THE HIGH COST OF LIVING TAKES A TUMBLE

POULTRY AND RABBITS WILL BECOME IMPORTANT

GREAT INDUSTRY ON PLAINS— BANQUET AND SPEECHES LAST NIGHT

The poultry and rabbit show, which began Tuesday, continues to command much interest, and hundreds of people throng the show rooms, seen before in the Southwest was there a collection of higher grade birds and rabbits than are being shown here. The judges, who visit many shows each year, say the showing is exceptionally fine, and that there is a very bright future ahead for these industries in Hale county and on the Plains.

The judges have made their awards and the lists are now being checked over and verified. We will publish a complete list of all prize winners in Tuesday's News.

Last night there was a luncheon at the Ware for the officers of the associations, the prominent visitors and a few others. J. C. Anderson, Jr., was toastmaster, and responses were made by D. T. Heimlich of Jackson, Ill., official judge of the poultry show; Miss Hazel, Mr. Cashmier and Mr. Blackwell, of A. & M. college, who are here holding the poultry school of instruction; Mr. E. B. Miller, and Mr. C. E. Craig.

Judge Heimlich and the other visitors congratulated the association upon its fine showing, and said poultry growing is destined to become a leading industry on the Plains. Mr. Craig said the T. L. & D. Co. proposes to give more attention to growing poultry on its farms, and expects to establish a poultry experiment farm soon.

The show will close tomorrow.

New York Faces Hunger

On account of the marine workers' strike in New York City the people yesterday were facing hunger within forty-eight hours. The railroads were trying to get food into the city, in order to avert a famine, as the supply from sea is cut off. Conditions are very critical, so reports say.

Wherever President Wilson goes in Europe he stresses his league of nations proposal and the people fall in line. The one exception is Premier Clemenceau of France. It is now very certain that the league of nations will be endorsed and put into effect at the peace conference. Mr. Wilson declares America will refuse to have anything to do with any propositions dealing with a "balance of power," that unless she can join with all nations she is out of it, as she does not propose to deal with only a set of nations. He is right—the "balance of power" to a great extent caused the recent war. England, Russia and France formed the "entente" and Germany, Austria and Italy the "triple alliance," pledging themselves to assist each other both offensively and defensively, in order to have a "balance of power." If one set of nations build up a "balance of power" this will force other nations to do so, and sooner or later there will be an explosion just as there was in 1914. The continued peace of the world demands that Wilson's league of nations plan wins out.

President Poincare will visit the United States late in June or early in July. He should come to Texas. It will be impossible for him to see the United States unless he makes the trip from Texarkana to El Paso and from Brownsville to Tullahoma.

Morey McGlasson and Ural Armstrong, having returned from army training camps, have re-purchased the business of the McGlasson-Armstrong Rubber Co., from John C. Hooper and the B. L. Shook family, to whom they sold it some months ago. They took charge Monday.

Visits of the Stork

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. Holt, Plainview, Jan. 3, boy; named Henry Wilson.

Roosevelt is dead. While he was a man of many inconsistencies, and at times the nation could not understand his peculiar actions, yet he was really a great man, and one of whom it can be said, the world is better because he lived. He was a real red-blooded American, and was fearless in fighting for what he thought to be right and against what he thought to be wrong. The nation mourns his loss.

ROOSEVELT'S BODY PLACED IN THE GRAVE

Simple Service of Episcopal Church Conducted at Church and Grave

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Jan. 8.—The body of Theodore Roosevelt was laid at rest today.

It was committed to earth at 1:43 p. m. in a family cemetery plot overlooking Long Island sound.

The morning's snowstorm had given way to brilliant sunshine as the automobile cortege started from Sagamore Hill to the church. Thousands of persons viewed the procession.

The final service was witnessed by members of the family and a few friends, the congressional delegation and a group of two hundred neighbors, among them many school children, who had assembled at the grave while the church service was in progress.

As the outdoor congregation recited the Lord's prayer, it was noted that Captain Archibald Roosevelt stood directly behind the clergyman at the head of the grave, while to the left and quite alone was former President Taft, the colonel's lifelong friend.

Other members of the family stood a few paces back from Captain Roosevelt, while the congressmen and people of Oyster Bay were assembled directly behind the delegation of rough riders at the front of the grave.

The former President rested with his head toward the west, where the sun, cropping toward the horizon, brought out in striking silhouette the white robed figure of the priest reciting the time-honored committal service of the Episcopal church. As the last words were spoken a great flock of white birds were seen to alight on the frozen surface of the cove which the snow capped eminence of the cemetery overlooks. Only the rough riders' floral tribute relieved the plainness of the casket as it was lowered to its final resting place.

The battle flags were taken back to the trophy room at Sagamore Hill, where the colonel's family will prize them as he had since their presentation as a memento of his part in the Spanish-American war.

The church service, beginning at 12:55 o'clock was concluded in 18 minutes. The Episcopal ritual was followed and the only mention of the ex-President's name was when the rector spoke the word "Theodore," in the final prayer.

The casket was borne to the altar by porters. Draped in an American flag, it was covered also with two battleflags, of the rough rider regiment, upon which rested a large wreath of acacias tied with the yellow ribbon of the cavalry. These flowers, the only tribute near the casket, were from the colonel's comrades of the famous unit of Spanish American war days.

Among the flowers banked against the altar rail were wreaths from President Wilson, Vice-President Marshall, the senate and house, Secretary Daniels and the officers and men of the battleship Indiana. Back of the altar were hung two American flags, while another floated from the church entrance.

