Loomis Players Draw Big Crowd

The Allerita Loomis Players closed their week's stand here Saturday night with a double-header. The first play was the "Cabaret Girl," and the second play was "Over the Hill to the Poor House." Each performance given was attended by large crowds and everybody seemed well pleased with the show.

On Wednesday night there was a boy's contest. Each boy was given a soda cracker to eat and then he was to whistle as soon thereafter as possible. Charles Stuckey won in this contest. On Thursday night was the "ladies hat contest." Misses Mabel Schupbach, Willie Mae Green, Florine Thompson, Orene Caraway, and Mrs. Wallace Henshaw entered this contest. Miss Florine Thompson won the fiat. On Friday night was the "chicken banquet."

The main contest of the week was the shetland pony contest. This contest created lots of interest among the little folks and grown-ups too. The final vote stood as follows: Harry Lee Grigsby, 104,910; John Taylor Burdwell, 96,810; Mary Ferguson, 40,900. Several other children had a goodly number of votes, but only the three mentioned above were tabulated Saturday night as they were the three leaders.

Allerita Loomis Players are always welcome in Sanderson from the fact they always give a good clean first class show. This Co. has many friends here as they are very agreeable and at all times carry that kind of players. This week the Loomis players are playing in Marathon, and next week they expect to play in Ozona.

Folks, this is your paper and we welcome articles for it. Any news items that you know, won't you please phone it in? Thanks. The Times.

News of the Commissioners Court

The Commissioners Court met in regular session last Monday with all Commissioners and the Judge present. After paying bills and attending to preliminary work the commissioners transacted the following business:

Approved the bond of J. M. Corder for constable of precinct No. 3.

Appointed Dr. A. P. Utterback as county health officer for a period of one year, ending February, 1932.

Awarded the Clegg Co. of San Antonio the printing of the stationery for all county officers.

Ordered the services of W. R. Edwards be continued as sheep inspector of scabbies for Terrell county at a salary of $50 a month.

The Commissioners ordered the purchase of two dump trucks, one Chevrolet and one Ford, to be used in the construction of public roads.

Ordered the road foreman to employ home men as far as practical on all road work.

Amended the franchise of the Central Power & Light Co., so as to require the said Company to begin furnishing the town of Dryden with electric service not later than April 1, 1931, by means of local plant or transmission lines.

Ordered that the Sanderson State Bank be made the depository for county funds for a period of one year from date.

At the time of going to press we have all court news which has been entered on docket.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LEADERSHIP TRAINING INSTITUTE

The towns of Fort Stockton, Marfa, Alpine and Sanderson, by the co-operation of their Sunday school superintendents, will have a training institute for Sunday School Leaders. The teachers will be in Sanderson at the First Methodist Church Monday, March 2, from 2 to 4 p. m.

Dr. H. C. Henderson will teach the class for teachers, and workers with the elementary groups. Rev. C. R. Hooten will teach the class of teachers and workers with the adolescent ages. Dr. A. L. Moore will teach the teachers and workers of the adult groups, and Rev. Fred B. Faust will teach the class of officers and administration workers.

The four teachers who will be in Sanderson at the First Methodist Church, Monday, March 2, from 2 to 4 p. m. are highly trained teachers of the Methodist Church.

American Legion Dance.

The American Legion will sponsor a masquerade dance at the C. A. C. hall in Sanderson, valentine night, Saturday Feb. 14th. All those participating in this dance will be obliged to wear a mask, which will be removed at 11 p. m. Dance begins at 9 p. m. Good music. Lunch served. Everybody is invited, come have a good time.

Newsy Notes From The High School

The program is prepared, the stage is set for the sixty-first annual convention of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association to be held in Detroit, February 21-26, 1931.

The school staff of the city of Detroit, headed by Superintendent Frank Cody, and aided by the Chamber of Commerce and local clubs and organizations, has left nothing undone in arranging every detail for comfort and convenience of the expected visitors and guests.

The Department of Superintendence is a hard working, serious organization, vitally interested in the discussion and solution of the problems involved in the education of the children of America, the welfare of over thirty million public school pupils being the prime consideration of this convention. Mr. E. J. Brannan, superintendent of public schools of Sanderson, contemplated attending this meeting. To keep our school on the level of the high standards of attainment that it has already reached, our town and county cannot afford to not have a representative from among our school officials at this mid-winter meeting, perhaps the largest and most important educational gathering of the nation. The display of books, apparatus, equipment, and school materials alone is something that no progressive schoolman or woman can afford to miss.

The letters written by the pupils of the sixth grade to Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd were judged last week, and Jesse Lochhausen's letter was chosen as the best of the group. The letter was sent to Detroit by air mail Saturday, January 31. It was announced sometime ago by Dr. Norman R. Crozier, president of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association that Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd is to be the guest of the Department of Superintendence and will address the General Session Monday evening, February 23. A tribute to the intrepid explorer from the school children of America is to be presented in the form of letters written to him by the children. Only one letter from each school is allowed to be sent. In accordance with this plan the sixth grade, who for some weeks have been studying letter writing wrote letters to Admiral Byrd, the best one from the group to be selected and sent to Detroit where the meeting is to be held. Names were not signed to the letters. Numbers were drawn by the pupils, and instead of each pupil signing his name he numbered his letter. This eliminated all chances of partiality on the part of the judge. The form of the letter, the interest of the contents, and the hand writing were some of the qualities taken into consideration in judging the letters.

The following is a list of the names of students of the lower grades whose grade averages are such that they have reached the honor roll standard:

- First Grade
Mary Cook and Earl Hurst.
- Second Grade
Kennith Litton.
- Third Grade
Elizabeth Brown, Margaret Ann Gregory, Amanda Haass, Billie Louise St. Claire.
- Fourth Grade
Mildred Hurst, Bertha Mae O'Bryant.

Among the questions coming to the Rev. B. M. Stradley, pastor of the First Methodist Church is the following: "Give me something definite concerning present communication with the Spirit world." Answer 11 a. m. Sunday, February 15. The pastor has chosen this as the subject of the message for next Sunday as elsewhere announced, giving the subject in these words, "A message from Heaven to Sanderson, Texas."

Appreciate Courtesy Shown Them Here

February 15, 1931.
Editor Sanderson Times,
Sanderson, Texas.

Dear Sir:
We wish to take this means of expressing to you, and through you to the people of Sanderson, our sincere appreciation of the kind hospitality shown our basketball squad while in your city last week taking part in the tournament.

While our boys were not victorious in winning the first prize, we consider the trip a success nevertheless, and were glad to have won the games we did. We hope that we shall be able to return next year, should another tournament be held at Sanderson.

We are very glad to have with us for a second year Cadet Charles Robertson, son of Dr. P. F. Robertson of Sanderson, who is making a splendid record in this Academy. Charles is not only an all around athlete, but is also a sergeant in the military department.

Very truly yours,
WESLEY PEACOCK,
Superintendent.

Interesting Meeting Held By P. T. A.

The Parent-Teacher Association of Sanderson met in regular session at the High School Auditorium last Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. This meeting was one of great significance because of the fact that it was in commemoration of child welfare day, and, apparently most parents realized this, as a good number were present. Mrs. Goldwire, president of the local organization, presided at the meeting. The Girls' Glee Club sang two numbers, the first one being "Gifty Like a Rose," and the second one "The Rosary." The group, led by Miss Robinson, sang "The Eyes of Texas." Talks were given by Mrs. McKee, Mr. Brannan, and Mr. Nelson. Mrs. Lester, accompanied by Mrs. Wilkinson, sang a solo.

Just at this time on the program the curtains were drawn, and on a table in the center of the stage was a beautiful cake covered with candles. Around this cake were gathered the ex-presidents of P. T. A., who lighted the candles on the cake, each candle being in honor of some department of our school system. Each ex-president then told briefly some of the most outstanding events that occurred during her tenure of office.

