

PLAID BLOUSE-AND-SCARF SET; A SCARF FOR EVERY OCCASION

AFTER all, it's the accessories which achieve "the touch that tells." We moderns are proving apt pupils in the art of "dolling up" our costumes with accessory details. Fashion-wise women are more and more choosing to wear simple frocks and ensembles, relying on smart accessories to give the proper cachet.

In studying the costume pictured one cannot but be impressed with the style value of "nifty" accessories. This navy jersey suit is, to be sure, erously wide-plaited frill with a view to wearing it out over the wrap.

Lovely to wear with the tailored georgette print is a hand-painted vestee-and-scarf set, made of chiffon or georgette in a contrasting color. The blouse or vestee is decorated across the bottom with handpainting and the scarf or neck-square is likewise enhanced.

A scarf for every occasion—it is the spirit of the times! Wherefore it behooves every aspiring fashionable fairly goodlooking, however, no different from hundreds which pass along fashion's highway. Complemented with its plaid taffeta vestee and matching kerchief scarf, this tailored two-piece becomes distinguished and attracts flattering attention.

Speaking from the "useful as well as ornamental" standpoint, a collection of colorful vestees and kerchiefs to wear with summer sports and street shirt-jacket suits is well worth acquiring.

One can make fetching "sets" at comparatively little cost. And if one "buys" instead of "makes" their clothes the smart shops are showing the most attractive things inventive genius can devise in the way of scarfs, vestees and clever neckwear not omitting pocketbooks, belts and such.

Here's an idea for the woman who delights in conjuring pretty trifles which add to the chic and charm of the costume. We have in mind a self-fringed kerchief square for the neckpiece with vestee or blouse to match, the latter also elaborated with hand-ravelled fringe. Surah, that made-of-lacquard woven blue-and-gray tweed.

'Tis a far cry from the bright silk sports kerchief to the glittering sequin triangle which is shown below. The latter is a charming evening fantasy which is proving a sensation in season. Accessories in burnt orange and tangerine tone up suits and ensembles in brown to perfection.

However, it is not the color of the material for these sets which we started to talk about so much as the unique and smart method of trimming them with self fringe. It's all very simple—just ravel the edges so as to form a fringe about three-quarters of an inch deep. Try it! You will be delighted with results. The vestee or blouse should also be fringed at all edges instead of hemmed.

There is another item about making a blouse or vestee to wear with the collarless jacket or coat. The latest move is to fashion the blouse with either a wide, shapely collar or a generally wide-plaited frill with a view to wearing it out over the wrap. In Paris a "last word" evening set consists of one of these dazzling triangles with a little beret or cap to match.

They are not all alike, these enchanting sequin-covered triangles and caps, for some are of silver spangles, others of jet, still others of gold. Those of mother-of-pearl spangles are very exquisite. Then there is the "rainbow" scarf—the picture shows this beguiling type. It is formed of glittering sequins showing rainbow colorings.

"I dropped a half dollar out of the window," came the far-off, fainting reply.

COGITATIONS and APHORISMS of JODOK

One map said he had never seen a land that was a successful and paying wheat country that would also answer as a successful cotton country until he came to Frona.

Fifteen hundred bales of cotton ginned here last season establish our claim as a cotton country, which claim is strengthened and clinched by an estimated area of 4,000 acres or more of young cotton now growing in the fields in the Frona territory, all growing nicely and promising a handsome yield for this season.

And wheat! What kind of evidence do you ask for? Two large elevators filled to capacity and shipping of as rapidly as cars can be obtained, with over 100,000 bushels now dumped on the ground in town, with perhaps that much more on the ground on the farms, beside the thousands of bushels that are stored in bins.

A hundred combines in daily operation, many of them going both night and day. Heavily loaded trucks plying along the roads during 24 hours each day and often lined up for a distance of two or three blocks at each elevator.

Some people may not take this as evidence of a wheat producing country, but it is indisputable evidence that some wheat was grown here this season and our farmers are so well pleased that more thousands of acres will be sown here again this fall.

I like to listen to people talk when they are just expressing their individual sentiments, as most of them will if one takes an interest in their views.

I find, too, that the men are indeed rare who do not relish a compliment, or as we say a "bouquet" thrown their way. Even we old fellows enjoy them to a greater or less extent.

I find, too, that some folk like their bouquets artistically arranged, composed of a variety of shades and designs of flowers and tied with a dainty pink or blue ribbon, while others enjoy them just as well in a piece of common brown wrapping paper, provided they are given in sincerity.

On another page of this issue of the Star is a bouquet composed of a group of real posesy. I cannot say that they are bound together with a pink ribbon, but rather a common wrapping twine. But do you know that is just the kind of bouquet I admire. I would feel highly honored to receive such a compliment.

I have heard it said that every man receives all the compliments he deserves in life. If that be true I suppose I have no right to complain if I receive no posesy.

I wonder why it is that people are more prone to hand out thorns or lemons than flowers. It is just as handy to say something cheering as it is to scatter gloom and discouragement. For some reason, however, it is a hard thing to keep from saying "I told you so" when we see a neighbor has made a mistake.

We are sometimes treated with more consideration by our friends than we realize. I know a fellow who would feel very much humiliated if his friends should tell him just what they think of his judgment in regard to certain matters; so they wisely spare his feelings by keeping silent while in his presence.

While I have never heard him say so, I feel sure that he realizes this fact and appreciates their kind consideration.

JULY 14.

EZEKIEL TEACHES PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY

Ezekiel 33:7-16

Golden Text: Each one of us shall give account of himself to God.—Romans 14:12.

Introduction.

