

UNLESS SUBSTANTIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE FORTHCOMING SATURDAY STATE NORMAL COMMITTEE WILL PROBABLY NOT ATTEND MEETING OF LOCATING BOARD NEXT MONDAY MORNING IN FORT WORTH

CHAIRMAN METCALFE SAYS WORKERS ARE SADLY DISAPPOINTED WITH RESULTS SO FAR.

MONEYED INTERESTS LAGGING WOEFULLY

Final Efforts to Raise Money to Be Made Today, for on Monday It Will Be Too Late—Now or Never.

Unless the normal committee meets with encouragement Saturday—the kind that is backed up with substantial subscriptions—San Angelo may not be represented at the meeting of the state board to be held in Fort Worth Monday.

Following the mass meeting Friday afternoon, at which about $3000 was raised, the normal workers held a short caucus and checked up the lists. After learning the exact amount that has been pledged the committee expressed great dissatisfaction. In fact, some suggested that with the amount now on hand it would not be worth their time to go to Fort Worth. Others, however, took a brighter view of the situation, and the trip has not yet been called off. One day more will be spent on the streets, and if those who have money to give for such enterprises, and those who are to receive the greatest benefit, do not respond, then San Angelo's chances for the normal will go glimmering.

"I am well satisfied with the result of the mass meeting, said Chairman Metcalfe Friday night. Those who attended were mostly men of small means and men who live on salaries. They responded nobly to our call, and the committee feels greatly indebted to them. The working people of San Angelo have certainly done their part, as the list, which we will publish later, will show.

But men of wealth, those who are to derive the most benefit from the state normal, are the people who have fallen down on this proposition. Take the banks, for instance. The First National is the only one that has subscribed. We are to see all of them Saturday, however, and I am positive that when they are made to realize just how serious the situation is, and what this normal will mean to them and to San Angelo, they will respond.

"I know that with the present amount we have to offer as a bonus it will be useless for our committee to go to Fort Worth. We must have more money, and we want it Saturday, Monday it will be too late.

"This is our last call. It is up to the merchants and the larger interests of the city. We want this normal and the committee has worked hard to bring it. But if the people don't respond Saturday it will be all off."

Mass Meeting.
Prior to the mass meeting Friday the San Angelo band paraded Chadbourne street in a big rally, this being the sign for the merchants to close their doors and go to the Yale. Every store in the city, with about three exceptions, granted the request of the committee to dispense with business, even the saloons remaining closed during the meeting.

C. B. Metcalfe, at the head of the normal committee, called order shortly after 5 o'clock, practically every seat in the Yale being taken. In a few words he announced the purpose of the gathering and concluded with the statement that San Angelo is justly entitled to the normal and will get it if the citizens will only show their interest by making up a decent bonus.

Mrs. Geo. B. Abbott was introduced as the first speaker in behalf of the institution. She read an interesting paper, dealing with facts, and backed by actual experience. Her address is printed elsewhere.

Hon. Brown F. Lee, a member of the Thirty-first legislature, declared that he exerted every effort to induce the legislature to locate the normal in San Angelo, but that the best he could do was to secure the support of that body to have it placed somewhere west of the 98th meridian.

"The state has pursued the policy of awarding the institution to the highest bidder," continued Mr. Lee, "so we are confronted with the problem of raising the bonus. Three-fifths of the entire state is west of the 98th meridian, but despite that fact this section has only one institution that is supported by the state, that being the epileptic colony at Abilene. East of the 98th meridian there are three state normals and several other state institutions. Why should we not have some of the benefits from the taxes we pay? The twenty-fifth senatorial district pays in $24,000 per annum more than it receives for schools, and yet when we ask for a state normal, Texas holds it up to the highest bidder.

No Easy Competitors.
"You will find no easy competitors in this contest. Abilene, Sweetwater, Snyder, Amarillo and many other towns of West Texas are awake and will fight hard. But that's the true western spirit.

"When your committee goes to Fort Worth it should have with it a nice sum of money as a bonus. In fact, it must have a good bonus. It is my judgment that if we go before the state board in the proper spirit, with the right sort of bonus, we will bring the normal back with us. We are to meet a fair and impartial board. But you can't expect to win when towns offer larger sums than we.

"The most direct benefits are to be derived by the merchants, and in this connection I may say that this is the only proposition that has been up recently where the merchants have figured so prominently in the direct good to be accomplished. The legislature will be called upon from session to session to make appropriations for enlarging the normal, and as the institution grows so will the pocketbooks of the merchants.