The guests were received personally by Captain Archibald Roosevelt, assisted by William Loeb Jr., who was Mr. Roosevelt's secretary during his presidency.

The casket was not opened in the church.

BOLSHEVIKI FORCES TAKE VILNA, POLISH CITY

WHOLESALE MASSACRE OF CIVILIANS—POLISH MILITIA WAS POORLY ARMED

Warsaw, Jan. 8.—Vilna has fallen into the hands of the Bolsheviki army, several thousand strong, which drove out the Polish militia. A massacre of civilians began at once, partly because the Poles had offered resistance and had arrested or shot the members of the local Bolsheviki committees.

The Polish troops, who had no cannon and only a few cartridges per rifle, were under the command of General Veitko. They retreated to Lanovaro, where they were robbed by the Germans and were started off for Polish territory.

Lemberg, where the Poles are de-Ruthenians, appears safe for the time being. The political situation at Warsaw is stationary. As a result of interviews which Ignace Jan Paderewski has had with General Pilsudski, Paderewski has agreed to form a new cabinet, provided the Socialists now holding places in the ministry withdraw from their predominating position. General Pilsudski expressed himself as not wishing to use his authority to force the withdrawal of these Socialists.

Paderewski is working hard and making appeals to patriotism. He declares that he himself is willing to sacrifice every ambition if only a cabinet can be formed which the Allies can recognize and aid with safety to themselves, as they fear that a certain sort of cabinet would lead to headlong Bolshevism.

Editor Has the Grippe

If there is anything the matter with this issue of the News, something in it you don't like, it will be left for you to keep it to yourself, if you wish to avoid trouble, for the editor has had a case of old-fashioned grippe for several days. It is not this new-fangled disease known as Spanish flu, but the old time-honored grippe that makes a fellow feel real mean and reckless, and encourages him to go several blocks out of the way in order to mix up in a fight. Why, it makes him feel reckless enough to almost sass his mother-in-law, or say something reflecting on the pope at an Irish meeting. We hope to be "back to our oats" in a day or so.

Weather is Warmer

"Who's Who" While the President Is Abroad?

"Hands Across the Sea" May Come True at Last

THE nation-wide celebration of Britain day is evidence that Great Britain's part in the great war has brought about a tremendous change of heart in this country and has won the respect, admiration and good will of the American people.

It Is Lucky the Government Cut Its Red Tape

SOME people have been so bold as to declare that if the government had not cut its red tape the war might not yet be over. Here's a little experience that seems to bear out the contention: A man newly in Washington wanted to find out the local address of an army officer, also new to the city.

"I'll just call up the war department and get his address in a minute," he announced to his wife.

KIDNEY TROUBLE NOT EASILY RECOGNIZED

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected

An examining physician for one of the prominent life insurance companies, in an interesting statement, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Squaw-Berries

By AGNES G. BROGAN

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

The brisk walk brought the color tingling to Jane's lately too-pale cheeks; it also loosened a shining strand or two of hair that had grown to a fashion of neat preciseness.

With a strange and sudden impulse she turned from the country roadway down a tree-bordered lane to the ravine. How long it had been since she, a fun-loving girl, had followed this path of wood-fragrant charm, in search of bright red berries, clustering among their shining green leaves in the moss underfoot. Or, had the search for squaw-berries been but a youthful excuse for an afternoon in his company? she wondered. So happy, so care-free they had been together, the tall, bright-faced lad, all enthusiasm in planning his future, or "our future" as he had called it, and she, released for an hour or two from the daily care of her invalid mother. Bending, she would gather the berries from their hiding place beneath the dead leaves, as she listened to that old, old story whose charm is ever new. "And when I come back rich and famous," he would say, "we shall be married, Jane Rose."

"Jane Rose." She loved the name as it fell from his lips. "Jane" was too plain for his "rose-girl," he told her, and the added name seemed a caress. But Jane sighed as she thought of the years of separation, necessary, if he were to become the great artist that his ambition craved. Never for a moment did she doubt his success, even now. Wonderful were his untrained sketches of wood and valley, beautiful fancies, too, filled his mind.

"The dead leaves and the snow," he told her "signify the discouragements and hardness of life, while beneath them grow the bright berries of hope." "And love," Jane Rose had added timidly, "for love can live through every discouragement." The young man had turned away impatiently at that, for her allegiance to the invalid mother was a never-forgotten grievance. Had it not been for the mother's exacting presence, Jane herself would have traveled with him across the ocean to the land of adventure, and realized ambition. So—he had gone away. Far as her eye could see his graceful, swinging figure Jane watched him down the road to the station. And that had been more than ten years ago—ten long years and until this threatening winter day, Jane's feet had never again followed the ravine path to the wood.

At first letters had come regularly from her lover; then they had grown further apart, and ceased altogether.

Often she thought of him, this absent lover, and without bitterness.

Then came the time when her care was no longer needed. Quite alone, Jane prepared her evening meal and set a place at her table for one. Alone, she sat at evening looking down the long road to the village, for young friends had departed or made newer homes for themselves, while Jane had been "busy," occupied with a task of love which allowed no respite.

"I'll go away," Jane murmured passionately; "I will see the world that claimed him. I will not stay forever and ever on a lonely hillside."

