

When Great Tecumseh Fell

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

next few years Tecumseh remained there, peacefully occupied in hunting. More farseeing than most Indians of his time, Tecumseh early in life realized that the red man was doomed to go down before the greater numbers of the whites unless they were stopped. So he undertook the formation of a great confederacy of all the Western and Southern tribes for the purpose of making the Ohio river the permanent boundary between the two races.

Tecumseh's dream of an Indian confederacy was not a new one. King Philip, the Waponaug, Pontiac, the Ottawa, and Little Turtle, the Miami, had tried the same scheme and all had failed. So perhaps Tecumseh, the Shawnee, was doomed to failure from the start, but the chances are that his attempt to hold back the tide of white settlement would, have come nearer realization than any of these others had it not been for his brother, Tenskwatawa, the Prophet. The Prophet, a vain, boastful charlatan, had little of the greatness of Tecumseh in his make-up but he was a clever demagogue and through his self-asserted powers as a prophet exerted considerable influence over the superstitious savages. It was an influence which Tecumseh, although he must have realized that his brother was a faker, was glad to use in his grand scheme for uniting the tribes. The only thing which he could not foresee was that the character of his brother might make him a liability as well as an asset to his cause.

And this was exactly what happened. While Tecumseh was absent among the Southern tribes organizing them, the Prophet precipitated the battle of Tippecanoe, November 7, 1811, and his forces were disastrously defeated by General Harrison. After that historic engagement the influence of the Prophet was gone forever. More than that, it dampened the ardor of most of the tribes for the cause in which they had enlisted and Tecumseh saw his elaborate plans crash to earth. When the war of 1812 broke out, Tecumseh joined the English army in Canada. Nearly all of the war chiefs followed his lead and the Shawnee found himself the nominal head of more than 700 warriors. The value of these allies and especially when directed by the genius of Tecumseh was immediately recognized by General Brock, commander of the British forces, and the friendship of the two men, based upon mutual respect and admiration, continued until the death of General Brock at the battle of Queenstown.

Proctor, Brock's successor, was a very different sort from Brock and lacked all of the qualities which had won the high regard of the Indian leader for the former British commander. Despite the aid of Tecumseh and the 2,000 warriors of the allied tribes under his command, Proctor proved himself such a bungler, if not actually a coward, that the Indian leader foresaw the eventual triumph of the Americans. Tecumseh covered Proctor's retreat after Perry's decisive victory on Lake Erie until disgusted once more for their freedom. Los Angeles was especially hard hit, for while the marriages were dropping off about a thousand over 1927, the divorces jumped more than 300.

High Divorce Rate

The chances for a life-long marriage in California seem, according to the latest statistics, to be about two out of three marriages. At any rate, during 1928 48,945 couples stepped boldly forth to proclaim to the world that they were true lovers who "never more should part," and during that same year 14,458 told the courts, through their attorneys, that it wouldn't do and that they returned

SURPLUS CROP PRODUCTIONS

By W. J. SPILLMAN, Agricultural Economist.

THERE appears to be no possibility of preventing surplus production of cotton, corn, wheat or hay, since in the case of each of these four major crops there exists a considerable surplus acreage. The fact that we produce more of a product than is consumed in this country does not necessarily mean that we have a surplus of it. In the case of cotton and wheat, we produce large amounts for export and the export price controls the price of the home product, but where this price is remunerative to the grower it can hardly be said that we have a surplus of the product.

Since the panic years of 1920-21 the production of dairy and poultry products in this country has been adjusted to our home requirements with an amazing degree of accuracy. At no time has our production of these products exceeded our requirements more than 1 or 2 per cent nor has it fallen below our requirements by more than this percentage.

As to whether or not this remarkable state of affairs will continue I think we can find the answer if we can find the cause of the delicate adjustment that exists between production and consumptive needs.

