Opposite Viewpoints on New Wage-Hour Law

Fred C. Perkins, left, the battery firm owner who was convicted by a federal court jury and jailed for short time in 1933 on a charge of violating the National Industrial Recovery act, has announced himself a for of the new federal wage-hour law. "I defy them to enforce it," he said. He is shown in jail in 1933. This attitude was one of the minor worries of Elmer F. Andrews, right, wage-hour administrator, as he conferred with his secretary, Miss Eugenia Pope, during the first hours of the act's effectiveness.

Here Comes "The Arkansas Traveler"

Out of America's small towns marches as living and breathing a story of real people as Hollywood has ever produced. Bob Burns in his first starring role for Paramount studios has thrown away his bazooka and revealed himself as one of the country's great humorists in "The Arkansas Traveler". Cast as an itinerant printer, Bob Burns takes the protector's role with capable Fay Bainter as the widow of the news paper editor. Together these two favorites make "The Arkansas Traveler" a simple, homely, kindly picture on movie-goer will soon forget