"On account of the splendid climate in West Texas, wherever the school goes there will be a big attendance, much more, in fact, than in any other city in the state. Now, we say West Texas is a walking advertisement. Well, wouldn't it be even better to have 400 students who leave every year after school for their respective homes, to be our walking advertisements?

"This is something that should appeal to every man, woman and child in San Angelo. The members of the Thirty-first legislature are expecting San Angelo to land the state normal on account of our push and pluck. Now, let's not disappoint them."

Intellectual Opportunities.
Col. C. C. Walsh stated that San Angelo is advancing in everything else—railroads, buildings, etc.—but that it must also take steps from an intellectual standpoint. "You can't build a big city with only churches, only railroads and only factories. You must have educational institutions.

"We are not entitled to this state normal, and what's more, we will not get it unless we let the board know we are willing to work for it and are willing to go down in our pockets for it. You might as well make up your mind now that it will not be presented to you.

"We have the finest country in the world; the climate is delightful, the health splendid, and resources wonderful. I looked around a long time before I found a place to suit me. I selected San Angelo on account of its natural advantages which I have just mentioned, and its promise for greater things. I think it the coming city of the state. So we have the right location, and all we want to do is to go after the normal in the proper manner. If we must make a high step, let us make it."

Col. Walsh told of the short man who wanted to see Christ but could not on account of the immense crowd. The man went away and climbed up a tree, so that he could see. Christ noticed the man and called him down. "Now San Angelo must come down if it wants this normal."

A Jolly Plum.
"This is an occasion for action, and not for talk," stated Jesse P. Sewell. "In my estimation this normal is the juiciest plum the citizens of San Angelo have ever had the opportunity to get hold of, and by all means we should pluck it. Every man interested in the moral and spiritual uplifting of San Angelo should contribute to this bonus.

"I have too much faith in San Angelo to believe that any other town west of the 98th meridian can knock this place out of that normal. The question is not 'can we get it,' but 'do we want it, and will we get it?' I lived in Denton for two years, where there are two state schools, and I know of the many advantages to be derived from such institutions. It is almost impossible to rent a house there, and the only way to get a good house is to buy one. And in this connection I will state that it costs about twice as much to buy a house there as it does anywhere else in the state, all things considered.

"If we get that normal the students will not be housed in dormitories, but they will take rooms, and everybody in the city who cares to let out rooms will find it an easy matter to do so. These students will spend money with the druggist, the dry goods merchant, the groceryman and so on down to the washwoman.

"There is only one thing that stands in the way of that normal, and that is a bonus. Give us a decent amount and we will come home with the institution in our pockets."

Mr. Sewell read a telegram in response to one that he had sent to Hon. Alvin C. Owsley of Denton, in which Mr. Owsley said: "Denton gave up $80,000 for the two schools. It has been her very best investment."

Mr. Sewell then went on to say that the state will make an appropriation of $120,000 an upward each year for the maintenance of the state normal to be located in West Texas, and that San Angelo can not afford to let it pass by.

Metcalfe Impatient.
At this juncture Mr. Metcalfe became impatient and said that he wanted to get busy. He declared that he would rather take up a subscription in San Angelo than to do anything else. Lists were then passed around and for fifteen minutes the subscriptions rolled in, all of them, however, being in small amounts. A total of $3900 was raised.

A vote of thanks was extended the San Angelo band, the Yale theater and the owners of the tallyho.

COMING.
William Schneeman of Crockett County to Move to San Angelo.

William Schneeman, the big Crockett county ranchman, came into The Press-News office Friday and shelled out money for a year's subscription. "You have got a swell paper now," he said. "And what's more, it is a liberal minded truthful sheet, starting no extravagant stories and standing on moderate ground in politics. I will always have a good word for The Press-News."

His many friends in San Angelo will be pleased to learn that Mr. Schneeman is preparing to move to this city. He will reside on West Twobig avenue.

RUSHING.
Paint Rock Railroad Work Progressing Rapidly.

Boyd Hamilton, who has been in the city for several days, returned Friday to his engineering work on the new Paint Rock road.

"Things are moving along at a pretty rapid clip," he said. "Ties are laid a good ways out of Paint Rock and the work is progressing splendidly. The men behind the road are determined to rush it through in a short time, and so far they are doing it."

FINE.
Grass Splendid and Prospects Good on Lipan Creek.