Eagles Lose and Win at Alpine

Tuesday night of this week coach Knight accompanied by the Eagles went to Alpine where they played basket ball that night Sanderson Eagles won over Sul Ross B team by a score of 25 to 24, after six overtime periods. Sanderson then played the Lobos, losing by a score of 63 to 16. In this game Sanderson was somewhat handicapped as they had just finished a long game.

The Eagles will again challenge the Lobos at Sul Ross, Alpine, Friday and Saturday night of this week. District meet will be held in Alpine next week, at which time our boys expect to be present.

Miss Martha Thomas was up from Dryden Tuesday.

Mrs. Ben Dawson and daughter, Floreine, spent Tuesday in Del Rio.

At the close of the program and business session, refreshments of cake and coffee were served in the Home Economics Department.

Sandman Story for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

The school bell had sounded and all the children went to their different classrooms and began their lessons in the big city school where they were students.

They had not been at their lessons long when a great bell sounded through the school.

It was different from the usual school bell which brought them to their lessons, and it filled them all with fear.

The teachers looked frightened, too, but they were all very quiet.

"March out, slowly, in single file," said the teacher of each classroom.

They all knew how to do this, too, for they often had a fire drill.

It always made them a little nervous but they knew if they were quiet and didn't get really frightened all would be well.

There was only great danger when people lost their heads, as the saying goes.

It's a wise saying, too—it means that people act as though they hadn't any brains in them at all.

The bell had been a fire bell and every one knew it. Soon every one of the many children were out in the big courtyard and thence to the street.

The teachers were all out, too. All but one and that teacher was the one who helped them with their singing chorus.

They wondered where she could be.

They felt sure she must be out somewhere and each class thought she was with another group.

But no one saw her, and every one felt a great fear.

The sound of the motors and engines coming down the street with their sharp, shrill sirens made every one watch the firemen.

They were coming! How quickly they had arrived. They were putting on their long rubber coats and their red helmets as they were jumping off the fire engines.

Some of them had been putting on their coats as the engines had dashed through the streets to the school.

The hoses were put to work. The water began to pour into the windows

"But look, look," said some of the rest.

And then what should they see but a fireman carrying Miss Cole out of an upstairs window.

She had not noticed the fire bell at first and then the smoke had made her faint away.

She was quickly revived, and her life had been saved.

How wonderful the fireman had looked when he had carried her out of the smoking building, with its wild flames coming forth.

Every boy that evening told his mother that when he grew up he would like to be a fireman.

Sailboat Banana Salad Generally Liked

Select ripe, perfect bananas. Wash and dry. Cut a little "trench" in the unpeeled banana from one end to the other, scooping out the banana in this "trench."

Dice the portion scooped out, add it to one cupful of diced oranges, one cupful diced apples, one-half cupful maraschino cherries and one-half cupful diced pears.

Add mayonnaise made of fruit juices, egg yolk and sugar, mustard and olive oil.

Fill the cut portion of the banana, top with more mayonnaise and garnish with red and green cherries.

Arrange on the lettuce to resemble a sailboat on water, cut a tall from white letter paper, using a colored opera stick candy for the mast. Place in position in the sailboat and serve.

BODY REQUIRES PROTEIN DIET

Foods Classified as Sources of Protein.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Protein is necessary in the diet for the growth and repair of body tissues. It may yield energy also, but its important function is for building and upkeep. If the diet does not furnish enough protein, growth is stunted.

Scientists have found, however, that foods classed as proteins are made up of combinations of certain recognized substances called amino-acids and that unless the right combination of these is present the food is an incomplete protein, and unsatisfactory as a body builder, although it may be a useful food from some other standpoint. Among the most popular and readily obtained sources of complete, or "efficient" protein are lean meat of all kinds, poultry, fish, eggs, milk, and cheese. These foods are so commonly used in the American diet that most people get an adequate amount of protein, and need consider chiefly whether or not they are varying their supply sufficiently to avoid monotony.

It used to be thought that various legumes (beans and peas), gelatin, and some other articles of food classed as proteins could take the place of these named above as good sources of body-building material. But it has been found that several of these foods are "incomplete" proteins. To be on the safe side it is well to include in the daily menu such foods as are illustrated in the accompanying picture, taken by the United States Department of Agriculture, all of which are known to supply protein of good quality.

Her Reward

When children are weak and run-down, they are easy prey to colds or children's diseases. So it is never wise to neglect those weakening and depressing symptoms of bad breath, coated tongue, fretfulness, feverishness, biliousness, lack of energy and appetite, etc.

Nine times out of ten these things point to one trouble—constipation—and mothers by thousands know this is easily, safely relieved by California Fig Syrup.

Mrs. Chas. J. Connell, 1434 Cleary Ave., St. Louis, Mo., says: "I gave Virginia California Fig Syrup for constipation and she was more than rewarded for taking it. It regulated her bowels, helped her digestion, increased her appetite, made her strong and energetic."

The genuine, endorsed by doctors for 50 years, always bears the word California. All drugstores have it.

Extreme eagerness to return an obligation is a kind of ingratitude.—La Rochefoucauld.

Mothers... Watch Children's COLDS

COMMON head colds often "settle" in throat and chest where they may become dangerous. Don't take a chance—at the first sniffle rub on Children's Musterole once every hour for five hours.

Children's Musterole is just good old Musterole, you have known so long, in milder form.

This famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other ingredients brings relief naturally. Musterole gets action because it is ascientic "counter-irritant"—not just a salve—it penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain.

Keep full strength Musterole on hand, for adults and the milder—Children's Musterole for little tots. All druggists.

"I don't know" is an easy and clever way of getting out of arguments.

Cabbage Slaw Makes Delicious Salad

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Cabbage slaw is one of the most popular ways of serving cabbage in place of a salad. It is, in fact, a salad, with a boiled dressing instead of a mayonnaise. The hot dressing is poured over the finely shredded cabbage so that it will have an opportunity to blend its flavor thoroughly with the vegetable. This slaw can be served hot or cold, according to the bureau of home economics, of the United States Department of Agriculture, but most people are accustomed to it as "cold" slaw.

Select a hard head of cabbage, cut in quarters, and wash thoroughly in cold water. Drain, shred, and set aside in a cold place until crisp. Pour hot dressing over the crisp cabbage and stir until well mixed. Serve hot or cold.

One cupful chopped celery, or one-half cupful of finely shredded green pepper, or one cupful of thinly sliced tart apple may be added.

Dressing for Cabbage Slaw.

- 1 eggs
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/2 cup vinegar
- 1 lb. sugar
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. mustard
- 1/2 tsp. celery seed
- 1 lb. butter or other fat

Beat the eggs, add all the ingredients except the fat, and cook in a double boiler until thickened. Stir constantly and just before removing from the fire add the fat. Pour over the cabbage while hot. If served as cold slaw, chill after the dressing is added.

"But Look, Look!" Said Some.

of the school which were now sending out big columns of smoke.

The fire was a large one and it had started so suddenly—no one knew how.

The firemen were climbing up the ladders. Everything, it seemed, was done in a second.

"Is there anyone in the building?" asked a fireman.

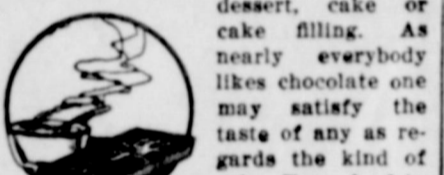

"We can't see Miss Cole, the singing teacher, though she can't possibly still be in the building," they said.

"She has probably gone for lunch. She has her lunch early. She can't possibly still be in the school," said others.

