The Missus "Ducks" Out

Slim Hartman took his missus duck hunting the other day. And after five hours of sitting in a swamp, she'd had enough! Going home, Slim reminded her good-naturedly of the time she'd taken him to a woman novelist's lecture, and insisted that he sit it out.

So now the missus and Slim have an understanding. No more duck hunting for her—no more lectures for him. They decided each to his own taste.

It's because they can agree to disagree like that, I think, that

Get More For Your Money Planning And Not Just Shelling Out That Cash

COLLEGE STATION — It's natural for farmers to want to look ahead and give some careful consideration to planning their farm operations.

But sometimes these same "plan ahead" folks forget about the family expenses and the income that pays these expenses. And that's really a problem that some people don't think much about, says Gladys Darden, assistant extension home management specialist of Texas A&M College.

Many families find it hard to stay within the income any year—especially in these recent post-war years of high prices. You can get more for your money by planning ahead, rather than just "shelling out" from time to time, says Miss Darden. Without budgeting the income, many unnecessary things are bought. And some of the needed items are put off until later.

What To Do With Income

Quite a few questions come up about what to do with the income. Some folks wonder whether to buy more land, or get ahead on the mortgage payments. Another family has to decide between sending Johnny to college or buying a new tractor. The whole family should go into a huddle in matters such as these, says Miss Darden.

Here is a guide to better spending offered by this specialist. Family can figure this pretty close from past year's records and the present outlook.

1. Know your needs, and decide which one is most important.
2. Know your needs, and decide which one is most important.
3. Know what to look for, read the labels and make comparisons.
4. Keep records of the money that goes out on both farm operations and family and house expenses.

Miss Darden says families who keep records for the first time are amazed at the amounts spent for unnecessary items during a year. To make record keeping easy and simple, she suggests getting a record book with such headings in it as food, clothing, household, house repair, furnishings, equipment, medical care, recreation and miscellaneous.

Makes Job Easier

This makes the whole job easier when it's possible to jot down the expenses in the proper column. And if you get the book now, it will be ready to go to work for you January 1.

Put a pencil with the record book and keep them in a handy place—in the business center of the house, so you'll know where it is. Have a regular time for making entries, suggests Miss Darden. Some families find once a week is convenient. Others may prefer a day to day business.

Getting bills and sales slips as the purchases are made takes the guessing and forgetting out of record keeping.

Keep the record book handy.

THE ANSWER TO— What Is Ahead In Crop Situation

COLLEGE STATION — What's ahead in the crop situation for next year?

This question may be asked by a great many Texas farmers says C. H. Bates, extension farm management specialist of Texas A&M College. And here's his answer.

There's a caution sign out for the wheat and feed grain producers. Prices of these crops will probably drop about a third this winter and early spring. So they will be about a third lower next year than they were in 1948. Exports may still be as large next year, but are being trimmed in places by large demands for durable goods and armament.

Should Have Good Year

Figuring on average weather conditions, cotton farmers should have a good year. The agricultural economists figure twice as much cotton will be exported next year as last. At the same time, the nation here at home won't use quite as much as in 1948. The support prices will hold at 90 per cent of parity—which means the government loan price will be around 27 cents for middling seven-eighths inches in Texas markets. Merz, again, says Bates, an acreage-bearing next year might mean production control problems into the 1950 picture.

Peanut growers do not know yet whether marketing quotas will be in effect. Support prices announced for 1949 will average about $210 per ton. So to get guaranteed prices, the goober growers may have to comply with acreage controls authorized by last year's referendum vote.

Lower Peanut Goal Seen

And the way it looks now, the acreage goal for peanuts next year is likely to be down 10 per cent or more.

That's about the size of things as they look now, says Bates. Two of the big things that will affect these crop outlooks next year are the government spending for European relief and the military preparedness program. Everybody will be watching these, because they'll have a big effect on support prices of crops.

Sailing vessels are classed according to the particular combination of spars, sail and cordage, and the words "cutter," "brig," or "ship," are really abbreviations for "cutter-rigged," and "ship-rigged."

VETERINARIAN SAYS— Good Water For Stock Important

COLLEGE STATION — Cattle need water.

That's something people have known and believed for a long time. Certainly cattle need water—and so do all the other animals. People too.

The thing is, says Dr. W. C. Banks, extension veterinarian of Texas A&M College, cattle need water that is clean, fit to drink, and located where the cattle can get to it without much trouble.

During the winter time, when the lakes and ponds freeze over, cattle have a hard time getting any water. And when they do get it, the water's too cold. It's a good idea, when possible, to warm up water for cattle during the cold months. The water doesn't have to be too warm, but the cattle will drink more of it if the water is brought up to 60 or 70 degrees.

Sometimes there just isn't enough water for livestock. That's when trouble really begins. Take this past dry spell during the summer and fall. On a number of farms and ranches, the usual reliable tank went dry. Result: water had to be hauled in, or the cattle were forced to walk long distances to get it.

