HOOVER CARRIES TERRELL COUNTY BY FOUR TO ONE

In Tuesday's election, which by no means was without interest, Terrell county like the majority of the state went to Hoover by more than four to one. However all the state and district nominees went Democratic. There was a total of 534 votes cast in the county.

In the county office race, in nearly every instance where there were opponents, the vote was close and at times doubtful. The final returns however are as follows:

For County Judge:
G. J. Henshaw 523
For County Attorney:
J. Calvin Stansell 257
Alfred E. Creigh Jr. 247
For County and District Clerk:
Luella Lemons 266
E. F. Howard 248
For Sheriff and Tax Collector:
Leo A. Cook 255
W. J. Eanner 264
For Tax Assessor:
Fred Yeates 180
Jim Nance 335
For County Treasurer:
Frank K. Harrell 522
For County Surveyor:
John Stovell 31
W. D. Hunter 3
(Neither of these men were running)
Public Weigher:
P. E. Dishman 1
J. W. Happle 1
(Neither of these men were running)
For Justice of the Peace Precinct No. 1:
Henry Gates 242
J. J. Nance 115
For Constable:
J. E. Landers 357
W. C. Vaughn 2
(Mr. Vaughn was not a candidate for this office and his name was written in)
W. E. Stirman was elected Commissioner of Precinct 1; E. P. Peoples received 57 votes and C. C. Chambers 31, for Commissioner of Precinct 2. In Precinct 3, R. E. Corder received 11 votes, C. H. Arvin 9 and J. C. Mitchell 1 for Commissioner. In Precinct 4, M. H. Goode Sr. received 43 votes for Commissioner. In Precinct 2, W. A. Latimer received 30 votes and Mrs. M. Miller 1 for Justice of Peace, and John Gray received 1 vote for Constable. In Precinct 3, Albert Appel was elected Constable and R. N. Allen Justice of Peace.

All the amendments carried in this county.

Armistice Day Program

Armistice Day will be observed with a special service at the Presbyterian church, under the sponsorship of the local troop of the Boy Scout of America. The service begins at 7.30 p. m. Sunday, November 11. Mr. Alfred E. Creigh Jr., will deliver a tribute to the dead. H. D. Johnson, Jr., will give a short oration on the subject, "War." A brief sermon on the subject, "Greater Love Hath No Man Than This." There will be special music.

The morning worship takes place at 11 o'clock, with a sermon by the pastor on the topic: "The Wind-driven Chaff."

The Bible school opens at 10 a. m.

All ex-service men, their families and friends, are especially invited to the evening service.

J. A. MacMillan, Minister.

CARD OF THANKS.

I wish through the columns of this paper to express my sincere thanks to my friends for their votes and support in the election of Tuesday. I assure you that I appreciate the confidence placed in me and will endeavor to always merit and deserve that confidence.

Sincerely,
W. J. Eanner.

HOUSE MOTHER AT SOUTHWESTERN DIES

Georgetown, Tex., Oct. 31.—Mrs. Daniel Morgan, 60, for the past two years house mother of Mood Hall at Southwestern University, died late Tuesday night in a Temple hospital after more than a month's illness. Mrs. Morgan was the wife of the Rev. Daniel Morgan, late member of the Central Texas Conference of the Methodist Church. She was the mother of nine children, Mrs. Ruth Ferguson, assistant professor of English in Southwestern; Paul Morgan, professor of English in the East Texas State Teachers' College at Commerce; Lucy Belle Morgan, professor of Spanish in the Martha Washington College, Virginia; Mrs. Key M. Ingram and Mrs. Roberta Pierce of Bay City; Mrs. Mary Mills of Sanderson, Mrs. Olive Dolan of Cherokee, and Mrs. Anna Kelley of Plainview. Mrs. Morgan was prominent in the Missionary Society of her church, of the D. A. R. and the U. D. C. Funeral services will be held Thursday morning, November 1, at 1-0 o'clock in the first Methodist Church here, under the direction of Prof. H. L. Gray and her pastor, Rev. Edmund Heinsohn. Burial will occur in the Odd Fellows cemetery.—San Antonio Express.

Mrs. Mills' many friends here regret to learn of the death of her mother and extend to her their deepest sympathy. Mr. and Mrs. Mills left last Sunday a week ago for Temple in response to a message that her mother was very sick. They returned home Tuesday.

Birthday Party.

John Lee O'Dell celebrated his eighth birthday last Friday afternoon at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Dell, when he was host to about 80 guests. The Halloween decorations were carried out and the "old witch" was present and delighted each guest by telling them their fortune. Several contests were also enjoyed by the children. An appropriate reading was given by Melvin Pollard.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the Voters of Terrell County: It is with pleasure that I wish to thank each and every one for your vote and support that was given me in the election Tuesday in re-electing me County and District Clerk. I appreciate the support and work that each and every one did for me.

I wish to state that in the future I shall as diligently and faithfully tend to the duties of the office as I have in the past.

At any time I can be of help and of service to any of you don't hesitate to ask me.

Sincerely,
Luella Lemons.

Mrs. Annie Ware, who has for the past year been managing the Kerr Hotel dining room, bought the Stansell home this week from Ed Downie, who just recently bought the property from the J. C. Stansell Estate. The price paid was not made public.

Mrs. Ware will soon as possible move into the Stansell home and will continue to keep boarders as well as roomers.

What Accounts Are Profitable

Contrary to general opinion, banks do not make 6 per cent profit on each deposit made in a checking account. A general average of profit is 4 per cent and from all deposits 15 per cent must be deducted as a cash reserve.

In banking circles, it is generally accepted as truth that accounts whose balance falls below $200 are an expense to the bank.

In view of this, our service fee of 50c per month for accounts whose balance falls below $50.00 is just and reasonable.

Church of Christ Notes.

Christians are "declared to be the epistles" of Christ. 2 Cor. 3:1. Verse three of this letter says, "But in fleshly tables of the heart." But to what extent the heart affected? Base line. All works of civil engineering of surveying it is of first importance to settle upon a base—a main line taken as a line of operations, and on the correctness of which the whole depends.

All measurements are made from this base line. The elevation or depression of valleys or mountains are noted from this base line.

In popular topographical or geographical phraseology, the base line of measurement is the sea's surface. When we speak of a mountain as being fifteen hundred feet high, we do not mean that it towers that high above its neighboring mountains, but that it is fifteen hundred feet above the level of the sea's surface as a universal base line. In practical engineering, or surveying it is customary to settle upon a base line for the time being, other than to adopt the ocean, which may be very far beyond the point under examination.