Oldest Trees in Europe

Between Loch Rannoch and Loch Tay is Glen Lyon, the longest glen in Scotland, which stretches its mysterious beauty from Loch Lyon over 30 miles. Many a tourist in Perthshire has rushed past it, little knowing that he was missing a haunt whose loveliness would cheer him long after more notable places had become dim in his mind. The Scots call it "The Dark Crooked Glen of the Great Rocks." The place is red with history and legend, battles of kirks and crosses which go back to the earliest days of Celtic Christianity. Its yew trees claim to be the oldest authentic specimens of vegetation in Europe.

Chocolate in various forms has always been a most popular confection, dessert, cake or cake filling. As nearly everybody likes chocolate one may satisfy the taste of any as regards the kind of cake. From loaf to drop cakes, simple or rich, they always find a glad welcome.

Chocolate Caramels.—Put two and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter into

Good Things for the Family Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"You have to believe in happiness—it isn't an outward thing. The spring never makes the song. I guess, as much as the song the spring. Aye, many a heart could find content If it saw the joy on the road it went."

The joy ahead when it had to grieve. For the joy is there—but you have to believe."

Chocolate Custard Pie.—Line a pie plate with pastry, flute the rim and fill with the following: Beat the yolks of three eggs slightly, add one-half cupful of sugar and continue beating, add one tablespoonful of soft butter, the same of flour, three-fourths of a cupful of milk and two squares of melted chocolate; flavor with vanilla and bake. Spread with a meringue made of the egg whites and one-half cupful of powdered sugar. Return to the oven and brown.

Chocolate Cup Cakes.—Take one-half cupful of shortening, add one cupful of sugar and cream, add one and one-half cupfuls of flour with two and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder finely sifted alternately with one-half cupful of milk, add two beaten yolks of eggs, three squares of melted chocolate, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one teaspoonful of vanilla, before the milk and flour is added. Fold in at the last the well beaten whites of two eggs. Bake in small gem pans.

Onions Stuffed With Sausage.—Take even sized onions, peel and scoop out a center large enough to take a small sausage, or one may use the bulk sausage for filling. Chop the centers removed, mix with bread crumbs and the sausage, stuff and place in a baking dish. Four around a saucepan, when melted add two cupfuls of molasses, one cupful of brown sugar, and stir until the sugar is dissolved and when the boiling point is reached add three squares of chocolate grated, stirring constantly until the chocolate is melted. Roll until a firm ball is formed when a little is dropped into cold water. Add one teaspoonful of vanilla and turn into a buttered pan to cool.

Spiced Cider and spiced grape juice are new to many people, and are most acceptable for serving to groups, large or small, meeting in the evening, during the season before ice cold drinks are preferred. They are made as follows, according to the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture:

- 1 quart sweet elder
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 8 pieces stick cin-
- 12 whole cloves
- 1/4 tsp. powdered allspice

Mix all ingredients and bring to the boiling point and let stand for some hours. Reheat and remove the whole spices before serving.

Spiced Grape Juice.

- 1 quart grape juice
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 8 to 12 pieces of stick cinnamon
- 12 to 16 whole cloves

Bring all ingredients and bring to the boiling point. Allow the fruit juice to stand for three or four hours so that the flavor of the spice will be drawn out. When ready to be served reheat and remove the spices. Lemon juice may be added if desired.

Kitchen Utensils Are Kept Near Stove

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A farm woman in Maine solved the problem of having her saucepans and their lids conveniently near the stove by using the wall space just back of her range. One of the boys of the family who could wield a hammer, saw and paint brush, built a frame on which hooks could be put, as the kitchen walls were made of light wall-board. The rack for the lids is very simple.

In a family where the children are being trained to help with the household, there is a good psychological effect on those who are inclined to be slothful. In having the bottoms of the pans so plainly exposed to scrutiny. Self-respect demands proper scrubbing before a saucepan is hung up.

The photograph was taken by the United States Department of Agriculture, in connection with a kitchen improvement contest.

Hints for Housekeepers

- Cream soups are especially good for luncheon dishes.
- Fur that has been wet will not mat if it is thoroughly brushed.
- Backaches can sometimes be prevented by raising a sink, work table, or a washtub.
- Hang the frequently-used kitchen utensil. It is much easier to find a small utensil like an egg-beater when it hangs on the wall than when it lies on a shelf or in a drawer among other utensils.
- For uniform results in cooking, remember to sift flour before measuring and never to shake it down in the cup before leveling it. Standard measuring containers and level measurements are also necessary.

White Choice for Evening Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A distinguishing feature about the majority of lovely gowns which are lending their enchantment to the formal evening picture is their fascinating simplicity. Call it "sophisticated simplicity" if you will, for subjected to critical analysis, these frocks, which are classic in their perfect lines and workmanship, reveal a superb technique which speaks none other than a master touch. When the guileless onlooker tells you that this or that fair one was dressed in "simple white" be not misled. The mind, wise to the ways of evening modes "as is" in our day and generation, know full well that simplicity as applied to dress is, in the modern interpretation of the word, born of that "art which conceals art."

There's the exquisite gown in the picture, for example, the uninitiated may describe it as a simple frock, but to those who know, it is a masterpiece which in the final analysis resolves itself into a matter of white transparent velvet of finest texture together with lovely white flat crepe and bright beaded bands, the entire falling into lines of grace through the subtle art of the designer.

All the way through the program of evening dress the tendency is to call attention to beauty of fabric. The gowns of satin and transparent velvet which are playing such an outstanding role in the formal mode are made to look as classically simple as possible regardless of the fact that in their actual construction they involve a labyrinth of intricate manipulation. It is interesting and significant to note that in Paris leading couturiers are carrying the vogue of velvet into spring and summer. Which goes to confirm that which has long since been self-evident—that velvet is proving itself a perennial. When we stop to consider that modern velvet weaves are in many instances as exquisitely delicate and sheer as the most fragile chiffon, it is easy to understand why designers have come to regard it as a practical and altogether lovely year-round material.

CHAPTER X

Will Has a Vision

The firm of Poole and Todd found itself at the end of two years established beyond question. It owed its success to Will's terrific efforts. He had met and overcome one after another of their natural foes; Mr. Poole's illiness and intemperance. By a kind of fierce affection he had dominated and controlled the old man and kept him working. The profits were divided, after he had his fifty a week, and Poole his hundred. And out of his share of the profits, Will repaid his partner for the loan for Ernestine's hospital bill. He repaid him the exact half of the amount Poole had sunk into the business at the beginning.

And after two years he found himself face to face with the one enemy he could not conquer. Ernestine noticed that he grew thin and pale, that fall that the baby, Elaine, was two. "What is it, Will?" she asked him. "I thought everything was fine now." "It's Poole," said Will. "He's not drawing—he's hoarding, but, of course, that's not new. Only—he's lost interest."

"What do you mean, Will?" "He seemed reluctant to put his thought into crude words."

"He's failing—his health. His eyes are bad."

"You mean—he's old?" "Yes," said Will. "That's what I mean. He can't help it—poor devil—he struggles against it—but it's showing on him."

"But, Will, what are you doing?" "Why, I'm managing—but that's all. When I can get him to help, we work together. We've got the strip all planned out for another year, the general sequence of things. But I don't feel that I can do Poole's stuff. My own ideas would be different. I can do the drawings well enough—nobody would notice, probably—but—"

"You don't want to go on—without him?"

"The staff is his, Ernestine. I don't want to—there's something fundamentally wrong—even when I'm his partner, and all. For a while, as a makeshift, I can go ahead, and take care of the mechanics of it, and do the conversation—but actually, we haven't any business at all. We only have him—and when he's gone—"

Will sighed, and then squared his shoulders.

