We'll not mention names for fear we'll omit som some -- but we do wish to thank everyone for their help.

If you haven't seen Tony Perea run with the football, you really ought to go out to this week's last home game of the 1968 season. Perea is an exciting player to watch -- both on offense and defense,

He's especially something when he gets the ball and is in the opponents' secondary. He suddenly becomes a madman He figures he has the right-ofway, and everyone else had better yield.

Perea has had an unbelieveable year, gaining 1464 yards rushing through the first eight games. It took him just seven games to top Doug Dodd's former record of 1184 yards for the season.

Fans who watchd Friday night's game will have the opportunity to see two of the top backs in the district, between Perea and Olton's Charles Mc-Clain. The two are waging a head-to-head battle for the district's scoring championship. Going into the game, Perea is leading with 92 points, but McClain is less than a touchdown behind with 88 points. Last week, Perea scored 20 points, but McClain stayed right on his heels with 18 points against Floydada.

TALES FROM DOWN UNDER

Everybody has a reason for the alleged decline in the morals of our young people. The problem is not limited to any one nation. Some have blamed violence and sex on TV or in the movies. The availability of pornographic books and photographs has been cited. Comic books have been brought into the debate by a number of people. The blame has been placed on our schools, our churches and the parents of the offenders.

Recently an Australian psychiatrist has placed a large portion of the blame on fairy tales. This particular scholar has been studying the psychiatric effect of fairy tales for longer than most children believe them. He has devoted ten years to investigating Red Riding Hood, Goldilocks and Jack of beanstalk fame.

Now he suffers great apprehension over the influence observed at the Library this these fantasies have on young minds. He has concluded that week. Weatherwise the day is perfect. Our special band of panhandle sun is shining and there is just enough breeze to move the fallen leaves in scurrying circles. From high on their pole Old Glory and the Texas flag rise and fall, beckoning the voters to the polling place.

And the people come Singly, in couples, and in small groups they enter the building to exercise their rights as citizens. How fitting it is that they come to the school to vote.

Here in this group of buildings devoted to the education and general well being of their children, parents and relatives demonstrate their desire to preserve all that is good in America. There is no noisy demonstration in progress, no screaming mob of placard carrying rabble. There are no soldiers riding herd on the voters.

Despite the apparent calm thereis a powerful force at work-thousands of freedom - loving people quietly casting ballots.

We have heard much discussion of the problems engendered by the "third party."

We had better remember that we at least have a choice. In the communist countries there is only one slare of candidates, and they are hand-picked by the ruling regime.

HOG PROFIT GUIDE-Six Tips For Better Feeder Pig Business

The feeder pig business can be profitable. Much of the profit depends on market prices. Whether prices are high or low, it is still necessary to keep costs down, put on the fastest, most economical gains . . and get more pigs to market earlier.

Research at the Cyanamid Agricultural Center and on-farm experiments across the country with leading hog producers, have resulted in a hog profit guide for feeder pig production.

 When you buy pigs, select only those that are thrifty and vigorous. Weak animals indicate poor breeding, disease, worms or possibly poor nutrition.

See that each pig has received a minimum dose of a recognized hog cholera serum and a good modified live virus vaccine that gives lasting immunity. It prevents hog cholera outbreaks.

3. Check pigs for lice and mange. If either is present, spray with malathion the first day to control these external parasites.

This job is best done before pigs are unloaded. 4. Keep newly purchased pigs away from the rest of your herd for at least two weeks if possible. Isolate any visibly sick animals.

Newly purchased feeder pigs have been under a good deal of stress. Their disease resistance is usually lower after shipment and handling. It will pay to put them on feeds containing a com-bination antibiotic like Aureo SP 250. This broad-range feed additive helps fight disease problems. Research has shown that pigs should be put on a feed with Aureo SP 250 for at least 30 days. The first weeks after feeder pigs arrive can be the most critical in terms of disease problems and stress.

6. After 30 days, pigs should be put on a feed with Aureomycin at a level of 20 grams per ton. Feed manufacturers have developed complete starting, feeding and finishing programs that incorporate the latest advances in nutrition and disease prevention.

The result of attention to these research findings on hog management, health protection and nutrition will be more profitable.

Strategy

It's Tim's move, and he is taking a long time thinking it over. In chess, if you're a good player, you don't play quickly. If you do, your opponent may outwit you

Military strategy, they say, is based on the rules of chess. So are many of the "higher games" in business and finance. Yet, when it comes to life itself, the rules of chess apply in only a limited way. In life, you can't be totally objective. You can't exist on logic alone.

The Church teaches that though we surely need logic in order to live successfully, we also need compassion, tolerance, love, understanding, and the strength that comes with faith.

Although life is not a game, we must have the help and strength of the Church to discover those rules that will determine our

The Star office has moved again. In this world of constant change it seems that nothing stays the same. This is especially true in the newspaper world. In the past twelve and one half years ownership of the Star has changed three times and the office has been moved four times.

At the present time we are occupying offices in the north half of the building just north of Houser Foods. It was originally constructed for the Spudnut Shop and later occupied by the Golden

We have the same telephone number, the same employees, the same equipment and the same earnest desire to efficiently and accurately report the news of our community and to serve our fellow townspeople and advertisers.

