It seems that it is time that such nuisance is being put a stop to as this taking of gasoline from cars has been going on for a year or more.

cented with the greatest enthusiasm all through the spring and summer mode. If not white and black, then it is apt to be white and navy or white and brown which is wonderfully chic. Even the smart beige and gray costumes are taking on white contrasts, making a feature of white millinery, scarfs, blouses, gloves, belts, flowers and bags, also jewelry.

A most effective version of the black rown which highlights a dramatic contrast in white is presented in the accompanying picture. Flat crepe is the material for the dress, made interesting in that it is styled with a single large square lapel in white with a waistcoat effect which displays a chevron-stripe. A profile hat, so-called because of its long-side brim which at against its dark background, is worn with this costume. It carries out the black-and-white idea in that it is a black bakou appropriately trimmed with two carved ivory-white ornaments.

Kitchen Sink Should Be High Enough

A homemaker generally has to wash dishes three times a day. If her sink is too low it forces her into a stooping posture which she maintains for half an hour or more at a time. Constant repetition of such a posture every day may result in a permanent tendency to stoop. Shoulders grow round and chest contracted. The head is thrust forward.

The first aid to a better standing position for dishwashing is to raise the sink to the proper height for the woman who is to work in front of it. If this seems an impossible undertaking, it may help to set a flat box in the sink on which to rest the dishpan.

Then the homemaker must consciously try to maintain a good standing posture at her work. The two pictures by the United States Department of Agriculture illustrate the difference in posture that is made by raising the level of the sink. It is probable that she has also evolved a very efficient routine for dishwashing. She has perhaps timed herself in this task and scrutinized it to see whether there is any way of shortening the work. Unnecessary motions can often be eliminated. For example, just as one leaves the dishes in a dash-washing machine to drain and dry, the person who has only a drain basket and a drainboard can pour scalding water over her dishes in the drain basket and let them dry without wiping. Double drain boards are always satisfactory, but if there is room for one only, it is most convenient for a right-handed person on the left side of the sink. Dishes are held in the left hand and washed with the right, then set in the drain basket without crossing the arms as would be necessary with the drain board at the right.

The task of dishwashing can also be speeded up by intelligent previous work. As the table is cleared, plates and other china of similar shape and size should be scraped and stacked together ready for washing. All silver is usually washed at one time, and motions are saved if it is collected before the washing process is begun. If the dining table is far from the kitchen, a tea cart is a help in bringing dishes out of the dining room and in putting them away. If all water

There are some fairies called the | the mermalds whisked their beautiful | three, go,' remember what it means, mermaid fairies because they're in the water more than they are out of it.

They had decided to help the little Ashes with a swimming party which they were planning.

Every fairy in Fairyland was invited. There were the wood fairies, the dawn fairies, the evening fairies -all of them were invited, and they made great preparations over the way they should go.

In the first place they wore lovely dresses of green seaweed which really were beautiful, and they put on their water wings of green, too, to help them when they got tired swimming.

The Fairy Queen wore a chain of very fine sea shells which once upon a time old Mr. Pickerel had sent her. They had been given to him by one of his relations who lived in the sea, for of course Mr. Pickerel's home is always in fresh water-such as a lake or a river or a stream. This swimming party was given in a lake, and Mr. Pickerel was the host. You can well guess how flattered he was when he saw the Fairy Queen wearing the present he had once given to her. The fairles all arrived in their boats made of glass through which they could see right down to the bottom of the lake, which was very deep.

The mermaid fairles and the fishes were all swimming around waiting for them, and when they came all the fishes' fins wiggled with pleasure and hair around their heads.

"Splash, splash!" came from Mr. Pickerel, which really meant "delighted to see you." Then Mrs. Pickerel splashed, too, and after the little pickerels splashed for all they were worth and so on until every single fish had given a welcome to the fairles.

The fairies sailed about in their boat which went under the water as well as on top, and then every little while they would get out from one of their glass port holes and swim around with great glee.

"Now for the races," shouted Mr. Pickerel. "When I say, 'One, two,

"I will give three small splashes with my tail and then I will jump away up, and come down with a terrific splash which will mean, 'Go!' " All the fairies got ready for the big swimming race, and the little fishes all swam around in circles to cheer them along, for of course the fishes didn't go in the race. That would hardly have been fair! And when Mr. Pickerel said, "Go," and made the terrific jump and splash with his tail all the fairles jumped and it was several minutes before any of them actually got started.