But the base line once fixed upon, every measurement must conform to it, or there is no hope of accuracy or success in the operations in progress. The base line in religion is the hearing and doing the things of Jesus. Mt. 7:24-28. The "Infinitely Safe Way" will be the subject considered at 7:00 p. m. Sunday, 3:00 p. m. following at the 11:00 o'clock service.

Worship with us.
R. E. GRIFFITH, Minister.

Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank the men and women of this precinct for the splendid vote given me at the election last Tuesday. Your loyal support will never be forgotten and I assure you I will discharge the duties of the office to which you have elected me, faithfully and impartially.

P. I. A. Has Meeting.

The regular November meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association was held last Thursday afternoon at the high school. A most interesting meeting was held and a fair size crowd was present.

At this meeting the association made and completed plans to install a cafeteria on the school grounds for the benefit of the school children. They also will install a hot water system for the domestic science laboratory and for the shower baths. They also voted to buy more books for the library. Mrs. Charles Downie Sr. gave a nice donation to the Association in the form of a check for $150 and stated that as soon as she returned to her ranch home here she would have several volumes of books to donate. A committee was appointed to work for and solicit subscriptions for the Holland's Magazine.

At this time the president, Mrs. J. H. Loehausen, was elected as delegate to the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers Association which meets in Amarillo from November 12 to 16. Mrs. J. W. McKee, vice-president of the association for this district, will also attend.

In the thrift exhibit many nice and thrifty things were on display. Mrs. O'Dell won the first prize in this exhibit, she having made an ensemble suit. The prize was $1.50 dry cleaning donated by the Empire Cleaners and Dyers. Mrs. Lea won second prize she having made over a silk dress. A box of stationery donated by the Sanderson Drug Company was this prize. A middy suit made by Mrs. J. H. Loehausen was the winner of third. There was no expense attached to any of the garments, except the thread to make them.

The next meeting will be on Friday night, December 15, at 7:15 at which time "Father's Night" will be observed. A worthwhile and interesting program has been planned and refreshments will be served. Let's hope that we have a big crowd out at this meeting.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again.

Economic Danger in the Rapid Spread of Use of Labor-Saving Machinery

By JAMES J. DAVIS, Secretary of Labor.

WE ARE coming to realize that it is a serious matter to have any men out of employment. To prosper we must work and produce. If our present prosperity is to be maintained every able-bodied producer in the country must be kept employed for the maximum period of the year and at the maximum wage.

One element of economic danger to our workers, and so to our prosperity, arises from the rapid spread of labor-saving machinery, what we call the mechanization of industry. In all our great industries machines are being introduced at a rate which justifies calling it a new industrial revolution.

It is only the period of adjustment that needs to be watched, the time during which a man displaced by a new machine must wait and perhaps suffer until he can find a new occupation. Manufacturers will soon see the mistake in too rapidly putting in machines and throwing out workers.

The long day and the long week should be as obsolete in America as serfdom and chattel slavery. Wipe out the long week and you enable consumption to catch up with production and so keep men in their jobs.

The man kept at work all the time has no time left in which to see and buy things. Give him more leisure and he will consume more and want more. He will develop new desires, and so create new demands, new markets for new products.

Existence of Life in Immaterial Things Conceded by Scientific Thinker

By SIR OLIVER LODGE, British Scientist.

Science, with all its great work, has not eliminated the accumulated wisdom of the ages. The immensity of possible discovery contrasts with our feebleness in putting it into words. For that reason never throw away hastily any old faith or traditions because of some dogma of science, do not run foul of conventions merely because you do not see the good of them.

The problems do not get easier as the world grows older. The extraordinary multiplicity of plants and animals is astounding. What an imagination the Creator must have had! Our growth of knowledge of the planetary system shows that everything is governed by one system of law. Order permeates all space, which leads us to postulate the existence of some great being who controls all. Even space is full of the animation of life and matter.

Real existence is a much wider thing than terrestrial existence. We are mistaken in believing that life can exist only for material bodies. It can exist, perhaps better, with immaterial things. Our senses tell us only about matter and that is why matter only has loomed so large in our minds. Life can exist in the interspaces as well as on the planets.

Passion for the Welfare of Others a Rich Experience of Human Life

By REV. DR. HAROLD LEONARD BOWMAN, Portland, Ore.

It is the most glorious news that man can learn that he is a child of God, an inevitable possessor of a share in the divine life, a child of God. The term "Our Father" means more than that. It signifies that at the heart of all things is love and good will.

True religion cannot be merely an individual affair. It must include both our attitudes and our actions toward other people. If we accept as valid Jesus' picture of God as father, if we rise to His concept of the interrelation of the human and the divine, if we believe that God is love and that He seeks the highest good of all men—then there are startling conclusions to which we are forced. We, His children, must come increasingly to share that love and be governed by its spirit. As children of a father, sharers of His nature, we must share His interest in His other children.

If we let divine love operate in and through our lives we shall find more and more a passion for human welfare, an eagerness for the highest, fullest experience of all human lives.

"Lame Ducks" Not to Be Considered Unregenerate Outcasts of Society

By DEAN ROBBINS (Episcopal), Washington.

There is not only use for the "lame duck," there is also hope. Science is continually making headway in its long warfare upon disease. Malady after malady that once resisted stubbornly now yields to treatment. The victim of tuberculosis, who was once shut up in a stuffy room to die, is now bunched off to Saranac lake or Arizona to get well. The victims of drug habits and of alcoholism, who were once considered hopeless, are now being reclaimed to society by the application of principles of psychology.

Pity is another answer to elimination. As men grow sner, stronger, more self-restrained, more civilized, they grow more pitiful. The truly civilized man assumes voluntarily the care of the incapable. Some divine instinct has taught him that his fate is bound up with theirs. This law of pity has embraced all weakness, all dependence, even all delinquency.

Faith of Judaism Always a Way of Life; Never Has Been a Creed

By RABBI LOUIS L. MANN, Chicago.

Judaism has no fundamentalism because it always has been inevitably and inherently evolutionistic. Religion, according to Judaism, never was a creed, but always a way of life.

Ours is an age of confusion. In the sphere of religion the clash of fundamentalism with modernism, in its vain attempt to turn the hands of the clock backward, holding on to legends and superstitions that have outlived their day, is sadly significant.