I am of the opinion that the cause is to be sought in the following facts: That section of the United States known as the corn belt has more alternatives than any other. Corn belt farmers can turn their attention to dairying, the poultry business, the raising of beef cattle, the fattening of steers, the production of pork products, the production of mutton and wool, the growing for sale of corn, wheat, oats or hay. It is because of the fact that the corn belt produces such a large percentage of dairy and poultry products that so far as dairy and poultry products are concerned, production is automatically balanced against market requirements.

FIGHTING WITHOUT BLOWS

By GLENN FRANK, President University of Wisconsin.

Bishop Francis J. McConnell was standing on a street corner in China watching a scene that he did not at first recognize as a dramatization of one of the most important principles of human relationships.

He saw two Chinamen standing face to face, with their noses not more than five inches apart, shouting at each other. Obviously a difference of interest or opinion was at stake. Each contestant had at his back a group of supporters.

Bishop McConnell watched the affair for ten minutes and then, turning to a colleague who had lived in China for many years, he said:

"I've watched these men for ten minutes. Apparently they are braced for a fight, but neither has struck a blow, and neither seems nearer to striking a blow now than he was ten minutes ago."

"Oh," said his colleague, "you don't understand the Chinese theory of a fight. The man who strikes the first blow in a Chinese fight indicates thereby to the onlookers that he has run out of ideas."

I venture the dogmatic and sweeping statement that there has not been a war during the last 500 years that has not been due to the fact that statesmen stopped using ideas and began using blows before full use had been made of available ideas.

I commend to statesmen, to men in business enterprises, to men in churches, to men in universities, the Chinese theory that the man who strikes the first blow indicates thereby that he has run out of ideas.

NEED FOR PRESBYTERIAN UNION

By DR. WILLIAM CHALMERS COVERT, Philadelphia.

I advocate immediate and unconditional reunion of all branches of the Presbyterian church. The differences that arose out of the sorrows and griefs of the battlefields of '61 to '65 have long ago found their solution in the hearts of those comrades of the Blue and Gray. If those old fighters, now on their final march, have learned to walk together in the love of a common flag, so may Presbyterians, north and south, who are their sons and share all their pride and their loyalties, walk together under the bonnie blue flag of Presbyterianism. What they can do for their country, we can do for our Christ.

Doctrinal differences which heretofore have separated the various branches of the Presbyterian church are negligible and minor differences. Every argument for reuniting the separated units of our great family has taken on new urgency today. Every objection that has heretofore arisen to postpone and prevent this natural and inevitable oneness, has less weight with the thoughtful and devoted leaders in the church than at any time in a generation.

As to racial groupings in the church, conditions that once justified or made congenial the separate groupings of Presbyterians in the pioneer days have gone by because of the dilution of the old racial stocks and the universality and supremacy of the real American breed of Presbyterianism.

JEWISH RACE FACES EXTINCTION

By DR. ARTHUR RUPPIN, Zionist Statistician.

Conversion to other faiths, intermarriage, a decreasing birth rate and an unchanged mortality rate are disintegrating forces which menace the continued existence of the Jews as a people. Although the rights of Jews as equal citizens has been recognized in a majority of countries and although the last three decades witnessed an unprecedented growth of the Jewish population groups throughout the world, they are in danger of extinction. In the last three decades the number of Jews throughout the world grew from 10,500,000 to 16,000,000, as against 4,500,000 in times of antiquity.

America, which had a Jewish population of 1,000,000 in 1900, had a Jewish population of about 4,500,000 in 1928. The increase was due to immigration from eastern European countries. A process of disintegration of Jewish culture and Jewish religion, particularly in Russia and other east European countries, is under way. Palestine constitutes the only exception. In Palestine the Jewish birth rate exceeds the death rate, and although that country contains at present only 1 per cent of the Jewish population throughout the world, it has shown itself capable of revivifying the Jewish religion and the Hebrew language. Zionism, though it does not destroy anti-Semitism, is bound to deal it a severe blow. The entire world will experience a beneficial influence from Zionism when Palestine becomes an important bulwark.