Henry Dabney is in town from his father's ranch on Lipan creek. "Things out our way would be hard to improve upon," he said. "The grass is fine and promise of fall and winter grass is good. The cattle are in good condition and the farmers are going to have a good year."

L. S. Henderson and family are occupying the Dr. Cobb cottage in Angelo Heights, awaiting the completion of their handsome bungalow in Hyde Park. When completed this will be one of the nicest places in San Angelo.

MRS. GEORGE ABBOTT READS A SPLENDID PAPER IN ADVOCACY OF BONUS.

SAN ANGELO IS LOGICAL LOCATION

In No Other Place Will the Numerous Natural Advantages That This City Offers, Be Found—Good Points Are Reviewed.

Declaring that from actual experience she knows San Angelo is the best place in all West Texas for the location of the state normal, Mrs. George Abbott read a splendid paper at the mass meeting Friday afternoon. It was as follows:

As president of the Civic league, and as a teacher, I have been requested to speak of the great benefits to be gained from such a school as the proposed state normal.

The test of membership to our league is ability to subscribe to our avowed purpose, "to further the improvement of the city in every way." The purpose of the teacher is to further the development or improvement of the individual in every way. So our ends are one, and in brief I shall enumerate a few of the benefits that accrue, eliminating such as other organizations have emphasized, the financial, etc.

I shall confine myself particularly to the educational advantages, and shall simply say that such include all things tending toward advancement intellectually, physically, morally, spiritually.

Raises Teaching Standard.

1. The normal school will raise the teaching standard of every teacher in West Texas, and thus help every child of school age. No one but a trained teacher can understand the poverty of work of the untrained teacher. She is the most lamentable object in the profession, except the peculiar product of some colleges, sometimes, who think that anyone can teach what he knows, without knowing how. In Europe, normal students graduate from colleges first, and then attend the normal. Our approach to that is the department of education in our state universities.

When Horace Mann established the first American normal school he meant it to be like its predecessors in France, Germany and England—purely a training school for teachers. France is the native home of the normal; Germany has been, and always will be, its ideal home; even Russia has established such schools. What the great nations have adopted and found good, we should strive to gain. But I wish here to make the point that education in the United States, and especially in Texas, is yet in its infancy. In the rarest instances do we find American normals doing strictly the work of training teachers. Teachers enter normal schools without the proper foundation in subject matter itself. This deficiency must be made good, so the American normal does two kinds of work: (1) It gives instruction in the grade and high school and college branches; (2) it gives instruction in how to teach each subject, and all subjects in general. Therefore my point is this: The citizens of a town derive treble benefit from a local normal, (1) better trained teachers; (2) our older children can enter the classes for instruction; (3) our younger children can be selected to constitute the model classes which are taught before those being trained to teach, and by the best trained teachers Texas can find.

2. The state of Texas is no niggard in its public expenditures. The buildings will be substantial, commodious, handsome; the libraries, laboratories, gymnasiums and grounds will be maintained in a style befitting the dignity of the institution. No part of this expense will ever fall to San Angelo, the recipient of all the advantages.

Great Characteristic.

3. The one great characteristic of nor-

MAYOR MAGEE.
William A. Magee, Republican mayor of Pittsburg, has been active in the politics of the Smoky City for a long time. He is a brother of the late Christopher Magee, whose fame as a political worker extended beyond the boundaries of Pittsburg.

mal students is earnestness, always and everywhere, and who can figure this out in dollars and cents? It would be absurd and without precedent for a student to matriculate at a normal school to "do society," as the slang goes, and as is too often the case at many higher institutions of learning. A normal school is not necessarily a collection of poor students; but in the very nature of the case they are not rich. Who ever heard of a rich school teacher? Excepting for the local people who go for instruction proper, as I said before, the large proportion of the matriculates are earnest people, young, middle aged—old, even—who have earned and saved the money to attend school, to prepare to be professional teachers, and not makeshift, home talent teachers. They will spend hard-earned money for necessities, for substantial clothing, for plain board; they will patronize what will uplift and benefit them; they will not live off by themselves in cliques and clubs in separate buildings, for our state never furnishes boarding or rooming houses for its normals. They will identify themselves with us in our homes, our churches, our organizations, and will be "bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh" while here.

4. Wherever state schools go, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. go—organizations teaching right living, the wholesome, sane, religious development of the brotherhood of man. These students will never hurt, but will always help, our moral life.

San Angelo the Place.