They had been so startled by Mr. Pickerel's mighty splash. That amused the fishes and it amused the fairles, too.

Granny Perch gave the prize, and how she did wiggle her fins when she presented it.

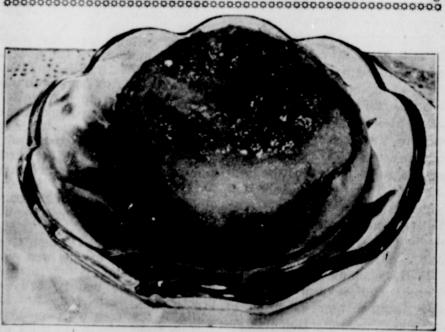

The prize was a new set of water wings made out of the softest and loveliest of moss that came from the bottom of the lake and which had been made by Granny Perch into the wings.

Then all the fishes took the fairles to their Pond Lily Cove where they had a banquet of delicious water weed salad, water moss ice cream and pond lily lemonade.

But the winner of the prize was a little fairy named Fairy Perch because she was so at home in the water. Aren't you glad that she won the prize?

Ways of Cooking Apples

Baked Apple, Half Peeled.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) - WNU Service.

When the oven is in use for other cooking it's a good time to have an apple dessert or apples in some other baked dish. Apples with vegetables, or meat, like scalloped apples and sweet potatoes, or apples with carrots or apples with pork chops en casserole, are served hot. Apple desserts are enjoyed either hot or cold.

Baking apples in their skins is one of the favorite ways of cooking them because it is so easy. What could be simpler on a busy day, than washing and coring a few big rosy apples, filling the cavities with sugar and a little butter, and then baking them in a dish that can be sent to the table direct from the oven, either hot or cold? The baking dish may be covered at first so that the apples will cook partially in their own juices.

Some people like to pare the apples as well as core them, and to bake them in a heavy sirup, with a suggestion of lemon or spice flavoring, or both. To make these look very attractive a little red vegetable coloring may be added to the sirup and a candied cherry or cranberry set on top. Whether pared or cooked in their skins apples to be baked may have the cores replaced by various stuffings such as nut meats, raisins, figs, dates, or by preserves of distinctive flavor, Other baked desserts made with apples by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture are scalloped apples, with crumbs on top; apple cobbler, with biscuit dough; dutch apple cake, with the dough underneath and the apples above; apple turnovers, and apple dumplings, all made with pastry; apple taptoca pudding, and apple upside down cake. Served in any of these ways, apples are wholesome and valuable in the diet and add to the day's supply of fruit.

How to train BABY'S BOWELS

Babies, bottle-fed or breast-fed, with any tendency to be constipated, would thrive if they received daily half a teaspoonful of this old family doctor's prescription for the bowels.

That is one sure way to train tiny bowels to healthy regularity. To avoid the fretfulness, vomiting, crying, failure to gain, and other ills of constipated babies.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is good for any baby. For this, you have the word of a famous doctor. Forty-seven years of practice taught him just what babies need to keep their little bowels active, regular; keep little bodies plump and healthy. For Dr. Caldwell specialized in the treatment of women and little ones. He attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby.

Punishing Autoists

Old-fashioned punishments for careless motorists are being advocated by farmers, according to Country Home. They urge that persons who violate traffic laws are mostly just like a lot of thoughtless schoolboys. Adopting their plan, a Detroit judge has penalized many autoists by making them stay for an hour in the police pen until they've written "I passed a traffic light," or "I passed a standing street car" so many hundreds of times. He was young and such a human live wire that anyone with half an eye could see he was not destined for long to spend his time handing out "ropes," cigs and plug cut smoking tobacco to a clientele none too discriminating. If Elmer stayed in the game at all, it would be to own his own smoke emporium, and it would be no hick affair but in the latest city style and a credit to the town. You may think it is the old story of the new rich or of a beggar on horseback; but it isn't. Our Elmer was a quite level-headed citizen, with plenty of savvy and a backbone that was built for carrying burdens and also built for carrying burdens and also acting as an efficient power station for the generation of courage; but with all these qualities he would most certainly have slipped had not a manager suddenly arisen to take him in hand and guide him from the pitfalls which his money blinded ever falled.

See.

