

BAPTIST REVIVAL

Beginning Sunday night, September 28th, the Baptists will have revival at the Baptist church. Evangelist V. B. Starnes, Waco, will do the preaching. Brother Starnes is "A Man With a Message." I am sure you will want to be there at the first service. The pastor and wife will have charge of the music. They are going to make the music attractive and interesting at the meeting. We cordially invite all who can sing to help. I feel sure that the business men, the school forces and all the community will be glad to give us your co-operation. There will be two services daily; 10 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Classes Organize At High School

The classes of the Sanderson High School, including the eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh grades, met the early part of last week for the purpose of organizing their classes. Opal Shelton was elected president of the Senior Class; Gus Kercheville, vice-president; Lily Strange, secretary-treasurer; and Miss Cox, sponsor.

Ray Qualtrough was elected president of the Junior Class; James Daniels, vice-president; and Ernest Farley, secretary-treasurer; and Miss Jernigan, sponsor. Officers for the Sophomore Class are as follows: President, Cecil Bradley; secretary-treasurer, Mabel Schupbach; and sponsor, Miss Robinson. Harry Newton was made president for the Freshman Class with Miss Martin as sponsor.

We are glad to see this interest in the organization of classes for we feel that it is one of the best means there is for developing citizenship among students. It has become evident to the majority of educators that one of the reasons for poor citizenship among young people is the fact that tradition has taught that education for life consists in the mastery of arithmetic, geography, spelling, writing, and other academic subjects and that to be a good citizen one need only to have a thorough knowledge of the fundamentals.

Unfortunately, a knowledge of mathematics in itself does not necessarily fit one completely to live. There is something much more valuable to be gleaned from study than accuracy and speed in mental gymnastics. The acquisition of subject matter is important and should not be neglected, but progress in academic subjects should not be the only goal. There is a greater and more valuable field to be covered in our school, that is, the field of good citizenship and character training.

It seems that the high school is the ideal place, and the high school age is the opportune time for the training of character and citizenship among its students. For this reason we are stressing extra-curricular activities, and are making the special effort to develop initiative, responsibility, and co-operation among our students.

PLAY TO BE GIVEN BY JUNIOR LITTLE THEATRE

The Public Speaking Department of the Sanderson School is making rapid progress toward a very successful school year. The Drama Courses of the High School under the supervision of Miss Fleda Belle Jernigan, have already organized themselves into the Junior Little Theatre, and on next Friday night, Sept. 26, at the High School Auditorium, this Junior Little Theatre assisted by the 5th grade, is to present a one act play, entitled "The Wedding." The cast of characters is as follows:

Cecil Bradley, the groom; Novis White, the bride; James Daniels, the best man; Frank Robey, the groomsman; Almer Griffith, the bride's father; Opal Shelton, the bride's aunt; Earlyne Ruston, the groom's mother.

"In dramatization," as one author says, "a child gets under the skin of different types of people. He learns how these people feel, what sorts of things motivate them, how they handle their problems. He loses his self-consciousness, and he learns how to present himself with charm and vividness." We are hoping that this year will bring about among our citizens an increased recognition of the vital contribution of dramatics to the child's development.

Rotarians Entertain With Banquet

The banquet given by the Sanderson Rotarians at the Kerr Hotel last Saturday night in honor of their Rotary-Anns and the public school teachers was a great success. Judge Henshaw, as toastmaster, introduced Al Creigh Jr., who extended to the teachers a hearty and sincere welcome. In response, Mr. Nelson, expressed for the teachers their appreciation for the friendship and hospitality shown by the citizens of Sanderson. Mr. Lester sang "Only a Rose," and Stump Duke sang two popular numbers, "Dancing With Tears in My Eyes," and "What's The Use." Clyde Griffith introduced the Rotarians and the Rotary-Anns, and Jack Brannan introduced the teachers.

The banquet hall was attractively decorated in pink and green. Prize packages were given as favors.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Dawson were in Alpine Friday and Saturday of last week. They purchased while there a block of land, facing highway No. 90, just beyond the Santa Fe railroad bridge, west of Alpine.

Terrell County Court House Completed

County officers the latter part of last week moved into the court house which has just been completed.

C. M. Breeding, contractor for the $49,000 building, of which was torn down and along with new material has made a structure that is as good as new, and would have cost something like $125,000 or $150,000 if built new.

The building is fire-proof, all modern, and beautifully finished. A three-story building, that is two floors for office purposes and the third floor consists of the jail, well equipped and well ventilated.

The offices of the county clerk, tax assessor, sheriff and tax collector, justice of the peace, surveyor, and the county court room are located on the main floor. Second floor consists of the offices of judge, attorney, superintendent, petit jury, grand jury, district attorney and district judge combined, and district court room.

The building is completed with the exception of the plumbing

Lambs Here Outclass Other Places

Dee Fenley, representing the Cassidy Southwestern Commission Company was in Sanderson a few days ago. He had been traveling through south and west Texas buying lambs and muttons for his firm, and after visiting several of our ranchmen and looking over their flocks, Mr. Fenley remarked: "Terrell county lambs are the best I have seen anywhere."

Hicks-Weddell

Following her return from a three month's tour of Europe, was the marriage of Miss Margaret Frances Weddell and Lindsey H. Hicks, which was quietly solemnized at 7 o'clock Monday morning at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. James Weddell, 804 Preusser.

Dr. Horace Bishop, assisted by Dr. B. O. Wood, performed the ring ceremony in the presence of a few close relatives.

The bride wore an imported transparent velvet of bison brown. The bodice was inlaid with Alaskan lace. Her gloves hat and shoes matched the costume, the glove cuffs being trimmed with lace. She wore a gold necklace that was presented by her grandfather to her grandmother as a wedding gift. Her bridal bouquet was of yellow rosebuds and fern.

Immediately following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served, the centerpiece being of yellow marigolds. The table was covered with snowy Irish linen sent from Ireland as a wedding gift to the bride's mother, 41 years ago.

The marriage united two pioneer families of this county. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. A. M. Hicks of Dryden, Texas, a former resident of San-Angelo and pioneer ranch family of this country. Mr. Hicks attended the Kentucky Military Institute.

Likewise the bride's family have long resided in this city, where the bride herself was born and reared. Her twin sister, Miss Minnie Weddell, was married last year to Joe Trammell. After graduating from the public schools here, the bride attended Lindenwood College at St. Charles Mo. She returned last Friday from a European trip and a visit with relatives in Scotland, which was part of her college

Stage Cheese Make Tasty Sandwich

Cottage Cheese and Tomato Salad.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A substantial salad, with bread, crackers, rolls, biscuits, muffins, or toast, followed by a simple dessert, is ample for a hot weather luncheon. Iced tea or a fruit drink completes a meal that can be eaten either indoors or out, and that will be sufficiently attractive for guests.