Idle Want to See Races

That they should be granted permission to attend all race meetings without charge was the demand made recently by the unemployed of Hamilton, Scotland. A delegation was sent by idle workers to the Hamilton city council, asking it to compel owners of the race tracks to give a "free gate" to all unable to buy admission tickets. They also complained of living conditions of the poor, saying some people lived in dugouts where daylight bugs dropped on breakfast tables and destroyed part of the food.

WHERE NOTHING EVER HAPPENS

(© by D. J. Walsh)

MILLY REDMOND felt that the time had come when she could invite Dorothy Keane to visit her. She had been putting it off until they could afford the new living room suite and a rug for the little guest room. For Dorothy was so critical of the way folks lived. She had always been used to everything nice. The rent of the Keane's apartment for a single year equaled half the entire price of the simple home Tom and Milly had bought. It was still a question, of course, whether it was cheaper to rent your home or buy it. But for the Redmonds in Pineville there was no alternative. You could live in a few rooms over Dave's barber shop or some such place or you could buy or build your own dwelling.

Dorothy eagerly accepted Milly's invitation. It was already becoming very hot in the city and she longed for a breath of country air. Besides, her husband was away on a week's business trip and that left her all alone. Dorothy and Jack had no children. Neither did they have a maid, a dog, a parrot or a Persian cat. Therefore, being alone meant for Dorothy solitude in its fullest sense.

Milly went to the station to meet Dorothy, driving the little car herself, with six-year-old Junior tucked in beside her. Junior shared his mother's excitement for the arriving guest. He kissed Dorothy prettily and she told him that he had grown a lot in the year since she last saw him.

Milly's dinner was delicious. Afterward she and Dorothy washed the dishes while Tom put Junior to bed. Fragrant air came in at the open window over the blue enameled tree. Over on the hill a cowbell tinkled musically. A boy whistled "Home, Sweet Home," as he went through the lane. A dog barked.

"How peaceful!" murmured Dorothy. "But—" and she gave a little shiver. "The awful stagnation of it all!" "Stagnation?" inquired Milly. "Yes. For you and Tom. With your youth, wit, ambition you ought to be in the thick of things. Where there are things going on."

"There's Tom's work as chemist at the big creamery," said Milly thoughtfully, scouring out a saucepan. "He's pretty busy. And I find enough to do."

"Nevertheless, it's stagnation for you both," said Dorothy. "One day like the other, peaceful, serene. Cowbells tinkling, birds singing, breezes blowing. All very lovely and soothing. But, oh, my dear, that isn't life! Nothing ever happens in a place like this."

Milly grinned. "Maybe things will wake up a bit tomorrow. We shan't let you get too dull," she promised, thinking of the party she intended to arrange the next evening.

Next morning Dorothy, assisting in the house work by dusting the living room, heard first a cry, then a slam. She ran to the cellar door. And there at the foot of the steep, narrow stairs was Milly lying with the contents of the coal bucket scattered about her.

It was only a twisted ankle and a bruise or two but it sent Milly to bed for the rest of that day. At the moment when she had planned to summon her guests by telephone she lay flat on her back trying to give Dorothy necessary bits of counsel—not to bother with Tom's lunch, he'd pick up a sandwich and cup of coffee downtown; just to give Junior a bowl of bread and milk. Mrs. Fry would come in and help with the dinner. The ice man always came right in without knocking; he'd learned where the ice box was and how much ice it took to fill it.

"Just leave everything to me," said Dorothy, gaily. "Remember I am two years older than you and have had more experience. I'm awfully glad to be truly useful, dear. You know, I'm always terribly active at home." Giving Milly one of the new books she had brought, she took another and settled down to write some of the time away before lunch.

Clang! Clang! It was the fire bell, augmented by the creamery siren. Toot! Toot! Clang! Clang! Folks running by. Boys on bicycles, shouting. Milly rose up in bed.