5. Most states have one state normal, and one or more chartered normals under private guidance. Texas already has three state normals—San Houston at Huntsville, San Marcos and Denton, yet needs several more. Our local teachers have hundreds of miles to travel to go to any state institution of learning, not one of which, with the possible exception of San Marcos, is healthfully located. Galveston, with its state medical college and training school for nurses, is not fifty feet above sea level, and is subject to ravages from sea storms. Huntsville, with the San Houston state normal, is low, sickly, malarial; Denton is peculiarly subject to recurring epidemics, and is not in the "health belt." Bryan is in the low-lying belt, malarial and subject to storms; Austin is humid and trying, and is one immense glare of white from every pathway and street and reflected from every encircling hill. San Marcos alone remains at all pleasantly situated by nature. I speak from the experience of many years when I say that in my teaching in several states, and practically in every part of Texas, in San Angelo alone have I found an ideal location for a school. Excepting sometimes in September, I have never found it too hot for teacher or student; the pure air and elevation keep the head clear, the nerves steady, the appetite good, and sleep, so necessary to a brain-worker, comes without courting. The only drawbacks are our dust and the very strong sunlight. Paved streets, well sprinkled, and green grass and trees will remedy most of that. But locate the normal on some high bank of the river, overlooking some green fields—say at the old water station site, overlooking the Glenmore farm! The evergreen fields will be restful to the eyes, and the south breeze, sweeping through the halls, will make our normal famous throughout the state; our healthfulness will attract hundreds, even from the other normals, and I prophesy that the attendance here would far outrank that in any

GASOLINE ENGINE MANGLES HAND

BRUCE GARLAND MEETS WITH A PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

MAY LOSE HIS FINGERS

Carried to Marberry's Sanitarium—Ho With Mother, Was Visiting on Ranch of Halbert Bruce.

Bruce Garland, youngest son of Judge and Mrs. G. H. Garland, had his right hand badly injured Thursday evening.

He and his mother were out on the ranch near Eldorado to spend a month with the older son, Halbert. Bruce was running the gasoline engine, pumping water for the cattle, when a cog wheel became loose. He was trying to fix it without stopping the engine when his hand got caught. His right thumb, index finger and half of the middle finger were badly mangled.

Young Garland was carried to Eldorado, where Dr. Lewis dressed his wounds.

Mrs. Garland, Halbert, Bruce and a chauffeur left Eldorado at 2:30 a. m. Friday, arriving in San Angelo at 6:30, but they came by the ranch, and Bruce was taken immediately to Marberry's sanitarium, where he is being treated.

PAINT ROCK ROAD READY BY FALL

Will Be Completed to Concho River in Time to Move the Cotton Crop This Fall.

Paint Rock, Tex., Aug. 6.—Paint Rock is on the map all right. Messrs. Ballard, Norman and Montgomery will let the contract for their stone buildings on the 11th instant. These gentlemen propose to erect buildings that Paint Rock or any other town can justly be proud of. Applications have already been made to lease these buildings as soon as completed. These structures being on the square and fronting east will add materially to the west side of the square.

Other buildings are contemplated in the near future, among them being a two-story 50 by 90 feet to be erected by the Masonic fraternity. The old town is taking on new life and everybody expects to see things hum within the next thirty days. The railroad is being rapidly pushed forward and will be to the Concho river in time to move the fall crop of cotton.

Hardman & Bateman of Ballinger have located a lumber yard here, making three yards established during the last few weeks.

The R. A. Hall gin is progressing nicely. A prominent citizen just in from San Angelo says he heard quite a number of people speak of coming to Paint Rock.

WAITING.

To Make No More Definite Moves Till Mr. Hagelstein Returns.

"Just waiting for George Hagelstein to come back before making any more definite moves," said a member of the fair association Friday. "Mr. Hagelstein has been moving about at Seattle and we expect to hear great things on his return.

"Mr. Hagelstein is the heart and soul of the fair movement and when he is with us once more you will see developments take place in a great hurry. There is lots of work to be done, but that will begin with a will soon."

TARIFF TINKERING DONE.

Hides are now on the free list. Put us down as you like, but The Press-News thinks when the duty was removed from hides a monumental blunder was committed.

The position of The Press-News on the tariff question smacks strongly of the faith of Hancock. It may not be democratic, as New England democrats view the matter, to favor a duty on hides, but by hank as long as the western section of Texas has hides for sale we want to protect them.