The salad illustrated in the picture is appropriate for a luncheon of this kind. It consists of a mound of cottage cheese on lettuce leaves, surrounded by sections of tomato and topped with a spoonful of mayonnaise dressing. The lettuce should be washed thoroughly and crisped in the refrigerator for several hours in a clean cloth or paper bag. Cut each tomato into sections at the time you are ready to arrange the salad on individual plates. The following recipe for mayonnaise is from the bureau of economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Mayonnaise Dressing.

1 egg yolk 1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 to 1 cup oil 1/2 tsp. pepper
1 tbs. lemon juice Paprika or vinegar 1/2 tsp. sugar

Mix the spices. Add one tablespoonful of the acid, which may be either

Tomato Preserves Liked for Lunches and Supper

Haven't you often wondered just how the delicious preserves of little yellow, pear-shaped tomatoes were made? Here's a recipe from the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. You will find these preserves very acceptable for lunches and supper as an accompaniment to cream cheese and crackers.

2 lbs. yellow, pear-shaped tomatoes sliced, with seeds removed
4 lbs. sugar 4 to 6 pieces ginger root
1 1/2 quarts water 4 to 6 pieces ginger root

Cook the lemons until the skin is tender in one pint of water. Boil together the remaining water and sugar to make a sirup, and drop in the tomatoes, ginger root, and the cooked lemon rind and liquid. Boil until the tomatoes are somewhat clear and the sirup thick. Remove the scum and pour the preserves into hot sterilized glass jars. Seal and store in a cool dry place.

FAIRY TALE FOR THE CHILDREN WHEN THE SANDMAN COMES

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I think I am to be congratulated more than any of you," said the egg beater in the kitchen.

"And why?" asked all the pots and pans as they creaked a little.

"Because," said the egg beater, "the reason is so simple. You can see for yourselves." And it turned around a little.

"Do tell us, we don't see," said the frying pan.

"Very well," said the egg beater. "I will tell you. In the first place—think of my name."

And the tins and pans thought, but they came to no decision as to why the egg beater's name should make them understand why it was so fine. They had always been so used to seeing the egg beater that they really had not thought much about it.

"We give up," they said. "You will have to tell us."

"Very well," said the egg beater. "I will tell you. You see, my name means that I beat eggs."

"But not only do I beat eggs. I beat cream and all other things they wish to whip into a fine, fluffy state."

"True enough," agreed the other pots and pans.

"But you see," continued the egg beater, "the wonderful part is that I am not cross."

"Imagine being used only as a beater. Imagine forever whipping everything that comes near you."

"Isn't that enough to make an egg beater cross? But, I ask, am I cross?" And all the pots and pans creaked and said:

"No; you are not cross."

"Then," said the egg beater, "it only goes to show that my disposition is quite perfect."

"Even whipping and beating everything that comes my way does not make me cross."

"You have a fine disposition," they all agreed. "And you don't let yourself be ruled by what you have to do. You might be cross and horrid and always blame it on the fact that you whip everything.

"Yes; you should be congratulated."

The egg beater felt very happy, but the cheese grater was speaking now.

"Listen to me," said the cheese grater, "and think of what my name means."

"What?" asked the others.

"It means I am greater than anything else. No other pot or tin pan is named by my name."

"Oh," chuckled the gravy spoon, a big, good-natured, easy-going spoon, "you don't understand at all."

"What don't I understand?" asked the cheese grater.

"You don't understand that your kind of a grater does not mean the same as a greater person or a greater object."

"Oh, no; none of us should become conceited. Let's all just be friendly, nice pots and pans and kitchen things."

And all the others creaked in agreement and thought this was a very good idea.

Two Classes of Canned Food Approved

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The housewife will have a choice of two classes of canned foods under the amendment to the federal food and drug act enacted by congress and just signed by the President, says W. G. Campbell, chief of the food and drug administration, United States Department of Agriculture.

This amendment, known as the "Canners' bill," authorizes the secretary of agriculture to promulgate from time to time reasonable standards of quality, condition, and fill of container for each generic class of canned food except meat and meat products and canned milk. Such standards are now being formulated by the department. The law also authorizes the secretary to prescribe a form of statement which will clearly differentiate standard articles from those which meet the standards.

The value of this law to the housewife will be the assurance that the canned foods she purchases meet a definite standard established by a government agency. Mr. Campbell points out. The amendment will not constitute a bar to the manufacture and sale of wholesale canned foods of a quality lower than the standard, but such products must be labeled informatively so that if the housewife wishes a less expensive canned product she will be able to buy it with full knowledge of its character—presumably at a lower price—and with full assurance that it is a wholesome product and neither adulterated nor misbranded.

Distinguish Rayon From Silk by Burning Test

Rayon may be distinguished from silk or wool by the burning test, says Marion Weller of the home economics division of the University of Minnesota. Rayon burns as cotton burns, with a flash and the odor of burning paper, leaving a gray ash residue. Wool and silk burn slowly, the flame easily going out, the residue a black hard globe, and the odor like that of burning hair.

"Rayon is so much cheaper than silk that it is often taken for granted it need not be handled with as much care," says Miss Weller. "If the highest satisfaction is to be obtained, rayon fabrics should be laundered with the same care given to silk. There was a time when rayon would go to pieces or dissolve in water, but one of the recent improvements in its manufacture is in its 'washability.' As a result, one of the principal uses for rayon at the present time is in hosiery and underwear, both of which require frequent laundering."

"Rayon has found a permanent place in the fabric field and the consumer should learn to recognize its characteristics and uses."

It is a statistical fact that the wicked work harder to reach hell than the righteous do to enter heaven.—H. W. Shaw.

Kitchen Is Cozy Place to Serve Meals; Saves Many Steps

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When the kitchen is very large, common sense dictates that some of the meals be eaten at one side of the room rather than that the homemaker should be obliged to take many extra steps to serve them all in the dining room. This was the usual way of living in most old-fashioned country homes where a roomy kitchen was the center of many household activities. It often had a sewing corner, a reading corner, a play place for the smallest children where their mother could watch them while she worked, and a corner or side where all but the most formal meals were served.

One reason for this sensible plan was, of course, the pleasant warmth given out by the kitchen stove in winter time. Probably more consideration was given to this point than to saving the mother, but she benefited, nevertheless. The chief mistake made in the old-fashioned many-purpose kitchen was likely to be in placing the meal table somewhere in the center of the room.