In the realm of morals we have witnessed the breakdown of authority. In the field of education a mechanistic philosophy and a behavioristic psychology jostle one another, while education remains mere propaganda. In civic affairs crime is allied with politics. In the sociological realm the institution of marriage is threatened. In literature, art and music classicism and romanticism have given way to jazz.

The Easiest Way to Keep in Style

By MAE MARTIN

No woman would wear dresses, or blouses, or stockings of a color that's decidedly out of style or faded, if all of us knew how easy it is to make things fresh, crisp and stylish by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing.

Anybody can tint or dye successfully with true, fadeless Diamond Dyes. Tinting with them is as easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little longer. New, stylish colors appear like magic, right over the old, faded colors. Diamond Dyes never spot, streak or run. They are real dyes, like those used when the cloth was made. Insist on them and save disappointment.

My new 64-page illustrated book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of money-saving hints for renewing clothes and draperies. It's Free. Write for it now, to Mae Martin, Dept. D-143, Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

Pilot Flies 250,000 Miles

Paul Witte, an air pilot of the German commercial air service, recently completed a total distance of 400,000 kilometers, which is equal to nearly ten times around the world, in scheduled air service. On his arrival at the Hamburg airport he was given an official welcome during which he was presented a gold scarf pin and many floral gifts.

A Sour Stomach

In the same time it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has acidity completely checked, and the digestive organs all tranquilized. Once you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating.

This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or fetid breath signals need of a sweetener. Physicians will tell you that every spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Get the genuine, the name Phillips is important. Imitations do not act the same!

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all of the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster without the burn. You feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, chills of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu."

KIPLING FINDS PAL IN ROAD LABORER

Famous Poet Hobnobs With Octogenarian.

Burwash, England.—Rudyard Kipling eludes publicity but he can't elude Mr. Lavender. Perhaps it is because Mr. Lavender is eighty-one years old and deaf and not at all fond of conversation that Mr. Kipling doesn't try to. For Mr. Lavender is the poet's new confidant and "pal," and folks around here say he "hears" all the great man's secrets.

Mr. Lavender—William is his first name—is by profession a road mender. He has been mending roads around this district for a very long time, and somehow the job never seems to get finished.

Mr. Kipling lives about a mile down the road and takes a stroll in Mr. Lavender's direction every morning. There is a conversation stilt near Mr. Lavender's bit of road, upon which Mr. Kipling perches and quietly watches his old friend work until the "cricks" in Mr. Lavender's back call a halt. Then Mr. Kipling opens the conversation in a loud voice. Let Mr. Lavender, unabashed by the society of the great, tell the rest of the story:

Knows Mrs. Kipling Twenty Years.

"Oh yes, I have known Mr. Kipling and Caroline for twenty years now," he draws casually. "Caroline," by the way, is the only name the old man will use for Mrs. Kipling.

"They usually come along just when I'm in the middle of my work. Then they sit on the stile and Mr. Kipling hollers, 'Come and sit down along of me, Lavender.'"

"Often I do and often I don't, but when I do I just say 'yes' and 'no' and 'that's right.' For, between ourselves, for the last five years I have hardly heard a word he has said. We talk a lot about cattle, or lenstways I think we do, and he says all he's got to say and I listen. Then I get up and says, 'Well, sir, I've got to go on with me work,' and Mr. Kipling tries to get me back on the stile, but I says, 'No, sir, no. Work's work, and I've got no time for chattering.'"

"But he's a nice gentleman with a lot of education and I only wish I could hear what he is saying."

Asked in thunderous tones whether he was not flattered at the attention of the famous poet, he replied, shouting, "I don't know that I exactly enjoy it, but I don't mind it."

Lavender Has Rival.

Mr. Lavender has a fellow road mender, one Mr. Stonestreet, to whom Mr. Kipling also talks. But Mr. Stonestreet has quick ears and so he isn't told any secrets. The conversation is usually about local topics and it often terminates in a discussion concerning the action of the local district council in ordering a small trench to be cut on the border of Mr. Kipling's land to carry off the water from the roadway. The poet feels very strongly about this, according to Lavender & Co., as the water thereby floods his land.

"Sometimes he says to me," supplements Stonestreet, not to be outdone by Mr. Lavender. "Why can't you leave my land alone? But when he is not talking about his land he goes on for hours about Sussex and cattle and crops. He seems to know a lot about cattle, too, and he's a regular history book about Sussex. "But if he were to see an American," concluded Mr. Stonestreet, with a warning look, "he would run a mile. He only talks to Mr. Lavender and me."

$6,400,000,000 in Cash Now Circulating in U. S.

Washington.—The stock of money in the United States September 30 was reported by the treasury today at $8,213,615,127, or $40.82 per capita for the estimated 118,720,000 population on that day.

Of the total money stock, $6,415,083,402 was in circulation outside of the treasury. The actual per capita stock of money showed a decline from the $82.19 figure reported one year ago.

Of the $6,415,083,402, the treasury added, federal reserve banks and federal agents held $1,598,420,000. In consequence, the circulating money outside of the treasury and the federal reserve system amounted to $4,846,663,507.

Eleven in Japan Taxed Over Million Yen a Year

Tokyo.—Japan has 11 multimillionaires who pay more than 1,000,000 yen a year in income tax, and eight of these belong to the two great families of merchant princes, the Mitsuis and the Iwasakis. Returns for the fiscal year ended March 31 show six Mitsuis, brothers and cousins, in this chorned circle.

The Mitsuis also supplied the largest individual taxpayer for 1927-28, taking that honor away from the Iwasakis. In 1925-27 Baron Kiyuo Iwasaki topped the list with 4,000,000 yen to Baron Hachiroemon Mitsui's 3,000,000. Now it is the head of the house of Mitsui's turn, since he leads with 2,700,000 yen to his Iwasaki rival's 2,000,000.

What Doctors Say About the Laxative Habit

What do YOU do when the bowels need a little assistance? If you clear-up the condition with some laxative made with CASCARETS, there is nothing better for the system—for the blood.