"Well—here's hoping," he said, and grinned at her. "I guess the old boat will sail another season. You see—it's hard for me to crowd him, Ernestine. He is old, and his eyes are about gone, and he hangs on me—it's like making a sick old horse pull in the harness—for us. Of course, it's for him, too, but it is really for us. We are the ones that will enjoy the money—not him. I find myself soft with him."

"I know." She understood this exactly, and her young face was troubled. She was blooming again with beauty and vitality. She had been a lovely bud but now she was in flower—in her middle twenties—young with beauty and grace, but with poise now, too, and a strong sense of accomplishment. She had background now of a new kind—not the background of parents and school and a fine home, but the background of effort and self-control.

"I'll take Peter," she said. "You can look after Elaine."

She was going to Lillian's, to see mamma who was home from New York for another visit.

Will watched the family away, Elaine perched on his arm. Elaine was happy with her father, and they made a game of supper. Now, at two, she was beginning to be a bonny baby. They had had a long struggle with her. But at last her heart was beginning to beat a rhythmic tune—a healthy organ instead of an undeveloped heart in an undeveloped body. It almost seemed that they could breathe again.

After the little girl was sleeping Will sat beside her, smoking and watching her—dreaming those things a father dreams for his little daughter. The daylight was going, and the last of the light seemed to gather in an iridescence about the baby's face. Suddenly Will was shot through with an emotion more powerful than anything he had ever felt. For just an instant the baby face seemed the only thing in the world—the lashes down in a smudge against her cheek—he saw not flesh, but color—not bony structure, but pure line—idea—

He stared at her, and saw not the child but her picture. In that moment he sensed the true identity of her being, as one hears in astonishment clear tone and harmony where there is no sound. He was profoundly disturbed. Why, he could paint her—this was new—this feeling; he had not felt like this before, not even when he daubed so constantly in colors as a child. He had never felt this; he could paint her; he knew that he could.

During the whole month of January Mr. Poole did not draw a line. He came to the office and sat there, but Will could not get him to work, and found himself incapable of much arguing.

Early in February he said to Will one day, "This is my birthday."

"It is?" "Yes—I'm sixty-five—but I feel ninety-five. Will, I'm through."

"You're through?" "Yes; I'll never draw another line. I can't work any more."

There was no questioning the sincerity of his tone. Will found himself accepting this statement as true. Mr. Poole was through. It would be idle to argue or to cajole him.

"Well," he said after a little, "this is the end of Poole and Todd, then."

"Yes," answered his partner heavily, "it's the end."

After a few minutes of silence, Will got up and began to pack away the drawing boards, to sort out pencils, rack up the stiff cardboard sketches and set the office in order.

"I'd like to go to Florida—where it's warm," said Poole dreamily. "I've been cold for months."

Will looked at him queerly. He felt sad. The old man was, in his own eyes, a failure. He did not feel, nor was he warmed by, the praise or the recognition of others. Long afterward Will felt that in that moment he had known the cold and clammy breath of death. The death of activity, of hope; the yielding of some long-loved and never-forgotten dream.

"Let's have a party at Pastano's tonight. Mostame's in town—and McDermott would come. Do you think Ernestine would be my guest—at Pastano's?"

"I think so, John. She'd do most anything for you."

"Ernestine"—the old man seemed to wander—he paused a long time, and looked at Will with a faint glimmer of the old intelligence in his face. "Will, put those d-d pasteboards down and come here—I want to tell you something. It was Loring Hamilton that had you fired from the Sun. He had Wiston's affairs in his hands—they were thicker than anyone knew, and Wiston had reason to please Loring. Wiston got tight one night and told it. And lost his job for it. McDermott will be friendly to you, if you take any work to him."

"Don't worry about me, John."

"I'm not worrying, you young devil. I want to tell you, though, about Loring. Watch out for him. He's got power now, in a way. He's going to London next year for Pastano. He's the prince of the bootleggers now. Pastano is using him recklessly. He doesn't give a d—n for Loring—will probably ruin him in the end. But Pastano does care about you—and about Ernestine."

"What Loring does is nothing to me. Like most men, it worked out for the best. I mean—you can't do a dirty trick as easily as you think. I've come farther this way than if I had stayed on the Sun."

The old man left to go and make arrangements for his party, and Will, after a brief telephone conversation with Ernestine, pitched into the files. It was late afternoon when he went home and as he went he was turning over in his mind the possibilities for the future. His enthusiasm had gripped a new idea. Ernestine would not like this. But he could do well for himself. He could!

"After all," he said to himself, swinging along among the small tidy houses, "after all, I was in danger of becoming a copyist. I've learned all that Poole can teach me. It's time for me to work alone—to develop my own ideas."

Ernestine was dressing, and giving instructions to the neighbor girl who was to stay with the children.

"What do you think, Will? Shall I wear my red dress? I thought I would never go to Pastano's again. It's years, though, since we went, and I don't mind going a bit. Will, you aren't listening to me. I've been so vexed with Peter. He's had two whippings, and needed a third. He's getting too big for me to spank any more. I wish you'd take a little paddle to him."

Will stood in amazement in the middle of the bedroom, his tie in his hands, looking back at the bright reel of memory—himself and Ernestine walking on Clark street in a late snow —going into Pastano's. How his heart had burned that night at Loring and Lillian—at all of them stirring Ernestine against him. Why had he cared? He didn't care now. He was singularly unmoved by the pronouncement that Loring had forced Wiston's hand, and Wiston had seized the first excuse to dismiss him. He realized with a shock that his resentment against Loring had always been personal—from the time he had been a little boy dragging a brace, and Loring had been a big boy, strong and robust and always teasing Ernestine and pulling at her hair. It was because Loring had despised him—not because of Ernestine. It had been Loring's strength and hardness that he had hated, not Loring's attention to his wife. How strange to think that his jealousy had been for himself and not for her. His self-esteem had suffered, not his love.

He became conscious of Ernestine's voice, querulous with Peter who protested against being put to bed. Ernestine ought not take that annoyed, vexed tone with the boy. He realized that he had heard her speak so to Peter frequently, of late. If Peter were naughty he should be punished, not hectored. Will took the boy from his mother.

"Go and get dressed," he said to her in a tone of command which astonished her. "You're always scolding the kid about something. Ever since Elaine came he's in trouble. You can't expect a healthy boy to go on tiptoe all his life because he has a sick sister. Go on and dress, and I'll take care of him. Be quiet, Peter, or I'll punish you. Not another word."

"He's just like you, and your family," Will told Ernestine. "He's willful and energetic and intelligent and strong. He wants his own way. Instead of dealing with him firmly you quarrel with him. You should not permit him the equality of an argument, and I want you to stop it, Ernestine."

Recollections of a dozen times when Will had been high-handed with her rushed over Ernestine.

"So you don't allow the Briceland equals?" she asked in a cold rage, finding it difficult to take correction from him.

"It's just as well for us to understand one thing at a time without going into another," answered Will calmly. "If I think you are taking the wrong tone with Peter, I'll say so. It's my right."

They left the house and walked to the car line in silence. They sat beside each other in the car, they walked toward Pastano's, together in flesh, remote in spirit. The strong satisfaction of inner activity shone on Will's face, and it was like a declaration of war to Ernestine. Her anger grew until she could not remember when she had burned with such resentment.

She was excessively courteous to every one at the dinner party. John Poole told her of his plans for Florida, of the end of his agreement with Will. Ernestine was astonished.

"Why didn't you tell me?" she demanded, turning to Will, and he answered her:

"We didn't have a chance to talk."

Ernestine felt that Pastano's was bad medicine for her. She was unhappy again.

At home, later, she spoke to Will somewhat timidly.

"Are we going to be enemies, Will? So many married people are foes—bitter, unforgiving. Lillian and Loring are in continual conflict. He must dominate her every move. He's the one to say where they will go, what they will eat, whether or not they will have children. I'm willing to accept what you said about Peter—only, let's keep our unity."