We need the events of our last lesson to give us a background for the message of the lesson today. We must see and appreciate the conditions of the times and the personality and character of the prophet Ezekiel in order to understand God's message of individual responsibility.

Let us remember that Jeremiah gave us the germ of this great doctrine. We learned from his book that he caught a glimpse of God's mind and revealed it to his people. He was in the city of Jerusalem during the bitter days of the decline and fall of the city and temple. Ezekiel was a long distance away and in a different situation entirely. Jehovah who gave the message to Jeremiah was working out his great plan of revelation and he chose Ezekiel to take up the threads where they had been thrown and move out into a clear-cut doctrine of personal responsibilities.

The three truths of personal religion are: (a) that sin must be punished; (b) that everyone will be punished for his own sin; (c) that God is ready to welcome and pardon the penitent.

Parental Responsibility.

"The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge." "What is this but a statement in popular language of the principle which we call heredity? It is a truth which we can all verify from our own experience that, in general, children inherit the characters of their parents, just as they inherit their faces and their constitutions. Each one of us is what he is in a great measure because his parents, and their parents before them, were what they were. We may inherit evil; but, thank God, we may also inherit good. If we look back upon the history of our own country we see this principle writ large across its pages. Here is an awful responsibility which few can escape. You may either be a rebel against God, and transmit to others a nature lowered by base desires and selfish indulgence, or you may be a worker together with God by so using the talents which he has committed to you that your children may be the happy inheritors of earnestness and purity and faith."

The Soul that Sinneth.

"The soul that sinneth, it shall die."—Ezekiel 18:4. "The soul that sins dies, not because God utters a sentence of death and inflicts a positive punishment, but by and from the very nature of sin, and in consequence of the ordinary and necessary processes of a well and wisely ordered world. The death of a man or a nation is not from a divine list, and due to the issue of an irresistible edict. It is the inevitable outcome of conscious and intelligent acts on the part of men and nations, and is directly and immediately due to their choice of deeds in a world formed for the perpetuity and eternal reproduction of goodness, and the sure, if slow, decay and disappearance of wrong."

Punishment for Sin Just and Right.

"If there be no repentance men must be punished, for on any other theory there is an end of moral government. The worst thing that could happen to a world of men would be for God to say: 'I retract my law; I will neither reward virtue nor punish iniquity; do as you like.' Then, the earth would be like a hell, indeed. The greatest enemy to civil government among men is the man who preaches universal salvation—salvation apart from a change of heart and life. Such teachers are ing, and the establishing of other lines of business, I can see no reason why living conditions should not be ideal in Frona.

Several more dwellings and a few more business blocks are needed to complete this arrangement, and they are under contemplation, and I hope another six months will not pass before such a condition is realized.

Frona should have a population of at least 1200 people by the last day in December. To have this, more homes must be built to house them and more business houses will be needed to permit investment and to furnish employment for the people.

An exclusive residence section will be added where only selective homes will be built, so that folk of discriminating tastes may secure or build the kind of homes they desire.

a danger to national order, they remove the foundations of the commonwealth. They practically say 'Do just as you like; it may make a slight difference to you for a little while, but it will soon be over, and villains and saints will share an equal heaven.' Such talk is damnable. I can say no less. If there is to be a government at all, it is necessary that sin should not go unpunished; leniency to the dishonest is cruelty to those who they injure. To save the murderer is to kill the innocent. It were an evil day for heaven and earth if it could once be proven that God would reward the depraved in the same way as the sanctified; then would the foundation be removed, and what would the righteous do? A God who was not just would be a poor Ruler of the universe."—C. M. Spurgeon.

"Why Will Ye Die?"

"Turn ye, turn ye, from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O house of Israel?" "A yearning tenderness here manifests itself, still seeking, notwithstanding all that has taken place, the return of those who survived to the way of peace. But with that tenderness what a stern and unflinching holiness! There can be no relaxation or abatement mentioned in respect to this, not even amid the moanings of pain and cries of distress which arose from the people—no return to life possible but thru a return to righteousness. God is anxious, as a kind and affectionate parent, to see them restored to a happy and prosperous condition; he would not have thought them ignorant of that. But they must also know that in God's sight there was a higher thing still, which he could not on account sacrifice for the sake of the other; he must maintain in his dealings with them the honor of his authority and the rectitude of his government; and only if they turn from their wicked ways, can he turn from his fierce displeasure. "Why will ye die? What fearful thing is there in heaven, which makes you flee from that world? What fascinating object in hell, that excites such frenzied exertion to break every band, and overleap every mound, and force your way downward to the chambers of death? Stop, I beseech you, and repent, and Jesus Christ shall blot out your sins, and remember your transgressions no more."—Lyman Beecher.

One Sure Test.

"There is one test—nor any more sure in the laboratory of the chemist—by which to distinguish the godly from the ungodly, when both have fallen even into the very same sin. It is worth knowing, and never fails. It is the test by which you may know a sheep from a swine, when both have fallen into the same slough, and are, in fact, so besmirched that neither by coat or color can the one be distinguished from the other. How to distinguish them? Nothing more easy! The unclean animal, in circumstances agreeable to its nature, wallows in the mire, but the sheep—type of the godly—bleats and strives and struggles to get out."—Thomas Guthrie.

Personal Responsibility.

"In your heart you know that no circumstances compelled you to sin. This is the utterance of your own living consciousness. It is a true psychology, the voice of philosophy, as well as of Scripture, which tells you you are without excuse. Even when you try to excuse yourself you are ashamed. The more your heart is true, the more your spiritual sight is clear, the more does your sin make itself your own, and accuse and condemn yourself. And if this is not to verify the fact of responsibility, I know not what verification means."