"Dorothy! That's the creamery district. I can't move. Go and see if the creamery's afire."

Dorothy dashed forth. She asked a boy, a man, two girls where the fire was. They paid no heed, merely ran on. She followed. When she reached the creamery she found a crowd, a fire engine, smoke, noise. The creamery was all right, but the chimney of a house next door was blazing. Tired, hot, disgusted, she returned home to reassure Milly.

The telephone bell was ringing. It was Mrs. Fry. She couldn't come that day because her man had a stitch in his side and she was poulticing him with wormwood and vinegar. Somebody at the back door. Mrs. Coons asking to borrow an egg. She had to hear all about Milly and stayed ten minutes. Front door bell. A man selling brushes. Telephone again. Somebody wanted Milly's recipe for nut bread. The ice man. Dorothy had hooked the screen door and he couldn't get in. Front door again. Mrs. Robbins asking if Milly would bake a cake for the firemen's social. Junior rushing, hungry, noisy, with a stray yellow puppy in his arms. Could he keep the pup till somebody claimed him? Dorothy thought nobody would claim such a disreputable canine specimen. Milly merely laughed. Last time he had brought home two cats, a garter snake and a lame hen.

Noon passed. Junior returned to school. The puppy, warmed and fed, ceased whining. Dorothy washed the dishes and sat down to plan the menu for dinner. She'd have to do some marketing. Putting on her hat and coat she took Milly's green basket and went downtown. But marketing in Pineville was quite another thing from marketing in a big city. Dorothy couldn't find what she wanted, the prices didn't suit her and the salesman thought her impudent when she demanded green peas and cantaloupe.

She was hurrying home, not very well pleased with her purchases, when a white-haired woman with big black eyes darted out of a house she was passing. Grabbing Dorothy by the arm the woman shouted, "Come with me!" With a grip of steel she dragged Dorothy into the house, slammed the door upon her and fled.

Dorothy found herself in a large, dim room. Before her, in an old-fashioned armchair, sat an aged man with a large head and red face. He was making queer noises in his throat. Suddenly he lurched forward, clawing at Dorothy. She screamed, tried to get the door open. Was it locked? No, merely stuck. She wrenched it open and tore out of the house into the street and to safety.

She had dropped her market basket when the aged man lurched toward her. Her heart was bursting when she reached home—to find drawn up before the door a blue sedan from which four smartly dressed women were alighting. Friends of Milly's driving through the town and stopping to make a call.

It was more than an hour later before she could get Milly's ear and tell her what had happened.

"Oh, that was old Mr. Tinker," Milly said carelessly. "He was having a fit. The woman was Mrs. Jones, his housekeeper. She merely wanted you to stay with him while she went after the doctor. They have no telephone. Send Junior after the basket when he gets home from school."

Somebody at the back door again. A simple-faced young woman in a dirty apron leading a grimy little boy by the hand.

"This is Georgie Ross," she said, pleasantly. "Mrs. Ross is having another baby. She's got five under school age. She hasn't got much room and the neighbors are looking after the kiddies—"

Dorothy accepted the child. He had to be bathed. Milly told her to dress him in some of Junior's outgrown garments. Dorothy, who knew nothing about children, had a bad time. So did Georgie, who resented her ministrations. But at last he curled up beside the puppy and there was peace.

It was eight o'clock before Dorothy, exhausted, flung herself upon theavenport to rest.

"Do you often have such days as this?" she called, through the open door into Milly's bedroom.

"Why, it was lots worse than this the day they thought Bill Kipp was kidnapped," replied Milly. "Or the day Clemmy Peters ran away with her father's hired man. Or the day they got ready to take Mrs. Hess to the poorhouse and it was found that she had twenty-seven lard pails full of money in the attic. Or the day—"

"Oh, hush!" groaned Dorothy.

It was a good thing she didn't see Milly grin.