The picture taken by the United States Department of Agriculture in a farm home shows how attractive a dining corner in the kitchen may be if a little thought is given to it. The chairs and table did not originally belong together. They were made harmonious with gay colored paint. Simple curtains, suitable for kitchen surroundings, have been hung at the window. With a runner and a bowl of flowers this dining center makes a pleasing spot in the room for the homemaker's eye to rest on while her hands are busy.

REVIVAL OF STIFF SILKS IS NOTED IN EVENING FASHIONS

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

Stiff silks are coming into vogue again. Thus in the realm of fabrics as in all phases of the mode, old fashions are becoming new fashions. We are even going to use pile velvets again, not, however, to the exclusion of the filmy, sheer, transparent velvets which have captured the heart of the feminine world. As to satin, which has taken a new lease on life, it also shows a tendency to an increasing firmness of texture.

This favor for stiff, crisp silks is reflected in the many taffeta gowns which the couturier of Paris is creating for dine and dance wear, especially for the younger set. The pretty dress in the picture is typical of the quaint and youthful styling given to taffeta. It is an entrancing French model made more so in that the designer works the taffeta in two colors—pink and blue.

This favor for rich materials is having its effect on the styling of the new gowns or is it that the adoption of formal, classic and majestic "lines" demand the more elegant weaves? Be that as it may, formal dress is declaring an era of sophisticated simplicity in which richness of fabric is made the theme paramount.

It would almost seem as if the exquisitely simple styling which is so smartly in vogue for the evening mode is resolving itself into two distinct types—the quaint old-fashioned silhouettes for the youthful party frock, versus the stately and the classic for the more mature.

The former is bringing in such charming effects as the off-the-shoulder decolletage of mid-victorian days and full-all-around skirts whose hemlines are even all around. The new flowered taffetas and printed satins are "darling" made up in these "period" frocks.

As to majestic femininity it will be clad in sculptured gowns of Grecian inspiration. Rich materials will fall of their own weight in simple unbroken lines. Trimming will be conspicuous by its absence. The satin dress will appear to the eye utterly simple, but in actual construction, it will be a labyrinth of intricate seaming and expert fabric manipulation. (©, 1938, Western Newspaper Union.)

English Poets Laureate

We know of no prohibition which prevents the selection of a woman as poet laureate of England, says a writer in the Washington Star, except the fact that there is no precedent for such choice, and there probably is no woman whose work is sufficiently notable to make such a selection possible. In theory the choice is said to be made by the prime minister.

TESTED RECIPES THAT WILL BE LIKED BY THE FAMILY

two beaten eggs to three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, three-fourths cupful each of shortening and molasses, the shortening melted. Then add two and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of soda, two teaspoonfuls of ginger, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful each of cloves, nutmeg and baking powder. Mix and add one cupful of boiling water. Bake in a shallow pan or in individual pans. Served with whipped cream it makes a party dessert.

Tomato Juice Cocktail.—Strain canned tomatoes—you know the vitamins in tomatoes are still active in the cooked vegetable. Press the pulp lightly to extract all the juice. To three cupfuls of the pulp add the juice of half a lemon, one tablespoonful of sugar, a whiff of celery salt and paprika to taste, a little pepper and salt. Put into a shaker with half as much ice and shake vigorously. Serve in cocktail glasses with tiny sandwiches of whole wheat bread.

The Best Gingerbread.—Take one-half cupful of melted shortening—lard is good—one teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of ginger, one cupful of sugar and one cupful of molasses, one teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in one cupful of boiling water. To three cupfuls of flour add the dry ingredients. Beat one egg, add the sugar, then all the other ingredients and mix well, add the boiling water in which the soda has been stirred at the last. Bake in a sheet or in gem pans. This is always good.

Potato Salad.—Take a pint of diced freshly cooked potatoes. Cook the potatoes with their jackets on, then peel them and cut into dice. Add a cupful of celery, a small chopped onion, salt and pepper to season and enough french dressing to moisten well—not enough to drain before finishing the salad. When ready to serve add a handful of blanched and shredded almonds and a diced cucumber. Add plenty of mayonnaise and serve.

Ginger Ale Julep.—Put one and a half cupfuls of granulated sugar into a pitcher, add the strained juice of six large lemons, stir until the sugar is dissolved. Chill on ice. Shake with cracked ice and chill well. Add one-half dozen bruised mint leaves, add two pint bottles of ginger ale and serve in glasses of ice. Garnish each glass with frosted mint. Dip sprays of mint into egg white thinned with a little water, then dip into powdered or finely granulated sugar.

Banana Bread Pudding.—Break three slices of bread into small pieces, pour over this two cupfuls of hot milk and one-half cupful of sugar; let it soak. Add two beaten egg whites. Slice three bananas into a pudding dish and pour over the mixture. Bake for half an hour. Serve hot with:

Mousseline Sauce.—Boil one-half cupful of sugar, one beaten egg, and cook until it coats the spoon. Flavor to taste, add one-half cupful of whipped cream when the mixture is chilled and serve cold.

Compote of Pears.—Take six pears, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one pint of cranberries and one cupful of water. Peel, core and quarter the pears. Cut up the cranberries, add water to cook, strain the juice and add the sugar. Boil, add the pears and cook them until tender but not broken; they should be a clear pink. Lift into a glass dish, boil the sirup until thick and pour around the pears. Serve with whipped cream.

General Lee Cake.—This is a fine sponge cake made as usual and baked in layers. Spread with the whites of two eggs beaten stiff, one pound of powdered sugar, the grated rind of one orange and the juice of one orange and one-half of a lemon. Spread on the cake before it is cold.

Ornamental Frosting.—Place in a double boiler the whites of two eggs, four tablespoonfuls of cold water; place over hot water and beat while heating until the frosting is stiff. Flavor with one-half tablespoonful of vanilla. This is an icing which may be used in a pastry tube to decorate cakes and fancy cookies.

Party Sandwich Rolls.—Use fresh bread. Cut slices thin as possible and remove the crust. Lay crisp lettuce leaves that have been dipped into mayonnaise on the slices. On top put shavings of boiled ham, roll up and fasten with a toothpick. Garnish with pickles and radishes.

Appieade.—Take a glass of apple jelly, dissolve and add lemon juice and sugar if needed. Chill and serve, adding iced water and a sprig of mint to each glass.

Black Sheep's Gold

By Beatrice Grimshaw

"She's right there, if you could see it," I told her. "Thank God you can't. But have you heard anything definite?" "Only since she went. Yesterday. A boat came in from the west, and there were a lot of men who hadn't done well, and were going away again. But they said some had done well; and they said—I heard them; I listened like a—like a housemaid."

