

There Is a Reason Why They Buy

There is a reason why the Magnolia Petroleum Co. sold 8955 gallons of kerosene in the month of Jan. Everybody who uses it knows there is a big difference.

Phone No. 10 your next order; we have some left and service that goes with it. We have gasoline that is just as superior as our kerosene. Call for the Mag brand. Ask your dealer why Magnolia Motor Oil is the best.

MORE ABOUT THE COW, SOW AND HEN TRAIN

The agricultural department of the Santa Fe Railway expects good results from the livestock demonstration train which will be in Brownfield Monday, March 26th at 10:50 A.M. for a meeting with farmers and town folks who are interested in dairying, hog and poultry raising, according to the Earth, the company's agricultural and industrial paper.

"In the enterprise described," says the Earth, "the Santa Fe is co-operating with the Texas A. & M. College which has several important messages for everybody who gives thought to the development of the important farming business of this great commonwealth. The college is sending its best men to present three big subjects—Prof. Evans, dairying; Prof. Ward, hog raising; Prof. Edison, poultry raising; and others of the extension service, who will discuss the three subjects generally. These men will be disappointed if farmers fail to ask questions. They urge farmers to bring their problems to the meeting. Women are especially invited.

"In addition to the lectures mentioned, there will be a meeting for boys and girls, conducted by T. B. Wood and J. R. Edmonds, district agents of the college extension service. A number of Santa Fe officials will accompany the party.

"The train will stand at the Santa Fe station and the meeting will start immediately upon arrival.

"The Santa Fe has run a number of trains similar to the one now organizing for Texas, and satisfactory results have followed in every instance. Everything points to success for the project under way. Farmers are invited to help make it a success by attending the meeting."

BIG LUMBER DEAL CONSUMED LAST WEEK

The Prideaux Lumber Company became the property some two weeks ago of the Higginbotham-Bartlett Co. when an agreement was reached by Manager T. R. Prideaux of the former company and District Manager Adkins for the latter company. Messrs. Prideaux and Hardin did a good business while in the lumber business here, and many have expressed regrets at their retirement. We have not learned the future intentions of either one of these gentlemen.

This leaves only two yards in this city, but they are both giants financially, and will take care of the needs of the territory. They are the Higginbotham-Bartlett Co., and the C. C. Smith Company.

GOOD NIGHT

Every Day In Every Way Terry County is Growing and Developing

From the very infancy of the county, this Bank's resources and services has been solidly placed behind its growth and progress. This Bank has had its shoulder to the wheel of public service through years of adversity as well as years of prosperity; endeavoring to render a constructive, helpful service and to make its transactions mutually pleasant and profitable.

Our aim is to see that our territory grow and prosper; for as it grows and prospers, so do we. We seek to accomplish this aim by placing at our territory's command a helpful banking service. Lets work together.

LIGHT PLANT STARTED SATURDAY NIGHT

After disappointment, delays of one sort and then another, the City Dads ordered the "juice" shot into the wires Saturday night, and the population in spite of weather conditions turned out to watch the climber. If the future is as good as even now, we are to enjoy a good lighting system.

Cables for the street lighting are due this month, and with our good concrete sidewalks, our citizens will be able to traverse the business section of the burg without hanging a hind foot over a cocked up board sidewalk and land in a mud hole. And this alone is expected to greatly enhance the religious aspect of the city.

Every plant in town that uses power are preparing to motorize their plants and the city council believe they can give us day service before real hot weather hits us.

You can't keep Brownfield down; the country around it is settling so fast that it will grow in spite of itself.

CANDIES of all kinds at Brothers & Brothers, and they are fresh too.

Tom Hargus returned this week from Mt. Pleasant, Texas, where he attended the funeral of his mother. She died just a few hours before he reached her bedside.

RAINING HERE AGAIN—YOU SAID IT

What's eatin' on the weather man? Has he decided that the headwaters of the Colorado should be spun round and joined to the Red with the slinged Sabine a close neighbor?

Even the newcomers from those points and beyond the Mississippi are singing, "Somebody Lied." Can you blame them? They were told that it never rained here in winter—but SOMETIMES snowed.

Anyway last week when we reported more than an inch rain and over two inches since the 20th of January, besides a snow, we expected to be done with rain reporting until about the last of March of first of April, for that is the way it is usually doped out. But here we come again this week reporting three-quarters of an inch more; some sleet, snow and hail. This fell last Thursday and one or two days this week.