As if to give incentive to her decision, Jane read a sentence in the paper which came daily from the city. "Mr. John Allen Gordon," announced the society column, "has returned from abroad." "Mr. John Allen Gordon," she smiled tremulously. Would he recognize the village friends who still lovingly referred to him as "Jack?" Jane Rose fell to dreaming, then, of the home he might now have, and the wife, perhaps, and it seemed all at once that the four walls of the little home room were pressing down upon her, and she must—must get away.

After that, preparations brought a new and delightful excitement. She would take the money saved from the renting of the old barn for a neighbor's automobile, and spend it all in a short city vacation. Such extravagance seemed a sin, but this new sense of recklessness was exhilarating. Jane's eyes sparkled with an old light as she viewed the "mail order" traveling suit, with accompanying hat, gloves and shoes. Gray she had chosen for each article, a silvery, beautiful gray.

Jane was enchanted. She blushed with guilty vanity as she regarded herself in the mirror. Ten years, even in the filling of hot-water bottles, had been most kind. Her spirits sank a little as she considered that she had not one acquaintance in the big city. But she knew of the best hotels.

She glanced around the room apprehensively, hoping that the time of luxuriating would not spoil her for the coming back. And as the train rushed cityward she wondered if it could be that two people parted ten years ago might, by any possibility of chance, meet on a public city street.

The arrival at her destination discouraged this hope. Among all the surging throng, she appeared to be regarded, not even as an individual, but as something to be hastily jostled aside.

Jane sank with a sigh of relief back into the taxi; her hand trembled as she signed her name in the hotel register, but the grandeur of her apartments brought back to her sense of delightful adventure.

"If they could see me now," she said, "those people in Hillcrest." Dinner was a stately affair; to be waited upon so ceremoniously embarrassed her, and she wondered uncomfortably, as she met many a pronounced stare, if anything were wrong with her attire.

After all, why did she wish to see that long-absent one? Was it to satisfy herself once and for all that he really had ceased to care? And then—he came. There was nothing unusual about it if he, a successful artist, were in the city; this hotel would be naturally the place where he would dine. Yet the heart of Jane beat almost to suffocation, and she clasped her hands tightly to control the emotion which surged within her. And, after all, came a vague sense of disappointment. Something was lacking about the man that had been there in the youthful long ago. Was it the bright air of confidence which had pervaded his personality—or what? Jane could not tell. She only knew that his face was white and haggard as from loss of sleep, that his dark eyes burned restlessly.

A sudden light of recognition flamed for a moment in the eyes which directly met hers. Half-smiling, Jane leaned forward, her hand extended in greeting. Then her hand fell limply back upon the table, for he had turned away, deliberately ignoring her presence. Her lips trembled like those of a grieved child as he rose and passed from the room. He had remembered, yet very evidently wished to see her no more. And past all the patient, weary years this fact had power to stab her with a new and poignant pain.

If he were ashamed to acknowledge his old-time friend here, before them all, Jack Gordon had changed.

She had still quite a few dollars left—she counted them over regretfully; her spirit of holiday had flown. It was, as she passed down the main street the following morning, that Jane came face to face with the picture.

She did not need to lean forward, discerning his name upon the canvas; the work was so truly his own. In an art room it stood displayed, with a ticket, "For Sale."

Breathless, eager, Jane hastened into the store. "I wish to buy that picture," she said, with a fine disregard for price.

"Fifty dollars," announced the dealer, "and remarkably cheap for Mr. Gordon's work."

Jane closed her eyes in quick mental calculation. "I'll take it," she said.

"Where to?" asked the dealer. "We box them carefully." And Jane gave her Hillcrest address.

Out again in the street she stopped dazedly, counting the change in her bag. She had just money enough to take her to lower Hillcrest—she would have to walk home from there. But hope, like the berries, again forced its bright way.

"He must have remembered," she murmured joyously. The placing of the picture required much care, Jane, standing upon a chair the following evening, seriously studied the question. After all, it was good to be back in the old familiar room. And then came a ringing of the bell. "If—" anticipated Jane; then, smiled at the folly of her thought. She waited a moment, nevertheless, to loosen softly the waves of her hair; it was so she had worn it ten years ago. Then she opened the door.

John Gordon did not speak until he had entered the room, until his quick glance had traveled from Jane's face back to the picture.

"You—still live here?" he asked abruptly.

She nodded dumbly. "From the suite you were registered in at the hotel," he said, "as I saw you last night, from the price you paid for my very small picture, I fancied," he waved an arm about, "that you had grown away from this, that you had perhaps inherited money."

Jane spoke slowly. "I have no money," she told him.

"Then," he said, and bitterness was in his tone, "you bought the painting out of pity for me. You have heard of my failure. For all these discouraging years I've pressed doggedly on, refusing to give in. Persisting in my foolish dream of success. When I ceased writing to you it was because I could not bear to have you know of my failure, to sacrifice your life to a useless promise. When the great opportunity should come, and with it success, then I would return worthily to you." The man paused. "It did not come," he added quietly. "But stronger than myself was the yearning to see, and learn of you again. So I came back. The picture was offered as a last hope, to defray present expenses."

"When I found your name to be that of the purchaser, I realized fully the humility of my failure. Last night I wished to shrink away in my shabbiness, from your recognition." The man's voice broke huskily.

"Oh! Jane Rose, Jane Rose," he whispered, "how I deceived you with my dreams of long ago."