It was a girl, of course; but what a manager and what adroitness she used to put her management into effect! She had been trust officer in the town's bank, and from behind her wicket had seen more of the foibles of life and had absorbed more human nature than Elmer had come into contact with during his whole career. She had a strong hand, even if it were encased in a delicate, soft glove; but no muscling, stiff-armed methods for her. No, indeed! CHAPTER I

Mr. Absolom McPeake's secretary came into her employer's office with an unpleasant announcement, Mr. Hiram Butterwerth was waiting in the outer office and desirous of seeing him.

"Keep him waiting half an hour," the lawyer answered. "I haven't finished reading the morning paper and a half-hour wait will have a good psychological effect on that old razorback. It will add to my importance and diminish his."

McPeake finished reading the paper and lighted a cigar; when the cigar was consumed, he opened the door leading to the general office and bowed Hiram Butterworth in with a cheery good morning and a polite inquiry as to the state of the Butterworth health.

"I'm done for," his visitor replied agitatedly and sank heavily into the overstuffed armchair which Absolom McPeake reserved for his clients, "Yes, McPeake, done for!"

"I wouldn't say that, Mr. Butterworth," McPeake soothed him, "You are always pessimistic. Try being optimistic for a change."

Hiram Butterworth flared in sudden rageful impatience. "Why wouldn't you say it?" he growled, and answered the question himself. "Because you don't know anything about it, that's why. And I do. I ought to. I've pald out enough good cash money to find out. I've been to six specialists in six cities and have received six identical verdicts. I'm done for, I tell you, and don't you try to tell me I'm not. I guess I know when I'm done for. Cost me enough to find out."

He shuffled his feet, and McPeake, glancing down, observed that Butterworth's shoes were old, cheap and worn. And the thin, threadbare suit, cheap and ready-made, old and demoded, coupled with the saw-edged collar and the plain black "ready-towear" necktie, still further heightened the atmosphere of misery and neglect which this old man radiated.

McPeake replied without irritation: "I'm very sorry to hear this disturbing report, Mr. Butterworth. What did the doctors say was the matter with you?"

"Hardening of the arteries and heart disease," the old man barked. "Three years ago I found myself getting a pain in my chest, so I called on Doc Reiter to cure it. Reiter told me what was what and six others have since confirmed his diagnosis." He bored into McPeake with his gimlet eyes. "I'm liable to die at any moment," he said then in a low, sad voice, "so I've some to set my house in order." McPeake frowned but kept his temper. "You will recall-pardon me for reminding you-that for twenty years I have been urging you to make a will, Mr. Butterworth."

"That's right, that's right," the miser complained. "You're one of those Itold-you-so fellows. For two cents I'd have another lawyer draw up my will."

"That would please me greatly," Absolom McPeake replied serenely. "For less than that I'd decline to draw your will."

His peevish client subsided instantly. "Tut, tut, Absolom. You're too quick on the trigger. You know mighty well it's too late for me to quarrel with my lawyer now, and besides you know more about my affairs than anybody

"Mr. Elmer B. Clarke is well and intimately known to us and has been for the past fifteen years. The Great Register of Voters of this county informs us that Mr. Clarke is a Republican and that he was born October 10, 1898, in Selma, Fresno county, this state. He is the only child of the late Prof. James J. Clarke and the late Mabel Butterworth Clarke.

"Professor Clarke was a graduate of the University of California and was very eminent in the field of parasitology. His research work contributed much information of tremendous value to the fruit growers of this state. He perished of a fever contracted while in Brazil studying the life and habits of a pest known as the Brazilian fly which had succeeded in invading the territory of Hawaii. His wife died of pneumonia as a sequel to influenza contracted during the epidemic of 1918-19. She was a woman of great intelligence, probity and force of character and, like her husband, was held in the highest esteem here.

"We enclose herewith a photograph of Elmer Butterworth Clarke, which we succeeded in securing from a local photographer at a cost of $1.50, for which we would be pleased to have your remittance.

"Elmer Clarke was twelve years old when his father died. As is the case with most professors and particularly those in federal employ, Professor Clarke's salary was never commensurate with his ability. Also, he was careless in the matter of providing life insurance for his dependents, with the result that the care of his widow fell immediately upon Elmer. "At twelve years of age, therefore. Elmer Clarke played his last game of ball and became the sole and efficient support of his mother-a burden lightened somewhat by reason of the fact that Professor Clarke had left his widow a comfortable six-room bungalow on a lot of 100 feet frontage, on C street of this city.