Monday afternoon late, reminded one of spring. It was warm and a black cloud was making up in the northwest. Keen edged streaks of lightning flitted from cloud to cloud amid the crash of thunder, and directly hail began to play a tattoo on the roofs. But the heavy part of the cloud went north of us and the Meadow country that had been some what slighted before got hers, together with more hail than they wanted.

The train from Seagraves came in Tuesday morning with her back all white with snow. Not much fell here.

Mail carriers report fine rains on into New Mexico, so the Brownfield trade territory is healed for the present at least.

CAINES COUNTY OFFICIALS MOVE INTO NEW BUILDING

The Commissioners' Court last week accepted the new courthouse and jail building. This week the officers have been busy moving into their various offices.

With the exception of the County Clerk's office, the furniture has not yet arrived, and the old furniture is being temporarily used. The metal furniture of which the County Clerk's office is equipped throughout, was installed and this office as a whole, is the most complete that can be found anywhere.

The remainder of the furniture for the building is expected any day.

We understand that the old building, recently sold to W. G. Gibbs, will be torn down immediately. Mr. Gibbs expects to begin the erection of a house on his land west of town in a few days, using the lumber in this building.—Seminole Sentinel.

LAMESA BANK EXTENDS ITS BUILDING

The contract has been let for the extension to the First State Bank building, and also for the upper story, which is to be built by Lamesa Lumber Co., A. F. & A. M.

The successful bidder was Mr. Fred Bone, who built our beautiful High School building.

The estimated cost of the extension to the bank building is $107,250.00, and the upper story $14,181.00. Work will begin in about sixty days.—Lamesa Journal.

Court SAFETY Rather Than Danger

If you see to it that the title to the property you have, or intend to buy, is flawless—you will escape the "law's delays" and attendant embarrassment and expense connected with a battle in court.

There is no time like the present—RIGHT NOW—for knowing that your abstract of title is perfect.

By all means, court safety, when the way is so easy—so inexpensive, too. Let us supply you with an abstract that will tell the whole story about the real estate you contemplate buying or exchanging.

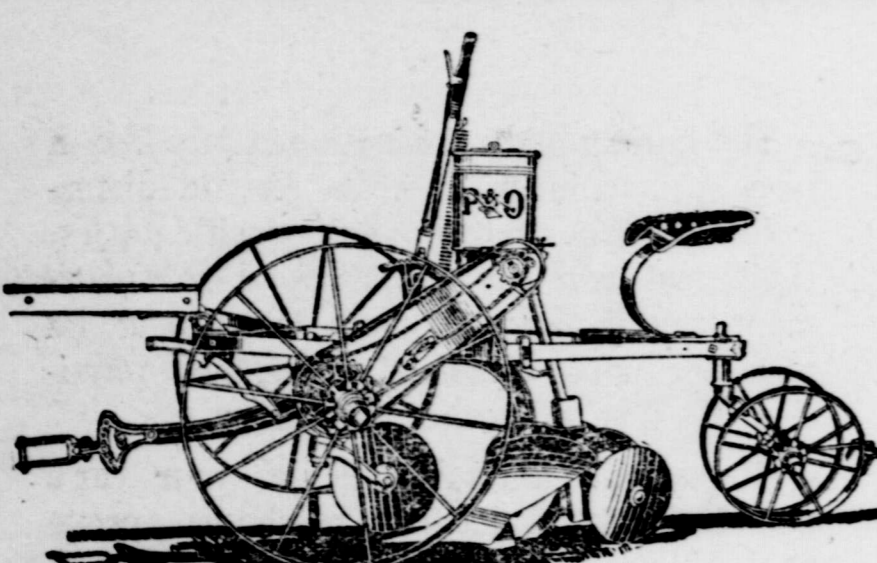

We will tell you the WHOLE truth about the property in question, whether it is for you or against you. This illustrates the thoroughness of our methods.

A THOROUGH service of this kind ought to appeal to you, because you cannot dispose of property at profit unless you are positive that the title is clear and sound.

Get in touch with us today. We'll gladly explain our system of working.

An abstract that's true will work FOR you.