"What did they say?" I was prepared for misfortune now. "They said that Smithson—the man you sent—was drinking. And somebody asked them 'What's he drinking?' Gin-Slings? And they laughed most frightfully, and I couldn't hear any more. But it sounded badly, Phil. I can't tell you how glad I was that to-day was visiting day; I thought you ought to hear it at once."

I thought so, too; her information troubled me more than I chose to say. Smithson had been working the claim satisfactorily enough. Gold in various amounts had been paid into the bank for me, my partner taking his agreed percentage. So far, so good. But the last payments had been, undoubtedly, very far spaced out; and the written reports sent in from time to time were diminished both in number and in size. Solitude of Tatata was solitude no longer; the unblazed track was trampled by scores of miners and hundreds of carriers; men from every Australian goldfield were trying their fortune and some were making it—but no one had struck anything, no one even hoped for anything, as rich as the prospecting claim that belonged to me. "I'm sleeping right on the claim at night," Smithson had said. "I and the boys. We're doing wonderful, but we have to be careful nobody goes and jumps it on us."

"The Emperor turned up here a while ago," ran another letter (I did not need a translation of that name.) "What do you think, he's married Genevieve Treacher, the one they call Gin-Sling. Caxon is here, too. He and the Emperor are working partners. I think they've got a decent claim, but of course nobody has anything the like of yours. Send me up a good dog if you can hear of one, they're worth a dozen sentries."

Then a long period of silence. Then a brief letter, mentioning the dispatch of another parcel of gold, and saying little else.

After that came silence again. I had not heard from Smithson for two months now. And on the top of it came Pia's news that he was drinking.

Then it was that I felt, for the first time, the full weight of my chain. Something was wrong at Tatata; I knew that as surely as if I had been there to see. The pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow, so wonderfully found, was in peril. With it was imperiled all the dignity, all the security, of my future life; all the excuse I had for dragging Pia down to the level of a convicted felon. And Smithson, whom I had trusted as I would have trusted myself, in whose hands lay my whole fortune, was falling. And I must stay here; stay in the pebbled prison yard and the foolish chicken-wire cell; work on the jetty, walk a few yards out and back, see the white road and the blue sea before me, and know that for nearly four years, at the very best, I could not hope to tread the one or sell the other. Not free, not free!

I think that all the sorrows of all the prisoners in the world—flowed over me in that brief minute when I sat silent, under Pia's troubled eyes, trying to pull myself together and think what must be done.

The silence was broken by Head Jailer Holly, who, with many cracklings and unfolding of his newspaper, remarked briefly that all we had to say must be speedily said. For two weeks I could have no letter, for a month, I could see Pia no more. If she was to do anything for me—and it was becoming plain that by nobody else could anything be done—then we must settle it at once.

But how? The time was almost out. Head Jailer Holly was folding up his paper, rising from his seat. Pia, surely the prettiest, daintiest picture that had ever brightened that sad place—was already putting up a face like a sweet pale rose, for our last kiss. I took it, I held her for a moment closer than usual, moved by some indefinable, dark presentiment. I found words, somehow, at the last moment; words hurried, tumbling over one another. "Take out a power of attorney for me," I said. "They'll let me sign it. Inquire about so-and-so, and so-and-so" (I gave her a few names) "and find which of them will make Smithson's place. He'll have to go up at once; don't wait for letters to me. Write as soon as you can. Good-by, little love" (she was near as natural as I, but the adjective came naturally; Pia would always be "little" to anyone who loved her). "Take care."

"Time up," said Head Jailer Holly. More than ever, did I long for lighter day. But when my letter came at last it brought no comfort with it, rather distress and dismay. The power of attorney had come made out for Pia. I had wondered a little but signed it. And now the letter told me that Pia had gone to Tatata herself. "You mustn't worry about me," she wrote. "There was nothing else to do. From all I can hear, it's a woman, and only a woman, who is wanted to look after your interests just now. Don't worry about me; the place is well opened up, and the warden sees that order is kept. I may be a good while; no knowing what I shall find. Good-by, my very dearest. Give my love to the Prince if he comes along. I'm sorry I shan't be there to meet him; he is a perfect duck. They say he's going to be married now—lucky princess! But I wouldn't change my own prince for him."

I had plenty of leisure, in the too-long nights, to con over her letter again and again; try to read between the lines of it, and guess at certain things she had not openly stated. "Only a woman—" What could be meant by that? The reference to the "Prince" I understood; but it cut sharply despite that pretty saying about her "own prince," for I knew that the forthcoming visit of one of England's best-loved royalties would only, for me, add to the weight of the invisible fetters I carried night and day. To know that the town was holding festival, to see, from the high, fenced yard of the jail, mast-a-flutter with flags, new archways built over roads; to hear the gun-salute and the very cheers, and know oneself set apart from it all, not able even to stand in the crowd and send one's hat and one's heart up in a shout for old England and her Prince—this hurt my sense of Empire; made the hard state of prisoner, in anticipation somewhat harder. But I put the thought away; determined not to think about princes and royal visits, which could mean nothing to me. . . . If I had known!

One Could See Right into the Tent, and the Sight—for That Place and the Time—Was Amazing.

What follows, I gained from Pia, long after all was past.

CHAPTER XII

Near sunset, Pia came to the last camping place but one, before the field of Tatata. She was not alone; the government authorities had sent with her an escort of armed constabulary, since a certain number of these were due to go up to the field in any case. Placed in charge of an old and trustworthy sergeant, they had served and guarded her faithfully through the trip—"savages in serge," but true to their salt—and on this last night but one, they were very merry over their near fulfillment of their task. It was some credit to them, and to Sergeant Simol, too, they felt, that they had brought the Sinabada (lady) safe through all the perils and fatigues of the wild bush, and almost reached the field.

Simol did not encourage wandering away from the camp. The government—had "talked strong" to him, before he left, regarding the lady's safety, and all that must be done to ensure it. So, when they were putting up the tents in this last camping ground but one Simol, seeing the lady at the edge of bush clearing, called out to her to be cautious.

"You no go walk-about, Sinabada," he pleaded. "S'pose you wante flower, me and my police we gettem denty."

"Dutch Treat" Makes No Hit With Modern Girl

To the young man who writes to ask if it is proper to let the girls pay for their share of an evening's entertainment we reply that it is. Perfectly proper but highly improbable.

Experiments have been made in this direction, but somehow or other they didn't work. Even when the girls propose the idea it doesn't make a hit with them if the boys take them too literally in the final settlement. Post-ively, the girls don't like it. Maybe it is because woman is more conservative than man, and one of her inherited privileges is to say that the woman pays while she sees that the man does it.