Make Observations of Will-o'-the-Wisp Cases

Two close-up observations of the will-o'-the-wisp, those weird and elusive flames that appear over marshy ground, have been put on record by German observers.

H. H. Sven, a German scientist, observed one night in November, 1927, near an iron mine in Bohemia upon a swampy tract of land, four small bluish phosphorescent flames. They were of the height of a candle flame and a diameter of about an inch and were constantly hopping up and down. Near them appeared a flame of about three feet in height of a yellowish green color and diameter of about a foot. Their light was sufficient to read the face of a watch and to make notes, but the flames had no heat when touched. After the phenomenon had lasted 15 minutes they went out.

In the vicinity are several springs with radio active water. Upon returning to the place in the daytime Mr. Sven could find no trace of the source of the flames. He learned, however, that while will-o'-the-wisps appear to be independent of air temperature they are dependent upon air pressure; the higher the pressure the less the light.

W. Schultze, during the war an officer in the German army, described the following: In September, 1914, his battalion was withdrawn from the front lines and had to recross the River Muerthe. During the afternoon artillery had also crossed. The route led through dense woods and had become almost impassable because of heavy rains. Schultze saw on both sides of the route, where a corduroy road had been attempted, pale greenish and yellowish thin flames shooting up and down from about 12 to 18 inches high. More accurate observations could not be made, but the flames were doubtless produced by the great pressure caused by the passage of artillery, combined with heat and rain. Gases apparently streamed from the moist earth and caused the flames.

A "20-30" club is a club of young men between the ages of twenty and thirty. The first club was started in Sacramento, Calif., in 1922. Since then 37 clubs have been admitted to membership. The total enrollment is about 2,500. These clubs resemble Rotary, Kiwanis, etc., in their desire to be of service to their communities.

FAMILY DOCTOR MADE MILLIONS OF FRIENDS

Fifteen years after his graduation, Dr. Caldwell became famous for a single prescription, which now, after forty years, is still making friends.

Today Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the world's most popular laxative. Millions of people never think of using anything else when they're constipated, headache, bilious, feverish or weak; when breath is bad, tongue coated, or they're suffering from nausea, gas, or lack of appetite or energy.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made today according to the original formula, from herbs and other pure ingredients. It is pleasant-tasting; thorough in the most obstinate cases; gently effective for women and children. Above all, it represents a doctor's choice of what is safe for the bowels.

Drop in Eggs

A crate of fresh eggs dropped by parachute from a plane over the Los Angeles airport landed in safety and without the cracking of a shell. It was a 2,900 foot tumble, but it was made with the gentle grace of a butterfly lighting on a rose or a bullfrog sliding into a sewer. Getting our breakfast out of the heavens is a reminder of the days when the Israelites snared their manna in the same miraculous fashion.

COGITATIONS and APHORISMS of JODOK

The paramount subjects for discussion these days seem to be religion, morality and education, and well, after all, there does not seem to be much else that needs much discussion.

I hope my readers will not feel that I am overstressing the topic of religion, but when one hears it at almost every turn he makes it naturally gets into his system and there are so many brands of it that it really becomes interesting to think of it.

I do not know whether this condition is general or not, but where I am located one hears it on the streets, in the office, in the places of business, and, I am told that the churches some times take time off from "cussing" and discussing their various creeds to talk a little religion.

Now, I do not mean to create the idea that I am opposed to this discussion of religion, for I am not, I enjoy it and think it worthwhile and I believe that the more a subject is discussed, the more thought will be given to it.

It is usually true that when the great majority of people devote a great deal of thought to a subject they finally come to understand just what it is, and this may at times come to be true of religion.

As to morals, and education, without morals life would within a generation become unbearable to its bearers and some real education is necessary to develop the highest morals.

It is said that even with our present high standard of education, the moral standard is so low that many parents do not know how to raise their children, and there are also many children who do not know how to raise parents. It must have been the preacher who said this.