And Jane raised her face to his; wildly her heart was singing; forgotten were the long years of absence and neglect. What mattered poverty, or the shabby clothes of his humiliation? What mattered success or worldly failure? Love was here—love that forced its way through snows of disappointment and fallen leaves of change, love that triumphed.

"Jack," she cried tenderly and held out her arms. And it was a long time after that the man, with a light of new purpose in his eyes, and the woman, smiling, radiant, moved forward together, to hang anew the picture of

PLAN INTERIOR OF NEW HOUSE

Decorations Should Harmonize With the Furnishings.

CAREFUL STUDY IS REQUIRED

Design Shows Eight-Room House That Will Be Economical, but Can Be Made Cozy and Comfortable With Little Effort.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose three-cent stamp for reply.

No undertaking ever met with success without having a definite plan. Whether in business, in society or in the home, a plan must first be conceived and executed with care before complete satisfaction is obtained. This truth is realized more frequently in business affairs than in those of the household, but it is nevertheless a fact in every case. It applies particularly to such an undertaking as the decorating of one's home. How many of us ever have a carefully prepared plan of decoration?

In nine cases out of ten the home builder finds himself in the midst of his decorative details before he realizes it, and without a plan at that, and, furthermore, so confused regarding woodwork, wall and floor color treatments, that he hardly knows which way to turn. The first question can be answered, therefore, by two words, "Not many."

How many builders realize what can be accomplished by such a plan? This question can be answered by the same two words. The fact is, that all those who have lived through the building of a home have realized to their sorrow just what more careful planning and careful buying might have accomplished. These questions apply to the entire building, but particularly to the terior decoration start right here. Decide upon such furnishings as will be permanent, taking one room after another. Consider the relation of furniture to woodwork. If mahogany furniture has the preference, choose it also for the woodwork, or select white enamel, which is equally satisfactory. If, however, the furniture is oak, then let the woodwork be also oak, and stain it to match. Perhaps some objectionable pieces must be used. Don't let this interfere with the plan.

Careful Study Necessary.

So we must know just the kind of furniture, woodwork, floors, etc., desired before we decide on our wall treatment, as well as the kind and color of rugs, hangings and upholstery; then turn these matters over in our minds, study them, confer with others regarding them, seek from those manufacturers who offer decorative assistance, and by such serious consideration acquire a better feeling for color and a knowledge of proper decorative treatments. Many progressive manufacturers have studied their product from an artistic standpoint; many of them are prepared to tell you just the kind and color to select under the conditions you are confronted with. The mantel manufacturer can give you suggestions for the style of your fireplace. The furniture manufacturer will assist you.

In our progress from one room to another, working out a plan for each interior decorating, the subject with which we wish to deal.

Details Should Harmonize.

So work out a plan and then plan out the work—know just what kind of furniture, hangings, rugs, etc., are to be used in every room before the architect specifies the kind of wood for the woodwork, the color of brick for fireplace, or, in fact, any of the details which bear directly or indirectly upon the final decorative effect. Know just how these various surfaces are to be treated, how many coats of stain or varnish are to be used on woodwork and floors—the exact color for walls and woodwork before your painting contract is signed.

Second-Floor Plan.

Such a plan of action is not a difficult undertaking. It must naturally be based entirely on the style of architecture chosen for the house, and with this important point decided upon, the plan is built up around it. Very few of us are able to start with a clean slate, but rather it is necessary to use many pieces of old furniture, some of them rare old pieces—heirlooms, possibly—the dining-room table and buffet are comparatively new and their styles satisfactory; then, again, much of the chamber furnishing cannot possibly be changed, or would be changed building the schemes up around satisfactory furnishings we already have, it is of vital importance that the relation of one room to another be considered. Avoid harsh contrasts between rooms just as much as between parts of one room. Let one scheme lead up to another like the notes of musical harmony. Don't let the heart if the first year doesn't bring complete satisfaction throughout the entire house. Little by little the desirable pieces of furniture and harmonious hangings will disappear and behold! a wonderful change has been wrought.

We present here perspective view and floor plan of an eight-room house of very neat, graceful lines, which lends itself very well to careful interior planning and repays with interest the taste and study one will give this matter. It is an economical structure, 28 feet in width by 36 feet at the depth of the lot, not including front porch. The exterior presents the popular combination of bay window sills, with cement plaster above up to the eaves.

Interior is Cozy.

The interior of this house is and comfortable. A broad porch extends clear across the front. Entrance from the porch is direct into reception hall. To the right, the broad doorway is the large living room with its open fireplace and bookcase.

The dining room is direct of the hall; it has a square window with four outward opening windows. The kitchen, rear corner of the plan, and rated from the dining room by a pantry. There is a back stairway in the kitchen in addition to stairway in the front hall.

Upstairs are four very rooms with ample closets. Every bedroom has cross windows on two sides, a generous supply of light throughout this house, both up and down, stamps it as a date.

This house design is one attractive and popular. It is free of ornamentation that complicate the construction of a house, and so is about as any structure of this size

LIFE UNDER HUN WAS LIVING HELL

Englishman Tells of Four Years in Bruges During Occupation.

CRUELTY OF KULTUR RULE

Determined Efforts by German Officers to Break Spirit of Belgian Residents Prove Futile—Fined Indiscriminately.

