queer tonight as I sit here pecking out the words on my little Corona, which are to form this column for the next issue of the Star, and it seems queer to feel queer when one is not really queer, and it is queer that one seldom realizes that he himself is queer, and that it is only the queer notions of his friends that make them think of him as queer, and it is queer that they will have such queer notions. And had you ever stopped to think how queer it is that so many queer people are so queer? And another queer thing about it is the number of queer meanings that are given to this word "queer."

Many people, especially my intimate friends, think I am queer, and the fact that I realize that they think rightly, and that I really am queer, proves the correctness of their opinion about me, and that is queer; for most queer people do not realize that they are queer, and that is also queer. I have frequently heard people say, "This is a queer world." From one sense they are right and the world is queer, while from another viewpoint, it is not queer but the most natural thing with which we come in contact, and that is queer. This little Corona is a queer little machine. It has the same standard key-board and works on the same mechanical principles as my old standard Royal, but I cannot operate it nearly so well — and that is queer.

Then again, people who are not queer do some very queer things—thoughtlessly of course—but nevertheless, queer. I have known good men to loaf in a barber shop, when they had been served, or did not want any service, and because they were there, other prospective customers would stop and look in, and because the loafers were there, they took it for granted that they would have to wait, so they passed on to another shop or maybe they went home and shaved themselves; anyway the barber lost their 25 or 50 cents which was that much out of his day's wages, and it is queer that men will do such things. I never loaf in a barber shop only while waiting my turn, and when I have been served I get into my coat and under my hat and go on my way at once so that I may not cause the barber to lose another man's patronage, and that I suppose, is one of the traits that make me queer. One time I was going to take a bus for Hereford and there were fifteen minutes until the bus was due, so I thought I would have a shine put on my old rusty shoes, but when I stepped into the shop a man sat in the shine boy's chair, deeply engaged in conversation with another man, who had already been served by the barber. I looked at the man, then at the boy, and he looked at the man then at my rusty shoes; but still the big man sat and talked and soon the bus was due and I had to leave. But while I waited, another man with rusty shoes came in and he looked at the big man and then at the boy, and the boy looked at the big man then at the other man's rusty shoes, and I know his palm itched for that dime, which he might have made, but the big man kept on talking and the other man went on his way with his rusty shoes. Then a second man came in and he wore cowboy boots with his pants legs hooked up over one ear of his boots. I do not know how many cattle that indicated that the cowman owned, but his boots were rusty and he did not have time to wait while the big man held the chair and kept on talking. Thus he had caused the shine boy to lose thirty cents just because he did not think to get out of his chair when he had his shoes shined. He was not a queer man, and it is queer that he should do such a thing.

Then, today I was talking to a mighty good man, a man of serious and deep and mostly correct thinking; and he told me that he had visited a "gazer" or what is commonly called a "fortune teller" and that after a few minutes in conversation with her, he had her to tell his fortune, which she did by gazing into the crystal globe and thus divining both his past and his future; and as to the past, she was astonishingly near the facts. Of course, as to his future, that must yet be determined by coming events. But, since my friend does not believe in "fortune-telling" some people would say that it was queer of him to have it told. But it is not so queer. In fact, it seems to be the most natural tendency of man to try to sound the future without the serious labor on his part of doing any serious thinking for himself. If he can have it handed to him "right off the reel" by someone else, it is much easier for him. Therefore I contend that my friend was not queer, but just simply following an acquired human tendency; therefore, not queer.

I have never had my fortune told—in fact, I have never had my fortune in any manner, either foretold or real, either in material goods or lucre; yet, I am not ready to say that there is no truth in the practice of "fortune telling." It may be a truly logical matter, and one of the propensities which any or all minds may possess, if the art were fully developed and made known. I do firmly believe that not one one-hundredth part of the powers and attributes of the human mind has yet been discovered by itself. And one of these attributes may be that of divining or sounding the future.

The fact that I have never had my fortune told, in fact, any great desire to do so, while holding this queer view of the matter, may be another of the queer traits that cause me to be queer. But, be that as it may, it seems to be that way nevertheless.

As I have stated above, I do not believe that any but a very minute portion of number of the powers, faculties or attributes of the human mind have as yet been discovered and still fewer of them have been developed into anything like a science. Therefore, we know but little of what it is possible for us to know; and that is queer. I do believe that the individual human mind is but a minute portion of some greater portion of mind, which might be called the Cosmic mind, from which the human element has come and which is the source of all knowledge and power, and which some psychologists have designated as the Universal mind. Therefore, psychologists have also designated the human mind as the Conscious mind, and the intervening connecting link as the Subconscious mind, and I do not know of any better designation for either of the three divisions of mind.