"Elmer Clarke graduated from the Union high school here at the age of sixteen and was No. 1 on the honor list of ten pupils. He immediately went to work in a local fruit cannery, where the remuneration of employees is regulated by their industry. When the canning season closed he had three hundred dollars in the saving department of this bank. The following season he bought fruit, on commission, for various packing houses and proved himself an uncanny judge of fruit values and crop tonnage. "However, realizing the drawbacks of a seasonal occupation and faced with the necessity of insuring the care of his mother, he learned telegraphy in his spare moments and secured a position as assistant station agent in the local office of the Southern Pacific railroad. He had just been promoted to station agent at the outbreak of the World war. He enlisted at once and served with the Rainbow division as a radio sergeant, until October of 1918, when he was commissioned a second lieutenant. He was wounded twice and slightly gassed.

"For the three years following his discharge from the service, Mr. Clarke's health, due to his wounds and the gassing already referred to, was too precarious to permit of his acceptance of his old position as station agent at be appreciated and reciprocated Pilarcitos. He therefore accepted a thousands of pounds in fitting up expeditions, to Trinidad, Cocos, and other islands reputed to contain treasure, when the soil of Great Britain hides great hoards of gold and plate and jewels, says a writer in London Answers.

History tells us that King John's treasure lies in the sand at the edge of the Wash. It includes his golden crown and a wonderful collection of jewels. Another royal treasure, that of Edward II, lies buried in a rocky chasm in Wales, where he hid it when he fled from his cruel queen and her confederates.

Great hoards lie buried under the ruined walls of the old baronial castles, and much treasure was hidden in similar fashion by the abbots of the monasteries at the time of the Reformation .

Buried treasure is constantly coming to light. Not long ago a wonderful find was made in a Peakland cave. It was a collection of Saxon coins, along with other articles of gold and silver, buried more than yellow scratch paper toward him and 1,000 years ago by a Wessex king. for a flight.

It's funny that people should spend | The dates of the coins vary from A. D. 837 to A. D. 940. The finder was Reverend G. H. Wilson, a Methodist minister.

Stage Tragedies

The word "tragedy" is from Greek words meaning goat songs. There are many explanations of the reason for this. Possibly "goat songs" was applied to the chants used by the men, clothed in goatskin, who represented the satyrs in the festival of Bacchus. Tragedy took its rise from these songs. The Greek developed it to a high point, especially in the dramas of Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides. Aristotle gave as the reason for the existence of tragedy "the purification of the passions through the arousing of fear and pity."

position of less responsibility and lighter duties as assistant to the proprietor of a local billiard and pool hall, with a cigar stand in connection with same.

"He has gradually recovered his health, and the last time the writer spoke to him on this subject, he stated that he was now as well as he had ever been.

"Mr. Clarke is a very ambitious young man, never satisfied with what he has, always scheming for something better. He is well and very favorably known in this city. As commander of the local post of the American Legion, he is a strong force for better citizenship in our community. He is profoundly interested in politics but too shrewd and far-seeing to desire a political office.

"Mr. Clarke is unmarried and there are no immediate prospects of this status being changed. He pays cash for everything and has a savings account in this bank of approximately twenty-five hundred dollars. At the present time he is endeavoring to negotiate with us a loan on his C street property, his object being to engage in business for himself. He is a member of the Rotary club, the Kiwanis club, the Hundred Per Cent club, the Optimists' club, the Advertising club and president of our local chamber of commerce. He is a Go-Getter and too big for this town and it is our opinion that he will leave it for wider and greener pastures. We regard him as a model young man and worthy of every confidence.

"Respectfully yours, Pilarcitos Commercial Trust and Savings Bank,

By N. C. Catheart, Trust Officer," Absolom McPeake looked up and caught a gleam of pride in old Butterworth's piggy little eyes. "Pretty flattering report, I should say, Mr. But-"He takes after me," the miserable ruin persisted. "God forbid!" said Absolom Me-Peake.

"Don't get nasty, Absolom. The boy takes after me, I tell you. A young feller like that who knows the value of money is the man who ought to have my estate. He'll make it grow, He'li do things with it. I want to leave everything to him and cut Hattie's children off at the pockets."

"Very well, then, Elmer Clarke draws the capital prize. However, I suggest that you leave his cousins something also."

"Not a penny, Absolom, They're wasters, I tell you." "Well, we'll leave them five dollars each just so they'll be remembered in the will, and that will block a lawsuit."