Sometimes we fail to properly express our appreciation for the many courtestes extended us in our efforts to represent our town and surrounding trade territory, but we are deeply grateful to all who make our jobs more pleasant and effective.

If it happens in our community, we want to know about it and will appreciate having anyone call us at 247-2211 during office hours or at our homes at any time.

On two different occasions during the past week it has been necessary for me to get out of bed earlier than my usual 6:00 a.m. Both times I have been amply repaid for any loss of sleep by seeing the countryside before the sun comes up.

There may have been a more impressive sight Tuesday morning than the sun rising behind a herd of Hereford cattle grazing south of W.D. Buske's home, but I didn't see it. Between me and the cows there was a lake with wild ducks swimming on it. Just the other side of the water I could see a large number of red cattle with white faces grazing on green wheat and the picture was very pretty.

A number of people feel greatly invogorated after a trip to the mountains and go very often. But, how many of us ever think of getting up a couple of hours early to take a walk in our own backyards or nearby area? The pheasant cocks are most colorful this time of year and no would have to walk or drive very many miles to see one, two or three or more,

The next time you get to feeling "trapped," "Bogged down," or however you feel when your enthusiasm for living gets low, try taking a walk early in the morning just to see what it will do for you.

In a recent column I quoted an article concerning right handness and left handness. One of our readers called to tell me one statement in it was not necessarily true. I do appreciate so very much calls of this nature.

The part of the article, which was questionable, was the statement that babies in cribs would reach for a brightly colored object with the hand which they would later use more than the other. My informant quoted from a reliable source that children were older than the crib state before they demonstrated left handness or right handness.

One of the most provoking things I've read recently appeared in a recent issue of "Friendly Chat," from Baker Oil Tools, Inc. Los Angeles, Calif., It is being re-printed with the hope you will enjoy it.

SHOW YOUR APPRECIATION

Certainly one of the deepest qualities of himan nature -- and one of the most overlooked -- is the craving to be appreciated. Husbands, wives, children, bosses, workers -- almost all people -- do not pay enough attention to this important trait.

Few executives seem to realize that a word of praise for a good job well done by one of the employees may mean almost as much in the long run as a raise.

After living together for years, a husband and wife take everything for granted. Perhaps they still notice the little things about each other that first attracted them, but usually they do fail to mention them.

Parents do not always realize that a little bit of praise for their child's latest project is important to his character building and growing up.

By not acting quickly to praise someone for good service, the impulse often fades away. It is necessary to say nice things to have them do good -- not merely think about them

What a difference being generous with your appreciation can make! The next time you are driving your car and someone freshman student at Central stops to give you the right-of-way, smile at him and wave. Just watch how his face lights up and he waves back. And it's likely that soon after that you'll be on the alert to give another fellow a break so that he can get across a busy intersection ahead of you.

Being appreciative is contagious, It's a contagious condition that we could all profit by. Today, tell someone that you think he did a good job. Someone may do the same for you,

CONVERSATION PIECE—An old school desk bought from a secondhand store comes to life with cotton decoupage. Given an antique white finish, the desk is decorated with Alice in Wonderland and Humpty-Dumpty characters cut from a cotton decorator print. The same fabric is used for draperies.

Cotton Decoupage:

New Version

Of An Old Craft

If you haven't tried decoupage yet, now's the time. It may sound like a new kind of dance or a fancy dessert, but decoupage is just a big word for a simple handicraft that has taken the fancy of millions of women.

The word itself (phonetically pronounced "day-coopange") is from the French and means the art of decorating surfaces with applied paper cutouts.

However, there's more to it than that. The cutout design and the surface to which it is glued must be covered with coats of a special varnish. This gives the item—which might be a decorative box, wall plaque, or piece of furniture—a distinctive finish that resembles lacquer.

Several years ago, do-it-yourself versions of this age-old craft sprang up with the "old board" school of art. Materials were found by scavenging lumber yards for odd pieces of wood suitable for making into wall plaques. Magazines and art periodicals yielded prints for pasted-on designs.

To make the wood look even more antique and weatherbeaten, devotees burned it, hammered it, even sawed off edges.

edges.

Today, arts and crafts shops offer unfinished wooden items for decoupage purposes. They include ready-cut plaques.

boxes of all sizes, and waste-

And now, there's a rich new source for decoupage designs. Motifs cut from cotton cloth, either decorator or piecegoods fabrics, provide imaginative cutouts. The fabric motifs give finished items a three-dimensional look and are easier to work with than paper cutouts. They also enable you to coordinate decoupage items with the rest of the room decor.

the rest of the room decor.

For fabric decoupage, choose a closely woven cotton print with large, clearly defined motifs. These could be big flowers, country landscapes, circus animals, or Early American designs. To coordinate them with room decor, plan to make curtains, a tablecloth, or a bed-spread with the same fabric.

spread with the same fabric.

Look for unfinished wooden items at an arts and crafts shop. Sand down the item and, if you like the weather-beaten look, hammer dents in it and Stain with any wood stain you like until you get the shade desired. Or give it an antique colored finish with spray paint. After paint dries, paste on fabric cutout with white household glue.

When this is dry, give the entire item several coats of special decoupage varnish, available at hardware and paint stores. You can get flat, semi-gloss, or high gloss varnish in liquid or spray form. Sand lightly between coats.