Of course, when the girls suggest a dutch treat the wise thing is to seem to fall in with the idea, and then to buzz your own girl into granting you

By-n'-by one big bush fig he coming, he altogether kai-kai (eat) you."

"There are no pigs about, and I don't want flowers," came Pia's clear voice, just a little tired. "Thank you, Sergeant Simol; I am only looking at that funny light in the bush."

"What-name light, Sinabada?" "I don't know what it is. It seems like a very big tent, some way off. And I think I heard—but that's impossible."

"What-name you think you hear-ent?" "Corks," replied Pia. "Corks being pulled—and singing."

"Sinabada, me think you lie," replied the sergeant courteously using the native fashion of expressing astonishment. Then, suddenly, slapping his thigh, and leaping—"By —, Sinabada, you no lie, me hearem, too. What-fashion this? (What does this mean?)"

"We'd better go and see," said the girl.

"Me and you," declared the sergeant, "we go see. I beggie-pardie, Sinabada, I walk first." He set his sturdy bulk in front, and, by the last faint glow of twilight, began cutting a path through the forest, Pia following. A few minutes later, the two came out on the edges of a second clearing; one that seemed to have been made for the sole accommodation of a great white tent that stood in the middle of it. The doorway was wide, the doorflaps were hooked back. One could see right into the tent, and the sight—for that place, and that time—was amazing.

There was a table inside, covered with a white cloth. On it were plates of food, tinned delicacies of all sorts; wild boar from the forest; wild turkey, okari nuts, mushrooms. There were glasses. There were bottles.

Youth and gaiety and recklessness were embodied, if ever human form expressed them, by the limber, red-headed figure of a girl, who, gaudily dressed, hung over a man lying on a cushioned deck chair. The girl, at the top of her not unmusical voice, was chanting the last revue success, while the man, an emptied glass dropping from his fingers, wailed loudly and interminably that classic of the sentimentally drunk—"Annie Laurie."

Outside, the silence, the stars, black Papua. . . .

To Pia, standing a little way off, within the shadows of the forest, the whole strange scene looked like some vivid cinema picture. Sergeant Simol, staring until his tawdry-brown eyes almost started from their sockets, gave forth his opinion candidly—

"I think this one too much pur-puri (magic), Sinabada. More better you-me (we) no stop." Head-bunters, cannibals, the ambush and the spear-plit, never shook the iron nerve of the old sergeant; such things were in the day's work of any policeman. But sorcery—was a different matter.

"Hush, sergeant," warned the girl. "I want to find out about this." For into her mind had crept a conviction, born she knew not how, warning her that this thing had to do with the object of her journey.

"Who is the white man?" she whispered.

Simol pulled himself together, realized that there was no sorcery here, and became at once the smart, non-commissioned officer of every day.

"I think," he said cautiously, "name belong him Si-mission." "Si-mission? Oh?—Smithson! Sergeant, are you sure?"

"Me savvy. Me too much damn savvy. Bee-fore" (some time ago) him take away one girl belong my village. Fashion belong him, Sinabada." (It is his way.) "Him too much likem girl, likem plenty bottle goodluck" (bottles of whisky).

"I know," said Pia musingly, "that Phil thought he was sober and reliable."

"Him all right, Sinabada, suppose no body showem girl along him, showem goodluck along him. Suppose girl goodluck showem this man, he 'nother kind." (Untranslatable idiom, suggesting change of character.)

"He's not the only one," commented, drily society's pet child. "I think know who the girl is now. I've seen her before. Only for Phil, she would be at the bottom of the sea. Now, sergeant, you and I are going to talk to these people."

"Me and you, we go," answered the sergeant, swelling out his chest. Me chancierly he touched the long bayo net-knife that swung in its sheath at his hip. For inflighting, Sergeant Simol loved the bayonet. . . . (TO BE CONTINUED)

Can I Learn to Fly?

by William R. Nelson

How to Enroll

"CAN I learn to fly?" To answer that question I decided to take a course in piloting an airplane. That decision led me to some unusual experiences. And it pricked several bubbles regarding flying machines, flyers, and flying itself.

Uncle Sam's Department of Commerce is interested in commercial aviation, I learned first. That department's aviation section "lays down the laws" governing commercial flying, flyers, airplanes and flying schools. It says who can and who cannot fly. How, when, and where they may do so. In what types of planes. And how and what students must be taught.

To enroll for a pilot's course at a school approved by the Department of Commerce, one must first pass a rigid physical examination given by a physician designated by the department. Two examinations are offered. That for the student who plans to make flying his or her business, being more complete, costs $15. The other, for the private flyer, costs $10. The fees are standard.

The examinations, too, are standard and are similar to insurance examinations plus unusual tests of the sense of balance, ability to judge distance, and for color-blindness.

Flying courses are of three standard lengths, each training the student for a particular pilot's license. Costs vary, of course, but do not exceed these: Private pilot's license, $90; limited commercial pilot's license, $1,300; transport pilot's license, $4,500.

These prices include all costs except board and room. The student is insured against personal injury and death and against liability for damage to the plane or other property.

The course for the private pilot's license generally calls for twenty hours of flying—ten of instruction and ten of solo or flight alone. The limited commercial license requires fifty hours in the air. And the transport license stipulates two hundred hours of flying time.

Department of Commerce rules governing approved schools require students and instructors to wear parachutes, but no jumps in them are stipulated.

The license tests include both flying and written examinations, the written portion covering studies taught in ground school classes. Such courses can be taken ahead of the flying lessons or concurrently with them.

First Instructions

LEARNING to fly starts with advice about the correct mental and physical attitude the student should assume.

"Be yourself," cautioned my instructor. "Be natural, and, above all else, be relaxed. We instructors will excuse everything else you do if you will remember to be light on the controls."

I was loaned a helmet that had speaking tubes connected to it. Next a parachute was explained and put on.

"The rule with the 'chute is: jump, count five, then pull this handle," my instructor explained. The handle protrudes from a pocket that opens vertically, just over the heart. One quick jerk on it releases the "pilot" or small, umbrella-like 'chute which pulls the big 'chute out of the pack.

My instructor next drew a map of the airport and its surrounding landmarks, explaining he would show them to me from above. "This is 'home' and it is important that you recognize it readily from the air," he explained.

Next I was shown how to climb into the rear seat of the two-seated, dual controlled, plane. Seated, with my parachute pack as a cushion, the seat strap clamped tightly across my lap, the instruments and controls were pointed out, named, and their uses explained.

"The control 'stick'—a rubber handled vertical lever that stands between the knees—is moved backward to make the plane climb, pushed forward to go down, inclined to the right to turn right and to the left to turn left," he said.