But if you don't KNOW the laxative you have learned to depend on is of harmless cascara, here's some truly valuable advice: The bark of a tree called cascara is the most marvelous conditioner mankind has yet found. It stimulates the bowels' muscular action, but does NOT weaken. A violent laxative forms the LAXATIVE HABIT. You always need more on the morrow. With cascara, you don't. Its gentle influence carries on sometimes for days. With less and less of any aid, as times goes on, So, the very next time you feel sluggish, take only a candy Cascaret. Delightful to the taste, sweet and acceptable to any stomach, and just as efficient as the powerful purges that fairly paralyze the peristaltic walls of one's intestines. The only habit you'll get from Cascarets is the one of going weeks and months without ANY help of the kind. And when you do invoke their aid again, the same small dose suffices. Any doctor can tell you about cascara; and any druggist has the candy Cascarets.

Trees Grow in Swamp Without Visible Soil

Huge trees growing without any visible means of support are a striking feature of the great Zapata swamp of southern Cuba. This swamp, nearly 1,500 square miles in extent, includes an area of limestone that is filled with holes and covered with a variety of tropical trees. Silk-cotton trees four feet in diameter, big mahoganies, and many other kinds are found growing on this limestone area, where not so much as a single spoon of soil could be gathered from an acre. The trees make their start in small pockets and holes in the limestone, where collections of leaves and slight accumulations of disintegrated rock furnish them with cover for growth. The roots stray about over the surface of the rock in search of food, finally plunging through holes to find sustenance in soil hidden deeply in the cavernous recesses of the coral stone.

Airmen's Echo Test

Even when the ground is obscured by thick fog, a series of explosions like a machine gun's rat-a-tat-tat within a plane's undercarriage tells an airman his exact height, in a new device to be installed on French aircraft.

The echo from the ground is picked up by electric sound detectors which gauge the craft's altitude, and the device is said to give accurate measurement to within one foot from the ground.

SYNOPSIS

On a certain Monday morning Miss Constance Fuller, seller of rare books at Darrow's Bookshop, New York, notices that the first customer is a dignified old gentleman, who saunters into the alcove, placarded "Medical Works." Peter Burton, one of the employees, amazes Constance by telling her he paid $510 at auction for an old law book containing a Colfax bookplate. Suddenly a girl's shriek of "Murder!" rings out. The elderly customer is on the floor unconscious, with his right wrist slashed. Just before the shrieking girl falls in a faint, she calls out to Peter: "Keep it! Keep it for me!" Peter's sister, Nancy, began that morning working at Darrow's. Nancy tells Constance of her elopement with Brandon Tower, an elopement which was cut short when Tower attempted to make off with Nancy's suitcase. Constance explains Darrow's card-index system to Captain Ashland, a nephew of Mr. Darrow's. They examine the book Peter paid $510 for and find the bookplate to be a forgery. Constance is asked to assist Detective Almy in his investigation of the murder of the elderly gentleman. The girl who fainted, Julia Grosvenor, turns out to be his granddaughter. She can throw no light on the mystery. Constance removes the bookplate from the old law book and discovers a small key secreted in a hollow on the cover. She makes other discoveries, too. The next day it is discovered that the book has been taken from a locked drawer in Constance's desk.

"On examining the bookplate with a magnifying glass, I noticed on it an object that bore the same pattern—in miniature, of course—as the arrangement of those sixteen slits you see on that paper. I took the object as some kind of surgical instrument, as it was on a table with others I could identify, such as the scalpel. This instrument had sixteen slits, six down the center, a row of five on each side of the central row."

"All the same size?" asked Mr. Roberts, eyeing the yellow note again.

"Yes, just as those slits are."

"What did this instrument look like?"

"A small, cube-shaped box. I can't even guess its purpose. It has what I take for a handle on the back, and something that looks like a small lever, on top. But, since this instrument appears on the bookplate in this book which conceals a key, and on this yellow slip, picked up just before the accident, there is found pierced the pattern of the instrument, I fancy there's some connection among all these facts."

"Tell me about this key," said Mr. Roberts.

"I described how it was fastened into the book cover, and made a rough sketch of it, also of the instrument drawn on the bookplate, which he then recollected having seen the day before. I related how I had heard the time-clock ring twice in the course of the past evening, at twenty minutes past seven o'clock and at a quarter past ten; how, directly after the second time, I had seen Mr. Case and the stranger standing below me, as I waited on the balcony; how the two recognized each other in silence, and how the stranger vanished. I concluded with all the details of the morning, including Mr. Case's asking for the book, and returning it untouched."

"It's most unfortunate you had to be here alone all morning," frowned Mr. Roberts; "but it's time to send for Almy, and tell him all you've discovered, or believe you've discovered, about that book."

"Do you really think it's important?"

"Possibly; at least, something of what you say confirms a fact hitherto held in confidence; to know it now may help you. You saw Mr. Case searching, you believe, for this book which you think an object to so many persons. Well, he was absent from the conference on Monday morning shortly before eleven o'clock; and during that time he was seen in the rear of the bookshop."

"The thrill that ran through me was anything but pleasant. Mr. Roberts continued:

"He stepped out of Mr. Darrow's office, saying he wished to get a certain list of books from Miss Wilkes, whose office is of course on the fourth floor. A few minutes later he returned with the list, but he was seen during that time coming down the rear gallery stairs into the shop."

"Who saw him?" I demanded.

"Miss Grosvenor. She doesn't know him; but in the course of accounting for her movements, to Almy, she described having seen Mr. Case that way."

"Do you think there was any connection between him and Grosvenor after all?" I hazarded. "I thought he didn't know him."

"No; what he said was that he had never seen Mr. Grosvenor in the shop before and the other clerks had. It may be that he did know him. Your statement of his interest in this law book, provided it can be proved that Mr. Grosvenor also had an interest in it, might confirm this idea."

"Why did I lose that book! And who took it?"

"Perhaps Almy can trace it. At all events, we have this note of yours, your statements, and your sketches, to work on. And don't let worrying over past mistakes lead you into further ones. This case isn't growing less troublesome."

"What's happened now?" I faltered apprehensively.

Mr. Roberts looked decidedly disturbed as he replied:

"It has been learned that Miss Grosvenor, in accordance with a frequent custom of hers, visited her grandfather's safe-deposit box last Saturday; she alleges that he sent her, that she delivered to him two thousand dollars in Liberty bonds, which he wanted for some transaction; and a complete memorandum of their numbers was found in his desk, in her writing. But on Wednesday these bonds were sold in the market for Charles MacIvor, her cousin."

"But I thought he said—"

"The radio message regarding his grandfather's death could not be delivered. He was not on the ship."

