Upton March of Dimes Drive Nears $2,000 Mark

With the March of Dimes in Upton County officially closed, complete tabulations were still incomplete, but the figures were approaching the $2,000 mark, according to Chairman Clarence Cook.

With tabulations still coming in from both McCamey and Rankin, the figure reached $1,905 late on Wednesday.

Rankin set the pace, considering population, with $910 reported late Wednesday by Drive Chairman Alvin Moore. The Rankin campaign group had set their quota at $700 but as the close approached redoubled efforts to reach the $1,000 mark.

A breakdown of the contributions in Rankin showed the following:

Rankin Public Schools	120
Iron Lung Containers	80
Iron Lung at Hadaool Corner	38
Girl Scout Drive	25
Ford Theatre Collection	180
Roll Contributions	467

The Rankin workers expressed their deepest thanks for the excellent cooperation they received from organizations, churches and individuals. They especially expressed their appreciation for the assistance of theatre manager Marvin Bell for helping in the collections at the Ford Theatre on two days that aided greatly in making the drive a success.

Home Tailoring Style Revue Held Last Week

The home tailoring course conducted in Upton County this fall has brought to a conclusion on Thursday of last week with a style revue sponsored by the Upton County Home Demonstration Council at the McCamey Park Building.

At this time nineteen of the women who took part in the tailoring course modeled garments they had made.

The revue was planned by a committee composed of Mrs. C. K. West, Mrs. N. C. House, and Mrs. R. Sullivan. Mrs. West introduced Miss Myrna Holman, County Home Demonstration Agent, who served as narrator for the revue.

A high point of the revue was the modeling of coats by the daughters of Mrs. J. W. Kennedy of Rankin. Mrs. Kennedy had made the coats for her eight-year-old twins, Mary and Martha, from an aqua and rose plaid all wool coating, using a pleated back, belted full length pattern. Glenda's, the twelve-year-old daughter's coat, was made from the same material in a short coat design.

During the tailoring course taught by the home demonstration agent, seven leaders took lessons from the agent, giving each lesson in turn to the women working under her. A total of thirty-six women worked in the course making twenty-six suits and ten coats.

When each woman signed for the course she agreed to make a lined suit or coat from one hundred percent wool fabric, to make the garment according to instructions, and to model the finished garment.

The suits and coats were made from materials ranging from $1.98 to $9.00 per yard with total costs running from $10.50 to $36.00. The total cost of the thirty-five garments made by those turning in reports was $735.05 with an estimated retail value of $2098.45. Vogue, McCall, Simplicity, Butterick, and New York patterns were used by the various workers.

Those working in the tailoring course reported having acquired fifty-four new pieces of equipment as a result. These included such items as seam gauges, chalk, tracing wheels, zipper feet, and scissors. In addition twenty-nine large pieces of equipment were added, such as seam boards, scissors, steam irons, and one new portable sewing machine.

Pressing woolen materials, handling patterns and fitting, correct equipment, and the tucked button-hole were among the techniques listed as the most useful. Nine women have already tailored other garments since beginning the course.

Those serving as leaders during the course were Mesdames C. K. West, N. C. House, J. R. Sumrall, C. A. Skains, and F. W. Payne of McCamey; and Mesdames Wylette Scott and J. Richardson of Rankin. These women not only repeated the lessons given by the agent but spent a lot of their time in helping individually with the garments made under their instruction.

Those modeling suits at the Thursday revue were: Mesdames Ed Anderson, Wylette Scott, W. C. McDonald, and J. W. Kennedy of Rankin and Mesdames Lloyd Bowden, Ed Cox, Chester Dugger, J. B. Henderson, N. C. House, W. G. Ingram, Bodie Moore, C. A. Skains, C. K. West, and R. M. Zimmerly, Jr., of McCamey.

Those modeling coats were: Mesdames J. R. Sumrall, J. W. C. Hayes, Paul H. Scott, and I. L. Edwards of McCamey and Mrs. Dunn Lowery of Rankin.

Mrs. Joe Conger, Jr., furnished piano selections during the tea hours.