"You bet, Absolom; I want you to make that will air-tight." "Do you desire to make any other specific bequests, Mr. Butterworth?"

"Yes, five thousand to Bunker." "Only five thousand to old Bunker?" McPeake looked and felt surprised. "Why, he's been as faithful to you as a dog for a quarter of a century! I think you're a miserable ingrate to cut Bunker off with five thousand. You ought to give him fifty thousand at the very least. Get some other lawyer to draw your will. I'm through handling your business. You're a wolf. Get out!" "No, you're not through. Now, Absolom, you hold your horses. You git fresh with me and I'll name somebody else executor of my estate."

"Oh, so you want me to be your executor also, do you? Well, I don't want the job. Now, how does that strike you?"

"We will not quarrel about it further. Any other specific bequests?" The miser's gaze sought the carpet and it was evident now that he was embarrassed. "Absolom," he stammered finally, "I got a confession to make. The Boyhood of Famous By Americans Fitzgerald

Walter Chrysler

The boy spent his time watching the old wood-burning engines of the Union Pacific sputthe shops for repairs and overhaul-with the mechanics, sometimes being gruffly ordered to get out of the way, ran errands for them when they were good natured, and learned. as he watched, that skilled hands can de wondrous things with the proper tools. Thus Walter Chrysler, early in life. developed the liking for mechanics that has aided him so much in gaining such a signal success later on in

He was born in western Kansas in 1876. Wamego, a typical prairie hamlet, was his birthplace. His father, an engineer for the Union Pacific railroad, moved to Ellis, a nearby town, when Walter was a little fellow.

The lad grew up there in the atmosphere of engines and the din of repair work, for the shops of the Union Pacific were located at Ellis. He would watch his father start his run in the primitive locomotives of half a century ago. He would be waiting for him on his return from across the prairie.

The youngster aspired to follow in the footsteps of his father and become a first class mechanic. He inherited a liking for machinery from his parent. The contacts and associations of the railroad center served to strengthen his inclinations. He pever thought seriously of following More Cottonseed Meal any career other than a mechanical

The elder Chrysler piloted the first coal burning locomotive owned by the Union Pacific, which is indication enough that he was regarded as the pick of the engineers on the road. His son came naturally enough by his mechanical bent, it would seem.

The Ellis roundhouse and shops saw much of young Chrysler in the time he could spare from school.

During the summers he didn't have so much time to loiter around the railroad shops. He worked for a grocer as an errand boy and clerk in the vacation periods. His earnings helped the family. Times were none too good in Kansas in those days.

When he was seventeen and had received the best common school education he could obtain in Ellis he decided that it was high time for him to begin to earn his own living and to acquire a trade.

He tried and passed an examination to become a machinist's apprentice in the Ellis shops. He had to make his own tools as he went along. His kit, consisting of assorted calipers, dividers, balanced hammers, test indicator and combination square, was all made with his own hands, before he was

After a year in the shops he was skilled enough to build a miniature steam locomotive. It was complete in every detail, including air brakes. He built a track in his back yard and gave demonstrations of how the contrivance would run.

Tired as he was from a hard day's work in the shops the youngster read magazines and books on engineering subjects to round out the practical knowledge he was gaining as a machinist's helper. At the end of four years of strict application to his job he was earning 221/2 cents an hour as a first class journeyman mechanic.

Then he got the itching foot and decided to see something of the country. He worked for a time in western shops, finally settling in Salt Lake City where his pay was 271/2 cents an hour. There he repaired a locomotive's blown off cylinder head in two hours so that it could pull out the fast mail on schedule time.

This feat brought him the job as foreman of the Colorado & Southern shops in Trinidad, Colo. Next he became superintendent of motive power for the Chicago & Great Western. Still thirsting for knowledge and a chance to broaden himself, he accepted the place as manager of the American Locomotive company in Pittsburgh,

He got his first chance in the automobile business with the Buick company, again accepting a big salary cut for the opportunity. With him the prospects for the future have always outweighed immediate rewards. What he did with Buick, General Motors, Willys-Overland, Maxwell-Chalmers and his own product constitutes one of the most outstanding achievements in the automobile industry.