"No one lives who is entirely without influence. Every one is helping or hindering others every day of his life. There is no flower that blooms even on the driest mountain peak or in the deepest dell but that the air is sweeter because of it. There is no cesspool anywhere wherever hidden, but that the air is fouler because of it. Nor has any one of us today had a thought or desire heavenward, but that the world is better for it. Nor has anyone of us had a thought or desire of evil today but that this world of ours has swung a little nearer the pit."

Our Permanent Record.

"No action, whether foul or fair, is ever done, but it leaves some-where a record, written by fingers ghostly, as a blessing or a curse."

He says the Star is always a welcome visitor at their home.

Soothe Doomed Shark by Ticking Its Hide

Few of us would like to tackle the tiger of the seas in his native haunts, but the brown men of Aitutaki in the Southern seas have no such scruples. There, in the calm emerald waters of the lagoon, fringed about with waving palms, are great hollows in the coral rocks; here, during the hottest hours of the day, the sharks love to bask in the welcome shade. Ten feet of shark lies snug within the shadow, only a slowly waving tail proclaiming his presence. Then out from the beach creeps a canoe, with a rope of sinnet reedy coiled. Silently the Kanakas paddle to the spot, where deep down in the clear water that slaty gray tail moves slowly. Pooled for a moment while he inhales a deep breath, the brown man waits, the loop of the rope over his arm. Then, in a beautiful curve, he dives. Now he is beside the shark and his hand softly rubs the shark and his hand softly rubs the shark like it. Suddenly the nose is fixed over the flukes of the tail, and a brown form is seen scrambling quickly over the gunwale of the canoe. Then comes a rapid paddling of the frail craft, the line is hauled in and the shark is effectively dispatched with a blow of a club.

Difficulties of Life Have Their Purposes

Very rare are those who have always had their every wish fulfilled or forestalled; but even these should not be envied. Man is not made to live in perpetual sunshine, and would very soon tire of having all he desires, without having to wait and work for the materialization of his longings. The greater the ease of obtaining what he wants—the sooner it would pall upon him. Life's difficulties, and prolonged trials, says the London Chronicle, are a test of character. If we had no difficulties to overcome and our patience were not tried, we might continue to exist—but our claim to be called "men" and "women" would be slender. Though we often groan under its weight, we should "respect the burden," and thus regain our cheerfulness and serenity.

Houses in Patriotic Hues

With all the house painting now going on so busily in city and country, the elders who as boys or girls lived on a farm will smile as they contrast the quiet colors used today with the vivid ones common to their youth. Blue and red were favorite colors then. They were the cheapest paints the farmers could buy and mix, except for a standard white. Barn doors were invariably one of these two colors. A blue pump clashed with the green grass in the door yard. A blue wooden weather-vane rooster swung lazily on a red-roofed barn. Houses were mostly white, but for many years blue and red trimmings were much in favor. In many sections the countryside presented a decidedly patriotic appearance.

Not Alone

After herculean efforts against temptation the wayfarer once again found himself listening to yet another sentence to prison. The magistrate knew the prisoner of old and admonished him thus: "If, as you say, you want to live happily in this world, you must keep straight. Now, do you understand?" The prisoner frowned and had to admit that he was puzzled. "I am afraid I don't, your worship," he said doubtfully. "But if you'll tell me how a man is to keep straight while he is trying to make both ends meet, I might."—London Answers.

Toad's Marvelous Tongue

The Spanish toad that lives in the zoo has a tongue that moves faster than that of the busiest gossip. It moves so fast that observers could not see it pick up a worm placed before it recently. The worm simply disappeared, as if into the air. Furthermore, an ordinary slow motion camera failed to take a picture of that moving tongue. Another film was taken, this time at three times the speed, and in this the tongue was shown moving at a rate quicker than a sixtieth of a second, which means that if the Spanish toad could eat continuously he would devour nearly 4,000 worms a minute!

Land of Many Languages

The principal languages of Switzerland are German, spoken by 71 per cent of the people; French, by 21 per cent, and Italian, by 6 per cent. Other languages are Romansh and Latin. By the federal constitution of 1848 and 1874 German, French and Italian are recognized as national languages, so that debates in the federal parliament may be carried on in any of the three, while federal laws and decrees appear also in the three languages. The old dialects of Romansh and Latin do not have any political recognition by the confederation.

Shark Good Eating

Shark meat has grown in favor among the native population of Bermuda until it is now their favorite delicacy. More than 200 kinds of fish can be caught in the warm waters around Bermuda and all are edible. Fishermen find, however, that young sharks are most in demand. These average about four feet in length and are caught alive just beyond the six-mile coral reef that surrounds the islands.

Great Queen of Song Attempted Too Much

The failure of many artists who remain unknown comes from the fact that they do not know in what direction their power lies. The failure of great artists nearly always comes from their lack of knowledge of their own limitations. Few can, indeed, go on for long years with a record like that of Madame Adelina Patti, of whom it is said that she had but one real failure in her artistic life. She was over fifty years old and had been a leading opera singer for over thirty years when, attracted by the opportunities which the role of Carmen gives, she undertook to sing it at Covent Garden, London. With her voice still beautiful, her stage technique at its strongest and her immense popularity, even she could not adapt herself to a role that was conceived for a different type of voice and a different type of person. She, the greatest singer of the century, failed to do what scores of lesser artists were doing well, and what had proved the inspiration of some of those who were nearest to her in greatness.