Poll Tax Sales Top 2,000 Mark

Upton County citizens became potential voters in record-breaking numbers this year, with 2,011 poll taxes purchased when the midnight deadline came Jan. 31, according to H. E. "Gene" Eckols, Upton County Sheriff, Tax Assessor and Collector.

In addition to the poll taxes, there were 74 exemptions issued to "under," persons becoming 21 years of age. Exemptions for the "overs," persons over 60 years of age, are not required in cities under 10,000 population, therefore no accurate count on these potential voters is available. There are about 150 to 200 "overs" in Upton County, according to estimates.

A breakdown of voting precincts will be released when completed later this month.

Last year, there were 1,054 poll taxes sold in the county, and in 1930, there were 1,447 poll taxes purchased.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare

It is clear that the fight for the Republican Presidential nomination will be one of the hardest in history. Both the backers of Taft and the backers of Eisenhower are passionately devoted to their causes.

On the Eisenhower side, one of the most potent arguments is that he is the only available Republican who could unify the country, and be virtually sure of decisively defeating Mr. Truman or any other Democratic nominee.

Eisenhower offers much the best way out of the dilemma which is posed as long as the choice is left between Taft and Truman or Truman's heir. With Taft the most probable result is another Democratic victory.

So much for the Republican side. To turn to the Democrats, the feeling grows in Washington circles that the President is fed up with his job, that he is disillusioned over the friends who let him down, and that he will not run again.

A LETTER FROM KOREA

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a liberal quotation from the letter of Cpl. William F. Cox, Headquarters Co., 555th Field Artillery Battalion, as he wrote it from "about 32 miles north of the 38th Parallel."

"We have been a front line outfit since August and never even under the worst of circumstances have we had to go without at least five movies a week. Imagine that, doesn't it stir your blood a little? We are just one battalion, there are thousands of battalions, and the same story fits all of them."

"When darkness sets in, thousands of movies start to roll, in tents, ground dugouts, on a hillside, in hand-constructed buildings, in bombed out buildings, in rice paddies and in many other places. I have stood on top of a high hill and looked down in a valley and have seen nine movies going at once. From every mountain you can see the same scene. From one section you can hear hot jazz music from 'The Strip' and from another you can hear Lana Turner, and another a mystery thriller, and so on and so on."

"These 300,000 American men are movie fans. These movies are their touch of home. The movies, and I have heard many a high officer say it, are the morale of the troops in Korea."

"These men sit at these movies with loaded weapons at all times, at least the front line outfits. The guards patrol the areas where they are being shown. In my own case, and my buddies have sat watching the movies with 105 and 155 artillery rounds going over our heads toward the enemy. In at least two cases, we had incoming rounds within 200 yards and there wasn't one guy that would leave the movie."

"Tired, fatigued, and sometimes completely exhausted, young soldiers stop to see a movie, and then as if by a miracle, they become less tired, less fatigued, and their exhaustion seems to pass by the couple of hours relaxation given them through a movie."

"It takes hundreds of young projectionists to show these movies, and the Army takes great care in training these inexperienced young men for this job. Other hundreds of young men learn to handle the moving of the film prints. Each division has a film print center, and they are busy 24 hours a day. Right here in Korea we have a whole movie industry."

"Well, these are the things that I wanted to pass on to you. Just possibly they might be of some use in some way. They can never be exaggerated enough, believe me."

COMMISSIONERS COURT

Upton County, Texas. By G. H. (BUD) FISHER, County Judge.

From its original ten employees in 1917, the Highway Department has grown to include 9,000 Texans.

The Texas Highway Department was created by Legislative enactment in 1917.

Only 300 of Texas' 40,000 miles of state-maintained highways have divided traffic lanes.

More than half of Texas' primary highways have passed the mid-way mark in their 20-year life of expectancy.

Although Uncle Sam contributes to construction of certain highways in Texas, all maintenance expense must be paid by Texas dollars.

Two-thirds of Texas' 40,000 miles of state-maintained roads, on which every cent available is being spent for improvement, are below minimum standards for safety and utility.

Former McCamey Principal Tells of Sea Tragedy of WWII--and Death

By GENE RULE

Editor's Note: Below is a story concerning Charles McKissick who was principal of the McCamey elementary school before World War II and also coach of junior high school athletics. Also below is a letter to Roy Dan Gibson from McKissick concerning events that inspired in the epic at sea reproduced below.

