WILL BE THE NICEST BUILDING IN PECOS

The Old Pecos Drug Store Building to be Remodeled and "Built Up."

In conversation with a Times reporter, Mr. J. T. H. Lipscomb the owner of the building recently damaged by fire and formerly occupied by the Pecos Drug Company, announced that he was going to remodel the building and raise the walls some six feet, making an entrance on the corner. This building will be finished on the outside and inside with the new micolithic finish, the product of The Texas Mica Company. The outside body will be finished in light gray granite color, with dark grayish brown trimmings. The inside will be finished in buff. This will make one of the most beautiful buildings in the city. This material comes from the mines of the company located near Van Horn. The company is a local concern, the stock being owned almost entirely by Pecos people. The supply of this material is inexhaustible and when its beauty and durability are considered it is very cheap. Reports from the leading architects and builders in the larger cities in the East indicate that this finish will revolutionize the use of concrete in residences and business houses because the finish can be furnished in any color or combination of colors to suit the taste. Thus Pecos is always to the front in every line.

CHRISTIAN SISTERS STAR.

Pleased Large Audience at the Music Hall Last Night

Great credit is due to the two young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Christian for the splendid amateur work done by them last night before a very large crowd at Music Hall. Their work was exceedingly excellent and not only shows the wonderful adaptability of these two young Pecosites for this class of art but also reflects credit upon their mother, who has trained them to act so well. The younger girl portrayed a comical male character so perfectly and so well as to cause continued applause, while the elder child, acting as a dignified fairy charmed the ladies and gentlemen and especially pleased the children present.

LOMELI IN COMMAND AT AGUA PRIETA

Former El Paso Insurrecto Chief Takes Charge of Abandoned Town

From El Paso Herald.

Douglas, Ariz., May 12.—The rebel garrison under command of Gen. Lomeli and Cols. Cambremos and Medina are re-excavating the trenches filled by federals here and have taken out seven cases of dynamite, and this morning unearthed several bodies. Medina ordered the excavating force to cease work and to dig new trenches.

Jose Antonio Garcia is the officer in direct command of the armed force of 85 who have just entered the town of Agua Prieta. Elections will be held tomorrow, he says, when a jefe politico, postmaster and comisaria de policia will be named. All other offices are to be filled also by election.

Dr. F. W. Randall, formerly Southern Pacific Company surgeon at Guaymas, now of Douglas, has received notice of his appointment as surgeon general of the insurrecto army under the provisional government of Madero. He will probably go to Juarez at once.

Eighty-five armed rebels have come into Agua Prieta from the Nacozari valley and this force has been augmented by more than 150 from Douglas.

Gen. Jose Perfecto Lomeli is the head officer of the new garrison of Agua Prieta. He came here from El Paso, where at one time he was arrested for trying to smuggle provisions to Orozco's army.

The rebel leaders announce that Agua Prieta will be made the temporary provisional capital of the state of Sonora and active preparations are being made with that end in view.

Lomeli has won a bloodless battle and has taken possession in the name of Madero.

Passengers arriving from the Nacozari country report that the valley is alive with rebel bands. Some estimate that there are 5000 or more abroad in the vicinity.

Some of the large nearby bands have disappeared and are thought to have gone to the aid of Juan Cabral, who is holding Cananea in siege.

Cananea, Sonora, May 12.—Without having demanded the surrender of Cananea, Juan Cabral moved south with his combined force of rebels, numbering about 2000. His destination is believed to be Hermosillo.

There is a general movement of insurrecto troops against the capital city.

The rebels have burned four bridges between Cananea and Naco, stopping all traffic over the Southern Pacific line. All bullion from Cananea smelters is shipped over this line, which carries all supplies for the camps. The garrison numbers 750 men.

Nogales, Sonora, May 12.—Col. Reynaldo Diaz, with the men who evacuated Agua Prieta yesterday, arrived last night at Magdalena without having encountered resistance. He continued south today, attempting to reach Hermosillo.

There is a general concentration of rebel bands along the line of the Sonora road between Magdalena and Hermosillo, and it is scarcely likely that they will permit Diaz to reach Hermosillo without a fight. The insurrecto forces greatly outnumber the federals.

Cananea, Son., Mex., May 12.—Yesterday at 11:45 there arrived in Cananea 210 soldiers—volunteers and cavalry—headed by perfect Chiapas, of Moctezuma. They had one machine gun with them and plenty of ammunition.

The train ran special out of Naco, leaving there yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, and consisted of five box cars, two coal cars and a coach. These men left Agua Prieta on Wednesday morning overland for Naco and stayed there all night.

Commandante Medina Barron and Col. Reynaldo Diaz left Agua Prieta at the same time, but their whereabouts are unknown at present.