I was thunderstruck. I recalled Ernesto's "She likes him pretty good. I'm sorry," and how Julia herself had told me her cousin had said—how strangely she had spoken of him.

"What does she say?" I finally asked.

"She insists she gave the bonds to her grandfather, and knows nothing further about them."

"Looks bad," said L.

"Yes," said Mr. Roberts.

He had agreed with me! I left the office in a panic.

CHAPTER IX

Night at Normandy Terrace

Nancy was awaiting me at my desk, as it was two minutes past five o'clock. She insisted on my accompanying her forthwith to Normandy terrace, declining my offer to appear tactfully just before dinner.

So we went forth. "Say, who do you think spent last evening with me?" Nancy asked.

"I couldn't guess," I returned, simulating enthusiasm, but really tired out and worried to a point where I didn't care at all.

"Cheer up; you'll be interested when I tell you. It was that Miss Grosvenor who lives downstairs."

"The idea!" I gasped, galvanized into life again. "So good. . . really, you oughtn't . . . where was—"

"Peter? Gosh to Raynes-Forside, you remember. I hope some other time he will have a chance to meet her; she is a nice girl, though not sophisticated. I had met her on the stairs that morning, and introduced myself as a new neighbor, and asked her to come and see me if she felt like society any time, because I at ways did."

"Doesn't it seem a little soon after her bereavement for her to be making calls on a stranger?" I suggested frigidly.

"No; not under the circumstances. She's been almost alone ever since she got back from the hospital Tuesday. We had a nice time. I made a point of telling her how good Peter was to me, bringing me to that lovely apartment—"

"What?"

"And I showed her his picture, and told her how everybody thought such a lot of him at Darrow's. And she told me about her work in the Aldrich studios, which she simply loves. But

French Houses Pretty, but Not Comfortable

Have you ever—but of course you have—raced down in a too swift train from Cherbouurg to Paris, through the French countryside on a spring afternoon when all the apple trees in Normandy are in full bloom? And through the trees you catch a glimpse of little old farmhouses that have stood there in the midst of their flowering orchards for centuries? Enchanting, these little houses; but according to modern standards hardly comfortable. The kitchen antiquated, and the work done there made doubly difficult because of lack of equipment. No these little houses are lovely to look at; on a walking trip, if light came on too quickly, one might enjoy staying over night, perhaps, sharing a French supper with the farmer's household, en famille, gathered about the kitchen table; sleeping in one of the little rooms under the thatched roof, listen about furniture, for one so young. My father has stacks of mahogany four posters and applewood corner cup boards and banjo clocks. How he

Burial of Giants

To bury a woman who died at Maquassi, South Africa, the services of 30 men were required. The coffin was 3 feet 4 inches high at the shoulder and 6 feet 3 inches in length. Twenty men had to assist in putting the corpse into the coffin, and 30 palbearers lowered it into the grave. The deceased, who was a young woman had been bedridden for a year. Owing to her weight a special bed had to be made on the floor.

Greek Gathering Place

In ancient Greece the Agora was the place of assembly, usually the market place.

I'm sure she detested her grandfathers. "I'm amazed that she should have even hinted such a thing!"

"Do you really think she would have had such rotten taste, especially when he was dead?"

"Then what do you mean by saying she didn't like him?"

"I said I thought not," said Nancy, meekly. "I saw in the paper that he had a million dollars, so of course anybody would have liked him if possible. But she had to work terribly hard, and she never seems to have had any fun. She invited me to go to see her this evening, but I said you were coming to see me; so, as she remembered your name, she said, from having heard that you took care of her when she fainted, she invited you, too. . . . No, it's not impossible to go, because I have accepted for both of us."

"Perhaps," it occurred to me, "Miss Grosvenor, having extracted the information she desired from me the other day, is now in a mood to give some. The evening may be profitable, after all."

So, after a suitable interval had followed an excellent dinner served presided over by Ernesto, I followed Nancy downstairs to the second-story door which, unknown to her, I had entered two days previously. The long room, with its bright ceiling and rose wood furniture, over which lamplight

The intruder, a tall handsome young man, flashily dressed, tossed his cap on the table, as if he felt quite at home. "Pardon me for interrupting your party, Julia," he said easily. "Of course I didn't realize you might be having one. Still, this is the only practical way I could get here. Other people, you see, are trying the ordinary ones. Dear me, have I already frightened away one of your guests? Sorry!"

Nancy had indeed disappeared. I had not noticed her departure until that moment. But I had no intention of following her, however clear the visitor's hint to that effect might be, for Julia cried out in a desperate voice:

"Don't go, Miss Fuller! Please don't leave me!" She was in an almost uncontrollable state of terror. I was frightened, myself, especially by the creaking of that revolver the minute before. But it would not have been like Nancy to run from danger, and Julia made no motion to leave the room.

"But why, my dear Julia," interposed the visitor, smoothly. "do you ask this lady, with whom I have not the pleasure of being acquainted, to stay. I shall be gone within five minutes; all I wish to see you about is one of those family matters which are such a bore to one's friends."

"I won't see you alone!" dared Julia with unprecedented vigor. "If my friend will stay, you can say what you have to say before her, or else not at all. What do you suppose she, or anyone else, would think of your breaking in here this way, at this time of night? You'd better say something first to explain that!"

The young man bowed obediently. "My excuse must be," he observed to me, "that this is my own house. My name is Charles MacIvor, and I have the honor to be Miss Grosvenor's cousin."

I may have succeeded in conveying my opinion of him without speaking. He turned abruptly to Julia. "You know what I've come for," he said. "Have you got it? I'll make a most liberal settlement with you. You can stay here as long as you like. Haven't I explained that to you over and over again? Think about it. You owe me something."

"I haven't got what you want," said Julia shortly. "Do you think I'm not telling the truth? When have I had a chance to get it?"

"Where is it?"

"Where it's always been."

Charles MacIvor swore under his breath. My attention was fixed on him. His face was unfamiliar; yet his bold charm was arresting, and there was something vaguely familiar about him as he stood there gazing menacingly at his young cousin. Yes, it was that cap, more unmistakably that rapid determined gait I had seen Mr. MacIvor, with that cap on his head, stand up from beneath my desk the previous night at a quarter past ten, and walk with that same headlong stride past Mr. Case and out of Darrow's front door!