Likewise The Press-News favors a duty on wool. And it wants a high duty on cattle and on all things that this section produces.

Now let the howl of this being undemocratic go forth. It matters not to The Press-News what such declarations may produce, this paper is first, last and all the time for West Texas.

A tariff theoretically is designed to raise revenue for the national government. It is not the best way, perhaps, to raise money, but it is generally agreed that it is the best way to raise revenue in a constitutional manner. Theoretically protection is bound to be merely an incident. Being an incident, The Press-News wants to have the protection incidental to a tariff covering the surpluses raised in West Texas. In other words, The Press-News is opposed to a protective tariff, but believes that inasmuch as a tariff of some kind is needed to meet the exigencies of the hour that it is a slight better to have a tariff without these incidental protections.

That's why The Press-News regrets that hides have been placed on the free list. As long a tariff had to be placed on something it ought to have been placed on hides.

The Press-News has no sympathy with the cry of free raw material. Such a cry is one that is filled with deception and is freighted with fraud. It means that in production the tillers of the soil are to compete against the world, but the manufacturer who merely spins is to have a Chinese wall built around him for his protection. This is a good thing for the manufacturer, but it is a powerfully alluring arrangement for the producers and it is not a zestful package for the consumer.

But the tariff tinkering is over. Let us be thankful for this one great big favor.

All together now for the state normal. Faith and money have been known to move mountains.

Reports from railroad centers indicate that the fall crop of homeseekers in Texas this year will be unusually large. What are you doing to get your share?

Now Waco desires President Taft to visit that city. We would advise the energetic business men of that place to go remove the "for rent" signs before the president arrives there.

Col. Bryan thinks that unless the democrats stick to the doctrine of "free raw material" tariff reform is impossible. Here's a hunch. If the democratic party sticks to Col. Bryan success is impossible.

Have you ever been through East Texas? And while going through that section of the state did you not notice that all of the fields were full of stumps? Ask a native about these stumps and he will deceive you by declaring they are left in the field to conserve the fertility of the soil. That's a blind. These stumps are left in the field so that future politicians can train themselves to be stump speakers. That's why so many orators come from East Texas.

W. T. Loudermilk of Comanche county has been elected president of the Farmers' union of Texas and Pete Radford of Parker county has been elected vice president. Populism is dead in Texas but its soul goes marching on.

Col. Robinson, editor of the Waco Times-Herald and custodian and chief crier of Jeffersonian democracy in Texas, is out in a full column argument defending elder statesmen. My, my, my, how a bunch of baldness and a wayrick full of gray hairs do blight the mental vision.

In reply to a question propounded during her son's trial to determine whether or not he is insane, Mrs. Thaw, mother of Harry, said: "No, I fancy a lawyer seldom resigns." The defense can take that single answer and show that if Thaw is crazy he isn't suffering from the hereditary kind.

If Gov. Campbell refuses to authorize a deficiency appropriation to pay for having the books of the penitentiary audited, The Press-News will start a public subscription to raise this fund. The way the governor has been fighting a complete investigation causes a strong suspicion to prevail that there is something rotten close to the surface.

Gov. Campbell has high praise for the Thirtieth legislature and sneers for the Thirty-first. The Thirtieth legislature submitted three amendments to the constitution, all of them being first rate, but with the motto "beware of Greeks bearing gifts" warning them the people turned them down. The Thirty-first legislature submitted three amendments to the people—and all three were adopted. Keep your ear to the ground. That rumbling sound is the west coming to its own.

D. J. Neill, president of the Farmers' union, is in Galveston screaming trusts and combinations between cotton seed oil mills, the railroads, the men who sell cultivators and others without number. Neill is either bug-house or he ought to be booted out of office. Such preachments are silly, insane and idiotic. The trouble is with Neill, not with the Farmers' union. No man who ever worshipped with an 18-carat devotion at the shrine of the Ocala and Omaha platforms ever re- gains a mental balance that is capable of defying hallucinations. Once upon a time Neill was a populist spellbinder and he spoke to the multitudes in a tenor voice that could be heard in nine counties at one time. If the Farmers' union succeeds in dodging the rocks that wrecked the old Grange, the Farmers' Alliance and other organizations of former years it ought to ma- roon such prophets as Neill and those of his ilk without delay. Deliver us from the man who is always seeing spooks. They ought to occasionally see nice little fairies for a change. Let the gayety of nations be unleashed and on with the dance!