Both are reproduced to acquaint time McCamey citizens with an episode of the war that heretofore is not generally known.)

Six years and five months have passed since Navy Lt. Elton Hailey helped haul water-soaked, delirious Lt. Charles McKissick out of the Pacific and onto USS Cecil J. Doyle.

Hailey was on radio duty Aug. 2, 1945, when a PBY, working with ship on sub patrol, radioed that it was running out of fuel. Hailey was ordered to make one last obstinate sweep and then return to ship.

It was on this last swing that the sighted hundreds of men in the ocean. When the plane wired ship again for instructions, Hailey found he had no reports of survivors, but he told the pilot and do what he could.

Last Friday, McKissick, in Abilene, to visit his parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. T. McKissick, 1257 Meander, found that his mother and Hailey's mother, Mrs. C. L. Hailey, 11th St., had been discussing their sons together and had agreed on the fact that Hailey was the rescue team that saved McKissick's life.

Saturday morning the two men met at the Abilene Greenhouse, where Hailey works with his father, and discussed the six-and-a-half-year-old sea tragedy.

McKissick, now an optometrist in Kinney, again related the experience and pain witnessed as survivors of the 700-man ship snatched their life jackets and fled themselves into the sea on Aug. 29, 1945, when the USS Indianapolis, a cruiser was torpedoed and sunk within 12 minutes. They hung vertically suspended by their kapok jackets for five days and nights, fighting delirium, sharks, and each other, only to be discovered by accident when Hailey sent the PBY on one last trip before returning to the USS Cecil J. Doyle.

The sinking of the Indianapolis was one of the most widely publicized sea tragedies of the war. The unescorted ship, returning from Tinian Island where it had deposited major parts of the first atomic bomb which was to be used, was taking a cargo of airplane fuel to Guam. The death-dealing torpedo hit the forward part of the ship where the fuel was stored. Hundreds of lives were lost instantly.

When the PBY landed, the men were all out of their minds, chattering about a hotel on the nearby sunken island which was preparing rooms for them. They invited the pilot of the plane to join them in the bar of the hotel.

The Cecil J. Doyle arrived at the scene six hours after the plane had landed, and Hailey with all the crew hauled half of the men on board. Five destroyers arrived from Guam to pick up the rest of them.

McKissick's memory of the event is still vivid.

"If I had to pick out one hero in that mass of men," he said Saturday, "the first person I would name would be a kid from McCamey. I had coached him for three years while teaching at the school there. His conduct as we hung onto the surface of the ocean was heroic. He lived for three days, and as long as he could hold onto life, he kept up his own courage and that of all the rest of us in the area."

Dear Roy Dan: I received your card some time ago but have not been able to find time to answer until now. It was good to hear from you and I certainly remember you very well indeed. I regret that I am located so far from McCamey which prevents me from getting out now and then and renewing old acquaintances.

You wanted to know in particular of the sinking of the Indianapolis. Well, Roy, it's a long story and I could write pages and pages on the details, but it's impossible, so I'll try to give you a brief description. We were sailing alone and unescorted enroute from Guam to Leyte and on the night of July 30, 1945, were attacked by a Jap submarine and sunk about 12 minutes after the first torpedo hit. We think about 800 men got off the ship (1196 were aboard), most of them in life jackets only. A few did get on rafts that floated from the ship. I only had a kapok life jacket and it was four days later that we were picked up. The boy to whom I referred in the article you read was Garland Rich. He was either in your grade or maybe one above. Garland always called me "Coach" even on the ship, and on the third night after the ship sunk, we were all in pretty bad shape, having no food or water. On this night I can remember that Garland called me time and again, and I would swim in the direction of the voice but could never find him. I am sure that he died that night. I talked to some of the survivors who were with him (I do not remember seeing him after the ship sunk), and was told that he was the leader of a small group of men, that he had led them in singing and prayer, and in general gave them encouragement. Three hundred and seventeen survived, and I was one of the fortunate ones.

It was good to hear from you, and if you are ever down this way, be sure and look me up. Give my regards to all there that I know.

With best regards,
Charles B. McKissick.