And I had seen him on the stairs in this house last Monday noon when I was in the restaurant with Nancy posing before the hall mirror, and hurrying down the hall. And I knew now the reason why at that moment he had seemed vaguely familiar; because I had seen him dash down the aisle of the shop that same Monday morning, with his brief case! So this was Charles MacIvor, Julia's cousin. And was he in pursuit of the object regarding which Julia had cried out to Peter, an hour or two after Charles MacIvor had dashed down the aisle. "Keep it for me?"

would love that enchanting little sawing table! She indicated the miniature table I had noticed on my first visit. "We've nothing like that, though I've seen some in antique shops."

"That's something special, though," returned Julia; "it's just a dummy, a cabinet-maker's model. It's not useful for anything but ornament. My grandfather frequently had such objects made, when he was in the lumber trade, to show off samples of wood. But if you'd like to see something really quaint, I'll show you my pet candle stand I laid in five shades of green, that gave me quite a nice idea once for a big lampshade they liked at the studio. Wait just a minute!"

She went off through the door at the rear of the long room, leaving Nancy rapturously beginning another puzzle, and me highly impatient. It was late. Somewhere I had heard a clock striking eleven, not long before. The silence in Normandy terrace, profound all evening, was now becoming unearthly, particularly for a spot one block from Broadway. Even Nancy sat perfectly quiet, her eyes on her book, as if the night chill had frozen her. And suddenly that strange chill in the air was a cold wind, blowing across the room.

I glanced at the door through which Julia had disappeared. It was shut. I turned swiftly to the French window behind my chair. Slowly, cautiously, it was opening.

Next second, a man sprang through it, from the balcony into the shadow between the windows. From beneath his visored cap, his eyes swept the room. I leaped up, so did Nancy, her eyes glittering like chips from a blue glacier. The intruder rushed forward headlong, knocking over the chair from which I had retreated. The rear door burst open, a strange loud click sounded somewhere; but there was no time to shriek a warning before Julia Grosvenor, collapsing against a distant bookcase, cried out in a mingled astonishment and anguish that rallied me to her support against all misgivings:

"Charles! You . . . again!"

The armistice was signed by the German representatives at midnight.

The announcement was made by the State department at 2:56 o'clock this morning.

The announcement was made verbally by an official of the State department in this form:

"The armistice has been signed. It was signed at five o'clock, a. m. Paris time (midnight eastern time) and hostilities will cease at eleven o'clock this morning, Paris time, (six o'clock eastern time)."

The terms of the armistice will not be made public until later.

IT'S read the official story sent out by the Associated Press which told of the end of the greatest war in all history. Does it bring back to you that breathless hour one November morning ten years ago when whistles began to blow, bells were rung, drums barked and a drum of joy swept over the whole world? In France there was raised a heroic shout of "La guerre est fin!" Across to England and America that cry swept to be transformed into "The war is over! The war is over!" and there followed the most reckless, unrestrained, spectacular celebration ever recorded.

But although the scenes on that day are unforgettable to anyone who took part in the mad riot of rejoicing, how many of us have now, ten years after, any idea of the scene where took place the momentous event which released all that pandemonium of rejoicing? To how many of us does the name of the little railroad station of Rethondes in the forest of Compiègne mean anything more than "just another town in France?" Yet it was here that the Armistice was signed and on this tenth anniversary of that historic event the following account, taken from official sources, of the meeting of the men whose action ended the World war should have particular interest:

The scene was laid in the middle of the forest of Compiègne where Marshal Foch's train drew up opposite some old heavy gun sidings at seven o'clock on the night of Thursday, November 11, 1918.

With Marshal Foch was General Weygand, his chief of staff, some staff officers and British representatives, the latter headed by Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss.

On another set of rails, about a hundred yards away, was another similar train, and on the arrival of the German delegates, in the early hours of Friday morning, after their adventurous journey in automobiles across the fighting front, they were accommodated in this train.

As soon as the German delegates arrived a message was sent them to say that Marshal Foch would be ready to receive them at 9 a. m. the same day, Friday, November 11, and exactly on time, in single file, Herr Erberger, General Von Winterfeldt whose father was present at the peace of Versailles in 1871, and Captain Von Vanselow, leading, followed by Count Oberdorff, made their appearance, and in addition there were two officer interpreters.

All of the delegates appeared very downcast and ill at ease, and as soon as they had entered the car fitted for the conference, General Weygand reported to Marshal Foch, who immediately entered, together with the British representatives.

"La Guerre est Fin!"

WASHINGTON, Monday, November 11, 2:43 a. m.—The armistice between Germany, on one hand, and the allied governments and the United States, on the other, has been signed.

The State department announced at 2:45 o'clock this morning that Germany had signed.

The department's announcement at 2:45 o'clock simply said: "The armistice has been signed."

The world war will end this morning at six o'clock, Washington time, eleven o'clock Paris time.

The armistice was signed by the German representatives at midnight.

This announcement was made by the State department at 2:56 o'clock this morning.

The announcement was made verbally by an official of the State department in this form:

"The armistice has been signed. It was signed at five o'clock, a. m. Paris time (midnight eastern time) and hostilities will cease at eleven o'clock this morning, Paris time, (six o'clock eastern time)."

The terms of the armistice will not be made public until later.

THE PLACE WHERE THE ARMISTICE WAS SIGNED

In the foreground is the memorial stone at Rethondes, France, marking the exact spot where stood the railroad car in which Marshal Foch and his staff received the German plenipotentiaries and in which the Armistice, ending the World war, was signed.

At the left in the picture is the building in which that car is now housed. It was built with funds given by an American, Arthur H. Fleming of Pasadena, Calif., to provide perpetual shelter for the car and to serve as a museum of the Armistice.

In calm, even tones Marshal Foch asked the Germans, "What is the object of your visit?" Herr Erberger replied, "We have come to hear proposals for an armistice on land, sea, and in the air and in the colonies."

"I have no proposals to make," answered Marshal Foch.

Count Oberdorff then pulled a paper from his pocket and read a statement made by President Wilson concerning the famous fourteen points.

When he had finished Marshal Foch said that if they desired an armistice the terms would be read, and the German delegates having stated that they wished hostilities to cease, General Weygand read out each article, the French interpreter repeating them in German.

What a dramatic picture this made, perhaps can be imagined.

Herr Erberger, the son of a postman, with his very full face, large double chin and irregular mustache; Count Oberdorff, who had served all his time in the diplomatic service; General Von Winterfeldt, the representative of Prussian militarism, though not aggressively mannered, and Captain Von Vanselow, a naval officer, who, although in uniform, looked more like a merchant.