"You know I will never love anyone but you, Ernestine," he said impatiently, "but I've got a big job on my hands now. Don't be neurotic. I've got to swing this thing, and you mustn't be emotional if my mind is on my job instead of on sentimentalities. Anything, what are you talking about? Nothing's changed."

She was silent. As he sat on the edge of the bed smoking, she finally closed her eyes against his immobility, turned her head on her pillow and tried to sleep, but burning tears slid underneath the lids.

How Term "Thirty" Came to Symbolize Ending

Charles Payne Smith gave the following information in the Typographical Journal regarding the origin of "30" as used by newspaper men and telegraphers: "The first press association organized in Civil War times was composed largely of morning papers published near the eastern seaboard. Each paper sent into the central office items of local interest, which were there edited and telegraphed to all members. It happened that the first message sent to the association totaled 30 words and this figure, with the words 'Good night' and the signature of the sender, was placed at the bottom of the sheet by the operator. At that time piecework was the rule on all papers. The daily grist was usually set up, corrected and in the forms by 10 o'clock, but the compositors were compelled to wait around at their own expense until the foreman announced that '30' was in. So '30' became a byword among printers, symbolizing the end."

The Boyhood of Famous Americans

By J. V. Fitzgerald

Dr. William J. Mayo

The surgeons were getting ready to operate. The doctor administering an anesthetic to the patient felt faint. A thirteen-year-old boy was in the operating room. He stepped boldly to the front, took the place of the sick physician, and administered the anesthetic under the directions of the operating surgeon. The boy was William J. Mayo, later to become world famous as a surgeon.

Matters of medicine and surgery were familiar to the youngster even at the age of thirteen. His father was Dr. William H. Mayo, one of the best surgeons in the West. His ancestors had been prominent in the profession for generations in England, from which his father came to this country in 1845.

Young Mayo had been brought up in the way of curing the ills of mankind. It wasn't unnatural that he was able, under the circumstances, to serve as an assistant at an operation when he was only thirteen. His first patient recovered. Since then he has cured thousands by the skill of his surgery.

The youngster had early ambitions to be a stagecoach driver. He was born in Le Sueur, Minn., in 1861, but his father moved to Rochester, in the same state, when William was two years old. Minnesota was in the Wild West of those days. There were few highways running across the rolling prairies. Indians roamed the plains. Many of the pioneers lived in crude sod huts.

Stagecoach drivers were heroes to the boys in Rochester. They were rough characters, but the glamor of adventure hung over them in the eyes of young Will and his playmates. They dashed into the town, pulling up foam-flecked horses with a flourish that was highly impressive in juvenile eyes. They were a link with the great world outside the little prairie settlement.

But like most of us, who in our youth dream of becoming firemen, policemen, engineers, cowboys—or stagecoach drivers—young Mayo's ambition was soon directed into other channels. His father's practice covered much of the southern part of the state. The boy often accompanied him on visits to patients far out on the lonely prairie.

The youngster saw Indians living in wigwams while on such trips. He held the horses when his father made calls in the sod huts of the homesteaders, occasionally assisting in the setting of a broken limb. He witnessed suffering and fortitude.

His environment tended to direct him toward the study of medicine. He made up his mind when he was in high school to follow in the footsteps of his father and so many of his ancestors. After being graduated from the high school in Rochester he attended Niles academy. From there he went to the University of Michigan. He was graduated in medicine in 1883.

He had hardly returned to the old-fashioned home, which his father had built in Rochester and in which he spent his boyhood, than he had an opportunity to show the benefits of his training. A tornado, one of those wind storms so dreaded in the flat prairie country, struck Rochester and wrecked part of the village.

His father turned his home into a hospital. The elder Mayo, the newly made Dr. William Mayo and his brother, Charles H. Mayo, then a medical student, treated the injured. The sons assisted their father in several emergency operations.

Dr. William J. Mayo made an excellent record in college. So did his brother. Both learned medicine as they grew up. Doctor Will worked in a drug store during his vacations. Doctor Charles did likewise. Furthermore they had the direct benefit of the deep knowledge and wide experience of their father.

They had a good microscope when they were in high school. Their father bought it specially for them and taught them its use. They studied with it many winter nights when a blizzard roared outside the comfortable home of the Mayos. Such training and advantages were most helpful when it came time for them to take up seriously the study of their chosen profession.

The first real practical experience Dr. William J. Mayo had as a practicing physician in Rochester indirectly brought about the establishment of the world famous Mayo clinic. Rochester was without a hospital. The need for such an institution was emphasized after the tornado had left death and suffering in its wake.

The Sisters of St. Francis, who had served as nurses for the Mayos when they were administering to the needs of the tornado victims, agreed to help build a hospital if the Mayos would serve as physicians and surgeons. Doctor Will's father donated the land. The brothers thus began their work together. Out of that early association has grown their own world-known institution for the relief of suffering humanity.

Doctor's 3 RULES Big Help to Bowels

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleansing out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Clean up that coated tongue, sweeten that bad breath, and get rid of those bilious headaches. A little Syrup Pepsin will soon free the bowels from all that waste matter that makes the whole system sluggish. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better.

You'll like the way Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin tastes. The way it works will delight you. Big bottles—all drugstores.

Kruschen Salts—(a perfect combination of the six mineral salts your body should have to function properly) purify your blood of harmful acids, and aid the kidneys and bowels to throw off waste material—the continual formation of which is probably the cause of your fat.

In this modern age of living, it's impossible to get these salts from the fancy foods you eat—but don't worry just as long as you have Kruschen Salts.

Take a half teaspoon every morning before breakfast in a glass of hot water—little by little that ugly fat disappears, you'll feel better than ever before—years younger, more energy. You'll soon possess that enviable beauty, clear skin, sparkling eyes, superb figure which only perfect health can impart.

DRIVES AWAY THAT "NO-COUNT" FEELING

"I just don't feel right. Manage somehow to drag through each day, but seem to have no pep." Countless thousands thus express themselves daily. While not really sick, their energy battery is so low that they have no power of endurance. Such people need LYKO, the great general tonic. Nothing better to recharge a run-down system. It drives away that "no count" feeling in a jiffy. Try a bottle TODAY. You'll like it. At all good druggists. A4-42

Better Health Movement

Beginning tonight at the homes of Mrs. H. L. Stuckey and Mrs. D. A. Pollard, a series of health programs under the direction of E. O. Meyer and L. A. Temple, will be started in our city.

This work concerns the proper preparations of food and its relationship to the health of mankind. These programs will be held in the homes of several of the residents of Sanderson. It is hoped that these meetings will be a big success.

Mrs. Charlie White visited Mrs. Chester Smith in Dryden Wednesday.

REVIVAL CAMPAIGN

The service at the Presbyterian church last Sunday was well attended and the message of Rev. W. A. Posey of San Antonio was received and greatly appreciated by a goodly number at both morning and evening worship.

The pastor of the Methodist church dismissed his evening service and came over with his people to assist in the service at the Presbyterian church. They entered heartily into the song service; as leader of the chorus Bro. Stradley helped the preacher very much as well as getting the congregation to sing "heartily as unto the Lord."

Next Sunday Rev. Posey will open a revival campaign for the rest of the time he is here with the Presbyterian church as assistant to Dr. L. E. Selfridge in the work of enlisting a stronger support of the church and its benevolent causes.

By the time the meeting is over we expect to have a minister for a pastor of the church. We are earnestly urging all the members of the church to get ready for a great effort to win souls to Christ and build up the cause of Christ throughout the entire town and community. There will be good singing and music at all the services beginning next Sunday at 11 a. m., and continuing each evening throughout the week at 7:30 p. m.