Barren Ground Caribou

Near the top of the world—from Alaska to Greenland—is the home of the Barren Ground Caribou. As you might guess from its name, it spends most of its time where there are no trees or grass. Moss, lichens and dwarf shrubs are all it can find to nibble on.

This would not be nearly enough food for the Caribou if they spent time in one small region. So they keep on the go. Roaming in herds, thousands of them range back and forth across the Northern Wastelands. With their broad, sharp hoofs, they have worn permanent trails in the ice, snow and frozen earth.

They also move northward and southward with the changing seasons. The National Wildlife Federation reports that in the fall, Barren Ground Caribou head south. When they reach the fringes of the Canadian forests, the husky animals find sheltering trees under which to spend the winter.

In the spring, the herds trot north again. As the snow thins out or disappears, they can graze on their favorite plants. They also grow their summer coats. The new hair is long and soft—gray or light brown on the ends and white underneath.

By the following fall, the dark ends are ready to break off. This leaves the Caribou almost white in color, and it is harder to see when snow covers the ground.

Just as they change color from season to season, Barren Ground Caribou also change a bit in size and shape. In the spring and fall, they store up fat along their backs. In some spots, this hump of tallow grows to be six inches thick.

The Caribou use their fat during the long winter, when there is little to eat. It slowly passes into their entire bodies and keeps them strong. By spring the fat is all gone.

The animals are slimmer then, but no one would have any trouble recognizing them as sturdy members of the reindeer family. The male weighs about 300 pounds. He is four feet tall and a little over six feet long. The female is slightly smaller. Both male and female wear broad antlers with many prongs.

As they roam, the Caribou know how to defend themselves against wolves and other animals, but they are no match for hunters. There were many more of the reindeer in the days before outsiders came to the north with guns.

Fortunately, the Eskimos are more careful. They, too, kill Caribou, but not recklessly. The northern people do not want to wipe out the herds, for they eat Caribou meat and make clothing and tents from the hides. Bones are turned into needles, awls and knives, and the antlers into fish hooks and spears.

So the Eskimos would be poor, indeed, if Barren Ground Caribou were to disappear.

GOOD NEWS for HOMEMAKERS by Anne Marshall

PENNIES FOR THE PIG BANK will come your way more easily when you feature dishes like Celery Chop Suey at festive family meals. Oh, what a pleasure to eat. And the price is so reasonable. No wonder chop suey is an international favorite. Browned chunks of pork and flavorful cream of celery soup are the main ingredients in this recipe.

Celery Chop Suey

1 pound pork, cut in 1-inch cubes	1 4-ounce can mushrooms (save juice)
1 tablespoon shortening	1/2 cup water
1 large onion, chopped (1 1/2 cups)	2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 can (1 1/4 cups) condensed cream of celery soup	3 cups hot, cooked rice (1 cup uncooked)

Brown pork cubes in shortening in a heavy saucepan. Add onion and cook until soft. Blend in soup, mushrooms and juice, water, and Worcestershire sauce. Cover and simmer for 30 minutes; then remove lid and cook 15 minutes longer or until pork is tender. Serve over hot rice. Makes 6 servings.

SAY "BE MY VALENTINE" in a colorful way at mealtime; serve tomato soup with heart-shaped croutons. For the croutons, use slightly dry bread, and a small heart-shaped cutter; or cut around a cardboard pattern. Lightly toast croutons in the oven. Place two or three hearts on each bowl of hot, rosy soup.

KITCHEN CLEANUP CUE: Good time to do some of your cooking for the day is after breakfast—before you do the morning dishes. Stir up the meat loaf or whatever you're planning for meals later in the day. Then have one grand cleanup of all the dishes.

We note that the Chinese used umbrellas 3,000 years ago, so borrowing must be an old, old custom.

STATEHOUSE

By HUGH WILLIAMSON

AUSTIN.—How to carry money in 13 pockets—and spend it economically—is a problem bothering the Texas Agriculture Commissioner, J. C. White.

Under the statutes enacted by the Texas Legislature, Commissioner White's department—which virtually affects all elements of the Texas rural economy—is faced with perplexing and complex administrative problems.

Commissioner White has called upon the Texas Economy Commission to help him work out this problem of finances which is contributing to problems of the Department's organization and personnel.