Some people say the serpent is the symbol of wisdom. Perhaps that is true. At any rate he represents enough wisdom for me to give him plenty of room when I happen on him.

I am not student enough to know that tale they tell on him back there in the Garden of Eden is really true or not (some say that is just a symbol), but anyway I just cannot feel friendly toward him and just will not shake hands with him.

I do not even like to honor him with the name serpent. I like to call him that hideous name, which I think he deserves—"snake."

Moses told the people to look at the snake he made so they would get salvation from the bites of the other snakes. It was present salvation they needed, not future salvation.

That is just the kind of salvation I like—not future salvation. If I get enough for the present I will have enough for the future also. I am not much for dealing in futures, as they say, I am willing to admit, however, that I may have made a mistake—I might have been better off if I had.

There are some mighty fine crops in this region just now, and I got out with a kodak and film the other day and took several exposures from these crops.

Now if these exposures have made a good impression of the film I will have some good pictures when they are developed and printed.

This, however, depends on the film. If it was capable of receiving an impression then all will be well, but some films are so hard they will not receive an impression.

I heard the preacher say just the other day that some people's minds remind him of those hard or faulty films—no matter how much they are exposed to certain truths, not the slightest impression is made. And it makes no difference how definite the truth or how important it may be, the result is the same—no impression.

Yes, I believe he is right. Some minds are just that way. Some people allow prejudice to cloud the window of their mental camera and thus prevent the light of reason to shine through and make an impression.

Now I am just wondering if after all prejudice is not worse than either ignorance or superstition. For prejudice is bad in itself and it may be backed up with a semblance of reasoning ability.

But let us get back to my picture story. If these pictures look anything near as good as the crops did from which they were taken I think I shall have some of them printed in the Star so the world at large may see some of the stuff we can grow here.

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALES EXPECTED TO BE HIGH

Over 500 miles of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals are being distributed throughout Texas by the Texas Public Health Association in preparation for their annual seal sale which starts Thanksgiving Day. Approximately 100 chairmen are being appointed.

Each seal is seven-eighths of an inch wide and one inch long and 32,000,000 have been allotted to Texas. If placed end to end they would reach from Houston, thru Austin, Dallas and Denison. The seal this year has a background of blue on which a bell ringer tugging at a bell, the double-barred cross in red and the words, Health Greetings 1929 complete the design.

For the past 15 years the Texas Public Health Association, a volunteer health organization, thru its affiliated local agencies, has sold Tuberculosis Christmas Seals and with the funds thus obtained, has carried on a state-wide campaign against tuberculosis and other preventable diseases.

The work consists of teaching health habits to school children, physical examination, lectures to all ages and races, literature, exhibits, clinics and tuberculosis surveys. Ninety-five per cent of the total amount of money raised has been used in Texas, and has been a great help to the official agencies engaged in promoting public health in the state.

PASTURAGE IMPROVES COWS' PRODUCTION

Floresville.—Dairymen in Wilson county who failed to provide sufficient planted pasturage for their cows have complained that their cows failed in milk flow in late summer. J. L. Donaho's cows were falling, too, but he turned them into a patch of peas and then milk production increased ten gallons a day.

Well Fed Hens Pay Dividends

College Station.—It pays to feed hens during the summer months, according to the records of 204 poultry demonstration flocks, reported by county and home demonstration agents to the Extension Service. Eggs were produced by some 30,000 hens in these flocks for 12 cents per dozen feed cost during June and July. The average number of eggs laid each month per hen was about 14, and the profit per hen above feed cost was a little more than 22 cents each of these months.

"The real gain will come this fall and winter, however, for the well fed hens will then be producing when eggs are high in price, where as hens poorly fed last summer will probably defer their laying until spring," E. N. Holmgren, extension poultry specialist explains.