The rudder, also used in turning, is operated with the feet. To turn right, push the right foot; to turn left, push the left foot.

I was cautioned to familiarize myself with the altimeter which tells the altitude, the air-speed indicator, the oil pressure gauge, and the tachometer which tells the revolutions per minute the motor is turning; and to learn to read them at a glance.

My instructor climbed into the seat ahead of me, connected the speaking tube to my helmet, opened the throttle to "revv up" the motor to check its functioning, ordered the blocks taken from in front of the wheels and we were off.

Anyway It's Safest

"Whenever I attempt to reason with my wife," complains an argumentative husband to the Columbia Record, "she simply won't listen and I never get anywhere. Please advise me what you'd do." "I wouldn't!" admitted the wise old editor. "The best way, however, to debate with one's wife, is to go out behind the garage and smoke your pipe."

BAYER ASPIRIN is always SAFE BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

UNLESS you see the name Bayer and the word genuine on the package as pictured above you can never be sure that you are taking the genuine Bayer Aspirin that thousands of physicians prescribe in their daily practice.

The name Bayer means genuine Aspirin. It is your guarantee of purity—your protection against imitations. Millions of users have proved that it is safe.

Genuine Bayer Aspirin promptly relieves:

- Headaches
- Colds
- Sore Throat
- Rheumatism
- Neuritis
- Neuralgia
- Lumbago
- Toothache

No harmful after-effects follow its use. It does not depress the heart. Aspirin is the trade-mark of Bayer manufacture of monoacetic acid ester of salicylic acid.

KILLS RATS NOTHING ELSE

K-R-O (Kills Rats Only) killed 238 rats in 12 hours on a Kansas farm. It is the original product made by a special process of squill, an ingredient recommended by U. S. Government as sure death to rats and mice, but harmless to dogs, cats, poultry or even baby chicks. You can depend on this. K-R-O in a few years has become America's leading rat and mouse killer. Sold by all druggists on a money back guarantee.

Woman's Photograph Fatal
That Phillis Dickinson, twenty-nine, of Leeds, England, died from antemortem, contracted while she was having her photograph taken in a cornfield during a holiday two years ago, was the theory advanced at the inquest recently. A doctor said the disease came from growing grain and was rare in human beings, but often found in cattle.

After 40 Bowel trouble is Most Dangerous

Constipation may easily become chronic after forty. Continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles—and a host of other disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. When they need help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

"Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot gripe; will not sicken you or weaken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, your tongue is coated; whenever a headache, bilious, gassy condition warns of constipation.

Next time just take a spoonful of this family doctor's laxative. See how good it tastes; how gently and thoroughly it acts. Then you will know why it has become the world's most popular laxative. Big bottles—all drugstores.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia! When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Motor Vehicle Deaths
Motor vehicle accidents were responsible for the loss of approximately 16,500 lives during the first seven months of this year, according to reports of state officials received by an insurance company. This indicated record compares with approximately 15,400 during the corresponding period of last year.

Daughter Is Healthy Now

"My thirteen-year-old daughter Maxine was troubled with backache and pain when she came into womanhood. I knew Lydia E. RESOLUTION.

Whereas, it having pleased our Heavenly Father to call from his earthly abode the husband of our beloved sister Tillie Young,

Be it therefore resolved that we, the members of Sanderson
 Chapter 136, Order of Eastern Star extend to our bereaved sister our deepest sympathy.
 And may she realize that God is too wise to err, too good to be unkind, and she with a trusting faith leave it all to him knowing that he doeth all things well.
 And that he will comfort and lighten the burden of all who put their trust in him
 God knows the way, he holds the key,
 He guides us with unerring
 hand;
 Sometime with tearless eyes will see;
 And up there we will understand.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to our bereaved sister, a copy be spread on the minutes of the Chapter, and a copy be published

WOULD BE BETTER SWIMMER

A clergyman went out with a boatman to try his luck at deep sea fishing. They were a long way from shore when a sudden squall blew up which seemed likely to overwhelm the small craft.

"I wish I had been a better man," groaned the boatman, as he strove at his oars.

"And I wish I had been a better swimmer," remarked the clergyman, thoughtfully.

Expensive Upkeep

Memories of Columbus in the Nation's Capital

Landing of Columbus

Painting by John Vanderlyn in the Capitol

First Picture of the Discovery in a 1493 Book

Columbus Memorial, in Front of Union Station

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
ON OCTOBER 12 we celebrate the four hundred and thirty-eighth anniversary of the landing of Christopher Columbus on the shores of the New world, and insofar as this Genoese sailor led eventually to the foundation of the United States, it is appropriate at this time to inquire how, in addition to the annual celebration of Landing Day, we honor his memory. What memorials to Columbus, for instance, are there in the Capital of the nation which bears his name in its personification of "Columbus?"

The visitor to Washington, who goes to Union station, sees one of the greatest monuments ever erected to the memory of Columbus the moment he steps out of the Union station there. On the plaza in front of the station is the nation's great tribute to the Italian navigator the magnificent Columbus fountain.

The fountain is a stone shaft 45 feet high, surmounted by a globe which forms the background for the statue of Columbus, who stands on the prow of a vessel, with arms raised in an attitude of meditation. The figurehead of the ship is a beautiful female figure typifying the spirit of discovery.

On each side of the shaft are massive figures representing the New and Old worlds. The New world is an American Indian, reaching over his shoulder for an arrow from his quiver. The Old world is typified by a patriarchal Caucasian of heroic mold and a beautiful woman. The globe at the top of the shaft suggests the influence of Columbus on the growth of man's knowledge of the shape of the earth. It is supported by four American flags, standing at the corners of the shaft, with wings partly expanded. On the rear of the shaft is a shield representing Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain, the patrons of Columbus' voyage of discovery, and the top of the shaft is completed by two enormous lions which crouch on pedestals at the ends of the balustrade. The plan for erecting this memorial was started by a fraternal order, the Knights of Columbus, who solicited contributions from the various counties of the order throughout the country. To the large amount of money which this organization raised was added an appropriation of $100,000 by Congress and the work of erecting the memorial was given to a commission composed of the chairman of the senate and house committees on the subject, the secretary of state, the secretary of war and the supreme knight of the Order of the Knights of Columbus. The commission selected the site in front of the Union station as the site for the memorial and adopted the design submitted by Daniel H. Burnham, architect of the Union station and member of the National Commission of Fine Arts, and Lorado Taft, sculptor, both of Chicago.