"Break" Too Apparent Even for Englishman

This has been held back for obvious reasons but it's too good to keep. It seems that one of an English party who were recent visitors in Los Angeles was quite taken with a movie girl, who pretended to be a star but wasn't. Nevertheless, she was very pretty, too pretty, in fact, for a devoted admirer to question. She had him hooked, too, and then made one of those dumb slips which even an Englishman gets. "Are you sure you love me?" she demanded, after they had held hands all through a talkie. "My dear, you can bank on it," was the answer. "Oh, goodie! Which bank, dear?" she cried, and it was all over but the regrets.

World's Finest Opals

What is claimed to be the finest specimen of Australia's own particular gem, the opal, has just been discovered near Walgett, New South Wales. It is a wonderful stone, and when roughly dressed measured six and one-half inches by two inches, and weighed 700 carats. Some of the world's most magnificent opals have come from the fields of New South Wales, and of all dressed stones perhaps the choicest is the "Flame Queen" which measures more than two inches by nearly two and one-half inches and weighs 253 carats. Red, green, orange, blue, gold, and every known color are blended in the newly discovered gem, which is valued at more than $10,000.—Vancouver Province.

Home of Heroine Sold

Kingsbury, the home of Flora MacDonald, rescuer of Bonnie Prince Charlie, was recently sold, the mansion house and grounds bringing only $7,800. Boswell, in his immortal journal, tells of the visit which he and Dr. Samuel Johnson paid on September 12, 1773, to the then famous home at Fiodrigary, Scotland. Doctor Johnson, in describing the visit wrote: "We were entertained with the usual hospitality of Mr. MacDonald and his lady. Flora MacDonald, a name that will be mentioned in history, for courage and fidelity be virtues, mentioned with honor." Doctor Johnson slept in the bed which Prince Charles had occupied on his flight.

Hemaris Diffinis

The adults of this genus of humming-bird moths have wings from which part of the scales rub off so early that they are almost never seen and those portions of the wings are therefore described as transparent. These adults have the unmothlike habit of flying in the bright sunlight and when hovering at flowers, they closely resemble humming birds. When flying it suggests a bumble bee. The larvae feed on relatives of the honey-suckle, such as snowberry and viburnum. They usually pupate in fallen leaves and generally make a queer sort of cocoon.

"Caracul" Fur

A dictionary of fur names says: "Caracul—also known as astrakhan. Sheep family. Habitat: Tashkent, and some of the provinces of southern Russia which are also called 'Russian Caracul.' The Tashkent and caracul have the highest luster and the finest moire markings. Russian caracul vary in color as brown, black, brown and black, or brown and white, and occasionally white. Caracul are bred to some extent in the United States and Canada. They are also found in China and Mongolia. These are generally white, are heavier and have a looser curl."

Truly Hospitable

A former college president was invited to lunch at the home of one of his alumni. The five-year-old daughter of the house was delighted to show the distinguished guest up to wash his hands. Opening the door of the bathroom which was duly fitted out with the best embroidered linens in honor of the occasion, Sally said: "Just make yourself at home, and—with a royal gesture—"you may use any of the towels."—Indianapolis News.

HAVE OWN LOADING DEVICE

O. G. Turner and J. W. Parr, who together have about 200 acres of wheat which will yield between 40,000 and 50,000 bushels, have provided their own loading device for shipping their grain.

A wall of boards was built along the side of the railroad track east of the Santa Fe Grain Company elevator and the grain was dumped against that. Then a blower was installed by placing the wheel below the surface of the ground, the pipe of which was made to reach inside a car door. To this an electric motor was attached to furnish the necessary power. A large scoop or drag was then built of boards and attached to a long cable, the other end of which passed through a pulley and extended several feet beyond the frame which supports the blower and attached to an automobile. When the scoop was drawn back and its edge set into the bank of grain, the car slowly backed, thus drawing the scoop and its load of grain to the mouth of the blower by which it was blown into the car.

Several car loads have already been handled with this device and the owners say it has saved them many hours of delay in getting their grain on the market.

A New Memorial to R. E. Lee

"STRATFORD," HOME OF THE LEES

LEE WHITE, SUPERINTENDENT AT WEST POINT, COURTESY UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ONE hundred years ago—July 1, 1829—there was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., a class of 46. The man who stood first was Charles Mason of New York. He became a second lieutenant in the engineers' corps, served as assistant professor at the academy until 1831 when he resigned from the academy. Then he practiced law in New York, Wisconsin and Iowa, and his career as an attorney ended in Washington in 1882.

The man who stood second in the class of 1829 was a young Virginian named Robert E. Lee. After his graduation he became assistant engineer in the construction of what was known as Fort Monroe in his native state. In 1837 he was ordered to the western frontier and for many years he served his country far from the banks of the Potomac, where stood his beloved "Arlington," the home of his childhood playmate, Mary Custis, and his own home after their marriage in 1831. During the Mexican war Capt. Robert E. Lee became successively Major Lee, Lieutenant Colonel Lee and Colonel Lee, and General Scott declared that he was the best soldier he had ever seen in the field. In 1852 the "second man in his class" came back to West Point as its superintendent and that position he held until 1855. Visit the office of General Smith, the superintendent at West Point today, and among the soldiers who look down at you from their portraits on the walls is this handsome young Virginian.

In 1861 the guns of Fort Sumter shattered the hopes of a peaceful settlement of the differences between the North and the South. Lee was recalled from Texas to Washington and General Scott offered the soldier he had praised so highly the command of the Union army that was about to be put into the field. And to Robert E. Lee, pacing back and forth on the veranda of historic Arlington as he sought to make his greatest decision, must have come the words of his father, the famous "Light Horse Harry" Lee of Revolutionary war fame: "Virginia is my country. Her will I obey, however lamentable the fate to which it may subject me." So this was Lee's answer to Scott, as he sent in his resignation from the army, "Save in defense of my native state, I never again desire to draw my sword."