The infant (?) rebellion of Mexico seems to be assuming great proportions. The insurrectos have been successful in every important move that they have undertaken. At the present rate of the increase of recruits that are making application to join their army, they will soon be compelled to refuse to take them, even as a reserve force.

Not unlike the war in Mexico, where the revolutionists are trying to put down the corrupt misrule that has been so long in force. The United States, too, has been, and is now, involved in a war that is just as important to the world at large as the troubles of Mexico are to the government of Mexico, to-wit: The effort to control the child of its own production, the trust which was conceived in the minds of the giant incorporations and delivered by the protectionists and fostered and nestled in the bosom of the party so long in power, and now, this trust has become overgrown and is asserting a right to control and dictate the policies of the federal government, which they apparently refuse to allow. This is where they build the fires that fries out the fat, that oils up the election machinery, preparing for the battle royal of 1912. If the Democratic party can shift a few of its traitors for a few of the insurgents of the G. O. P., the battle will be an easy victory.

New Church at Pyote

Rev. J. B. Cole, pastor of First Baptist Church of Pecos left on 3 a. m. train this morning for Pyote where he and Rev. D. E. Adams will organize a church. This is the first sign of the progressive greatness of the people of Pyote. Pyote is a new town but not a new people upon whom the light is just now being revealed, but in keeping with their early training, they realize the importance of making a right start. In doing this they are laying the foundation for a great future.

In the Land of the Revolution

At 1:30 p. m. Thursday in company with others from Pecos the writer walked unmolested across the international border into the historic city of Juarez. Signs of the recent battle were seen on every side, but no thought of fear came to us, for we felt secure under the protection of the now famous insurrecto army.

Famous? Yes, and well it might be. How they took this naturally well-fortified town of adobes without greater loss of life is a mystery unless we find an explanation in the poor marksmanship of the federal forces. No matter how it came about, Madero's army hold Juarez and they know it. The sign of triumphant joy is seen on every face, as they greet their American visitors with a friendliness that seems to say: "Mighty glad to have you visit us. We just knew that you were on our side."

That army! It is worth a trip to Juarez to see it. Certainly it is an army "of the people." Every age and class seem to be enlisted. Boys scarcely in their teens, and gray haired men with bodies stooped, and with halting step are found within the ranks. Men of intelligence and men who are wholly void of a reason for their fighting. The only "uniform" seen yesterday was a smile. Their clothing is everything but uniform. Some wore a plain shirt, overalls, and a sombrero. Some had parts of clothing with Federal appearance. Others had, it seems, secured a "loan" of clothing from across the river.

They are armed "to the teeth." Numbers of them wore five belts of cartridges, and few had less than three. Rifles of every kind, pistols, swords, daggers. Some had all of these combined. I am quite sure that a few are sorry they can't find a place to buckle on a field gun—the size of it wouldn't disturb them.

Juarez is not destroyed by any means. In fact not nearly so badly damaged as most people think. Except those destroyed by fire, the buildings can be repaired with small cost. The old church is not badly damaged. The front doors and the vestibule will need repair as the result of a bomb. Some of the windows have been broken, others are unhurt. The outside walls will need some plaster to fill the small depressions made by rifle bullets.

The entire fronts of some of the buildings on Main street have been demolished, while in other buildings not even the glass is broken. Plastering will be needed on most all the houses as few are seen without the sign of the rifle ball. Around the port holes in buildings where the Federals were located, the marks are so numerous as to remind one of an enlarged pepper box.

What of the people of the town? To them Sherman's definition of war must certainly seem a good one. Business for the time being is ruined, homes broken up, women with tear-dimmed eyes were seen returning to their battle-scarred houses where home had been before. Some were trudging the streets carrying small belongings on their backs. All is unsettled and uncertain.

It was our privilege to see the provisional president Madero. He is doing his best to provide for the needs of his capital, and unless he is disturbed by federal forces, it is our opinion that in a few days Juarez will be as busy and as peaceful a little city as it has ever been.

The GIRL OF MY DREAMS

A NOVELIZATION OF THE PLAY BY
WILBUR D. NESBIT AND OTTO HAUERBACH
NOVELIZED BY WILBUR D. NESBIT
COPYRIGHT BY W. D. NESBIT

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. Harry Swifton is spinning along in his auto, his thoughts dwelling in happy anticipation of a coming visit from his fiancée, Lucy Medders, a Quakeress, who nursed him when he was injured in an auto accident out in the country. His mind taken off of his surroundings by these pleasant thoughts he crashes into another auto containing a German count and a beautiful woman. The woman's hat is ruined. Absent-mindedly Harry thrusts the remnants of the hat in his pocket and makes his escape.