We cordially invite all christian people in the community to come and co-operate with us in this effort to help the unsaved to Christ and the church.

Rev. Posey has been engaged in the evangelistic work for many years and is not a stranger to conditions over the country. He is not able to do all the work necessary to be done in this town and community for Christ and the church but is willing to do all he may, under the circumstances expects all others to do their part to make this a great success for God and His Kingdom.

Remember the Sunday school begins at 10 a. m. Morning worship 11 a. m.; evening service at 7:30 o'clock.

Every one welcome.

Bus Ride Worked
a Miracle

By JANNIS PARKER

THERE was a touch of fall in the air. It was very brisk and refreshing on the top of the bus as we whisked up the avenue.

The conversation of the couple in front of me floated back. The woman was plainly disturbed.

"You know as well as I do, the children and I can't live on that." Across the aisle two small boys were jumping up and down; gay, animated little figures in their trim blue serge, gold-buttoned topcoats.

"Oh, mother!" shrieked the younger one as he spied a huge, dull silver dirigible floating leisurely overhead, "a dirigible!"

The man spoke gruffly. "Junior, can't you see your mother and I are talking?"

"Imagine your growling at the children like that!" There was no anger in the woman's voice, only mild reproof.

The man's voice was low. "It's a wonder I'm able to attend to business with all the complicated plans for separate homes," he said, "let alone the children. Their training is mainly your job, anyway."

"Well," she went on, "as I told you, the children and I can't possibly live on the amount you propose."

"You don't seem to realize I'm giving you practically all I make," the man reminded her.

"I notice you're not giving up any of your clubs," she pointed out.

"And why should I?" he retorted. "What do you expect me to do with my evenings? Spend them in the movies?"

"No, I don't expect you to spend your evenings in the movies. I expect you'll spend them right where you've been spending them for the past seven months."

"I fail to see why you have to drag Viola into this," he muttered. "You know very well my seeing her was merely on business. She needed legal advice and I gave it to her."

"In all due respect, Bob, Viola had very odd moments for needing advice, legal or otherwise. After all, you have office hours, you know."

The man was indignant. "Just because she received a beastly telegram from that wretched husband of hers, and wanted to know what to do, you call it odd moments. It was only during dinner."

She sighed. "That's always the way with Viola, Bob. Only this, only that. As though Viola out of the entire city's women needed special advice about her husband."

"I suppose a husband should feel delighted to come home every night and find an infernal doctor draped around the house?"

"Bob!" She turned to him almost fiercely, but then laughed, seeing how very sullen his face was. "You're nothing but a child yourself!" She paused before continuing in a more serious tone.

"That was one of the reasons I spoke about having more to live on. Not for myself, but Junior isn't any too robust."

The man searched her face. A surprised, alarmed expression spread across his regular, clear-cut features. She continued a little shakily. "The doctor says I'll have to be taking him away every now and then. Drier climate, higher altitude."

The man would have interrupted, but she went on. "That's the reason you've seen Doctor Mac draped around the house so often."

"But you never told me anything about it!" the man exclaimed. He looked hurriedly across the aisle at his younger son. The lad was a little pale.

"You never gave me a chance, Bob. If you looked tired when you came home I'd decide to tell you later. And then sometimes I'd have to call Doctor Mac."

Bob was deep in reverie. "All I could think of was that he'd once wanted you to marry him," he muttered.

"You seem to forget I married you," she reminded him.

"You mean you're not interested in him? You're not . . . ?"

"Bob, you idiot!" He was beaming. "Marjorie, take the kiddies to some ranch next summer and let me go along, too."

But Marjorie could not resist a thrust. "What about Viola? She'll be needing advice most of the time, and a ranch is no place to commute from."

"Who's childish now?" he wanted to know. "Anyway, Viola sails on her honeymoon tomorrow."

"Her honeymoon!" exclaimed Marjorie. "Who's the man?"

"Who would be?" retorted Bob. "The same wife-beater she's been weeping and walling for me to free her from these many months!"

Marjorie broke into gales of laughter, but Bob had an insistent question.

"You haven't answered me," he reminded her.

She looked dubious. "Answered you?"

"Will you or will you not . . . no, I'll make a fresh start. Will you please take me along with you and the children to the ranch?"

"I'd love to."

He didn't say anything, just gripped her hand more tightly. Then he looked up at the sky.

"Oh, look, boys!" he cried, and pointed something out to them. "A dirigible!"

The new Ford is an economical car to own and drive

Low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation mean a distinct saving to every purchaser

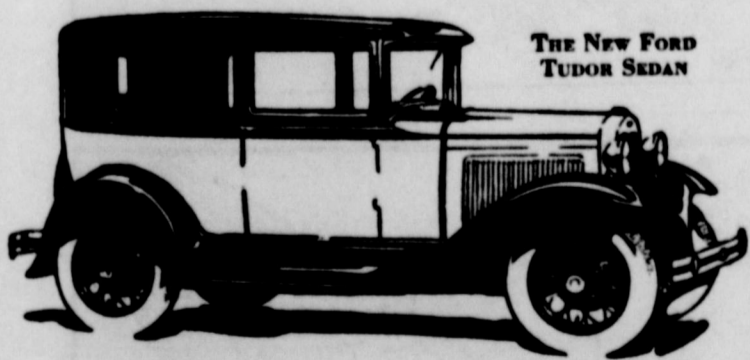

THE NEW FORD is a splendid car to own and drive because of its attractive lines and colors, safety, comfort, speed, reliability and long life.

There are, in addition, three other features of importance to every far-seeing automobile owner . . . low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

During the life of the car, the day-by-day economy of owning a Ford will amount to considerably more than the saving on the first cost. You save when you buy the Ford and you save every mile you drive.

The reasons for this economy are simplicity of design, high quality of materials and care in manufacturing and assembling. Many vital parts are made to limits of one one-thousandth of an inch. Some to three ten-thousandths of an inch. Throughout, the new Ford is an outstanding example of fine craftsmanship in automobile engineering.

The more you see of the new Ford—the more you talk to Ford owners and experienced mechanics—the more certain you become of this fact. . . . It brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.

Prayer by Mrs. Pollard.

Mrs. John Nichols gave the devotional topic "Remember" "This shall be spoken of for a memorial of her."

Roll call was answered by each giving the name of a Bible woman.

A program was given on the "Outstanding Woman of Other Lands."

Induk Kim—Mrs. Pollard.
Dr. Mary Stone—Mrs. Joe Nichols.

Jo San of Kope, Japan—Mrs. W. H. Savage.

Silent prayer was offered for the sick, after which Mrs. Stuckey closed with prayer.

Tea and cookies were served to the following: Mesdames Stuckey, Loehausen, John Nichols, Jack McKee, W. H. Savage, Pollard, Haass, Hoffman, Laurence, Chariton and the hostess.

THE GREATEST SERMON EVER DELIVERED

Building This term is used, spiritually, of one's work in life, or of the formation of character and habits. Mt 7:24, 26.

In the above Scripture and the verses given we have a part of the concluding appeal of the greatest sermon ever delivered. One cannot imagine how more could be packed into the picture of the two kinds of builders.

Jesus takes the little word "do" and hurls it at man until it stings. Unless men work out the truth here taught, in real life, time spent in religion is worthless.

Truth stands out in bold type, and the contract is drawn between the "whosoever" hears and does the sayings of Jesus and the "every one" that hears the sayings of Jesus but does not do them.

"Building" will be the subject of the sermon at the Church of Christ, Sunday, February 15.

Welcome invitation.