Then Virginia seceded from the Union and Robert E. Lee put on the Confederate gray. Within a year he proved that another name had been added to the list of great American captains. A distinguished English general, Field Marshal Viscount Wolsley, visited the Confederate army in 1862 and years afterward he wrote:

Every incident of that visit is indelibly stamped on my memory. All he said to me then and during subsequent conversations is still fresh in my recollection. It is natural it should be so, for he was the ablest general and seemed to me the greatest man I have ever conversed with, and yet I have had the privilege of meeting Von Moltke and Prince Bismarck. General Lee was one of the few men who ever seriously impressed and awed me with their inherent greatness. Forty years have come and gone since our meeting and yet the majesty of his manly bearing, the genial, winning grace, the sweetness of his smile, and the impressive dignity of his old-fashioned style of dress, come back to me among my most cherished recollections. His greatness made me humble, and I never felt my own insignificance more keenly than I did in his presence. He was, indeed, a beautiful character, and of him it might truthfully be written, "In righteousness did he judge and make war."

Such was the leader of the "Lost Cause" whose military career came to an end in April, 1865. Then find this tribute in an editorial in the New York Times: "General Lee, who hated war and opposed secession, and yet for reasons highly creditable to his character succeeded with his state and led the Southern troops to battle, stated the Confederate cause with perfect truth and simplicity, saying:

After four years of arduous service marked by unsurpassed courage and fortitude, the army of northern Virginia has been forced to yield to overwhelming numbers and resources.

No commander on the other side, no historian, whatever his prejudices, has ever disputed the accuracy of those statements.

As time has cleared away the prejudices and hatreds engendered by the Civil war, more and more have all Americans come to a realization of the greatness of Robert E. Lee and North has joined South in paying him honor. His memory is preserved in many ways—in the college at Lexington, Va., which bears his name and of which he became president in the later years of his life; in the marble figure which stands in Statuary hall in the National Capitol at Washington; and in the preservation of his home "Arlington" as a national memorial and a last resting place for our soldier dead.

Recently a new memorial has been added to the list and it is singularly appropriate that this should be done in the centennial year of his entrance into the service of his country. For on January 19, the anniversary of his birth, this year the announcement was made that William Alexander chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in Connecticut had purchased Stratford hall and the plantation of 1,222 acres, where Lee was born, spent his boyhood years, to be preserved as a national memorial and administered by the Robert E. Lee foundation, whose advisory board includes prominent men in the North as well as the South. That the movement to preserve Stratford hall as a Lee national memorial originated in a New England state and that it has the backing of North as well as the South is significant of the fact that the partisanship of 60 years ago no longer denies him the right to be regarded as a great American, nor denies the enshrining of his memory in the hearts of all his countrymen.

The romantic interest attached to the establishment of this latest memorial to Lee was told in the following news item which appeared at the time of the Stratford hall purchase last January:

Purchase of the Lee estate marks the first step in the plan sponsored by the William Alexander Chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy to make the place "not merely a shrine, but a living national educational memorial and a center of historical research," according to Miss Ethel Armes, of the William Alexander chapter.

Announcement of the sale, on the anniversary of General Lee's birth, and the 200th anniversary of the building of historic Stratford hall, marks the fulfillment of a determination born of a dramatic story starting in Greenwich, Conn., nearly a year ago. Mrs. Charles D. Lanier of Greenwich, head of the William Alexander chapter, while going through an old broken desk of her mother-in-law, Mrs. Sidney Lanier, widow of the poet, came upon a penciled manuscript by Lanier, unpublished and until then not known to exist, which turned out to be a speech he made before citizens of Marion, Ga., in 1870 upon the death of General Lee in which he urged the establishment of a memorial to honor Lee, to which every person who loved the southern leader could contribute.

The following day Mrs. Lanier received a letter from a friend visiting in Virginia, describing a trip to Stratford hall and asking why it could not be preserved.

The next day Mrs. Lanier called a meeting of her chapter which resulted in the passage of resolutions looking to the purchase of the tract. The deed of purchase was signed at Stratford hall by the trustees, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Stuart, after seven months' negotiations.

Miss Armes set forth the purposes of the Robert E. Lee memorial foundation, now being formed, to operate similarly to the Mount Vernon association, as being fourfold: To purchase, restore and furnish the home; to restore the famous old library, make of it a center of research and to establish scholarships; to restore the colonial garden; the Stratford wharf on the Potomac and reproduce some of its boats which two centuries ago were tied there; and to perpetuate the ideals and character of the Lees, chiefly by historical studies.

Stratford was the gift of Queen Caroline, wife of King George II, to members of the Lee family. It was the home of Richard Henry and Francis Lightfoot Lee, signers of the Declaration of Independence, of "Light Horse Harry" Lee and other generations of the family. Prior to the Revolutionary war it was a gathering place for Virginia leaders and the origin of much of the sentiment for independence.

Earliest Use of Iron

Specimens of iron have been found in Assyrian and Egyptian ruins. In the British museum there is a piece of iron believed to date from about 4000 B. C. In the Great Pyramid of Abusir, at least 3000 B. C., Gaston Maspero found some pieces of iron, and in the funeral text of Tefi I (about 3400 B. C.) the metal was mentioned. The knowledge of iron spread from the south to the north of Europe, and one theory is that iron first came into use in Africa.