There is a substance or rather an existence surrounding our earth, which supports our life-giving atmosphere, and for want of any better name, we call it ether, and out and beyond the stratum of our atmosphere or air, that same condition or power, existence still pervades, filling all the illimitable space among and supporting the innumerable heavenly bodies. We can neither see, feel, hear nor taste, yet it must be there, for science tells us that Nature despises a vacuum, therefore she would hardly have created one so vast as space.

What, then can this great and unknown force be other than what I have above mentioned as Universal mind. And whatever this Universal mind may be, it is what I call GOD, and what Jesus referred to as His Heavenly Father? And such conclusions, gives an easily understood explanation of what Jesus meant when he said to his disciples; in the 11th verse of the 14th chapter of John's Gospel: "Believe me that I am in the Father and the Father in me." Then in the 20th verse of the same chapter where he said: "At that day ye shall know that I am in the Father, and ye in me, and I in you."

I have heard many divines try to explain these two passages of scripture, but all their explanations fell flat on my intellect, and I have done much cogitating over them, finally to arrive at the above as my own self-sought and self-sound conclusions, with which I am perfectly satisfied; but I am not so much as hinting that any other person shall accept it as their conclusion. It probably suits JUST ME. And that is one more reason why I am "queer."

I fancy I can hear some of my good, sympathetic friends saying: "The poor old boy surely has gone 'nuts,' (crazy) now. No, not crazy—just 'QUEER.'"

CARD OF THANKS
So many folks have so kindly asked where we are going and when, that we take this method of saying to one and all that we are going to Sundown. At present the Pastor's Home there is under re-construction, but we will go this week. We want to say to the wonderful folk of Friona community, that the five years and more, we have spent with you, have been some of the pleasantest of all the years the Lord has permitted us to live. More than we have words to express, we have enjoyed your fine spirit of fellowship as neighbors and fellow workers, in every community enterprise in which we have had a part. Your spirit of cooperation has been grand. You have made it easy for us to love you and we shall go away to remember you as a most wonderful people. We shall ever remember you in our devotions to God. May you ever continue in the fine spirit of community cooperation and neighborliness that you have shown during our sojourn with you is our prayer.

Sincerely yours,
Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wilson and Jeanne.

Santa Fe Reports

on its first year of war operation

Crowded Trains Our passenger traffic volume was up 102 per cent last year as compared with 1941. Gasoline rationing, in our territory, will increase that volume even more this year.

The Santa Fe must handle this additional load with its present passenger cars, as no more cars will be built during the war.

Late Trains In these days of unprecedented passenger volume it is not always possible to maintain schedules with on-time regularity. ... and since military trains have the right-of-way over everything else, they often cause our regular passenger trains to be delayed.

At many stations along the line, mail and express are heavier than in normal times—and take longer to load. This is another reason why trains are delayed.

Car Shortage Special troop trains are becoming almost routine on the Santa Fe. In just one case, we moved an entire division from one camp—and it took 55 complete trains to handle the men and equipment.

We must also keep our passenger cars in constant service to handle the increased traffic all over the line. For this reason, we cannot always concentrate extra cars at any one point.

Freight Cars Due to the submarine menace and the diversion of freighters to other services, almost all of the intercoastal freight tonnage formerly handled by ships through the Panama Canal was hauled by the railroads in 1942.

This brought about an unusually heavy demand for Santa Fe freight cars. ... increased considerably the average length of haul ... and occasionally caused delays in delivering empty cars at some loading points. It also indicates Santa Fe has many busy months ahead.

Keep 'Em Rollin'! Please remember there's only one thing we want to do more than keep trains on time and supply cars as promised—and that's keep troops and war freight on their wartime schedule. And we know that's the way you want it!

Farmer John SEES THINGS

I have just got in from milking the cows and feeding the hogs with a concern in mind to write about the shortage of protein feed for the stock. Some way, the pigs' impatient squeal and bossy's disappointed look, couldn't be cured with the assurance that they would get their fair share just as soon as the powers that be, could set up a quota. Money was not effective in getting the feed, and there was no "black" market available. The much needed pork and butter fat was in jeopardy. Patriotic urge and self interest demanded food production should be derived from this livestock. The situation had the earmarks of an emergency.