Water is important in the proper digestion of feed, good milk production and the normal growth of cattle, says Dr. Banks. Many veterinarians give several buckets of water as part of a treatment to ailing animals. Many of the digestive troubles clear up faster when the animal is given plenty of good water.

Ten gallons of water a day is about what cattle normally drink. When they don't get this much, trouble may—and usually does—start. This is especially important during the winter time when cattle are fed only dry feed, says Dr. Banks.

Legume Planting Reduces Rot Root Losses in Cotton

COLLEGE STATION — Losses from root-rot disease are markedly reduced following rotation of cotton with certain legume crops, according to research results just released by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Findings of a 5-year study conducted at the Temple sub-station are given in Bulletin 699 entitled "Control of Cotton Root Rot by Sweetclover in Rotation." Sweetclovers best adapted to growing conditions in the central blacklands of Texas are Melilotus indica and hubam. Both were used in the rotation experiments reported in this bulletin as winter and combined winter-summer crops.

Rotation with hubam that is grown to maturity at least once every third or fourth year was found the best means yet known for the control of root rot in the central blacklands.

In addition to a larger yield of cotton through disease control and increased soil fertility, hubam provides additional farm income when used as pasture for livestock or when harvested as hay or seed.

Authors of the bulletin are E. W. Lytle, formerly plant pathologist of the Temple station; A. A. Dunlap, head of Texas A&M's Department of Plant Physiology and Pathology; H. O. Hill, now superintendent of the Station's Bluebonnet Farm, and J. R.

Johnston, superintendent of the Temple station.

There Seems To Be Plenty of Good Literature For Children This Year

By PHYLIS RADOVICH

Christmas plus children equals books just as one plus one equals two, and this year there's a bumper crop of really good books in the line of children's literature to please both giver and receiver.

The modern young mother who said, "Oh, don't give Johnny a book for Christmas, he already has a book," hadn't taken a peek at what the publishers are offering this year.

Prices run fairly high, ranging from $1.50 to $3 but production costs are up, too. Anyway, some of the output is destined to become children's classics. Publishers' addresses are included this time, so if there is a juvenile on your list to be surprised Christmas morning, you can get that book order in now.

Picture Books Good

Picture books carry off some of the top honors. MacMillan Company of New York has just brought out Louis Slobedkin's book "Hustle and Bustle," the side-splitting account of two hipopotamuses in the Central Park zoo who loved each other dearly until one unhappy day they fussed. It was sad. Everyone worried about the hulking suiking, big beasts; everyone from the other zoo animals to the entire New York police force.

But one memorable day everyone gathered at the park, the mayor made a speech on the beauties of friendship, the police band played "Never Forget the Forget-Me-Nots," and while the crowd cheered, Hustle and Bustle made up—but not until they had shed such enormous quantities of tears of repentance that the whole crowd had to climb to higher ground.

But it is the illustrations, even better than the story, that really merit acclaim in this book.

One For Young Farmers, Too

For budding young farmers there is a picture book, "Creepers' Jeep," by Hardie Gramatky, published by G. P. Putnam and Sons, New York. It tells how Creepers won the jeep at the County Fair. Father said it was no good and Creepers had to prove it could help with work around the farm.

Just as he got convincing, however, the rambunctious jeep disgraced itself and Creepers by throwing the farmer and his wife into the town fountain while all their neighbors passed enroute to church. In the way of all good story books, though, there is a happy ending with the jeep heroically rescuing the farm animals from a barn fire. And one remarkable picture book called "Bears" was brought out by Harper and Brothers of New York. The illustrations are by Phyllis Roward and the story, by Ruth Krauss, runs as follows:

"Bears, bears, bears, bears, On the stairs, Under chairs, Washing hairs, Giving stares, Collecting fares, Stepping in squares, Millionaires, Everywheres, Bears, bears, bears, bears." Good story books, too, for the youngest generation include the Robert Lawson book, "Robbut," issued by the Viking Press, New York.

"Robbut" Tale Of Tails

Robbut is a rabbit and "Robbut" is a tale of tails. Robbut is not pleased with his own particular tail, and searches persistently for another animal's tail to wear. He finally learns his lesson. Other animals frills and features do not become a bunny.

The pictures are wonderful. A rabbit with a snake's tail is something worth seeing. Especially for little girls is Rumer Godden's "The Doll's House," also by the Viking Press of New York. She weaves an exquisite story of four dolls in London, forced by the housing shortage to abide in old shoe boxes, and she lets Tottie, the century-old Dutch doll heroine describe the doll house she first lived in.

Highlight of the story is the discovery of this very same doll house and how it is restored while the dolls watch bright-eyed from the mantelpiece—and little ris will listen with the same bright-eyed wonder.

Next week, we'll run a quick review of some of the books for older boys and girls.

More than 107 volcanoes are known to exist in Iceland.

Iceland, when discovered by the Scandinavians around 850 A. D., had long been inhabited by a small colony of Irish Cuidees.

The name "Idaho" is taken from a Shoshonee Indian expression meaning, "Look, the sun is coming down the mountain!"

At the turn of the 20th Century, ice-hockey was so popular in England it was considered a national past-time.
