"MY TURN"

By Carol Ellis

I'VE OFTEN WONDERED how they managed to hang cattle rustlers and horse thieves out here on the High Plains in the early days. The nearest tree tall enough to hang a fellow might be located 100 miles from the place where he was caught.

VOLUME 66, NUMBER 10

We know that our pioneer ancestors in these parts, had to dig homes in the ground (called "dugouts") because there were no trees with which to build cabins. For "firewood" they used cowchips. Pee-yew! Talk about air pollution!

In case there are any transplanted yankees reading this, a cow-chip is a bit of cow doo-doo that has laid around out in the West Texas elements long enough to have obtained the consistency of an oatmeal cookie. I am told that, when used as fuel for fire, these burned with great intensity. I've had no desire to find out first hand.

The popular syndicated columnist, Lewis Grizzard, made a visit to the Panhandle of Texas back in the Fall. He commented on the lack of trees, as compared to his home town of Atlanta, Georgia where there are approximately two trees to every person in the town. He played a round of golf while in Lubbock and wondered why all the trees in the entire area were located on the golf course. He was told, of course, that every one of those had been planted by the hand of man.

I don't know who brought the first Chinese Elm into this area, but it seems to be the only type of tree around here that takes the trouble to plant itself. Since it comes up "volunteer," it often does so in places where you don't happen to want a tree, so we make haste to pull the little buggers up. Right now one is trying to establish itself amidst the low evergreens on my corner of Friona.

The double grove of shady elms east of town on both sides of the highway were well-established and something of a landmark. When you spotted the elm grove you knew you were almost home. Past tense! We now have only half an elm grove on the south side of the highway, due to the four-lane job currently underway between Summerfield and Friona. We used to wager whether the branches of those trees would touch overhead each summer. I thought surely they would leave the grove out in the December 23. median when they four-laned the road because it would make such a with either the safety of hunters nifty hidy place for the DPS trooper's car to sit and watch for to privacy on their own property. speeders.

I know that it is possible to leave a grove of trees standing out in the middle of the median because I have driven through Tennessee where they have left whole hills full of trees out in the middle with both around them. In California there are palm trees down the medians of certain roads and somebody had to plant them there. In Louisiana they have entire swamps with this year. cypress knees growing in them for their medians.

Panhandle "when you see a place that stands so in need of trees, you realize that every time one falls, the earth has lost a precious jewel." He doesn't usually get so poetic about stuff.

In honor of our lost elm grove, here is Joyce Kilmer's famous poem about trees:

I think that I shall never see a poem lovely as a tree. A tree whose hungry mouth is prest against the earth's sweet flowing breast; A tree that looks at God all day, and lifts her leafy arms to pray; A tree that may in Summer wear a nest of robins in her hair;

Upon whose bosom snow has lain; who intimately lives with rain.

Poems are made by fools like me, but only God can make a tree.

PUBLIC NOTICE

On July 19, 1990, GTE Southwest Incorporated ("GTE-SW") filed revisions to the company's tariff pertaining to the features and associated equipment for providing emergency number services (9-1-1).

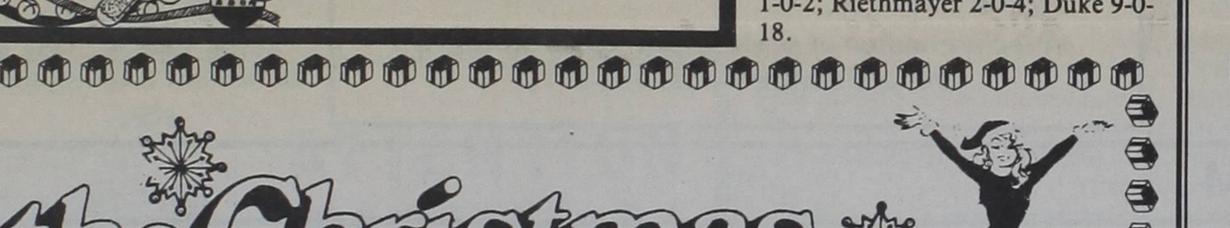

In this filing, GTE-SW proposes to modify its existing 9-1-1 tariff and to add more than 200 new service offerings. The new items of service and equipment in this application have been added to meet the company's increasing 9-1-1 customer demands and to allow GTE-SW to compete more effectively in the 9-1-1 equipment market.

The product line in the new offerings consists of a mini-computer and specialized console package for larger communities, as well as a personal computer with Automatic Number Identification (ANI) display for smaller communities. (ANI displays a caller's telephone number on the emergency dispatcher's computer screen.) In addition, the product line will include ANI and Automatic Location Information (ALI) display units compatible with, and similar to, those offered by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company and other local exchange carriers in Texas. (The ALI feature displays a caller's address on the computer screen.) The rate charged existing 9-1-1 customers may be revised at the expiration of their contracts with GTE-SW if the proposed tariff is approved.

This filing has been assigned Docket No 9667. The hearing on the merits is scheduled for February 25, 1991, at the offices of the Public Utility Commission of Texas. The deadline to intervene in this docket is December 31,