The "Farmer John" column was about to flunk for the lack of a logical solution for that, and a host of other problems. In desperation, a search of the "holy writ" for a solution or, at any rate, a suggestive title was contemplated. But, as luck frequently plays tricks, a copy of Nation's Business, with an article entitled—"The Hazards of Quoting Scripture" saved the day. Therefore Merle Thorpe, a writer of national fame, writes for the Star this week. The article follows:

The Hazards of Quoting Scriptures

The advocates of bigger spending as a post-war panacea are taking in more territory. The bigger the job, the bigger our spending budget; and to justify it, our zealous ones now resort to Holy Writ for text and authority. Three top speeches on the subject recently have used illustrations from the Bible. One group of Yogi-type ones, when questioned (upon request) by Bruce Barton, moved further forward in the Book, from the Old Testament with its ever-normal granary, to the four Gospels.

What did the master do, they replied pontifically, with the money the servant was a-frail to invest, who buried it to save it whole? He took it away from him; therefore, the lesson is plain for our times, when bankers and business managers hesitate to risk the savings others entrust to them, our Government should likewise take this money, by taxing or borrowing, and spend it to relieve unemployment and to create prosperity.

That sounded reasonable, but we remembered an old lawyer's advice, who once said he had learned to his sorrow not to accept a sentence out of its context. So we reread the Parable of the Talents in the light of this 1943 interpretation.

Right away we discovered why the man with money and gods turned them over to his agents. He was about to travel into a far country." Selah!

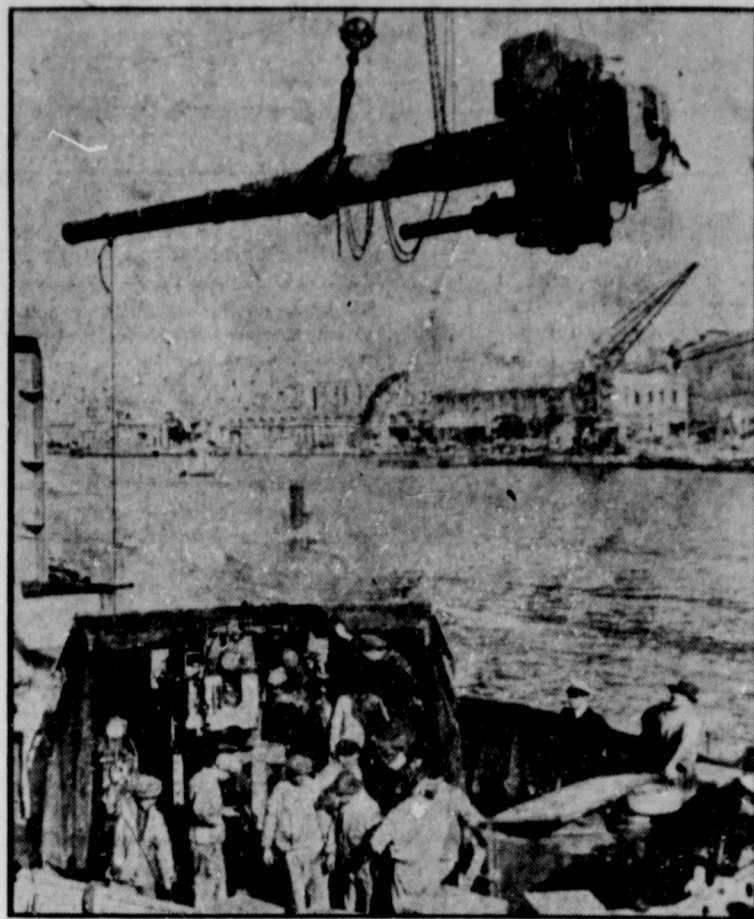

In distributing his wealth, you will recall he dispensed it not in equal amounts on the theory of every man a king, but to each "according to his several abilities"; ability, we suppose, proved by experience in making money work, and turn over, and multiply. Later to one servant who expressed doubt as to his ability to invest wisely and profitably, the master chided, "at least thou oughtest put my money with the exchangers." This seems to indicate a reliance on those with a special knack for managing and getting money into productive jobs.

Likewise the master went all out in praise of the two who made a profit, the "good and faithful servants" who returned the original investment with a dividend thereon, even up to 100 per cent. In those days, obviously, there was an incentive for profit and honor for him who made it.

But to hurry along to the point where the money was taken away from the cautious one, who felt the incentive not equal to the risk. After all, this is the nub of the parable used by the Keynesians in support of government taxing and borrowing and spending.

True the master did take away the silver talent from the servant who digged in the earth and hid it, but what did he do with it? He gave it to the one who had doubled his investment, the one who had taken the biggest risk and had made 100 per cent. And it was at this point that he called the 100 per center not a profiteer but a good and faithful servant.