A New Valuation

The award offered for the most original social innovation is claimed by the friends of Col. Mihaly Aronffy-Untermeiner of Budapest, says the Living Age.

The plan is to scrap the conventional and commonplace salutations of "good morning" and "good evening," so frequently uttered without deep feeling or genuine sincerity, and substitute a newer and more expressive phrase, adapted without variation to all hours of the day or night.

If the new plan is carried out, when acquaintances greet each other, one will claim, soulfully, "Better future," and the other will respond with emotion, "God give!"

Properly Designated

Colorado is called the "centennial state" because it was admitted to the Union in 1876, the centennial anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

Sutter's Heirs Ask for Fifty Million

Wrecking of Empire Where Gold Was Struck in California Recalled.

Washington.—"He who finds gold will die in the almshouse."

So runs an old Spanish proverb. The sage has been ever prolific in his ironic observations of the way easy wealth has of destroying a man by nullifying his virtues and stimulating his empty pride and extravagance. But there is a story also of how a discoverer of gold met misfortune, not from the "psychological and moral forces from within, but from forces outside his control.

Such is the story of Gen. John A. Sutter, builder and proprietor of Sutter's fort, of California gold rush fame—a man of affluence and high position in California before the epic discovery of gold in 1848. Paradoxically enough, it was this discovery which ruined him. It brought to his door the horde of maddened fortune hunters, the rabble which ate his substance, which stole his cattle, which trampled his vineyards, which confiscated his lands. He died in penury in a little Pennsylvania town, where he now lies in an obscure grave.

Presses $50,000,000 Claim. An echo of this ironic tragedy has been brought to the ears of the nation through the recent legal action taken by Reginald Sutter, grandson of the great pioneer, who, as announced in recent news dispatches, is pressing a claim against the United States government for $50,000,000, asserting this sum was due to him and the other heirs because of an agreement made by congress in 1870.

Bits of reminiscence that have been handed down from old residents of California and of Kansas City, where he lived for a time, afford an insight into the personality of the picturesque wanderer, who, born in Germany of Swiss parents and schooled in the army of France, sought the American frontier and founded a principality in the West. Prominent Kansas City residents of a quarter of a century ago recalled the stories which, as boys they heard the dashing army captain from across the sea tell them in his little merchandise store at Westport avenue and Main street. His store where wagon trains outfitted for the Santa Fe trail, prospered, but the call of the frontier could not be resisted. In 1838 he joined a trapping party and made his way westward.

Arriving at Monterey, then the capital of California he was warmly welcomed in 1838 by Gov. Juan Alvarado, who made him a general and presented him with eleven square leagues of land, to be taken from any section of the domain he might choose. He set out from Monterey, explored the San Francisco, San Pablo and Suisun Bays; cruised down the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers and finally reached the present site of Sacramento, where a permanent settlement was made.

Dwelt in Feudal State. There he built the fort which he named New Helvetia, popularly known in history as Sutter's fort. He was made governor of the northern frontier by the Mexican government and became wealthy. There he dwelt in feudal state, winning the surrounding Indians to his employ. With their aid he built his fort, cultivated large areas of wheat, set out vineyards and raised herds of cattle and horses.

Establishing stores, he traded from Canada to Mexico and as far east as St. Louis. Governor Micheltorena, successor to Alvarado, gave him an additional eleven square leagues of land to encourage his activities in agriculture. The virtual owner of a quarter million acres of land, he was monarch of all he surveyed.

Then happened the event which reduced him from affluence to penury—the discovery of gold on his own land. James W. Marshall, his foreman made the find. The date was January 24, 1848. He told his employer, and they kept it a secret until the following March 15, when a weekly newspaper of San Francisco, then a town of 700 population, published the story.

Sam Brennan, of San Francisco, went out to investigate. He returned with a bottle of gold dust. That news depopulated San Francisco. Crews deserted their ships in the harbor. The rush was on. Sutter's fort was overrun, his crops were destroyed and his Indians were either killed or driven away.

"Possessing none of the gold miner's instinct, the sturdy pioneer was forced before the year was ended to retreat before the roaring tide of humanity that surged about him. He sold his fort, with all it contained, to the traders, gamblers, rum sellers and boarding-house keepers who already had seized upon it. With the dreams of a lifetime dispelled, he retired to the quiet of a little farm on the Feather river.

Fort Wrecked in a Year. When Bayard Taylor visited the place in 1849 every building in the once well regulated fort was occupied as a hotel, a rum shop, a gambling saloon or a store. Great holes had been broken through the outer walls to serve as doors and windows; the massive gates had been wrenched from their hinges and cut up for firewood; the broad wheat fields and vineyards of a year before were covered with a rank growth of weeds.

The inclosure was filled with a mob

73-Year-Old Man Gets Long Prison Sentence

Manila.—A 30-cent box of face powder meant a 21-year prison conviction here for a man seventy-three years old.

The man is Mariano Lupia. For theft of the powder from a small shop he was sentenced to imprisonment to two months and a day.

But because it was found that he had been convicted on five previous occasions during the past ten years, he received an additional sentence of 21 years under the recidivist law.

of miners. Outside, scores of tents were pitched beside scores of loaded wagons. In the evening campfires cast their glow over piles of miscellaneous merchandise, personal effects and groups of tethered animals.

Before the year ended another great change had come over General Sutter's frontier domain. Trade had left it for the more convenient locality of the river landing and was already building the city of Sacramento. The entire structure was being demolished for its building material. In later years the city of Sacramento spread to and beyond it, and streets were laid out across its site. In more recent years it has been restored to its original form as a memorial to General Sutter and the history in which he figured so vitally.