A mix-up in days appears to have been made. It now seems that the board to select a feeding experimental station will meet in Fort Worth August 11 and that the same board will meet in Stamford on August 25 for the purpose selecting locations for two experimental stations. Tom Green county ought to get one of these stations by all means. This section needs more people greater than anything else, and demonstrating what this soil will grow is about the best possible manner to induce permanent immigration to West Texas.

At the Yale. The Yale featured an exceedingly good picture Friday night taken from the Bible and entitled "Saul and David." This picture is one of a kind seldom seen. It will be repeated Saturday night.

The Loighs are certainly there with their juggling and novelty act. It is amazing and awe-inspiring to see the way in which they handle Indian clubs. Each changes position with the other and deftly assumes the juggling of the clubs, which are in midair.

T. J. Clegg to E. C. Perry, $1598.68; conveys block 27, Mason-Perry company's subdivision on No. 4, Collyns ranch.

At the Crystal. Friday night the Crystal offered a very pleasing program. Besides the good pictures, the Rapiers appeared in their attractive act entitled "The Kissing Bug Detective." This team is offering an exceptionally good act as shown by the expressions from the audience. "The Woman in the Case" is charming and Jas become quite a favorite, while Mr. Rapiro is about the most comical ever seen at his line of work.

Features in this Column: Mr. John Claffin's Wife Indian Girl's Romance Smart Lass' Milk Route

Public interest in Mrs. John Claffin is pardonable at this time. She is the wife of John Claffin, one of the merchant princes of New York city. He is the representative of the old established house of J. B. Claffin, after- ward the H. B. Claffin company. Mrs. Claffin before her marriage in Monterey, Cal., in 1880 was Mrs. Elizabeth Stewart Dunn. She is the daughter of Judge James Stewart of Louisville, Ky. Her first husband was William S. Dunn, who at one time was a member of the Claffin firm. He retired on account of failing health. After his death his widow went to Europe and remained there for a short time. On her return she went to Monterey and lived there until her marriage to Mr. Claffin. The marriage was very quiet and a surprise to the acquaintances of both in New York city. At the time of her wedding a member of the Claffin firm said of her: "Mrs. Claffin is a blond. Her features are regular and clear cut. She possesses strikingly beautiful blue eyes. She is an attractive woman and of medium height." At the time of her marriage to Mr. Claffin she was thirty-one years of age.

She is especially prominent just now by reason of the fact that her husband has recently become president of the United Dry Goods company, with a capital of $51,000,000. The property acquired by the new corporation includes the H. B. Claffin company and a number of the leading retail houses of New York city. The new company was chartered by the state department of Delaware. Thomas F. Bayard, son of the late Ambassador Bayard, is one of the incorporators and resident director in Delaware. The formation of the company is the development of the project that had its first expression in the formation of the Associated Merchants' company, which was incorporated in Connecticut in 1901, with a capital of $17,000,000, to take over the interests in large wholesale and retail dry goods establishments.

Romance of an Indian baby: Nineteen years ago the battle of Wounded Knee was fought in South Dakota between the government troops and the Sioux. Among the survivors of that conflict was an Indian papoose. The soldiers took her and adopted her. She was named Zinta Lannul, Sioux for "Lost Bird." General L. W. Colby of Beatrice, Neb., sent her to his home. She was christened Margaretta Elizabeth Colby. When she grew up she was sent to a public school and afterward to a finishing school in Washington, where she lived with a sister of General Colby. The young lady became a favorite in society at the national capital. Two years ago she went to Portland, Ore., where she has since lived with her foster mother. The climax of the romance is that she recently married Albert Chaltret, a French Canadian who has Indian blood in his veins. They will live in the Hudson bay country, where Chaltret's father owns a vast tract of land.

Miss Grace Potter, eighteen years of age, a graduate of two high schools, has a milk route in New Bedford, Mass., a town with a population of nearly 100,000. She goes over the route alone every day, delivering 100 quarts of milk to more than a hundred customers. She also delivers every week between fifty and seventy-five dozens of eggs and from five to ten bushels of potatoes. Miss Potter's father, a well-to-do farmer, was taken sick last fall, and his daughter took his route temporarily. She came to like it and is now regularly employed. She is fitted for social duties, but her present work accords with her ideas of independence.

The women of Kansas who know the art of politics, and in Kansas nearly every man is a politician to some extent, decided a few years ago to get into the game so far as the constitution of the state would allow. How well they succeeded is shown in a recent bulletin issued from the office of the state superintendent of education, which shows that out of the 105 county superintendents in the state forty-two are women. Eighteen of this number were elected last November.