London.—Life under the German yoke is vividly portrayed in the diary of Mr. Humphrey Page, an Englishman who lived four years in Bruges during the German occupation. Events are recorded showing determined attempts by the German officers to break the spirit of the Belgian residents proved futile. The ramifications of kultur-rule also are shown. Here are some of the events, sketchily told:

In September, 1916, the Bruges city council was directed to find a specified number of workmen for the Germans under penalty of $25,000 fine for each day's delay. All who refused to work were imprisoned.

M. Schrauvens, leading attorney, discussing this affair with Belgians in a cafe, said he would not work for the Germans, and considered Belgians who did as cowards. The next day the attorney was summoned before the German commander, fined $750, sent to Sedan for six months' hard labor, but never was returned.

There were all sorts of petty tyranny. French and English advertisements on buildings had to be removed. Even printed funeral notices in French were forbidden.

Ban on King's Picture.

No resident over ten years old was allowed to be in the streets without a passport containing his photo. It was a punishable offense to exhibit portraits of the Belgian king and queen. German officers stood at church doors to confiscate coins, worn as brooches or lockets, bearing the likeness of the Belgian king.

No one was allowed to be on the streets after 8 p. m. Occasionally, on the whole town was punished some alleged offense, every resident had to remain indoors after 6 p. m., an especial hardship for the poor in summertime. One of the sources of income to the German overlords was fines inflicted on persons whose watches or clocks stopped at Belgian time, instead of German, as ordered by the Kaiser.

An officer sent to inspect the conduct of St. Andre, a girls' school, reported that the sister who showed him around had a wrist watch showing Belgian time. The sister was fined $250. A Grand Place shopkeeper was imprisoned three months for showing an officer Belgian instead of German time.

At the beginning of 1917 prices of commodities soared. A pound of butter cost $2.50, an ordinary pair of shoes $15 to $20 a pair, re-soled same $3, while dress goods and flannels became so expensive only the wealthy could buy.

Food supplies were unsatisfactory and the Germans did nothing to alleviate them.

In November, 1917, metals of all sorts, especially brass and copper, were confiscated. German soldiers going from house to house and building to building to strip away the metal.

Uses Funeral for Propaganda.

On February 2, 1917, some German planes dropped bombs by mistake on Bruges. Von Buttler, commandant, decided the funeral of the victims could be utilized for propaganda purposes. He got a wreath and a photographer, and while the mourners were about the grave, made them line up, put himself in the center and had the scene recorded. On September 3, 1917, allied airmen dropped bombs at the Bassin and were fired at from St. Croix. Shells fell in Bruges, killing a dozen people. The German officers refused to allow funeral mass notices to be posted unless the line "killed by English shells" was added. The

War's End Brings Wave of Crime to Seattle

Seattle, Wash.—The end of the war is bringing a wave of crime throughout the country, especially in this city, according to Chief of Police Joel Warren of Seattle. He says gunmen and hundreds of other criminals who have been working in the shipyards and other essential war industries to avoid going to war are leaving their work for the easier life.

The chief says the recent outbreak of crime here has verified his prediction made months ago that the end of the war would be followed by many infractions of the laws.

Belgians refused and the notices were torn down.

Two Germans constructed bomb-proof cellars accommodating 200 to 1,000 persons each. While excavating they came upon 8,000 hidden bottles of wine belonging to M. Ganshof. The wine was taken without payment. The bomb-proofs were for Germans and people in small houses without cellars had to take their chances at night, although they could use the "public refuges" in daytime.

German Atrocities Continue to the End.

Retreating Huns Show Ingenuity in Devising Infernal Machines.

With the British-American Armies.—German devilry seemed to know no bounds in the last days of fighting on the British front, after the Hindenburg line had been shattered. They attached grenades to the bodies of dead Huns left behind in the German retreat, so that when the bodies were lifted the grenades exploded, killing or wounding the bearers.

Near the town of Le Cateau, a number of Australian stretcher bearers were killed by these grenades in attempting to remove some German dead from the field from in front of an American machine-gun position. Thereafter, no Australian would put hand on a dead German. In some cases the bodies were dragged to their burial places by means of a long rope, which allowed the stretcher bearers to keep out of range of any exploding hand grenades.

The Americans, on the other hand, hit upon a plan of making the German prisoners bury their own dead. In one instance, a Boche prisoner was summarily shot because he refused to remove the body of one of his dead companions. An examination of the body later led to the discovery that it was mined. The German was aware of this fact and refused to touch it.

In one small town evacuated by the Germans, many of the beds were found to be mined. An American officer, tired and worn by hard fighting, sought rest on a lounge in a room previously occupied by a German officer. The lounge blew up and he was instantly killed.

Another officer picked up a pair of field glasses, left by the Germans, and was adjusting the focus when the glasses exploded in his hands and blew away part of his face.

The Huns had become adept in the nefarious business of making infernal machines, mines and time fuses, and there was scarcely an area where the electrical and engineering experts of the allies did not find some new form of their fiendish ingenuity.

EMULATES HORATIUS OF OLD

Chaplain Holds the Bridge as Bravely as Did the Roman Captain.

Cleveland, O.—"Horatius at the Bridge" had nothing on Rev. James M. Hanley of Cleveland, chaplain of a regiment in France. According to stories drifting back from the front, the chaplain was wounded while holding a bridge the Huns sought to take. As it is related here by friends of the former priest, a captain and a few soldiers were detailed to hold the bridge against heavy odds. The captain said it couldn't be done without more men. "Why, I can hold that bridge with a club," Hanley is said to have declared. "Then do it," the captain answered as he hurried off for reinforcements.