Squatters settled on the outlying lands. California was being annexed to the United States, and the rights and titles by Spanish governors were not respected. The old pioneer appealed to the United States courts in vain for recompense. California did, however, grant a pension of $250 a month to him, but he relinquished it after fourteen years. In 1872 he sent his two daughters to Bethlehem, Pa., to attend the Moravian school, and, visiting that section later, remained in Lititz. There today, in the little Moravian cemetery, is his grave, beside that of his wife, Anna.

In the recent review of the legal aspects of Sutter's claim against the government, it is recalled that in 1851 Sutter filed suit against 21,000 squatters. The courts upheld him. The squatters appealed and kept the issue in litigation for years.

After Sutter's death in 1870 the legal action languished. Attorneys for Reginald Sutter and other heirs are in Washington, going through the congressional records in search of documents to back up the claims of the heirs.

Pet Gander on Guard

Dartmouth, Mass.—The bow-wow which for 10 years greeted night prowlers at the home of Manuel Medeiros has been supplanted by honk-honk-honk. After 16 years service, "Sport," Medeiros' watchdog, was retired recently and a pet gander put on sentry duty in its place.

RICH MINERAL REGION IN CANADA LOCATED FROM AIR

Vast Expanse of Copper and Iron Disclosed by Airplane Explorers

New York.—Regions which were barren and regarded as worthless a few years ago will soon place Canada in the front rank of mineral producing countries, probably making her the dominant mining center of the world. And it is to the airplane more than any other agency that the Dominion is indebted for a development in the course of a few years that groundling prospectors would have taken decades to accomplish.

The story of the exploitation of the great pre-Cambrian shield, the geodesic mine for the large expanse of iron and copper ore which has recently been found to cover a great part of Manitoba and reach out indefinitely is graphically told in the Review of Reviews.

Canada has only touched its potential mineral wealth, says Alan L. Long staff, the writer, after survey of the developments now going on over a hundred thousand miles of territory. The pre-Cambrian shield, a vast U shaped area, stretching from Labrador around Hudson bay almost to the Mackenzie river, is estimated to be the greatest single exposure in the world greater than all others.

"Less than three per cent of this pre-Cambrian area projects into the states of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, yet that projection is one of the richest mining regions in the world. It contains the famous Lake Superior iron mines which, more than any other single factor, have contributed to the pre-eminence of the United States in iron and steel manufacture."

The spectacular phase of the Canadian development, the locating of mine sites from the air has reached into regions whose practical prospecting and exploitation would have been impossible a generation ago, the Review of Reviews writer points out.

"Aerial exploration not only has removed many of the terrors and hardships of prospecting, but has opened to the seeker after mineral deposits territories far beyond his reach," he reports. "The past year found planes of the Northern Aerial Minerals Exploration company, the Dominion Explorers, Ltd., and the Western Canada Airways scouring the territories along the coasts of the Hudson and James Bays, dropping off a party of prospectors here and there.

Not only iron and copper, but coal, gold, lead, zinc, gypsum, manganese and other minerals are figuring importantly in the Canadian search for underground wealth, which now is reaching dominion-wide proportions. Gold deposits recently opened, largely through aerial exploration, in northern Ontario and Quebec will soon raise Canada to second place among the gold producing regions of the world, it is estimated.

Christian Symbol in Old Turkish Mosque

A beautiful mosaic of the Virgin Mary has been found in a Turkish mosque in Constantinople. For 500 years it has been hidden under whitewash. The workmen who were replastering the interior of the mosque reported the glint of gold which they had uncovered. The religious authorities, who notified the National museum, whose experts were sent at once to complete the uncovering of the mosaic. Once discovered in all its glory of form and color, the next step was to ask Agora what to do about this picture of the mother of Christ dead on her bier surrounded by saints and angels high on the wall of a Moslem mosque. Agora, sent of revolutionary Turkey, replied that the mosaic was to remain where it was and was to be preserved with the utmost care. Thus for the first time in history Moslem worship beneath the shadow of images, the representative of which has for centuries been absolutely prohibited by the Moslem religion.

Watch That "Stepped Out" Pleased Leslie

Little Leslie Luckhoy had been given a beautiful watch—which, by the way, was his first—as a Christmas present. Family enough, he did not seem very excited about it, and managed to restrain his enthusiasm in a very marked manner. However, he went out to a party, and returned in tremendous spirits, exclaiming: "I've got a ripping watch!" "I'm glad you like it," said his mother, duly pleased at his joy which up to now he had concealed. "Yes," he continued, "it's half an hour ahead of Lew's watch, and it's a whole hour ahead of the church clock. It beats them all!"—London Answers.

No Use for Them

"No," said the suburban farmer, "you won't do any business here, no lad. I've finished with 'horseless' machines. I don't hold with 'em." The young traveler could not help but smile. "Look here," continued the farmer, pointing to a typewriter, "take a look at that. That's a writin' machine my wife spent all her savin's on 'cos I ain't very handy w'it me pen." "What's the matter with it?" "Matter?" exclaimed the farmer. "Why, nobody can write their 'horseless' name with it unless they can play a church organ!"—London Answers.

Variation of "Quits"

The game of horseshoes is based on quits, which is a pastime resembling the ancient discus-throwing of Greece. Few traces of a game resembling quits can be found on the continent of Europe and its origin may be sought on the borderland of Scotland and England. There are references to it in the Midlands, dating from the beginning of the fifteenth century. Ascham, in his "Scolaphius" (1545), refers to the game as being played chiefly by the working classes, who often used horseshoes for want of quits, a custom still prevailing in country districts.