CHAPTER II. Carolyn, Harry's sister, arrives to play hostess. Socrates Primmer, a distant relative of Lucy's, arrives with a hat intended as a gift to Lucy. Harry is trailed to his home by the German count and the lady of the damaged hat.

CHAPTER III. Who, it develops, is Mrs. General Blazes. She is in distraction lest her husband should hear of her escapade. She declares that her milliner told her a duplicate of the ruined hat had been delivered to Harry's house. Responding to her demands for the hat Harry insists that he knows nothing about it. Lucy Medders and her father arrive and the Count is secreted in the library and Mrs. Blazes in Harry's bedroom.

CHAPTER IV. Lucy professes curiosity regarding the room in which Mrs. Blazes is hidden and Harry is forced to do some fancy lying.

CHAPTER V. The milliner arrives to trace the duplicate hat. She proves to be Daphne Daffington whom Harry had shown considerable attention to in the past and the situation becomes more complicated. She agrees to make another hat providing Harry will take her to dinner. Lucy and Carolyn call Harry and Daphne is hustled into the room occupied by the Count. The Count and Daphne it seems had carried on a flirtation before and greeted each other warily.

"Mrs. Blazes!" Harry interrupted.

"Yes," Daphne said. "Mrs. General Blazes."

Harry looked at the door of his room, expecting Mrs. Blazes to come forth and enter the discussion. What construction Daphne might put on her presence, concealed in his house, he feared to imagine. This, coupled with his old flirtation with Daphne, and her sensitively jealous disposition, would be sure to make things unpleasant for him. And, further, if she learned that Lucy was here, and discovered his fondness for Lucy, he knew mighty well what sort of a row she would kick up. He trembled at the thought. Daphne saw his trepidation.

"Why?" she asked. "What is Mrs. Blazes to you?"

"Nothing," Harry said, fervently. "Absolutely nothing."

"Well, you acted queer. You always did act queer," Daphne said. "Anyway, the other hat was sent here, and I want to get it."

"But it isn't here," Harry assured her. "If it were, I wouldn't let you have it, because I want one like it myself. Can't you make one for me?"

"I might," Daphne said, assuming the coy air that she fancied to be so irresistible. "Why do you want a hat? Is it for your sister?"

"No, Daphne. You see, it's this way. I—I'm to have a guest—two guests. A young lady I'm greatly interested in—you see, it has been so long since we parted that I am sure you have forgotten me—and so—well, this young lady is to visit my sister, and—well, I've got to get that hat."

"Is the hat for her?" Daphne asked, interestedly.

"No," Harry blundered. "It's for another woman."

Daphne drew herself up with the pose of a tragedy queen.

"Aha!" she said, in denunciatory tones. "So you're up to your old tricks, are you?"

Harry wilted at that, and could make no sufficient reply.

"Well," Daphne decided, "I'll make you the hat—on one condition. I'll get it finished this afternoon, provided that you and I—just our two little selves—shall have one of our old time cozy, comfy dinners tonight."

"Ye Gods! Daphne Daffington!"

Harry was aghast. This was too much. The more he tried to get out of his trouble the more new troubles were invented for him.

"Daphne," he said, "I—I simply can't do that."

"Two years ago," Daphne reminded him, "you would have jumped at the chance to have the dinner, and never have bothered about the hat."

"I know, but, Daphne, it is impossible. You see, these guests will be here, and I can't be away when I should be entertaining them."

"They won't miss you," Daphne said, cruelly. "You're not so very entertaining."

"I know it—and I'm at my worst today. So," with a hopeful cadence in his voice, "you get me the hat and we'll have that little dinner some other evening."

"No dinner tonight, no hat today," was Daphne's ultimatum, when from somewhere in the house came the voices of Lucy and Carolyn, calling to Harry.

"Great Scott!" he muttered. "This thing's getting worse! They mustn't see you here."

"They?" Daphne asked. "Who are they?"

"One is my sister; the other is—the other girl."

"Oh, goodness, Harry!" Daphne almost wept. "I didn't mean to get you into trouble. Hide me, hide me! Heavens! If there should be any talk about me—just when my millinery business is doing so nicely. You ought to be ashamed to allow an innocent girl to take such chances as this."

But Harry was hurrying her toward the library door. At first he had unconsciously started her toward the other one, but halted, remembering that Mrs. Blazes was there. He mutely directed her to go into the library, and then said in a hasty whisper:

"Don't pay any attention to the man in there. Just hide yourself in there a few minutes, and I'll get the girls to go back downstairs on some pretext."

As the door closed on Daphne he left the room and so he did not hear from the library the voice of the Count saying:

"Vell, py gracious! Little Daphne."