Another point brought out in the demonstration records is the fact that the production per hen was lower in flocks of less than 100 birds and the mortality higher. The feed cost per dozen eggs was about the same but this is attributed to the fact that the laying hens in the larger flocks were charged with the feed bills of a large number of growing stock.

SENATOR TO SPEAK AT MEETING OF W. T. C. C.

Shamrock.—At a conference here late last week between Andy Bourland, president-manager of the W. T. C. C., and Grady Shipp, its assistant, and members of the local committee, final arrangements were made for the Panhandle District convention of the WTCC to be held here Thursday, October 3.

A constructive program has been arranged for the day, of which Senator C. C. Small, of Wellington, will be the principal speaker. His topic will cover the "Small Land Bill," which is of vital importance to the Panhandle. Other speakers of equal importance include Andy Bourland and Victor Grima of the T. A. T. of Fort Worth, who will talk of modern aviation.

IMPORTANT WHEAT SOWING FACTORS

Following are a few of the more important factors entering into the successful raising of a wheat crop next year, as prepared by H. M. Bainer, director of the Southwestern Wheat Improvement Association:

Seed—Good pure seed may be considered as the first insurance policy on next year's crop. The best seed obtainable is none too good.

Variety—Old standard varieties, like Turkey, should not be discarded for newer varieties unless several years trial proves them better.

Smut—Smut takes its toll in yield, quality and price. There is no excuse for it as proper seed treatment is an absolute preventive.

Rye Mixture—Rye mixed with wheat lowers the grade and price and makes an unsatisfactory combination for grain, flour or bread. This loss can be overcome by sowing rye-free seed on rye-free soil.

Weed Seed—Dockage in wheat is largely weed seed. The careful buyer of seed is sure that it does not contain any dangerous weed seed, like bindweed, asglops, thistle or Johnson grass.

Fanning Mill—The scoop shovel method of selecting seed wheat, without grading or fanning it, is responsible for a loss or one to several bushels per acre.

Seed Per Acre—A well prepared seed bed requires less seed than one poorly prepared. Early sowing requires less than late sowing and sections of limited rainfall requires less than humid sections.

Sowing Date—For best results it is advisable to spread the seeding date over two to four weeks, sowing say one-fourth of the acreage early, one-fourth late and one-half in between.

Early Preparation—There is no single factor that will increase the wheat yield more than early disking, plowing or listing. July preparation insures several bushels more wheat per acre than later work.

Rotation—Continuous cropping of wheat not only decreases the yield but increases the risks and damages by insects, plant diseases and weeds. Crop rotation is the remedy.

Lesson

SEPTEMBER 29, 1929.

Introduction.

Our review lesson on the significance of the Exile and the Restoration closes the six months' course of study on the Prophetic Teaching and Leadership of Judah. This quarter's lessons covered a period of 200 years, beginning with the captivity which started six centuries before Christ and closing with the prophecy of Malachi which took place four centuries before the Christian era.

Lesson Selections.

Study passages for the quarter have been taken from the following six books of the Bible: Ezra, Nehemiah, Psalms, Ezekiel, Daniel and Malachi.

Biography.

The most outstanding characters in the lessons: Ezekiel, Daniel, Zerubbabel, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Malachi, with Nebuchadnezzar the Babylonian monarch, and Cyrus, the Persian King.

Principal Teachings.

1. Causes of national decline; 2. whips that God uses; 3. chastened of God; 4. conditions of recovery from a fall; 5. religious reformers, represented by Zerubbabel; 6. educational reformers, represented by Ezra; 7. civic reformers, represented by Nehemiah.

Central Truths.

Because God loves his people he chastens them, and his chastisement is as severe as his love is great.

Point of Contact.

The viewpoint of the review should be that of an approach to a study of the providences of God, the unfolding of his ways and his words to men, both by precept and experience in the case of both the individual and the nation.

A Fall and Restoration.