R. E. Griffith.

MRS. F. B. PYLE IS HONORED WITH TEA

Mrs. F. B. Pyle, a recent bride, was the recipient of a lovely social courtesy Thursday, February 5, when Mrs. Joe Kerr, Max Bogusch, Jim Kerr and Fred Montgomery delightfully entertained in her honor at the Kerr Hotel with a Bridge Tea. The tea table was beautiful in an Italian lace cloth, cut flowers and pink tapers. Mrs. H. R. Laurence and Mrs. L. A. Lowe poured tea and after a number of spirited games a salad course was served to eighty guests. The honoree, Mrs. Pyle, was given a hand embroidered linen luncheon set; high score being awarded to Mrs. H. R. Laurence, crystal ice tea glasses; Miss Willie Mae Green second high, crystal water goblets, and Mrs. John Yates was awarded the cut prize, a linen breakfast set.

SERMON SUBJECTS FOR SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 15

Rev. B. M. Stradley, pastor of the First Methodist Church, announces the following sermon subjects for Sunday, February 15:

11 a. m., "A message from Heaven to Sanderson, Texas."

3 p. m., at Dryden school house, "Footsteps of My Shepherd."

For Sunday evening, February 15, we will not hold evening preaching service but along with the others attend the Presbyterian Church revival being conducted by Dr. osev of San Antonio, Texas.

At the 3 p. m. service at Dryden, Mrs. Lemmons will direct a special quartet number, and at the 11 a. m. service the choir will render a special anthem number.

Any Bible question you would like answered by the Bible kindly mail to Box 436, Sanderson, or hand in to the pastor, advising at what service you would like them taken up.

Little Churches

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

LET others sing of the ancient cathedrals of the Old world or the mighty structures, dedicated to religion, which are rising in some of the great population centers of this country. Mine be the theme of the "little churches" which are scattered throughout the United States, little white-painted frame churches that you find standing on a small plot of ground along some country road; little red brick churches, tucked away on some village side street; quaint little old churches which date from the earliest days of the communities in which they stand; little churches wherever they may be in which there is no man-made architectural magnificence to divert the mind of the worshiper when he comes into them from the busy world outside to commune with the Great Unseen.

Tourists may gape in wonder at the splendor of metropolitan skyscraper churches, but it is doubtful if any of these great buildings will have the place in the hearts of so many people as does a little church out in Iowa. And that is because for more than 60 years a song familiar to thousands invites one to "Come to the church by the wildwood, Oh, come to the church in the vale." The Little Brown Church of song and story is located in northeastern Iowa, in the beautiful valley of the Red Cedar. It stands today among the same giant pines that were there when it was built back in Civil war days, in the wildwood which made the setting and provided the inspiration for the carol.

As a matter of fact the song, variously known as "The Church in the Wildwood" and "The Little Brown Church in the Vale," was not written about any church specifically. Its author, Dr. W. S. Pitts, a native of Wisconsin, received the inspiration for the song while on a visit in Iowa. He wrote the song at his home in Rock county, Wisconsin, but it was sung for the first time publicly in the now-famous Little Brown Church in the Vale, in Bradford, Iowa, two miles northeast of Nashua. How he came to write the song and how it came to be applied to this particular church and to make it famous is told in Doctor Pitts' own words, in a historical booklet, published by the Little Brown Church, as follows:

"One bright afternoon of a day in June, 1857, I first set foot in Bradford, Iowa, coming by stage from McGregor. My home was then in Wisconsin. The spot where 'The Little Brown Church' now stands was a setting of rare beauty. There was no church there then but the spot was there waiting for it. When back in my home I wrote the song, 'The Little Brown Church in the Vale,' I put the manuscript away.

"In the spring of 1862 I returned to Iowa and settled at Fredericksburg, inasmuch as my wife's people were there. In the winter of 1863-4 I taught a singing class in Bradford. We held our school in the brick building known as the Academy. In the years 1850 and 1860 the good people of Bradford were determined to build a church. I will not take time to tell of the trials, the disappointments and the successes that followed; suffice it to say, by the early winter of 1864 the building was ready for dedication.

"While I was holding the singing school, near its close in the spring, the class went one evening to the church. It was not then seated, but rude seats were improvised. My manuscript of the song I had brought with me from Wisconsin. It had never been sung before by anyone but myself. I sang it there. Soon afterwards I took the manuscript to Chicago, where it was published by H. M. Higgins. It won a speedy recognition locally and with the years won its way into the hearts of the people of the world.

"Soon after its publication the church at Bradford (which had been painted brown for want of money to buy better paint, some say) became known as 'The Little Brown Church in the Vale.' Under the circumstances what is more natural than the little church at Bradford, painted brown, and the song should be wedded and known as one and the same. Some people may try to rob the little church of its fame but as long as it stands it will be known as 'The Little Brown Church in the Vale.'

At the time the Little Brown Church was built Bradford was a thriving town and the largest settlement in that part of the state except Dubuque and McGregor. Of the times, Rev. John K. Nutting, the pastor under whose ministry the building was erected, wrote: "We lived well. My salary was paid in products, at prices of which I could not complain. Wheat was 36 cents per bushel—mill close at hand. Best cuts of beef, 6 cents per pound. Potatoes never more than 25 cents per bushel—at planting time in the spring often given away. Other farm products were valued on the same scale. In winter, carcass pork, frozen, could sometimes be secured for 1 cent per pound. A threatened thaw would generally overwhelm the parsonage with 'spare-ribs.' Many (I with the rest) had sugar camps in the forest and made our own sugar. Others raised sorghum."

The church grew, and as a kind of by-product came Bradford academy. The school was housed better than the church, in a fine brick structure. Beginning in a small way, the school grew and did notable work, elevating the standard of education in the region around, so that at one time it was said that no territory of equal size in Iowa could claim so many people with a college education.

In 1868 the long-hoped-for railroad came and passed Bradford by, touching at Nashua two miles away and across the river. Bradford, the largest town for many miles, gradually became a town of the past, while Nashua grew to the dignity of a population of 1,000. Where Bradford once stood, the land was turned into farms.

The Little Brown church survived, however. This was on account of Doctor Pitts' song, mainly, for after it was taken to Chicago and published, jubilee singers took it up, concert companies carried it all over America and Europe, and it was heard in Australia, New Zealand and South America. For 20 years it was one of the popular songs of the country.

For some years after this the song was little in evidence, like the church. Then about 25 years ago the song had a revival of popularity and again began to be heard widely at religious meetings throughout the country.

Meantime, following Bradford's change from a town into open country, the Little Brown Church was abandoned. But the need of a place of worship caused it to be reopened and it was restored as nearly as possible to the way in which it was built. Thus for more than a quarter of a century it has been a real country church.

A little church which sprang into fame within recent years is a quaint old Quaker meeting house in Sandy Spring, Md., 20 miles from Washington, and it came into prominence when President Herbert Hoover attended services there. There was a particular reason for his going to that church. The President's biographers tell how Herbert Hoover is a descendant of Andrew Hoover, a stalwart colonial pioneer, who "held farms in the uplands of Maryland," meaning the vicinity of Sandy Spring. It was in this meeting house, built in 1817, that earlier generations of the Hoovers worshipped.

Off the coast of New Hampshire is a little church which is unique. It stands alone on Star Island, Isles of Shoals, ten miles from the mainland, which is said to be the only island in America dedicated entirely to religious services. Built in 1890, after the wooden meeting house was destroyed during the Revolution for fuel, this stone structure for 130 years has been the scene of worship by mothers, sisters and sweethearts, praying for the safe return of their loved ones, fishermen at sea.

At ten o'clock each night when all is hushed, the pilgrims place themselves in column formation. Lighted candles, encased in glass shades and swung from handles like lanterns, are passed out to them. Then the column silently winds its way up the rock-strewn path to the top of the hill where the little gray stone church with its old-fashioned pine pews, its cracked bell and the metal codfish on the belfry, stands. There by the dim light of the candles, the pilgrims inside the church and outside—for it is not large enough for all—bow their heads in prayer. Then voices are raised in the words of some appropriate hymn and after this brief service the column moves slowly down the hill again.