Today his headquarters are in New York, where his ancestor, Tuenis Van Dolsen, was the first male child born in the days when the city was New Amsterdam. It is a far cry from the sun-baked prairies of Kansas to a position in a leading industry and to offices atop the highest building in the metropolis, a structure that bears

But that is the place to which the box of tools made by Walter Chrysler, on his first job, helped carry him. He still has the implements that started him on the path to fame and fortune. Nor has he forgotten how to use

Guinea Fowl Meat Is Increasing in Favor

Management of Small Flocks Similar to Chickens.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

Guinea fowl meat is increasing in favor as a substitute for game such as ter and chug into grouse, patridge, quall, and pheasant. Guinea raising therefore promises to become more profitable on general farms where plenty of range is available, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1391-F, the Guinea Fowl, just issued in revised edition by the United States Department of Agriculture. Most guinea fowls are raised in small flocks of from ten to twenty-five, although a few large poultry raisers near the principal markets raise from one hundred to two hundred a year.

The management of small flocks of guineas is similar to that of some breeds of chickens, except that guineas may be mated in pairs or one male provided for every three or four females. The hens begin to lay in April or May and lay from 20 to 30 eggs before becoming broody. If not alloyed to sit they continue to lay throughout the summer, laying from 40 to 60 or more eggs. Many guinea raisers prefer to use ordinary hens to hatch and rear guinea chicks, but guinea hens and turkeys may be used successfully. The incubation period for guinea eggs is 28 days.

The demand for guineas begins late in the summer and extends through the fall and winter months. The from one and a half to two pounds at about three months of age or older. On some markets there is a limited demand for old birds which are often sold alive. Copies of Farmers' Bulletin 1391-F, may be obtained from the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC-The Curse of Selfishness. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC-Right and Wrong Uses of Wealth.

In this lesson we are afforded a look into two worlds where we see extremes of character and conditions. In this present world we see a rich man reveling in luxury and a poor man in sore affliction, begging at the rich man's gate. In the other world we see the same men with reversed positions -the erstwhile beggar enjoying the richest blessings of heaven while the former rich man suffers the torments of hell. These lives were intended to be representative. The rich man descends from the highest pinnacle of worldly enjoyment to the depths of endless misery. The poor beggar asyoung birds are sold when they weigh | cends from utter wretchedness and misery to the loftiest heights of bless-

> I. Contrasted Lives (vv. 19-21). 1. The rich man (v. 19).

He lived in a mansion secluded from the common people. He was clothed in costly raiment. He fed upon the richest food that could be provided. It should be borne in mind that this man is not accused of having unlawfully gained his riches. His sin was selfishly to indulge his appetites without consideration of others.

The beggar (vv. 20, 21). He was laid at the rich man's gate in the hope of getting at least the crumbs from his table. No considera-31, 1930, or about 9 per cent of the tion was given him by the rich man, and even the dogs of the street were more kind to him. Lazarus means "God is a help," indicating that a godly life showed through his poverty.

II. Contrasted Deaths and Burials

1. The beggar. He was found dead and his body hurried off to a pauper's grave. No notice was taken of it by the world, but that he was no longer to be seen

2. Abraham's reply (v. 25).

This reply cast the matter back upon the man's memory. He said: "Son, remember." The lashings of a guilty conscience will be most real in hell. The one supreme thing to remember will be the cause which led to the awful destiny. Then, too, it will be remembered that the doom is fust.

grave (v. 26). Human destiny is fixed by the choices made during the earthly life. When one passes out of this life he enters into a state and condition which is unchangeable.

4. God's Word the all-sufficient light

(vv. 27-31). Dives requested that Lazarus go on an errand of mercy to his brethren. He regarded the testimony of a spirit of more value than the Word of God. Many today are more willing to trust the rappings of a ghost than the sure Word of God. Abraham declared that God's Word is sufficient-that those who reject Moses and the prophets would not repent though visited by one who had risen from the dead. The greatest miracles will not affect the hearts of men who reject the Bible. Lost men will learn too late the value of the soul.

Search the Bible

If the people who are perpetually running about to meetings for crumbs of help and comfort, would only stay at home and search their Bibles, there would be more happiness in the church, and more blessing in the world .- F. B. Meyer.

Stable Manure

Specialist Is Developing Synthetic Compost for Mushrooms.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)-WNU Service. With the horse population steadily decreasing, mushroom growers of the country have been looking to the United States Department of Agriculture for a satisfactory substitute for stable manure, the standard medium for growing this crop. To meet this need Dr. Edmund B. Lambert, mushroom specialist of the department, is developing a synthetic compost which has given promising results. In a general way the procedure used in making this compost is based on the process for making artificial manure that was developed and patented by English

scientists in 1922

Synthetic Compost Tested. The artificial compost was first tested in 1928, and three crops of mushrooms have been harvested from it. The mushrooms grown on the synthetic material were normal in every way and fair yields were obtained. but as yet they do not compare favorably with yields obtained by commercial growers. The experiments are being continued, however, and the product is being steadily improved.