The Commission is a privately-endowed group of leading Texas citizens created by Gov. Allan Shivers to help unsharpen just such confusions in the State Government set-up and save the taxpayers' dollars by eliminating waste.

The young, red-headed Commissioner, who took office in 1950, was the first state official to call voluntarily for the Commission's guidance. He made it clear that he wanted to cut out any waste in his agency and pass the savings on to the taxpayer.

The Commission's staff termed the financing of the Department of Agriculture's activities a "hodge-podge" that would lead to waste.

This hodge-podge gives the Department of Agriculture money from the unrestricted General Revenue Fund plus money from 12 special funds or fee accounts, such as agricultural field seed inspection account, weights and measures account, antifreeze inspection account, nursery inspection, license fund and citrus fruit inspection fund.

The money from these funds and fees makes up the $678,058 on which the Department is run annually.

Where the confusion comes in is that in five of the seven divisions within the Department, money to support their operations is drawn from at least two sources. One division, the Horticulture and Plant Quarantine branch, draws money from seven sources.

The Texas Economy Commission has noted, too, that the Legislature has provided that money set aside for a special purpose can be used only for that special purpose. This requires that the State have on hand a cash balance larger than would otherwise be necessary.

All the resulting problems from having 13 pocketsful of money are receiving close attention by the Texas Economy Commission.

Actually, the Commission has no authority to make any changes in existing practices and procedures of the State Government agencies. It's staff—headed by Dr. Stuart MacCorkle of Austin—is highly respected, however, and recommendations from the group carry considerable weight with the Legislature.

The Economy Commission is the only group in the state working exclusively on the problem of reducing the ever-increasing costs of the State Government which have risen by more than 500 per cent since 1930. By working quietly, without fanfare, the group hopes in the near future to bring about money-saving and time-saving changes in the handling of the State's money, paid by the taxpaying residents of Texas.

Commissioner White hopes that through the aid of this group—he can bring about substantial savings in the operation of his Department, and give better service in more economical and orderly fashion.

How "big" should government be?

Lincoln was President at a time when the federal government had to take away from its citizens more rights and liberties than ever before.

But he didn't like it. He believed, with the writers of the Constitution and the Declaration, that our government should protect people's independence, not push people around.

"In all that the people can individually do as well for themselves, government ought not to interfere," Lincoln once said.

Lincoln never let Americans forget that. He kept reminding the nation that the government's war-time powers must be only temporary.

He made powerful enemies. For there are always those who want to see the government run things and run people—permanently.

We have them today. They think up all kinds of reasons why the federal government should take over this or that business, industry, or service. They never say they want socialism. Maybe they don't even realize it. But that's actually what they propose.

Most Americans don't want socialism any more than you do. The job is to recognize it—and halt it—no matter what disguise it wears!

The people who plan and work for a socialist U. S. A. know that permanent control of a few key industries and services will give government the power to take over just about everything. One of the key industries that they're trying to take over is electric light and power.

Texans Buy Insurance In Record-Breaking Quantities During 1951

AUSTIN, Jan. 30.—Texas bought fire, windstorm and extended coverage insurance in record-breaking quantities in 1951. Fire Insurance Commissioner Paul H. Brown has announced.

Fire insurance premiums reported through the Texas Insurance Checking Office last year totaled $63,478,359, an increase of 10.7 per cent over the $57,366,114 in fire premiums collected in 1950. Windstorm and extended coverage insurance premiums jumped to $43,348,500 in 1951, an increase of 13 per cent over the $38,350,365 buyers for this type of protection in 1950.

Commissioner Brown said that the over-all increase in fire, windstorm and extended coverage premiums is 11.6 per cent above 1950 totals, according to Checking Office reports. Property owners got an even higher percentage of protection for their money, however, because of rate reductions made by the Board of Insurance Commissioners in 1951. Last April, windstorm and extended coverage rates were reduced more than $600,000 and in October, fire insurance rates were lowered $2,303,000.

"An estimated $3,000,000 in premiums collected by companies not using the Checking Office still are to be reported," Commissioner Brown said. "Indications are, however, that these companies will show an increase in line with those reporting through the Checking Office."