In naming the little churches there is one which should not be passed by without mention. On the top of Mount Casino, some two miles south of Covington, Ky., on the Highland pike, is what is said to be the smallest church in the world, since it is capable of accommodating a congregation of not more than three persons! This small brick structure was built in 1890 by some brothers of the Benedictine order, who used it as a shrine during the years they were engaged there in the making of sacramental wine. During the years of its use it contained an altar, the usual church canopies, a crucifix and pews for the accommodation of three persons. But it is no longer used as a church, though still owned by St. Joseph's parish of Covington. It is now merely an out house of the estate on which it is situated.

Lesson for February 15

JESUS THE FRIEND OF SINNERS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 7:36-50.
GOLDEN TEXT—This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus and Those Who Do Wrong.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus and Wrongdoers.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Friend of Sinners.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Transforming Sinners.

I. A Penitent Woman's Act of Love (vv. 37, 38).

1. The place (v. 37). It was in the home of Simon, the Pharisee, while Jesus was sitting at meat. When she knew of Christ's visit in this home, she came to lavish upon him her affections.

2. The act (v. 38). She washed Jesus' feet with her tears and wiped them with her hair. Through some means she had heard of the pardoning grace of Jesus Christ and God had opened her heart to receive Jesus as her personal Savior.

3. Who she was (v. 37). Her name is not given. There is no good ground for assuming that she was Mary Magdalene. The implication is that she was of a notoriously bad character. Though known to the public as a bad woman, something had happened which transformed her. She was a saved sinner because she believed on Jesus Christ.

II. The Pharisee's Displeasure (v. 39).

Simon felt scandalized by such a happening at his table. He was a respectable man. For Jesus to tolerate such familiarity on the part of a woman of such evil repute greatly perplexed him. Though he believed in Jesus enough to invite him to dine with him, he questioned within himself as to whether, after all, he was not mistaken. He reasoned if Jesus were a real prophet, he would have known the character of this woman and would have either withdrawn his feet from her or thrust her back with them; or if he knew her character, his tolerance of such familiarity proved that he was not a good man.

III. Jesus Teaches the Pharisee (vv. 40-50).

He taught him by means of the parable of a creditor and two debtors. It is to be noted that Jesus made it very clear that he not only knew the woman but knew Simon also.

1. The common debt (v. 41). The woman was a sinner—so was Simon, though he was not the same kind of a sinner that she was. There were two debtors, though the one owed ten times as much as the other. This is still representative of all sinners. The Bible declares all to be sinners, yet recognizes degrees of guilt. Full credit ought to be given to the man who is honest, virtuous, generous, and kind, yet such a life will not secure entrance into heaven. Much harm has been done by even evangelical preachers through failure to recognize the essential differences in human character. On the other hand, the Savior's words are a severe rebuke to the respectable Pharisees who are sitting in judgment against sinners of a coarser type.

2. The common insolvency (v. 42). "And when they had nothing to pay," Jesus freely granted the difference in the degree of the woman's sins and those of the Pharisee, but drove home to him the fact that they were both debtors and had nothing with which to pay (Rom. 3:23). As sinners we may quit our sinning and hate our deeds but that does not make satisfaction for the sins of the past. What we have done is irrevocable—it has passed from our reach. Every transgression shall receive a just recompense of reward (Heb. 2:2). We must come to our Redeemer, the Almighty God, and acknowledge our insolvency and accept the kindness of Jesus Christ who bore our sins in his own body on the tree (1 Pet. 2:24).

3. The relation of forgiveness and love (vv. 44-50). Simon's reluctant answer to Jesus' question showed that he got the point of Jesus' teaching. In order to make his teaching concrete, Jesus turned to the woman, calling Simon's attention to what she had done in contrast to what he had done. Simon had neglected to extend to Jesus the common courtesies of a respectable guest, but this woman had lavished upon him her affections and gifts. The measure of one's love is determined by the measure of the apprehension of sins forgiven. The one most forgiven will love most. Frequently the worst sinners make the best saints.

Become Like Him

The all-important thing is not to live apart from God, but as far as possible to be consciously with him. It must needs be that those who look much into his face will become like him.—Charles H. Brent.

Pity

Pity is love stooping, love drawn down by helplessness and want. Pity is love touched with sympathy, love sorrowing and suffering in our sorrow.—C. H. Spurgeon.

How to Escape FLU

- 1 Avoid so far as possible the places where flu germs are most likely to be spread; overcrowded cars and public meeting places; overheated, stuffy rooms.
- 2 Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers; breathe through the nose, get fresh air, but avoid drafts or chilling.
- 3 Get lots of rest. Eat plenty of citrus fruits. Keep the bowels open. Take extra precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have high resistance against germs.
- 4 Above all, avoid catching colds. They lower your resistance to the flu germ. Ward them off. At the first sign of any cold, take Bayer Aspirin and remain indoors if possible until your cold is gone. If you have a sore throat, dissolve some Bayer Aspirin tablets in water and gargle; this will relieve the soreness and reduce the inflammation.
- 5 If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor at once.

The beauty of some women is only cosmetic deep.

Action Without Harm Whenever Constipated

Here's a way to be rid of constipation and its ills—a way that works quickly, effectively, but gently. A candy Cascaret at night—the next morning you're feeling fine. Breath is sweetened; tongue cleared; biliousness, headaches, dizziness, gas vanish. Repeat the treatment two or three nights to get the souring waste out of your system. See how appetite and energy return; how digestion improves.

The action of Cascarets is sure, complete, helpful to everyone. They are made from cascara, which doctors agree actually strengthens bowel muscles. All drug stores have the 10c boxes.

A doctor's pills may cure some ills, but not ill humor.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong. No alcohol. Sold by druggists in tablets or liquid.—Adv.

Five years will live down all except the worst mistakes.

No more COLIC pains ... give Castoria

ACRY in the night may be the first warning that Baby has colic. No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy! This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never do the slightest harm. Always keep a bottle in the house. It is the safe and sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. When there's need of gentle regulation. Every child loves the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it suitable for the tiniest infant, and for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is usually all that's needed to right the irregularities of older, growing children. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. It's prescribed by doctors!

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS - TEACHERS TRAINING CLASS

The local board of Religious Education of the First Methodist Church, beginning Sunday, March 1, will maintain a Teachers, Workers Training Class meeting at 10 a. m. every Sunday morning at the Methodist parsonage.

Those finishing the work will be entitled to receive units of credit from the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, Ill., extension department, and from the Methodist Sunday School Board of Nashville, Tenn.

The first unit to be taken up in this class will be the text by Dr. Costen J. Harrell, "The Bible, its origin and growth." Then a four Sunday lecture course of "The Fundamentals of Bible Teaching," and the third period, a course on "Evangelism from Moody Bible Institute Text."

All those who join the class for credit will be enrolled, and graded as in regular school work. However, the class will be open for all who care to attend for lecture, and devotional benefit.

The class will be taught by the Rev. B. M. Stradley, the Methodist pastor.

DR. JACOB BERGER IN SANDERSON

Dr. Jacob Berger, Ph. D., of St. Paul, Minn., stopped in Sanderson last Sunday on his way to Los Angeles, Calif., and preached at the First Methodist Church.

His subject was "The Spiritual Comprehension of the Child of God."

His scholarly, and yet deep spiritual message was greatly appreciated by the large congregation who heard him.

Dr. Berger is in his 82 year and yet is one of the most active ministers in the middle northwest, and is beloved by a host of friends who have been blessed by his long loving ministry for his master of 57 years.