Wheat straw, cut into short pieces, forms the base for the synthetic compost. Different sources of nitrogen, such as dried blood, cyanamids, and urea, were added in varying amounts, as well as various mineral foods, to determine the ratios that produce the best crop. The material is handled in the same way as ordinary compost, and no change is made in the usual cultural practices.

Industry Is Growing.

The mushroom industry in this country has made a remarkable growth within the last 20 years, according to Doctor Lambert. This has resulted, he says, from the development of pedigreed spawn, or propagating material, and the use of special houses instead of caves for growing the crop. The use of pure culture spawn is a big factor in the control of insect pests and diseases, and the grower can control temperature and moisture conditions in the houses.

Goosefoot Weed Weakens

Disease of Sugar Beets A weed which is good as well as bad has come to the attention of the United States Department of Agriculture. It is the nettle-leaved goosefoot.

To all outward appearances, this weed in a sugar-beet field concentrates all effort on robbing the crop of its plant food. But Dr. Eubanks Carsner, of the office of sugar plants, observed that it may compensate for its evil by weakening the virulence of the disease is less destructive to beets after it has first passed through the gooseleaf

C. F. Lackey, also of the office of sugar plants, discovered that another weed, the wild chickweed, may restore the virulence of curly-top disease if he disease passes from gooseleaf to the chickweed.

Neither weed is a practical factor in curly-top control in the sugar-beet belt yet, but plant pathologists think this relation of weeds to the virulence of diseases of nearby cultivated crops, scovered or the first time by these Department of Agrculture sciensts, may have a practical bearing on some crop diseases.

Insects Prove Useful in Controlling Weeds

The popular idea that nearly all insects are injurious to man in one way or another is entirely wrong, accordng to entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture. In ome parts of the world insects have een imported for the sole purpose controlling weeds which have breatened to crowd out useful plants. Entomologists of the Hawalian Surar Planters' association have introluced from Mexico a number of insects which feed on the lantana plant, troublesome weed, and recent reorts state that this plan of control meeting with success. Scale insects, plant bugs, caterpilars, and beetles are now being introduced into Australia to feed on the prickly pear cactus, a plant which has pread over the country at an alarmng rate. A few years ago it was said hat 60,000,000 acres of land in Australia were overgrown by this cactus, nd the rate of increase was about .000,000 acres a year, After other ethods of control had falled the plan importing insect enemies was adopt-, and it is proving successful, acording to recent reports.

Farmers Safeguard 1931

Crops by Testing Seed To protect themselves from unscrupulous distribution of farm seeds, farmers in many sections of Wisconsin may call into action a state law which prohibits the sale of such stocks without urity and germination tests.

While it is expected that much of he Wisconsin grown alfalfa seed will meet all legal requirements, frugal growers will not run any chances next spring by planting seed which has failed to meet these standards.

A. L. Stone, Wisconsin state seed aspector, is preparing to meet a livey call for the services of the state seed laboratory in testing this, and other, seed sold under the state law.

When You CAN'T

A headache is often the sign of fatigue. When temples throb it's time to rest. If you can't stop work, you can stop the pain. Bayer Aspirin will do it, every time. Take two or three tablets, a swallow of water, and carry-on-in comfort.

Don't work with nerves on edge or try all day to forget a nagging pain that aspirin could end in a jiffy! Genuine aspirin can't harm you; just be sure it's Bayer.

In every package of Bayer Aspirin are proven directions for headaches, colds, sore throat, neuralgia, neuritis, etc. Carry these tablets with you, and be prepared. To block a sudden cold on the street-car; quiet a grumbling tooth at the office; relieve a headache in the theatre; spare you a sleepless night when nerves are "jumping."

And no modern girl needs "time out" for the time of month! Bayer Aspirin is an absolute antidote for periodic pain.

It can't depress the heart. That is medical opinion. That is why it is only sensible to insist on the genuine tablets that bear the Bayer cross. The pocket tin is a convenient size. The bottle of 100 tablets is most economical to buy,