The Man From Brodney's

By GEORGE BARR M'UTCHEON

Copyright, 1908, by Dodd, Mead & Co.

"She is Selim's wife. I am stronger than he, so I brought her down." Then, looking upward anxiously, he shouted: "Be careful, Selim! It's easy if you take your time to it."

CHAPTER XVIII NEENAH.

SELIM'S wife, Neenah, saved my life. It was the next morning, and Chase was relating his experiences to an eager, marveling company in the breakfast room. "She has a sister whose husband was one of the leaders in the attack," Neenah told Selim, and Selim told me. That's all. Days ago Selim and I crept the rope at the top of the cliff, anticipating just such an emergency as this and intending to use it if we could reach the chateau in no other way. I figured that they would cut off all other means of getting into your grounds.

"Neenah came up from the village ahead of the attacking party, out of breath and terribly frightened. We didn't waste a second, let me tell you. Grabbing up our guns, we got out through the rear and made a dash across the stable yard. It was near midnight. The servants, all of whom were up and ready to join in the fight, attempted to head us off. We had a merry little touch of real warfare just back of the stables. It was as dark as pitch, and I don't believe we hit anybody. But it was lively scrambling for a minute or two, let me tell you."

Deppingham's big blue eyes were fairly snapping. His wife put her hand on his shoulder with an impulsive strangle to her, and Geneva saw a light blaze in her eyes. "I hope you pulled a few of 'em. Serve 'em jolly well right!"

"Selim says he stumbled over something that groaned as we were racing for the back road. I was looking out for Neenah." He glanced involuntarily from Lady Agnes to the princess, a touch of confusion suddenly assailing him. "Selim covered the retreat," he added hastily. "Instead of keeping the road we turned up the embankment and struck into the forest. Dropping down behind the bushes, we watched those devils from the town race pell-mell, howling and shooting, down the chateau road. There must have been a hundred of 'em. Five minutes later the burglar was airt. It was as bright as day, and I had no trouble in

"They will dispose of us wholesale, one by the piece." recognizing Russia in the crowd. Selim led the way, and I followed with Neenah. Hang it all, Browne, I didn't have time to save that case of cigars. I'm out nearly a hundred boxes.

"You might have saved the cigarettes if you hadn't been so occupied in saving the fair Neenah," said her ladyship, with a provoking smile.

"Alas, I thought of that also, but too late! Still, virtue was its own reward. Imagine my delight when we stopped to rest to have Neenah divide her own little store of Turkish cigarettes with me. We had a bully smoke up there in the wood."

"Selim, too?" asked Browne casually.

"Oh, not Selim was exploring," said Chase easily.

"Neenah is very beautiful," ventured Lady Agnes.

"She is exquisite," replied Chase, with the utmost sang froid. "Selim bought her last winter for a ten carat ruby and a pair of sapphires."

"That explains her overwhelming love for Selim," said the princess quietly. Chase looked into her eyes for a moment and smiled inwardly.

"We finally got to the edge of the cliff and uncoiled the rope, which we already had fastened to the trunk of a tree. I was obliged to carry Neenah for the last quarter of a mile, poor little girl. She was tied to my back, leaving my throat and chest free, and down we came. Simplest thing in the world. Presto! Here am I with my happy family at my heels."

"Well, we can't sit here and dawdle all day!" exclaimed Deppingham. "We must be moving about—arrange our batteries and all that, don't you know. We've got to stave these devils off for two or three weeks at least, and we'll have to look sharp. Browne, that's the third cup of coffee you've had. Come along! This isn't Boston."

As they left the breakfast room Chase stepped to Geneva's side and walked with her. At the foot of the stairs, where they were to part, she extended her hand, a bright smile in her eyes.

"You were and are very brave and good," she said. He withheld his hand, and she dropped hers, hurt and strangely vexed. "Don't you care for my approval, or do you?"

"You forget, princess, that my hands are still suffering from the bravery you would laud," he said, holding them resolutely behind his back.

"Oh, I remember!" she cried in quick comprehension. "They were cut and bruised by the rope. How thoughtless of me! What are you doing for them? Come, Mr. Chase, may I not dress them for you? I am capable—I am not afraid of wounds. We have had many of them in our family, and fatal ones, too." She was eager now and earnest.