The soldiers, inspired by the action of the chaplain, rallied around him and held the contested bridge until the captain returned with more men and made the bridge safe.

YANKEE TROOPS MARCHING INTO GERMANY

After celebrating for a while the announcement that the armistice had been signed this American army looked more upon the serious side of the great war, and with the same firm step but with lighter hearts started on the march for occupied territory in Germany.

GERMANS POINTING OUT LOCATIONS OF THEIR MINES

This Canadian official photograph is the first showing German officers in one of their cars passing through the Canadian lines to point out the location of mines planted by their engineers, which the German forces agreed to do according to the terms of the armistice.

MRS. BARNETT AND HER SON

Mrs. George Barnett, wife of the commandant of the U. S. marine corps, was the first American woman to visit the Marne battlefields after the American engagements there. She decorated with flowers many of the graves of American heroes. Mrs. Barnett was summoned abroad suddenly a few weeks ago because of the illness of her husband. This picture was made with her son, Basil Gordon, a lieutenant in the marines.

LABOR MISSION FROM ITALY TO AMERICA

An Italian labor mission, bringing greetings to American labor and promises of support to whatever peace plans may be decided on at the conference has arrived in Washington. Military success, Chairman de Ambris says, has wiped out the effects of bolshevism in Italy. In the group are, front row, left to right: Romoto Sabbatini, Sylvano Fasulo, Alceste de Ambris, chairman, and Ettore Cuzzani; back row, Adelino Pedrini, Carlo Bazzi and Anallenne de Ambris.

RETURNING YANKS WELCOMED HOME

in American barracks, living with the soldiers and receiving the consideration and regalement which befits the official mascot of a company of "les Americaines." The practice started when a few units annexed homeless French boys who happened around their camp. But the life was too attractive to be confined to the homeless, and other French youths, living with their parents or provided for in orphanages, deserted these homes to become American soldiers' proteges.

At one aviation instruction center ten boys were found, each supported by an aviation squadron, which, by means of tailor-made uniforms and means, was trying to outdo the boys in caring for their mascot. Most of the boys were going to school and were smoking cigarettes. Pershing issued an order forbidding the "adoption" of more boys, but that all those boys who were as mascots returned

World's Biggest Whistle Can Be Heard 12 Miles

Pittsburgh, Pa.—What is said to be the largest whistle in the world has been placed on one of the smokestacks of the Homestead Steel works. The whistle, 200 feet above the ground, is five feet long and one foot in diameter and is connected with a three-inch steam pipe. It requires 150 pounds of steam to blow the whistle, which can be heard 12 miles.

Kisses at $35 Per.

Macon, Ga.—A. C. Freeman paid $35 for a kiss from Miss Hallie Manning and declared the osculation was worth it. Freeman and an army officer bid for the kissing privilege and the price was given to the United War Work fund.

The tall bookkeeper wound about three yards of lower limb around the leg of the table and remarked as he gazed off into space:

"I would like to know just what some people's idea of inconvenience is. For instance, the other day a small child belonging to one of our neighbors knocked at our back door."

"What can I do for you, little girl?" I asked.

"Well," she said, "my papa says he hopes it won't inconvenience you any, but he has sent our ice box downtown to have a new lining put in, and he wants to know if you will lend us your refrigerator for three or four days until ours gets fixed."

"Can you beat that?"—St. Joseph Gazette.

Truth About Books.

Some of the most famous books are least worth reading. Their fame was due to their doing something that needed in their day to be done. The work done, the virtue of the book expires.—John Morley.

Many of our American women were unable to take up the duties of nursing as the front, but they should know how to take care of their own at home, and for this purpose no better book was ever printed than the Medical Adviser—a book containing 1,008 pages, and bound in cloth, with chapters on First Aid, Bandaging and care of Fractures, Taking care of the Sick, Physiology, Hygiene, Sex Problems, Mother and Babe, which can be had at most drug stores, or sent 50 cents to the publishers, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

The women at home, who are worn out, who suffer from pain at regular or irregular intervals, who are nervous or dizzy at times, should take that reliable, temperance, herbal tonic which a doctor in active practice prescribed many years ago. "The Parisians extracted fun even out of the German gotha raids," said a senator in a Washington interview. "Two young Frenchmen met in the Tuilleries gardens the morning after a raid. SALVAGING MAN POWER for PEACE

William Harper Dean

Reclamation of Mutilated Soldier One of Miracles Born of War

THE fighting man who "gets it" and then "goes west" is missed by his trenchmates, the one who gets a nice, clean wound is envied, but the man who is struck by flying steel and leaves the lines to emerge from the hospital a legless, armless or sightless by-product of war is pitied from the depths of his comrades' hearts. Artillerymen pray that when they are hit they will not be mutilated for life; so do infantrymen. For they sicken at the thought of passing the remainder of their days a burden to themselves and others, objects of pity and charity. Death is the least toll of war.

But now comes the miracle, just another which has been born of the most colossal war: The reclamation of the mutilated man, the refitting of him to return to civil life the worker of his own destiny, without aid of charity or pity or pension. The armless will return to their trades and professions, the blind will work alongside the sighted by grace of a superdeveloped seventh sense, the legless may take up their work where they left it to join the colors, or else equip themselves for a new object in life and ask no special concessions from their whole-limbed competitors nor from any man.

More Than Makeshift.