Nor the amazed tones of Daphne as she exclaimed:

"Why, Count! What are you doing here?"

CHAPTER VI.

For a time there was silence in the room. Then the door of one room opened and Mrs. Blazes peered anxiously forth.

"I wonder why he is so long getting that hat," she said to herself.

The door across from her began to open, and she hurriedly dashed back and closed her door. The Count and Daphne came from the library.

"Indeed," Daphne said, "he might have told me you were in there. But maybe he meant it as a surprise to me."

She simpered and peeped roguishly at the Count.

"I hope," the Count said, "it was a surprise. To think dot now ve haaf a meetings."

"The pleasure is all yours, sweet noble of teutonic blood," said Daphne, with fine sarcasm.

The Count looked at her with pique, shaking his head mournfully.

"To think!" he sighed. "After all I spend on you, den you leave me waiting for you in such disgracefulness on der corner!"

Daphne tried to explain.

"Honest, County," she said, at which pet name he flinched. "Honest, County, I didn't mean to disappoint you, but a traveling gentleman I hadn't seen for a long time came through, and as I hadn't seen him for so long, I went to supper with him. You see, the trouble with you and me was the way we talked. Half the time I couldn't understand you and the other half you couldn't understand me."

The Count looked at her blankly. Her explanation did not explain at all.

"Such a deceitfulness!" he said. "And after I gave you my ring. How dared you keep it?"

The Count's haughty indignation over her having kept his ring was tinged with a little twinge of conscience over the fact that, separated from them by only a thin door, was another lady to whom, that very day, he had given a similar ring. The Count had the habit of "wishing on" a ring, as an incident of his various flirtations. And no sooner did he wish it on then he began to wish it back.

"I didn't keep your old ring!" Daphne retorted.

"You didn't?"

"No, I gave it away to a gentleman friend."

"Vat!" the Count asked, in noble horror. "You gave my beautiful ring away. Ach! To think of it, mit all its family unt historical significance, being on der finger of some common person!"

"Indeed," Daphne snapped. "He isn't any common person, I want you to know. He is the head of a noble family, a respected citizen and a particular admirer of mine."

The Count regarded her with an icy stare as he said crushingly:

"I am afraid den he iss not so particular as he might be."

For a moment the very air was tense between them. The Count glared at Daphne, and Daphne returned his glare with fiery interest. She leaned over until her sharp nose was within three inches of his face, and said to him in raspy accents:

"You can't insult me. I've been insulted by experts!"

The Count jumped as though he had been pricked by a pin. This setting of him down as a nonentity, accompanied by a sharp snap of the finger, was a bit more cavalier treatment than he had ever received. He could think of nothing to say in reply. Daphne, now thoroughly angry, went on:

"I want you to understand that General Blazes—"

STATE WIDE PROHIBITION RALLY

Two "Live Wires" to Speak 30 minutes Each Sunday Afternoon.

Rev. G. W. Eichelberger, D. of Fort Worth, district superintendent Anti-Saloon League of Texas, and Hon. W. P. Lane will deliver addresses tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon, at 4 o'clock at the Tabernacle, on the "Texas Problem of State Wide Prohibition."

Dr. Eichelberger's address is entitled the "Texas Line Up," or the "Final Battle of Ballots." He is called the "Live Wire," also "does things." He says there are only two issues to be considered, maintain them and the state is ours. Comptroller Lane's address will be along the practical business lines. Mr. Eichelberger says he is a fine speaker and his address is strong, interesting and popular. Two addresses 30 minutes each.

He says the Anti-Saloon League, of which Dr. J. H. Gambrell is State Superintendent, and the amendment committee, of which Hon. Thos. H. Ball is State Chairman, are utilizing the 245 county pro organizations, and the 4400 precinct pro committees to the fullest limit in this fierce campaign. He says that 100,000 copies each of Judge Ball's great address, Judge Poindexter's, Dr. Gambrell's, Dr. Carroll's and Father Murphy's have been issued and are being distributed free over the state, and Cone Johnson's is being printed.

Mr. Eichelberger says his district, which reaches from Fort Worth to El Paso, and all north of that line, will roll up such a pro majority that will offset the big anti vote of South Texas.

At tomorrow's meeting at the Music Hall, the exact strategic positions of the Saloon League and the Anti-Saloon League will be put in plain figures. Mr. Eichelberger says every pro, man and woman, is needed at this service. He invites all antis to attend. He says nothing abusive or that offends. He says he respects the opinions of honest antis. This is a free country and all have equal rights. But, he wants the antis and local optionists to come and think twice tomorrow, at 4 o'clock.

He says he has never had such outpourings of people as greet him this year over Texas.