The Capitol contains two striking reminders of Columbus. In the rotunda is the magnificent painting by John Vanderlyn, an American artist, "The Landing of Columbus." This picture is so well known that it needs no further description here. In the lobby of the senate gallery is the painting of another scene in the life of Columbus by another American artist, "The Recall of Columbus." It is by A. G. Heaton, a descendant of the famous painter, Rembrandt Peale. This painting, completed in 1888 from a sketch made in Spain, was sold to the United States government and reproduced by engraving on the 50-cent gold of the Columbian series, issued to commemorate the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1893. This painting represents the hispanic scene on the Bridge of Pines, leagues from Granada, when Columbus, having been refused the financial aid of King Ferdinand for his expedition, was riding sadly away from the capital, only to be overtaken by a messenger from Queen Isabella, who had decided to give her aid even though her husband would not. In the picture Columbus, sitting on a little white mule, has just been given the queen's letter by the richly-dressed messenger who has dismounted from his fine steed and is bowing impressively as he hands the all-important document to the future discoverer of the New world. It was the turning point in the career of Christopher Columbus and as such, the preservation of this historic scene in a painting deserves a place among the other pictured "great moments in American history" which adorn the walls of the Capitol.

In addition to these memorials to Columbus in Washington, there is in the Library of Congress a collection of original documents and rare books relating to the discovery of the New world which are of almost incalculable value and which form the most direct link of the United States with the valiant sailor who made it possible for this nation to be. They constitute a unique "literary memorial" to Columbus and the headliner of them all is the Columbus Codex which has been characterized as a "document of the highest historical importance and which will be better appreciated as time goes on."

To understand the historical importance of the Codex is necessary to review briefly certain facts about the stormy life of Columbus, especially those which brought this document into existence.

In 1499, while he was on his third voyage to America, his enemies at home in Spain were doing all they could to bring about his downfall. They succeeded in turning King Ferdinand, who from the first had not been nearly as enthusiastic concerning the venture as was his queen, Isabella, against Columbus. And even the queen seemed either disinclined to defend him, or was helpless to do so.

So Columbus, who had returned in 1493 from his first voyage as a national hero, now came home in iron and in disgrace. But almost as soon as he had arrived, Ferdinand and Isabella experienced a change of heart. Columbus was immediately set free and received an invitation to visit the king and queen, which he did and was warmly received. He told the royal pair of his adventures abroad and received commendation.

However, he was not so successful in gaining restitution and property to which he was entitled. The best he was able to do was to secure a declaration from the throne fixing the extent and manner of restitution. The result was disappointing. More complications continued to pile up.

Columbus expected to leave soon on a fourth voyage. With his privileges, rights, grants, and even his Spanish citizenship imperiled, he took steps to prevent, if possible, their loss. The result was the Columbus Codex.

On January 5, 1502, he called into consultation two alcaldes, or city judges, and several notaries. They drew up and had transcribed a statement of the explorer's rights. Several copies were made, these to be deposited where they could be safely preserved. Thus Columbus hoped to protect himself against his enemies.

Thirty-five documents were included in this Codex. They were the discoverer's charter as an admiral, viceroy and governor general, his warrant, granted by Isabella, authorizing him to equip ships, to share in the expense and profits of the voyage to India, and to adjudicate and distribute lands, and letters from various dignitaries expressing appreciation of his services. Of the four copies of the Codex made in 1502, three are known to exist today, including the one in the possession of this country. One went to the republic of Genoa. Today it is highly treasured by the municipality, being contained in a bronze bust of Columbus in the municipal palace. The other copy was misplaced after 1670. But in 1880 it turned up in Paris. It is believed to have found its way there when Napoleon ordered all his archives deposited in the French capital in 1800, and documents were sent from all parts of Europe. Restitution was later made, but the Codex apparently was overlooked. It is in Paris today.

The fourth copy, which is unaccounted for, was on paper rather than parchment. It went to Don Alonso Sanchez de Carvajal, who soon after left for Hispaniola. The documents disappeared and may have been destroyed, for they have never yet been brought to light.

The story of how America came into possession of its copy of the Codex is a romantic one. In 1818 Edward Everett, the gifted New England orator, was rummaging through an old book shop in Florence, Italy, when he came across the manuscript of about 80 pages in characters which appeared to be those of Columbus' time. In 1823, the Codex at Geneva was published and Everett discovered that the manuscript in his possession coincided precisely with those in the Genoese volume.

After Everett made this statement in 1824 the manuscript again dropped from public notice and apparently was forgotten by all concerned. About 1890, Justin Winsor, engaged in his monumental "Life of Columbus," wrote to Dr. William Everett, whose father, Edward Everett, had died, asking whether he might inspect the relic. Doctor Everett was unable to locate it at that time, but in 1897 it came to light in the locked lower part of a bookcase which had remained undisturbed after his father's death.

Still its adventures before reaching the safe custody of the American government were not at an end. Once after being sent to London for the inspection of experts it lay in its wrappings on a table in the Everett home when the room in which it was was swept by flames from which, however, the precious document was seemingly miraculously spared. It was finally sold to the Library of Congress by Doctor Everett for a sum which was nominal compared with what it would have commanded in the open market.

But the Codex is not the only treasure of Columbus owned by the American people and preserved in their great library in Washington. Ancient books of only a few crudely printed pages which first told of his great achievement are also included in the collection. Columbus landed at Lisbon upon his return from the first voyage on March 4, 1493, and under date of March 14 he dispatched to Gabriel, sometimes called Raphael, Sanchez, or Sanxis, treasurer to Ferdinand and Isabella, his famous letter, written aboard his caravel, reporting his discovery of the New world. The Spanish ambassador to Rome at that time was Cardinal Bernadino Carvajal, and on July 19 his eminence delivered before Pope Alexander VI an oration concerning this event which was printed in Rome, presumably by Plantin, in that same year. This was the first wide heralding of the momentous discovery and a copy of this rare book is among the treasures of the library.

The library also owns the first printed biography of Columbus. This is found in its copy of the first polyglot edition of the Scriptures, printed at Genoa in 1516. The story of the life of the discoverer appears in it as a marginal note to the 19th psalm (by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for September 23

REVIEW—THE GREATNESS OF THE GOD-FEARING

GOLDEN TEXT—The fear of Jehovah is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have all they that do his commandments; his praise endureth forever.

PRIMARY TOPIC—What Makes People Great?

JUNIOR TOPIC—What Makes People Great?

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Makes Men and Women Great?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—An Estimate of the Characters Studied During the Quarter.

Lesson for July 6.

When called to go out from his own country and kindred, Abraham believed God and obeyed his command. True faith is proved by unquestioned obedience.