Mechanical ingenuity has devised the artificial arm and leg which is something more than a makeshift; for partially concealing the loss of a limb. With sufficient training in its use a man equipped with such an arm can shave himself with an open razor, a feat which many a man with both arms intact will not attempt. He can grasp a whetstone and sharpen a scythe or hold a delicate tool at a lathe for work demanding the finest precision. From his new training the blinded man emerges capable of efficient work at the same level as his fellow workers with unimpaired sight. It all rests with the individual—whether he applies himself with new hope and enthusiasm to the task of refitting himself for a productive, useful career.

France furnishes well high innumerable examples of the new surgery and the new training of men who to all intents and purposes have been handicapped for life. Throughout the republic re-educational schools for mutilated men have been established and are graduating men and returning them to the channels of peace time occupations at a marvelous rate.

A mangle who has lost his right arm is set to work performing simple exercises with his left, such as cutting out squares and ovals from sheets of thin copper. After five or six weeks of this elementary training in any American Red Cross or French re-educational school, his left hand begins to develop some of the skill looked for from a man's right arm. Soon he is able to write with his left, and eventually he forgets the loss of the other member.

Time and Patience Needed.

Then comes the attachment of the ingenious mechanical arm to the stub of his right. It takes time and patience to learn to operate its springs and levers and clamps, for every operation must be managed from the shoulder and remaining section of the arm. To the "wrist" of this artificial member the mangle learns to attach a score of hooks and clasps, each designed to perform a particular function. With these attachments he can hold a pen and write, hold a book for reading, whittle with a knife, sweep with a broom, use his knife at the table for cutting his food.

An artificial thumb, wonderfully constructed to replace the lost natural member, enables him to grasp objects between thumb and forefinger. Farm work is notoriously hard work, calling for skill as well as for a strong, active body behind it. France is returning her wounded soldiers to the soil at a rate little short of miraculously.

A Polu, leaving the hospital after amputations, enters one of the Red Cross or French re-educational schools. Let us say he has lost both legs and that he was originally a worker in vineyards in the south of France. Naturally he wants to go back to his home section when he has been discharged, and the great hope in his heart is that he will in some way be able to re-enter the old life.

"But I have lost both legs," he tells the official who is making a preliminary study of his case. "These new ones are excellent, monsieur, but I cannot prune vines again."

"Quite so, but you can be taught to do useful work sitting down."

"But, monsieur, one cannot prune vines that way."

"Exactly. But I have something else in mind. Your grape harvest is gathered in baskets, is it not? How would you like to learn basket-weaving? There is need for such work in your home section."

Desires Are Consulted.

It goes that way. No mangle is set to work at a new task without having his natural desires consulted. If he wants work in agriculture, there is something which he can be taught to do. If it is a factory he longs for, his artificial hand will be trained for the factory.

I have seen French mangles from the farming sections of France, who before the war plowed behind a pair of oxen, being taught the intricacies of the mechanical tractor. And I have seen these same men going out to plow once more—not as peasants behind oxen, but as skilled tractor operators, whose false arms or legs equipped them to compete successfully with highly trained men who have lost neither. And I have seen a mangle who had lost both arms in battle climb nimbly to his seat on a farm cart and drive off.

Illustrations might be multiplied, but would be superfluous. The re-educational system in operation abroad and in America holds a deeper significance and interest than its application of advanced surgery and mechanics in re-equipping men for the tasks of peace.

The significant feature of it in France, for instance, is that these men emerge from the welter of hell, minus arms and legs, sometimes blind, to return to civil life better equipped than in their previous days.

The education of the French peasant in the past has been largely a matter of utilizing ancient methods. Men have plowed with oxen because their grandfathers did; neither had the advantage of training in advanced agriculture. But the peasant who leaves a re-educational school and returns to the soil is no longer content to farm in the old way.

The Great Awakening.

He has learned the economy of tractor plowing and of seed drills and of manure spreaders. He has learned the principles and practical side of modern dairying and orcharding. He will not be satisfied to use his new arm or leg as he used the old. It has been the great awakening for him and his kind, and unconsciously or purposely he will spread the contagion of the new order of things in the midst of the old.

MANY TRADES OPEN TO MEN WHO HAVE LOST BOTH LEGS

ARTIFICIAL LEG DOES NOT MAKE THIS FARM WORKER HELPLESS

Industry throughout the world must not close its eyes to the inevitable fact that following the war re-equipped men who have sacrificed sight and limbs for their country will come back to take their places alongside the whole. They will come back efficient men, asking no sympathy, asking no special concessions from employers or those with whom they work shoulder to shoulder. The world is not going to be flooded with idle, saddened objects of pity and charity. That, too, belongs to the old order of things.

In the readjustment of every nation's economic and industrial life following the demobilization of the armless the men reclaimed from mutilation will demand and receive their full share of the task.

This is one of the war's most sublime achievements, second only to the everlasting defeat of military autocracy.

Idealism

We cannot get away from idealism any more than we can from character, nor from an idealism based on knowledge. The problem will be as it always has been, one of making it helpful and fruitful, and enlisting it in the service of man. It cannot serve man except through other men, and as applied by them. The greatest ideal ever revealed to the world was the ideal of service. There could have been none greater. Christian people certainly will not deny this, for it is one of the basic truths of their religion. Idealism, service and obedience, therefore, all go together, and are all necessary elements of a symmetrical character. They will not lose their importance or value. We cannot think of men living together in a civilized society without them. For, lacking them, men would not be men, and society would not be civilized.—Boston Globe.