He shook his head with a smile on his lips. "I thank you. They are better, much better, and they have been quite properly bandaged already."

"Neenah?"

"Yes," he replied gently. She seemed to search his mind with a quick, intense look into his eyes. Then she smiled and said, "I'll promise not to bruise the wounds if you'll only be so good as to shake hands with me."

He took her slender hand in his broad, white swathed palm and pressed it fervently regardless of the pain which would have caused him to cringe if engaged in any other pursuit.

There was no longer any doubt as to the intentions of the disappointed islanders. Von Blitz and Rasnia had convinced them that their cause was seriously jeopardized. They were made to see the necessity for permanently removing the white pretenders from their path.

Deppingham, on account of his one time position in the British army, was chosen chief officer of the beleaguered "citadel." A strict espionage was set upon the native servants despite Ballinger's assurances of loyalty. Lookouts were posted in the towers, and a ceaseless watch was to be kept day and night. Chase on his first visit to the west tower discovered a long muffled searchlight of powerful dimensions. Fortunately for the besieged, the electric light plant was located in the chateau grounds and could not be tampered with from the outside.

Britt was put in charge of the night patrol, Saunders the day. Selim under orders had severed the long rope with a single rifle shot. No one could hope to reach the chateau by way of the cliff.

Extra precautions were taken to guard the women from attacks from the inside. The window bars were locked securely, and heavy bolts were placed on the doors leading to the lower regions. It was now only too apparent that Skaggs and Wyckholme had wrought well in anticipation of a rebellion by the native shareholders. Each window had its adjustable grates; every outer door was protected by heavy iron gates.

By nightfall Deppingham's forces were in full possession of every advantage that their position afforded.

Chase came from his room, still stiff and sore, but with fresh, white bandages on his blistered hands. He asked and received permission to light a cigarette and then dropped wearily into a seat near the princess, who sat upon the stone railing. Her trim, graceful figure was outlined against the darkness. A delicate, sensuous fragrance exhaled from her person, filling him with an indescribable delight and languor; the spell of her beauty was upon him, and he felt the leap of his blood. "If I were you," he said at last, reluctant to despoil the picture, "I wouldn't sit up there. It would be a very simple matter for one of our friends to pick you off with a shot from below. Please let me pull up a chair for you."

She smiled languidly, without a trace of uneasiness in her manner. "Dear officer of the day, do you think they are so foolish as to pick us off in parties? Not at all. They will dispose of us wholesale, not by the piece. By the way, has Neenah been made quite comfortable?"

"I believe so. She and Selim have the room beyond mine, thanks to Lady Deppingham."

"Agnes tells me that she is very interesting—quite like a princess out of a fairy book. You recall the princesses who were always being captured by ogres and evil princes and afterward satisfactorily rescued by those dear knights admirable? Did Selim steal her in the beginning?"

"You forget the pot of sapphires and the big ruby."

SAN ANGELO IS LOGICAL LOCATOR

other Texas normal, or in any other locality that could be found.

A Law-abiding Town.

6. As representative of the Civic League I point with pride to our normally moral, law-abiding town. Living right here, our view is close. Too many take too near a view, and imagine we're not so good as some other places. Without in the least winking at evil, let us say that a good perspective is necessary in estimating the moral standard here as elsewhere. Human nature is largely the same everywhere. To develop the God-nature in ourselves and others is our greatest duty. Our moral and our religious tone are such as must commend themselves to the locating board.

7. The very presence of a school in a community, even of a poor school, helps along interest in education, if only through criticism of the bad. Many parents too poor to send their children elsewhere, and very many more, indifferent to the advanced education of their children, would become interested, and we should have fewer crimes, fewer waifs and loafers. Gladstone's saying that "It is the chief purpose of law to make it as hard as possible to do wrong, and as easy as possible to do right," surely identifies education and law. We should have a little need of our curfew law if our teachers were more interested in truly educating mind, hand, soul, will, as trained teaching would do. We should also very likely have a model kindergarten, where our little ones could go, and a kindergartner of note at its head.

8. The moral and intellectual influence of a faculty of excellent and distinguished men and women is no little advantage to be gained. For I may be forgiven this tribute to teachers when I say that no other class of professional people but trained teachers and preachers forswear worldly profit and advantage and give themselves, soul and body, in school and out, with little pay and less appreciation, wholly to the salvation of others.

Miss Lula Roby returned Friday to her mae in Fort Worth, after visiting friends and relatives in this city for several days.