A Self Spacing Lister

In six years time the McCormick-Deering P & O Widetread Lister has made itself known as the greatest advancement in listers since they were invented, about sixty years ago. And the first made sixty years ago was a P. & O.

The frame is made wide enough to allow the carrying wheel on the plow side to run in the last trench made, an this gauges the width of the rows. So you see that if your first row is straight, all the others will be evenly spaced or gauged by it.

And here is another advantage. If you plant with a McCormick-Deering P & O Wide tread lister you can cultivate with an ordinary two row cultivator.

The Widetread Lister makes self-gauged, evenly spaced rows on hillside or level. It can be turned in its own tracks, and it rides along as smoothly as a boat.

The fact that it is a McCormick-Deering P & O tells the whole story as to its strength, simplicity and ease of operation.

BURNETT

It became the sad office of the writer to note the death of Charles Rupert Burnett. He was the son of the Rev. Charles Burnett, of Brownfield. He died at the local sanitarium Wed., Feb. 21st at 3:45 A.M. He was born in Polk county Ark. At the age of fourteen years he made the profession of faith in Christ, united with the Missionary Baptist church. Since that time, though only a boy, he has lived consistent with the principles and doctrines of the church.

Since the age of six, Rupert has been a great sufferer, being afflicted with tuberculosis of the bone. He had had in his short life a number of operations. Notwithstanding all his suffering, he had the happy faculty of scattering sunshine in the pathway of all whom he met. Many were the complimentary words that the writer heard among the High School pupils of his sunny disposition.

He leaves a father, mother, three brothers and a sister to mourn his going home. While we are sojourners and pilgrims here he has taken up his abode in the Eternal City. He was prepared for the inevitable. Let the sorrowing hearts take comfort. Weep not as you would if he had no hope. Remember man, as you pass by, As you are now, so once was I; As I am now, so you must be. Prepare for death and follow me.—C. E. Bell.

DAWSON COUNTY CLERK RESIGNS—NEW ONE APPOINTED

The Commissioners Court just before adjourning appointed Miss Viola Thurston, the present assistant County Clerk, to succeed Dixie Kilgore, who resigned to continue his services with the First State Bank as cashier. It will be recalled that Mr. Kilgore was elected to this position the first of the year, and since he is interested in the bank in a financial way, it is natural that he should devote his entire time to the same, hence the resignation. Dixie made a good County Clerk, and it seems that he could have held it indefinitely.

Miss Thurston is a young lady who has grown up in Dawson county, and has been a most obliging clerk in the office, and will continue to attend its duties as in the past.—Lamesa Reporter.

If all the states by separate legislation established uniformity in marriage and divorce laws, any state could depart from this condition at any time and become a resort for divorce. The state of California in 1911 by its legislature, passed a resolution calling the attention of the federal government to the fact that divorce is rapidly increasing; that legitimacy of children is frequently called into question by divergent laws; that fraudulent divorces are being secured daily, and petitioned for an amendment to the Constitution to provide for a uniform federal law. Illinois and Oregon took similar action.—Ex.

CICERO SMITH LUMBER CO QUALITY FIRST ALWAYS

CHAPTER I.—John Bartley, noted criminal investigator, recently returned from Secret Service work during the war, is asked by the governor of New York to investigate a mysterious attempted robbery of the Robert Slyke home at Circle Park, near Saratoga. Peculiar circumstances of the case interest Bartley, and he accepts.

CHAPTER II.—With his friend Pelt, Bartley goes to Saratoga, where he becomes the guests of Bob Currie, an old friend. The three visit the Slyke home. Slyke apparently resents Bartley's coming, saying he is not a robber, but in return for the attempted robbery were guilty. Bartley is not. Next morning Slyke is found dead, apparently having shot himself.

CHAPTER III.—Miss Potter, the dead man's sister-in-law, the village police chief, Pelt, and the family physician, Doctor King, all agree Slyke killed himself, but Bartley insists on investigating. Bartley finds evidence that Slyke, after a card party he was given, was shot on the tower of the house, undressed, and placed in bed. During the absence from the room, someone removed the revolver from Slyke's hand.

CHAPTER V In Which I Hear More About the Curiosity. Currie was sitting on the piazza when I reached the house. He got up hurriedly and advanced to me.