These, together with their two interpreters, formed one group, and the French and British officers, in their contrasting uniforms, with firm and calm countenances knowing they held the upper hand, opposite.

As soon as the reading of the terms was completed the Germans, looking very dejected, asked permission to communicate with their government. Owing to the fact that the Germans had not brought any cipher, Marshal Foch refused to allow wireless to be used and the terms thus made public properly before personal and consideration, and so Captain Von Heildorf was dispatched to German headquarters at Spa with a copy.

General Von Winterfeldt then asked that hostilities might cease immediately "so as to avoid useless bloodshed" and, speaking in French, he actually referred to the route—"the route"—the actual word used—of the German army.

Marshal Foch, however, would not agree to giving the Germans any breathing space that might allow them to reorganize, and he stated emphatically that fighting should not cease until the terms read out had been definitely accepted and signed.

Independent discussions were continued during the afternoon in the conference car by the various German delegates, the chief matters necessarily being of a naval and military nature, and during these talks the fearful economic condition of Germany was laid bare.

Besides foodstuffs, necessary material for naval and military equipment was in such short supply that the country was very literally at its last gasp.

Another complaint of the Germans was against both the blockade and blackout continuing after the armistice was signed, and it was obvious that both these weapons had had hit their country. However, one of the most important aspects of the whole agreement was then added, namely, that the allies would evacuate Germany.

Night fell on that fateful spot in the Compiègne forest and looking out of the train the fires of the bivouacs of the sentries and guards could be seen twinkling dimly, away in the distance the boom of heavy guns told of the bloody work which was still continuing, after more than four fearful years, and which was away in a paper of agreements, sent over by the Germans, Saturday passed without any visible program, awaiting the message of the German government that the country should occupy Heligoland, but the German delegates did not think that it would be necessary.

Another question that arose was the altering of the phrase involving the "surrender" of General Von Lettow Verbeck "voluntarily."

That evening a wireless message was received from the German government ordering the signing of the armistice, but to add the necessary word "become a prey to bolshevism unless the allies would undertake provisioning."

There was further long discussion, first into the night, concerning Heligoland, as the French and British felt that there must be something to fall back upon, in case the Germans were unable to control their own men, the majority of whom were almost entirely out of hand.

It was finally decided to add an extra stipulation to the agreement, recommending to the German government that the allies occupy Heligoland if the government should be unable to enforce its commands, as if put in stronger terms, would delay away in occasion through having to refer the matter to Spa, should the allies insist on the occupation in any event.

At 2 a. m. Monday, November 11, all the delegates on both sides assembled for a final conference.

General Weygand read out the armistice agreement article by article, and as each was read out the French interpreter translated it into German, and discussion then proceeded until the final form of the article was mutually agreed upon, though, throughout, the Germans kept insisting that the terms were so harsh they would be difficult of fulfillment.

However, all the articles were finally read and discussed, and then Herr Erberger stood up and read out a statement in German, stating that the government would carry out the terms as far as humanly possible.

At 5:15 a. m. all the delegates signed the momentous document, Marshal Foch being the first to sign, followed by the British Admiral Wemyss.

Orders were immediately issued, all over the world, for hostilities on land, at sea and in the air to cease at 11 a. m. on that day, Monday, November 11, 1918, for a period of 36 days, and it is now a matter of history how this period was later extended until the peace of Versailles of 1919.

Thus ended the most important historical event of all time.

The Last Salvo

Two minutes before eleven o'clock the last shell shrieked over No Man's Land. Hostilities ceased with a tremendous crash of American cannon.—Cable Dispatch.

Ghost of Molly Pitcher at Monmouth. Did you hear that last crash of thunder shaking the hills from the Vorges to the Marne.

And the whole world rocking under? Did you stop as you swabbed the watch? And cooled its hot throat with water, To bark to the Yanks' good-by to the Hun.

Across the red fields of slaughter? Seventy-five miles of fire and flame, Volcano and earthquake combining, Trains and ships of shot and shell floating and shivering and whining.

The ground swung round like a weather vane, And the rivers heaved that were near? Oh, ghost of old mad Anthony Wayne At Stony Point, did you hear it?

Hickory Jackson at New Orleans, In the sand-bagged trenches kneeling, Did it knock your cocked hat from your head?

When you heard our big guns peeling? Shaking the skies with their awful din, Like the fourteen demands of Wilson, Smashing the window panes in Berlin.

And bursting the lungs in Pilsen. This was the way it came to an end, Thus was the last word spoken From the narrow seas to beyond the Rhine.

As the world lay black and broken; 'Twas thus was said good-by to the Hun, Doomed with their proud commanders, When the hills were rocked from the Yankee guns.

Part Played by Table Cougars and Catnip

There was a time when not a table existed in the whole wide world. But one day primitive man, weary of sprawling on the ground, rose and ate his first meal from a broad bawn slab laid on bowlders, and from that day his upward climb to civilization began. Today we do not stop to think how much we depend upon tables, but what a dull and inconvenient place a house would be without them. Not only are they at our elbow everywhere to keep things within reach, but how they delight the eye—their lovely designs and beautiful woods. They minister to our comforts, and please our senses with their grace and charm. Each year they increase in variety and cleverness, and each year, because of them, our homes grow more attractive.

ERVE plenty of Karo to the kiddies", advises one of America's greatest Child specialists, "serve Karo specially to underweight children, in milk, on cereals, on sliced bread. Watch their weight increase!" Karo gives muscular energy immediately—there's no tax on digestive organs. Karo contains 120 calories to the ounce—almost twice the ergy value of eggs and lean meat, weight for weight. Children naturally like Karo—its delicious sweetness and vor satisfies their youthful craving for sweets. To know that children like the food that's so good for them, food that leading doctors highly endorse and recommend, is, indeed, good news to every mother.

Good Motto

Charles M. Schwab, who after many years as a leader in steel, is beginning to take things easier, said to a group of gentlemen farmers who were adding some of his prize stock at a Pennsylvania county fair:
"Raising prize stock is something we wanted to do for a long time but have been too busy. Divided attention seldom leads to success and all through my business career my motto has been:
"All work and no play makes Jack a bad lot of it."