Lesson for July 13.
Jacob, a crafty schemer, through discipline at God's hands, became Israel, a prince with God. Before he could enter the Promised Land a change must take place. Self-will must be broken before there can be confidence in God.

Lesson for July 20.
Moses, educated first at his mother's knee and then at Pharaoh's court, was forced to flee from Egypt because of a premature effort to deliver the enslaved people. Forty years of training in the wilderness was necessary before he was ready to hear God's call.

Lesson for July 27.
In the time of national emergency, there being no man to judge Israel, Deborah was called to take this place. God bestows his grace upon whomsoever he will, regardless of sex.

Lesson for August 3.
Ruth chose to cast her lot with God's people. This choice brought her not only salvation but earthly blessings. Ruth's relationship to Naomi shows the vital fellowship centered in the God of Israel. National prejudices, hatred, and strife disappear on the part of those who are united in Jesus Christ.

Lesson for August 10.
Hannah asked God to give her a son, promising to dedicate him to God's service. God heard her prayer and she named her son Samuel, which means "asked of God." Samuel in his tender years was given to God, and he rendered a distinguished service for many years.

Lesson for August 17.
Saul was a man of fine gifts and had a great opportunity, but made a dismal failure because his heart was not right toward God. He had more concern for his own honor and welfare than for the glory of God. God is more concerned with having his commands obeyed than he is with the offering of sacrifices.

Lesson for August 24.
Friendship between David and Jonathan has been immortalized. This friendship was unique in that it took place between two men of rival interests. Jonathan was the natural heir to the throne, but David was God's choice. Jonathan knew this and magnanimously waived his rights.

Lesson for August 31.
Amos, a humble herdsman, was called from his life as God's prophet to stand before the king. He was not a prophet by succession nor was he trained in the schools. God selects his servants from even the humblest walks of life.

Lesson for September 7.
Josiah, the young king, was loyal to God. Two wicked kings had preceded him, during whose reigns God's law was lost. God put it into his heart to inaugurate a reformation, and in the process of restoring the temple, the law was found. When it was read before him, the king rent his clothes, and proceeded to institute his reforms on the basis of God's word.

Lesson for September 14.
Jeremiah, having heard God's call in his early years, zealously carried out his ministry. He called upon individuals to face their responsibility before God, assuring them that they would not be judged on the basis of racial heritage. Every man shall give an account of himself to God.

Lesson for September 21.
Jonah, a Jew, was called to preach repentance to a Gentile city. He sought to escape his responsibility by fleeing to Tarshish. God prepared a fish to swallow him. This was the means of his chastisement and return to his own land. After chastisement he was recommitted. At his preaching the city repented, putting on their sackcloth and ashes. God is not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance.

Revealed in the Divine Book

Defending the Bible
Spurgeon said: "You talk about defending the Bible! It's a lion! Open the cage and let it out!"

Japanese Buddhist Sect to Pay Honor to Saint

A party of 19 priests of the Jodo sect of Buddhism recently left Tokyo for Mukden, Tientsin and Peking, where they were to take part in ceremonies commemorating the twelve hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the death of St. Zendo, who is especially revered by the sect. St. Zendo was not the founder of the sect, but his writings in China had a great influence on the priests who started to worshiping according to the Jodo rituals in Japan.

At the same time Japan will observe the anniversary.

The Jodo sect has more followers than most other rites and the ceremonies will be very elaborate and picturesque. The headquarters of the sect are at the famous Chio-in temple in Kyoto, famous all over Japan and known abroad for its huge bell, which is the largest in the world that rings.

More than 500,000 pilgrims will visit the temple and $250,000 has been appropriated by the sect to cover expenses incidental to the celebration. The Jodo sect has been active in Japan for 750 years. It has 6,000,000 members, 20,000 priests and nearly 10,000 temples throughout the country.

Victorian Era Makes

No Appeal to Moderns
"Women nowadays, if our women novelists portray them truly, think that the old-fashioned or Victorian wife was an idiot. They think that the old-fashioned wife sacrificed herself to husband and family idiotically."

Cass Gilbert, New York architect, was talking about modern novels. He went on:

"According to modern novels, what we call a good wife would in reality be an idiot like Mrs. Jay."

"Mrs. Jay said to Mrs. Jay: 'What a naughty little boy your Jimmy is! Doesn't he know better than to keep striking you over the head with that heavy stick?'"

"Don't blame him," said Mrs. Jay, as she smiled and wiped the blood from her forehead. "Don't blame the little angel. He's only doing, bless his heart, what he sees his dear father do every day."—Detroit Free Press.

"No repairs in 22 years," says home owner

"Visitors are delighted with the noiseless operation of my doors," says a home owner of Monongah, West Virginia. "The locks and hinges have been in active service 22 years, and during this time I haven't spent a cent for repairs. I've never used anything but 3-in-One Oil."

Many housewives who pride themselves on the spotless appearance of their homes are careless about the lubrication of hinges and locks. Try a few drops of 3-in-One Oil today and see how quickly it brings out rust, dirt and squeaks. For 3-in-One, a blend of animal, mineral and vegetable oils, is distinctly different from ordinary oil; it cleans and protects as well as lubricates.

For 35 years 3-in-One has been recognized as the best oil for sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, lawn mowers, hinges and general household lubrication. Insist on 3-in-One Oil. At good stores everywhere, in 15c and 30c sizes. For your protection look for the trade mark "3-in-One" printed in Red on every package.

Men! Try the New Shaving Cream

A small amount on the brush quickly becomes a rich, creamy lather that remains in moist workable condition throughout the shave. Cuticura Shaving Cream contains the medicinal properties of Cuticura. It softens the beard, invigorates the skin and leaves it free from any tense, dry feeling.

Directions for a Quick Shampoo

Wet the hair thoroughly with quite warm water. Squeeze a small quantity of Cuticura Shaving Cream on to hair and with water work up a creamy lather, and shampoo. Rinse and repeat process. Finally rinse thoroughly. Women will find this method of shampooing quick and easy and the hair will be soft and silky.

It is reported that the Woolley-Jones well, Pakenham No. 1, has resumed drilling operations. Two additional geologists from Midland, Texas, are running a few levels in the county at the present time.

You may be a newcomer, so get off to a flying start. Keep in step with the leaders. "Send it to a Master cleaner". Same price as all the best. Call and deliver. Phone 68. EMPIRE Cleaners and Dyers. FRANK ROBERTSON, Owner.

Dance at Sanderson Thursday and Friday, October 2nd and 3rd. The cheapest laundry is not always the best. Why not try the O'Bryant laundry who guarantees work. Laundry called for and delivered. Phone 87.