"Where in the devil is John?" he asked. He apparently knew that we had called on to Slyke's, but he did not know the reason. I answered, "He is over at Slyke's; Slyke was murdered last night."

His large red face grew purple. "Murdered?" he gasped. "My God, who did it?" I told him all I knew. He listened with intense interest and growing concern. When I ended by saying that Bartley would be back to dinner, he shrugged his shoulders.

"There goes my visit with John. I have been after him for a long time to come up here, and when he does, he finds a murder right on my doorstep." He paused, then added, "I wonder who killed Slyke. I never liked him very much, but I know of no reason for his being murdered."

I went to the garage and back out his little runabout, and started for town. In front of the post office I stopped the car and got out. I knew that if the postmaster would give me the addresses of the men who had been at the card party, it would save me a lot of time. Upon examining my card, he gave me the desired information. One of the first names on the list was that of the editor of the local newspaper, and it suggested an idea to me.

Arriving at the newspaper office, I found the man I sought just going out to luncheon. When he learned that I had come to ask him some questions about Slyke, he invited me to lunch with him and his wife. We went to his club, and in the small dining room found a table set for ourselves. When I mentioned the list of names, he told me all that he knew. A few names, mostly old friends, met every week or so to play poker. They went to Slyke's usually because, as he put it, "Slyke had more booze than the rest of us." The games were friendly affairs and the stakes low.

When I asked him if Mr. Lawrence stayed after the others had gone home, he replied that he had and that he thought Slyke himself had asked him to remain, though he did not know for what reason. Suddenly it occurred to him that what he had said might place Lawrence in an awkward position.

"Jim Lawrence," he said, "could have had nothing to do with Slyke's death. Lawrence is so darned nervous himself that he would never have dared to fire a gun. It's too hot for him behind the first night."

As I wanted to interview Lawrence next, the editor accompanied me in his car to point out the building where Lawrence had his office. Here he left me, saying that if I would call at its office in about an hour, he would have the back files of the newspaper I wanted ready for me.

Lawrence's office was on the second floor of a brick building, and his door bore the sign "Law Office." At a desk reading a newspaper, was a man of about forty-five, with a very thin, nervous face. He threw down the paper and eyed me questioningly. When I told him that Slyke was dead and that I had come to learn about his interview with him, he moved easily in his chair, but when I added that we believed that Slyke had been murdered, and that as far as we knew he was the last person to see him alive, he was absolutely unnerved. I could see that, until I mentioned the word murder, he had thought that Slyke had committed suicide. For a second I wondered if, after all, he had not had something to do with the crime.

Taking a chair by his side, I said, "You were the last person, so far as we can discover, to see Mr. Slyke alive. We know that you stayed for a few moments only, and that he himself asked that you remain. As you were the last one to see him alive, we are much interested in what you can tell us of how he acted. Did he seem nervous or upset?"

My question did not make the man by my side any easier. He answered quickly, in a high-pitched voice that broke several times. "I did stay; but the other men will tell you that I was going home with them until Slyke asked me to wait a moment. I had no idea beforehand what he wanted. I wish to God I had gone with the rest. Some—d—d fool will say I killed him."

It was just what some people would say, when it had been public that the butler had not heard Slyke's voice again after Lawrence's departure. But for myself, I could not connect guilt with the thin, nervous figure beside me. "What did he want to see you about?" I asked. Lawrence flushed, then half smiled, as he answered, "He asked me if I wanted to buy some Scotch whiskey."

"Buy some whiskey?" I repeated in astonishment. "Yes, it seems foolish, doesn't it? But that's what he wanted to see me about. He said he had lots more than he needed, and that he could let me have some."

I said nothing, trying to digest this astonishing information. I had been wondering what it was that Slyke wanted to see Lawrence about, and had even made several guesses; but never in my wild imagination had I supposed that it was about whiskey. I could understand why Lawrence should want to buy it, for good whiskey is hard to get; but why Slyke, presumed to be a rich man, should want to sell five cases was beyond my comprehension.

He saw my surprise and said, "It does seem strange. I was surprised myself. I had heard that he had a lot of booze; but we were not the closest of friends, and I don't know how his liquor got only to his pals. The man who will let you have five cases of whiskey is a pretty good friend."