It seems to the lay preacher that the choice of this particular parable is an unfortunate one for the deficit financiers, especially since the last line pictures an outer darkness and predicts that "there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

To our discredit, we admit less knowledge of Holy Writ than is good for us. Nor have we forgotten Shakespeare's line, "The devil can cite Scripture to his purpose." So we shall leave Scriptural interpretation of our economic ills to our betters, taking refuge occasionally in Ben Franklin's, "He that goes a borrowing goes sorrowing."

REMEMBER THIS..

..if you're annoyed by "private blackouts"

Military blackouts are often necessary these days . . . but "private blackouts" aren't! You can save time and nervous strain . . . as well as the annoyance of an unnecessary blackout in your home by remembering two things: (1) Keep a supply of fuses . . . correct size . . . always handy. (2) Check your switch box fuses immediately if your lights go out . . . replace any "blown" fuses with your good ones.

Here's How . . .

1. Go to the main switch of your meter box. Stand on a DRY SURFACE and turn off electricity.

2. Remove "blown" fuse, touching only its top. The fuse with the scorched spot in the "window" on top is the one to remove.

3. Replace "blown" fuse with new one, as you would a lamp bulb. Then turn on the main switch.

Sixth Grade News
We were sorry to lose one of our much loved students last week. Betty Jo DeBusk, who moved to Arlington, Texas, our very best wishes accompany her to her new home and school.

In our history class, we have been having interesting reports on the invention of the sewing machine, the steamboat, the telegraph, and other things which have meant so much in the progress of civilization in a practical way. The stories in our reader the past week have been on such famous men as Mozart, Beethoven, Corot, Millet, Leonardo da Vinci, who have given the world such marvelous beauty in the realm of art and music. These interesting studies were a delightful relief after 6-weeks tests.

Sophs Sponsor School Movies

The Sophomores were in charge on Friday, March 5. Announcements about the Victory Corps were made by Nola Faye Smith; Betty Mae Massey gave a talk on "Hobbies"; and last, but not least, were the moving pictures shown by Mr. Maurer. During the show, many "ahs" and "ohs" were heard from the crowd as some of the students saw themselves on the screen for the first time. The faculty members seem to make a very nice subject for the camera. Who knows—we may lose our faculty if Hollywood gets hold of them.

WISE . . . AND OTHERWISE

Who is Bobbie Jean writing to when she does not have a stamp?
Why does Carolyn always stand by the Spanish door? Who comes down the hall? Could it be Dale?
Cleola is wanting to go to the Lakeview party. Who lives out that way?
We wonder what girl misses W. B. in Algebra I class when he is absent???

Webster was in a hurry about hiring Fern as his private secretary. Was she "that" convincing in her application?

Seniors Prepare For Future

With graduation coming soon, the seniors have already taken a step in securing a vocation for the future. The English IV class, which includes all the seniors and a few juniors, has been studying letter-writing. To make this more interesting, most of the students have written letters to some college asking for information concerning that college.

In class, Friday, all members of the class made an oral application to a manager for a job. This procedure helps one and gives him an idea of what it will be like to make an application for a job. Mr. Ginn was invited to come to class and act as a critic, and he also served as a manager for a while. All of the students did fairly well in spite of the nervousness that each felt.

GEOMETRY CLASS STUDIES MORSE CODE

Beginning Friday morning, the geometry class began the study of the Morse Code. This course is very useful, especially during wartime. It will be studied during the latter part of the period in geometry. It is offered as a whole period subject in many schools now.

Bad Weather Stops School Bus

Brrrr! It really wasn't so very warm Tuesday, March 2. Anyway, March did not come in like a lamb. This accounts for the fact that the Messenger Bus did not arrive at school Tuesday or Wednesday. Because of a weak battery the bus could not be started, and all the water would not drain out; therefore it froze and burst the water jacket. The bus was easily fixed and the driver resumed his route Thursday.

EXCHANGES

"Doctors are pretty well agreed that drunkenness is a disease and that the man who is a drunk should be treated by a physician."
"Yeah! Most of the drunks I know don't care who treats 'em."
"The boss says that when he was a boy on the farm they had a mule that was just like one of the family."
"Yes, and I know which one."

SOME SALES PERMITTED

Canned chicken meat, canned turkey meat and other canned poultry meat are exempt from the freeze on sales of canned meat, the OPA announces. Sales of these canned poultry products may be made without restriction.