Aside from the elective purpose and grace of God, one's recovery from a fall is possibly only when there is in his heart a residuum of piety on which a reconstruction can be based. When a bad man collapses, he stays down because he has struck his level. A good man rises because his degradation becomes sore and his afflictions point him back to God. Contrast the Jews with ancient Greeks and Romans. There was a restoration of the Jews but none of ancient Greece or Rome, because in the latter peoples there were not the elements of personal righteousness on which a revival could be brought about.

The Twelve Lessons.

Ezekiel was the first name we considered. We had three lessons related to him:

The story of Ezekiel—A Prophet Pastor.

Ezekiel Teaches Responsibility. Ezekiel's Vision of Hope—the Cure for the World's Ills.

Both Ezekiel and Daniel were carried away in captivity to Babylon and both are regarded as major prophets. We had three lessons related to Daniel.

The Story of Daniel—His Character.

AMARILLO CONTRACTOR OUT WITH FACTS

T. E. Lawson Declares Orgatone Has Proven to Be Correct Thing.

"I have used two bottle of Orgatone and it has convinced me of the fact that it is the right medicine for troubles like I had, and am more than glad to let other people know of the benefits I have derived from it." This statement was made by T. E. Lawson, a well known contractor residing at 700 N. Jackson St., Amarillo, Texas.

"For five years," Mr. Lawson continued, "I suffered from stomach trouble, constipation and bloating spells. I had a fair appetite but never could enjoy anything I could eat. I was sluggish and tired most of the time and had a shortness of breath caused from gas that would make me feel very uncomfortable. I suffered from constipation and would get all tired out and couldn't throw of this worn out feeling at all.

"I felt something had to be done and finally I resorted to Orgatone and just let me say I have found it the proper thing for me. It started my troubles on the retreat in just a few days and now I am able to eat anything and enjoy it. I have overcome that indigestion and bloating and my nerves are as strong as anybody's and my vitality is splendid. I sleep fine all night and get up in the mornings feeling rested and fit for my work. I feel stronger and have more vim and energy than I have had in years. I cheerfully recommend Orgatone to anyone needing a general all-round straightening out and building up."

Genuine Orgatone is manufactured by one of the world's largest laboratories and is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific bile treatment and is sold in Friena by the City Drug Store.—Adv.

They Are Now Living at Home

College Station.—Fama families in Southeast Texas are progressing rapidly toward the living-at-home ideal, to judge by the results of a recent home demonstration club contest in which it was revealed that 96 per cent of the 205 members in the 18 competing clubs grew gardens last year. An average of 22 varieties of vegetables were grown per garden, according to Miss Gertrude Blodgett, district agent in charge. Each family reported 38 varieties of small and tree fruits planted during the year for a total of 9604 small fruit and 1312 fruit trees.

An average of 175 quarts of fruits and vegetables was canned per family and 563 pounds of home grown meat cured. Stored vegetables were not included in the report and of these there were many.

More than half the 13,782 hens in home poultry flocks were standard bred, which is a substantial increase over last year. Each family kept an average of 67 hens. Eighty per cent of these families reported an adequate supply of milk of one quart per person per day.

In home improvement work 119 living rooms, 58 dining rooms, 56

kitchens and 75 bedrooms were improved by refinishing walls and floors and refinishing and adding furniture. A total of 263 hand made braided rugs were made by the women for their homes. Reports showed that 72 houses were screened and 38 painted, and that 123 farmsteads were beautified.

Father Copies Son's Methods

Colorado.—The method of feeding hogs in 4-H club work used by George Draper of Lone Star, Mitchell county, proved to be such a success that his father is now feeding two hogs ground threshed maize and tankage in a self feeder. They gained 44 and 57 pounds each in the first 30 days on the feed and at the end of 3 months weighed 104 and 109 pounds each. The boy's pig weighed 206 pounds at six months of age, but Mr. draper expects his pigs to beat that record a little.

Murphy: "Do your shoes hurt?" Grant: "No, but by feet do."