I smiled at his answer. He was right. People with imported liquor were not giving it away. And what was more, few men of Slyke's position were selling their private stock. "He told me," Lawrence continued, "that he had a great deal more than he could use, and that he would sell me some for one hundred dollars a case. That's pretty cheap for imported stuff."

"And then you left him?" I asked. "Yes. He told me he was not going to bed yet. Said someone was coming in about half-past one."

Here was a new piece of evidence. Slyke, then, had not gone to bed after Lawrence left, but had waited up for some other visitor. It was curious, to say the least, one week in the morning is not a usual hour for revisiting callers. "Have you any idea who it was?" "No," he said, shaking his head. "I haven't the least idea. As I was starting to go to bed, 'Stay awhile. I am expecting a call and we had a drink and I have to wait up for him.' That's all I know about it."

It was not much of a clue still, but I was better than nothing. It did establish the fact that there had been someone else with Slyke that night. That is, if he were telling the truth. The burning question in my mind was, who was that second person? Was he the one who had killed Slyke? The odds seemed to favor it. Lawrence had little farther to contribute, so I left. He said that Slyke had not been especially nervous, nor had he acted like a man afraid of anything.

I rose to go, but paused at a new thought. "Mr. Lawrence, did Slyke give you a drink?" He had accompanied me to the door, and passed, one hand on the knob. "Yes, he did, up in the room over his sleeping porch. He got out a bottle and two glasses and we had a drink. You did not see three glasses, did you?" "No," he answered, surprised at my question. "No, only two."

Thanking him, I said good-by and left. When I returned to the newspaper office, I found the files of the past year awaiting me. The story that Rogers told us in Bartley's library, and the account of the crime in the paper were substantially the same. There were, however, one or two slight differences that seemed to me important. I had understood Rogers to say that the step-daughter, Ruth, had positively identified the men now in prison; but nowhere in the newspaper was it stated that she had done the case. What she had actually said was, "I think one of them is the man I saw in the room." There had been no positive identification of the man by her, or by anyone else, for that matter. Slyke himself had testified that he did not know whether they were the men or not.

Three things had convicted them. First, the piece of paper found in the room where the burglary had taken place, and which fitted into a torn corner of a newspaper discovered in the coat of one of the men; second, the piece of cloth said to have been found on a rose bush beneath the window of the room entered, and which fitted the torn place in a pair of trousers belonging to one of the men;—there was some doubt as to whether the trousers had been torn at the time the man was arrested;—and last of all, the footprints under the window. Thus their conviction rested on a piece of torn newspaper and a hole in a man's trousers—rather feeble evidence, it seemed to me. Moreover, the police had not discovered any of it until some days after the crime. The more I thought of it, the more I agreed with Bartley that the case was remarkably like that old burglary case in England.

Leaving the newspaper office, I called on some of the other men who had been at the card party. They all agreed that it was Slyke who had suggested Lawrence's staying, and laughed at the idea that he knew any thing about his death. One of them told me that, several weeks before, he had bought three cases of whiskey from Slyke. I could not understand why a man of Slyke's position should wish to sell wine to his friends; but this man also had given the excuse that he had more than he needed for his own use.

As I passed the court house on my way home, I noticed the words "District Attorney's Office" on a window, and occurred to me that story away somewhere in there would be the exhibits in the burglary case. I entered and asked to see the torn piece of paper and the bit of cloth. The only person in the room was a boy of eighteen, who went into a back room and returned with a box under his arm. Opening it, he shook out on the desk before me a newspaper, saying, "This is the paper they found in the man's pocket. You can see the torn edge."

It was a copy of the Boston Evening Times. I glanced at the heading of the paper. It was a copy of the Boston Evening Times, and the date was that of the day before the burglary. The piece of cloth was next shown me. After examining it I thanked the boy, and returned to the car.

I felt that I had accomplished very little by my afternoon's work. The only new evidence was Lawrence's statement that Slyke had been expecting some one after he left. I wished that he had accepted Slyke's invitation to remain until this other person came. With the exception of this and Slyke's having offered to sell whiskey to two different men, a fact that could have no bearing on the murder, I had found out nothing.

I found Bartley talking with Mrs. Currie, who had returned during the afternoon. I was introduced and we went in to dinner at once. When the dessert was over and we were drinking our wine and smoking comfortably, Bartley leaned back in his chair with such a deep sigh of contentment that Currie laughed. "Better than murders, eh, John?" Bartley joined in the laugh. "Anything is."