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what your experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot put away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

FAVOR TWEED FOR SPORTS WEAR; HATTER'S PLUSH NOW POPULAR

A CERTAIN little word of five letters is wielding a tremendous influence in the realm of sports fashions these days. T-w-e-e-d! An easy guess to be sure, for it is a name which echoes and re-echoes the length and breadth of stydom this season. The strange and fascinating part of it is that no two tweeds look alike. There's a different tweed to greet the eye at every turn—that is, if you are hobnobbing with the smart set, which at this time of the year throngs the grandstand at those exciting gridiron games, where one feels at the moment that there's nothing worth while, except for one's college colors to win. Since tweeds are so diverse it is up to the individual to choose a tweed according to one's type. Then, too, tweeds are as varied in their styling as they are in their coloring and patterning. Just now the "big idea" is for dark tweeds trimmed with white fur. The fur mostly in use is white caracul. At least it is called "white" but it is really an "off-white" natural shade which is too "swanky" for words expressed in fur collar and cuffs and scarf on a rough nubbed with white or deep cream, dark tweed. A tweed sports coat may be "all toggled up" with the snappiest details (see the coat to the right in the picture). There's the cleverest collar on this coat, which buttons in connection with its scarf—and buttons are such a smart trimming item just now. Note, too, the belt of self-fabric and the arresting patch pockets and the fur cuffs, too, if you please. The model to the left makes its "hit" with the fact of its being of a stunningly patterned tweed which is that fetching the styling of the coat has been restrained to simple straight lines, so that the material itself may get most of the glory. However, one also finds style in every detail of the sleeves with saddle shoulders, in the gauclet cuffs and the inevitable patch pockets. Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

TWO CHARMING COATS

By Mary Graham Donner

MADGE'S SLED

She had gone to bed and it was the light before her birthday.

Her name was Madge, and the thing she wanted more than anything else was a sled.

She must have spoken aloud in her sleep—or else the Fairies could hear her thoughts speaking to them in their fairy language, for Fairy Ybab said:

"What would you like to have come true, little girl?"

"Your Wishes Shall Be Granted," Fairy Ybab's voice was so musical and soft that Madge tried to take hold of her to give her a kiss and to stroke her wonderful, soft black hair.

But Fairy Ybab was flying overhead and she only stopped now and then to land on the edge of the bed.

"I wish that we would have ice and snow and that I could have a sled," said Madge.

"And why can't you?" asked the Fairy Ybab.

"Because my mother and daddy are not very rich, and a sled is quite a big, big present."

"I know they want to give me one, for tomorrow is my birthday, but I don't believe I will get it."

"Well," laughed the Fairy Ybab, "and so all you want is a sled and snow and ice. Dear, dear me."

"I know," said Madge, "that I want a great deal."

"Oh, no," said Ybab, "I was not thinking that. I was thinking how little you really wanted."

"It will be so easy for me to grant your wish."

"Can I grant wishes?" called out the Fairy Ybab, and all the other Fairies playing in the background laughed and said in their silvery voices:

"She is a Fairy and she has a magic wand," they cried, "and she can grant many fancies and make many wishes come true."

"Then I wish—" said Madge again.

"Oh, yes," said Ybab, "I know your wishes. Your wishes shall be granted. But I must be off now. There are several people to be seen."

"I must tell the toyshop man to come up to see your daddy early, early tomorrow morning and to make the sled a little cheaper."

"I think the toy man will do that when I ask it of him."

"Dear me, how many times I have made him come down in his prices—quite dreadful of me!" And Ybab smiled.

"I am afraid," she continued, "that I don't help the toyshop man become very rich."

"But, ah, he is happy, and how much better that is than anything in the world."

"And must you see anyone else?" asked Madge.

"Yes, indeed," said Fairy Ybab. "There is my old friend, King Snow, who must be seen, and the little Icicle children."

"I'd almost forgotten, too, the Ice Fairies, who make the ponds freeze."

"Good-by, I must be off."

With a wave of her wand Fairy Ybab had gone.

Mother and Baby Gain Health, Strength and Flesh

"I am so grateful for what Milks Emulsion has done for me that I am writing you this letter."

"I had a terrible cough and for four months was so weak that I had to rest on the bed several times while dressing. In fact, after putting on one stocking I would have to lie down and rest before putting the other on. People thought I had tuberculosis, but they don't think so now. I was so weak that I could not care for my baby, who was not getting sufficient nourishment to give him any strength. But after taking your Emulsion for a few months I regained my health and now I weigh 145 pounds. My baby is one year old and weighs 30 pounds. We are both in perfect health and we thank Milks Emulsion for it."

"You can publish this letter if you care to. I shall always praise Milks Emulsion." Yours truly, MRS. ED. ROUSE, Shelbyville, Ind. R. R. No. 9.

Cougars and Catnip
The cougar is just a great big predatory forest cat, says Chief Jackson of the British Columbia game commission, and catnip means just as much to them as it does to the house cat. We are sprinkling it about the ground where cougar traps are fixed with good results. The big cats like it and we are planning to use so much of it in the future that I am making arrangements to have the herb grown in British Columbia.—Forest and Stream.

Different Destinations
Great Aunt Ann had been ill for a long time and having one of her "bad spells." She remarked that she "was soon going to die, wasn't going to be here long." Little four-year-old Gene hearing this remark, asked her where she was going. She replied she was "going to heaven." Gene said: "I'm not. I'm going to Stillville." His parents had been planning to make a trip to Stillville.

THE STATE OF TEXAS,
 To the Sheriff or any Constable of Terrell County, Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon Fliciano Mata by making publication of this Citation once in each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your County, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in the nearest County where a newspaper is published, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Terrell County, to be holden at the Courthouse thereof, in Sanderson, Texas, on the fourth Monday in January, A. D. 1929, the same being the 28th day of January, A. D. 1929, then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 22nd day of October, A. D. 1928, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said Court as No. 1730, wherein Paz Valles Mata is plaintiff, and Fliciano Mata is defendant, and said petition alleging:

That the plaintiff was lawfully married to the defendant on or about July 17, A. D. 1917, and that they lived together as man and wife until on or about the second day of September, A. D. 1918, when the defendant, Fliciano Mata, deserted and abandoned, with the intention to abandon, the plaintiff. That the said defendant has not been seen nor heard of by the plaintiff since the date aforesaid.

Wherefore plaintiff prays in this suit that her Petition for Divorce be granted and the marriage relation heretofore existing between plaintiff and defendant be dissolved, for all costs of suit, and for such other and further relief, general and special, legal and equitable, to which she may show herself justly entitled, etc.

Herein fail not, and have you before said Court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.