Louvain University

The restoration of the University of Louvain was brought about by the various nations of the allies. To the United States fell the privilege of rebuilding the library. The University of Louvain was founded more than two centuries before Christ. At the time of its destruction the library contained but a quarter of a million volumes, but these works had been accumulating for five centuries. The site of the present library is the finest in Louvain, occupying one entire side of the Place du Peuple. The architect was Whitney Warren, who was chosen by an international committee. The corner stone was laid by Nicholas Murray Butler.

Nat in Kokomo

Little five-year-old Marcia of Kokomo, whose family is not noted for early rising, was visiting her grandparents in the country. Awakening early this morning she looked out an east window to see the sky all resplendent in the most gorgeous colors. "What is that, grandma?" she inquired. On being told that it was the dawn, she reflected a moment, then said: "We don't have any dawn in Kokomo."—Indianapolis News.

Quiet Youngsters

A city child, visiting her grandmother's farm, asked: "Grandma, which are the apples that keep the doctor away?" Another city child, on seeing a speckled trout for the first time, exclaimed: "Oh, mother, it's got the measles." A third, who was in the barn with her father, seeing a pitchfork, said: "Daddy, I s'pose that's what the horses eat their hay with, but where's the knife that goes with it?"

Mental age is most accurately based upon the individual Terman-Binet test of intelligence. A child is said to have a mental age of ten years, for example, when he passes the tests on the Terman-Binet scale which it has been found, are passed by a majority of normal ten-year-old children. Terman defines mental age as follows: "By a given mental age we mean that degree of general mental ability as is possessed by the average child of corresponding chronological age."

MRS. McCANDLES PASSES AWAY

Mrs. Nannie McCandles, wife of B. B. McCandles, passed quietly away at their home four miles south of Frona at 12:30 p. m., Sunday, July 7.

Mrs. McCandles had been in apparently good health and had been busy with her house work, which included cooking for the harvest hands, and after finishing the day's work had gone to the porch with her husband to rest awhile before retiring, when she became suddenly very ill. Mr. McCandles called a passing truck, whose driver returned to town for help and a physician. Just a few moments after the doctor arrived she passed away. Heart failure was the cause of her death.

Mrs. Nannie M. Cooke McCandles was born in Tennessee in October, 1868. At an early age she removed with her parents to Texas, where they settled near the city of Meridian and where she grew to womanhood. She was married to Meridian to B. B. McCandles in 1888, and to this union four children were born, two sons, L. L. McCandles of Oklahoma City, and H. C. McCandles of this community, and two daughters, Mrs. Rufe Bellows of Santa Anna, California, and Mrs. Fred Karns of Clovis, New Mexico, all of whom with two grand children, her husband and a brother, J. L. Cooke of Denison, Texas, survive her.

After her marriage she and her husband later moved to Oklahoma where they lived until four years ago, when they moved to the farm south of Frona where they have since resided. During her residence in this locality she has won the highest esteem of all who have known her.

Early in life she became a member of the Methodist church, in which faith she was reared, and of which church she remained a member until going to Oklahoma.

Training Camp Schedule of An Appealing Nature

The students attending the 9th annual Citizens' Military Training Camp are being informed of their company news through the medium of the "C. M. T. C. Sharpshooter," published daily by the students themselves and distributed to all C. M. T. C. organizations. Hugh Russell, of Lubbock Technological College student, has been elected editor in chief by the student editorial staff and is continuing the paper as a monthly publication after the close of camp, arrangements having been made to get the paper edited in the 8th Corps Area, C. M. T. C. office.

Instructions in infantry, artillery and signal corps subjects occupies the morning from 7:20 to 11:30, and include drill, rifle marksmanship, physical training, gunnery drill and practice, map reading, scouting and patrolling, duties of officers and N. C. O's and citizenship.

The afternoon period of recreation begins at 1:30 and ends at 4. Each company organization is represented in the camp baseball.

Indoor baseball and volley ball league, and matched games are played each afternoon. Other athletic activities include supervised instruction in boxing, swimming, track and field. The participants of these sports are working hard in preparation for the boxing tournament, track and field and swimming meet to be held the last week of camp. More than 100 medals and cups are to be awarded for military and athletic accomplishments.

Under supervision of camp authorities the signal corps is filming a two reel motion picture of activities at the camp in Fort Sam Houston. Cameramen visit drill areas and athletic fields daily where is taught the rudiments of military training and athletic sports. The continuity of the "Story of the C. M. T. C." has been written and includes scenes taken during the entire period of the camp from the moment the students step off the train at San Antonio into army buses until they make their final parade, receiving civilian clothing and bidding their buddies goodbye until next year's camp.

It has been arranged to so select the organizations for the scenes of the picture as to include every student in the film.

The recreational program included another sightseeing trip for students desiring to see the points of historic interest in and around San Antonio on the afternoon of June 29. A camp dance was held July 1. Dancing partners for the students are secured from among the younger set in San Antonio, under the chaperonage of the Federated Women's Clubs. The physical efficiency test to determine how Texas youths compare physically with those of other states was scheduled for the afternoon, July 2. The preliminary meet was scheduled for the afternoon, and the semi-finals of the tournament that night. Finals of the track meet was held the afternoon of July 3. This was parents day and invitations were sent to all parents of students to visit camp on that day. They had dinner as guests of the camp and witnessed a review and inspection during the morning and the finals of the field and track meet during the afternoon. The privileges of the camp were extended to them for the whole day.

The rifle companies leave for the rifle range at Camp Stanley July 5 to be gone until the 8th. The Final Review and awarding of decorations will occur at 8:30 a. m. July 12. Students will leave for their respective homes on the 13th.