"I have often wondered," Mrs. Currie said thoughtfully, "what causes people to commit murder. They always get found out."

"Not always, Laura," answered Bartley. "I know it's the opinion of most people that a person who commits murder is discovered in the long run, but that is not true. I should say that about 80 per cent of the murders are never solved. You ask why people kill. As a rule, it is done in rage or in a sudden passion of some kind. Such crimes are easy to solve. It is the small percentage that are planned that are difficult. You see we first look for the motive of a crime and if we can find that we can usually solve it."

Currie, who had been listening carefully, broke in with, "I presume you will solve this Slyke affair quickly."

Bartley was silent, watching the smoke of his cigar curl toward the ceiling. His face was expressionless when he replied: "Oh, I can't tell. Bob, I have not found anything of importance yet."

I glanced at him in surprise. It seemed impossible that he could have spent a whole day at Slyke's and not have discovered something of value. Mrs. Currie turned to her husband. "Bob, what are you men going to do this evening? You know this is the corner. I glanced at the heading of the paper. It was a copy of the Boston Evening Times, and the date was that of the day before the burglary. The piece of cloth was next shown me. After examining it I thanked the boy, and returned to the car.

I felt that I had accomplished very little by my afternoon's work. The only new evidence was Lawrence's statement that Slyke had been expecting some one after he left. I wished that he had accepted Slyke's invitation to remain until this other person came. With the exception of this and Slyke's having offered to sell whiskey to two different men, a fact that could have no bearing on the murder, I had found out nothing.

I found Bartley talking with Mrs. Currie, who had returned during the afternoon. I was introduced and we went in to dinner at once. When the dessert was over and we were drinking our wine and smoking comfortably, Bartley leaned back in his chair with such a deep sigh of contentment that Currie laughed. "Better than murders, eh, John?" Bartley joined in the laugh. "Anything is."

"I have often wondered," Mrs. Currie said thoughtfully, "what causes people to commit murder. They always get found out."

"Not always, Laura," answered Bartley. "I know it's the opinion of most people that a person who commits murder is discovered in the long run, but that is not true. QUALITY QUALITY QUALITY

Never before has the word "QUALITY" meant so much to the trading public as it does today. In fact 'Quantity' use to be the drawing card, but in this "Glorious Progressive Age" and the people are beginning to realize that the business house, which has added "QUALITY" to their merchandise, without deducting from the quantity, is the only safe and sane place to trade.

Lewis Brothers & Company have enjoyed a tremendously large business ever since it was established, all because we have had for our watch word "QUALITY and SERVICE." And by staying we aim to make 1923 the biggest and best ever.

Ford

Four Reasons Why You Should Buy Your Ford Car This Month

I.

The unprecedented demand for Ford Cars through the winter months has taken the entire output of the Ford plants working at capacity, indicating that the demand this Spring will be far in excess of the number of Ford Cars that can possibly be built.

II.

January was the tenth consecutive month in which retail deliveries exceeded 100,000 Ford Cars and Trucks. Requirements for February, the month when preparations are already under way for Spring business, called for 148,407 Cars and Trucks, more than 24,000 in excess of the number we can possibly produce.

III.

Ford dealers in many parts of the country are already finding it necessary to specify future delivery dates on Ford Products because there are no reserve stocks to draw from.

IV.

Your order placed now will protect you against delay or disappointment later on. It is the only way you can be assured of reasonably prompt delivery.

We consider it important to give you these facts, so that if you are planning to purchase a Ford Car, Truck or Fordson Tractor for use this Spring or Summer you can list your order at once and take advantage of our dealer's first opportunity to make delivery.

Out of the Darkness

when Miss Potter told us it was she who had closed them, I knew that I had not been mistaken. Whoever killed Slyke knew what he was doing. There was only one chance in a thousand that he would not get it across. "It was well planned," I suggested. "It was not planned at all. It was a sudden impulse, a quarrel. I don't believe that, when the murderer went into that lower room to see Slyke, he had the least idea of killing him."

