WOODWORK

BY DALTON

IT'S A TOUGH WAY to achieve unity, but perhaps what this country needs is more crises to bring us all together.

Nobody likes trouble, but it seems that when faced by some common threat, people have a tendency to forget their differences and make some effort to help each other. Wire service reports on the recent earthquake in California, the murder of law officers in Dallas and the tornadoes in Mississippi have mentioned that people who normally are busy criticizing each other were working side by side without complaint for the common good in rescue efforts or efforts to track down dangerous criminals.

Even such common problems as the blizzard which struck here bring out the best in people. Many here and throughout the area have taken time out to help others hung up in snowdrifts or temporarily stranded.

Of course, I've always been convinced that in rural areas and smaller towns folks show a lot more concern for the other persons than they do in the big cities, but even here there is room for improvement.

It appears to be our nature to fuss at each other until we can find some common target on which to focus our antagonisms. Perhaps it would do all of us good in times of less obvious common threats to consider that the other fellow is bound to be living with a lot of troubles of his own, just like those we may be trying to cope with.

Maybe then all of us would get along with each other better.

JUDAS ISCHARIAT, THE BETRAYER

By DAVID JOHNSON

As one studies the life of Judas, three things stand out about this man. The first significant fact about the life of Judas is the fact that he was one of the twelve disciples. One of those chosen to be among Jesus' closest followers. Jesus spent more time teaching and training these men than He spent with any other individual or group during His entire ministry. They were carefully selected by the Master, which gives us reason to believe that Judas must have had many outstanding qualities that Jesus felt could be beneficial to the spreading of His kingdom on earth.

Also, we learn in the Scriptures that it was Judas who held the office or position of treasurer of the disciples. He was chosen to keep whatever money they had and to take care of their financial needs. He was a man that knew the value of a dollar and could handle money.

Finally, and most importantly, we know the name of Judas to stand synonymous with the word "betrayer." It was this disciple who chose to sell his Lord. And, so our knowledge of this man consists of these facts: He was chosen as a disciple; He was the treasurer of the group; and he betrayed Jesus.

The big question mark that presents itself in the life of Judas is placed after the word, "why?" Why? Why did Judas sell out? Why did he choose to betray the person he had left all to follow? Why did he send the one who loved him most to a very certain cross? There have been many theories and much speculation in an attempt to answer this piercing question. There are three basic possible reasons why Judas betrayed Jesus. The first of these possible reasons is greed. Matthew tells us that Judas actually went to the authorities and asked what they were prepared to pay. He made a bargain, but only for thirty pieces of silver, which was worth less than twenty-three dollars. If it were for money alone, then this is the most terrible example in history of the depths which the love of money can reach.

Judas may have hated Christ. Judas may have been among those who wished to drive the Romans out of Palestine and felt that Jesus could lead the great plan. He may have become disappointed in The Lord when he learned that this was not his plan at all. Disappointment may have turned to hatred and hatred to the act of betrayal.

It may have been that Judas did not plan for Jesus to die. Judas may have felt that Jesus, as a divine leader, the King of the Jews, was moving too slowly and this betrayal would compel Him to act. The best in modern Christian scholarship holds with this view. This would explain why Judas, seeing his plan fail, became repentant, sought to return the money and finally took his own life in the act of suicide.

As one gains an insight into the personality of Judas, he cannot help but see the tragedy of a man who thought he knew better than God. Judas could have received the crown of life. He could have had the privilege to die for the cause of Christ, and yet he chose evil instead of the way and will of God.

We condemn Judas. We condemn him for his ambition, his greed and jealousy. Are we so different? These things made Judas betray Jesus and these are the things which still make men betray the Master today.