"But think of the pains he took. It must have been planned." "No," he replied, "the planning was done afterward." "After he was killed?" "Yes. Look at the facts. Pelt Slyke was killed on the balcony of a tower, fifty feet above the ground. A man who planned a murder would not pick out such a place. It was the last place in the house he would have chosen. Just suppose that some one had heard the shot and investigated. The murderer would have been trapped with the dead body of his victim. To escape he had to go down two flights of stairs and through the big room. Let us say that Slyke invited the man to go upon the balcony—for what, we cannot say—and then they quarreled and the person killed him on the impulse of the moment. The next thing to do was to get rid of the body. Finding the coach clear, he took it into the next room and undressed it, and carried it down to the bedroom and placed it in bed. He knew how a body should look after suicide and that a gun could be placed in its hand."

"He seemed to be pretty sure no one would disturb him at all," I ventured. Bartley nodded. "Yes, there is no doubt of that. That brings up another astonishing fact. Down in the big room was a young dog that did not like strangers. The murderer, in order to get out of the house, had to go through that room, yet the dog did not bark."

"Then it was someone in the house?" I interrupted. "The coolness with which the murderer took plenty of time in undressing the body and the fact that he did not seem to be afraid of being found out makes it seem probable. Why didn't the dog bark? Because he knew whoever it was. That makes it seem as if it were someone in the house, or at least as if it were someone that knew both the house and the dog well."

"Of course, Pelt, until we discover the motive we cannot get very far. At present there seems to be none. There is nothing missing and no apparent reason for Slyke's murder. It seems an absurd sort of a crime. That's why I think it was done on impulse, not premeditated." He thought a moment, then added, "I did think I knew the kind of a person that might have committed a crime like this. But—"

"But what?" I asked eagerly. He opened the door with a little smile on his lips, and it was not until we were half way down stairs that he completed his sentence, "But—I don't know."

TEXAS PRESS FAVORS FUND FOR BLIND STUDENTS

Austin, Texas.—Texas newspapermen in convention here Friday signified their willingness to co-operate in a movement launched by the alumni of the Texas School for the Blind, to raise a fund of $100,000 through the churches and schools of the state for the purpose of erecting a loan fund for worthy blind students of Texas in order to further their education similar to loan funds now financing other students through college.

The proposition of carrying on a campaign of this purpose was explained to the members of the Texas Association by W. S. Stepler, who is himself blind, of Dallas, Texas, field director of the campaign, and stated that the manner of conducting the campaign was to ask the churches of Texas each to contribute one Sunday's collection to the fund and also to ask the school children of the state to each contribute ten cents to the fund. The Citizens State Bank of Palmer, Texas, has been designated as treasurer of the fund.

The idea of the campaign to assist the blind students was approved in talks by Jess Chambliss of the Waxahatchie Light and Henry Edwards of the Troupe Banner, President S. D. Chestnut of the Kennedy Advocate assured Mr. Stepler that newspapers would co-operate in the movement if it is placed on a uniform working basis in each community.

LUBBOCK-SLATON FORCES UNITE FOR TECH LOCATION

Slaton, Texas.—The forty-five counties of the Plains and Panhandle or "those above the caprock," are clamoring for the location of the West Texas Tech College at some point within their border. It can be said that every little hamlet has a location of its own. Post, Wilson, Ralls, Lubbock County, Plainview, Muleshoe and Amarillo are active with organizations which have for their purpose the locating of this college.

Lubbock and Slaton, the Killkenney cats of Lubbock county, are for the first time since their existence fighting shoulder to shoulder for a Lubbock county location, midway between the two cities on the Santa Fe Railroad and the R. Q. Mills and Gulf and Panhandle highways. Water unlimited and pure, soil of productive abundance and unsurpassed climate, are contentions of the South Plains as to the advisability of location. No effort will be spared to lay the claims of this district before the locating committee.

A BAD MAN FROM BAD LAND

The story is going the rounds that a man riding a lion, with two wild cats perched on each side, and using a rattle snake for a quirt, arrived in town the other day, rode up in front of a drug store, quailed his rattle-snake quirt around the horn of his saddle, dismounted and walked into the drug store, and called for a soft drink. Upon being asked what kind of a soft drink he preferred, he replied that he preferred carbohc acid with an ounce or two of strychnine. Upon inquiry it was found that he came from Mer Rouge, La.—Ralls Banner.

County Court was in session two days this week, two cases being tried. A local man was fined slightly and paid cost for selling raffle chances here Christmas.