Belgium's Independence.

More than 75 years ago Belgium declared her independence of Holland, to which she had been united by the settlement of 1815. Long-standing dissatisfaction first broke into open rebellion on the night of August 25, when the performance of the opera "La Muette de Portici," with its passionate appeal for emancipation, inflamed the audience to such a degree that the people left the opera house and flew to arms. Europe regarded the outbreak as merely a local riot until a month later, when the Dutch army sent to re-establish order in Brussels was led into a trap from which it extricated itself only after four days' heavy fighting and the loss of 1,500 men. Immediately on the withdrawal of the defeated troops a provisional government was assembled and on October 4 Belgium was proclaimed an independent state.

First Flyer

Aviation was born in ancient Greece, observes Camp Kelly Field Eagle. Digging down into the depths of bookery they have found that Icarus was the original boy aviator, and though he fell to his death in his first solo flight, there was no flying field named after him simply because in the golden days of Greek mythology the nations had not gone in seriously for aviation. However, since there were no fields to be named, they christened the sea into which he fell the Icarian sea. A board of investigation appointed to investigate the cause of the accident made findings that Icarus' wings had come off probably "due to the intense heat of the sun melting the wax which held them firmly to his body."

Insects Have Short Life.

As Hearn truly said, the incidents of the insect world are mostly of a nightmare character—witness the nuptial flight of the bee and the devouring by the female spider of her bridegroom. Whether they have wings or stings or both or none, theirs is the life of the preyer or the preyed upon and they can defend themselves feebly only by protective coloring, or perhaps an unpleasant taste which makes them inedible to birds that would otherwise eat them. Whether they creep on the ground or appear to flutter joyously among the flowers, their struggle for existence is fierce and incessant. Thus does stark science brush away the fuzzy sanctor of a sentimental older era.

What a lot of misery they cause! How Acid-Stomach, with its day-after-day sufferings, does take the joy out of life! Not only that—Acid-Stomach is always undermining one's health. Think of what acid does to the teeth—how the acid eats through the enamel, causing them to decay. Is it any wonder, then, that Acid-Stomach saps the strength of the strongest bodies and wrecks the health of so many people?

You see ACID-STOMACH victims everywhere always ailing. They can't tell exactly what is the matter; all they say is, "I don't feel well"—"I'm all in; tired, sickly." If they only knew it, nine times out of ten it is Acid-Stomach that is ailing them. It surely makes good digestion difficult, causes food to sour and ferment in the bowels, weakens the blood and fills the system with poisons. It prevents one from getting the full strength out of their food.

PILES

An Interesting Experience of a Druggist Who Found Out How to Treat Piles or Hemorrhoids

This druggist was himself a sufferer from piles in its worst form, and naturally tried all the available remedies found in first class drug stores, but without benefit. Having a personal acquaintanceship with the very best doctors, he was treated first by one and then another, including a specialist on rectal disorders, until finally he was operated upon—all without gaining permanent relief. So he commenced experimenting. He tried first one combination of healing drugs and then another, until to his great delight he hit upon what seemed to be just the correct mixture. The result was so gratifying that he compounded enough to allow those of his friends whom he knew to be suffering with piles to try it—with always the same results—quick and entire relief. So he recorded his formula, and now it is put up for the general use of the public and is called GOLD SEAL PILE SALVE.

A Banker's Experience
A cashier of one of the largest banks in this part of the country suffered very badly with piles. The nature of his work was such that this disorder caused him great inconvenience and annoyance. The constant nagging pain almost unfit him for his business. Gold Seal Pile Salve was recommended to him, and although he had some what lost faith in ever getting relief, he purchased one box and was very greatly astonished to find that only a few applications of this healing salve entirely relieved him, and he has had no further trouble.

This is a rare opportunity—once you really can't afford to miss, so don't delay, but get a box now. You won't regret it.

THE BANKER AND THE FARMER

By co-operating with a bank the farmer places himself in position to receive the financial support that is so necessary at certain seasons in all agricultural pursuits. And it is the farmer's co-operation that places the bank in position to render such support. In a word, the banker and the farmer need each other.

We particularly solicit the accounts of farmers and the facilities of this bank are always at their disposal.

Some Europeans, commenting on the refusal of the United States to ratify the peace treaty and league of nations covenant, declare that "the United States had just as well stayed out of the war." If this country had not come to the rescue of the allies the German eagles would at this very time be floating over London, Paris, Rome and all the other capitals of Europe and parts of Asia. The allies were gasping their last when the Americans turned the battle and kept driving back the Huns until they surrendered. The allies have proven very ungrateful of America's help; right now some of them are demanding that America pay a large proportion of their war debts.

Insist On Genuine Ford Parts

Imitation "Ford" parts are being sold by many mail-order houses, downtown stores and garages to unsuspecting Ford owners as "Ford" parts. But they are not Genuine Ford parts made by the Ford Motor Company. They are made by concerns who have no connection whatsoever with the Ford Motor Company. These imitation parts are not even made from the same grade of steel, or under the same formulas used by the Ford Company. They are counterfeit parts. Tests have shown them to break when the Genuine Ford parts didn't even bend, and they generally are from thirty-five to one hundred per cent lower in quality.

The Authorized Ford Dealer is your protection. As such, we handle nothing but the Genuine Ford parts. They are made from the famous Ford Vanadium Steel and each part—according to its use—is heat-treated in the way that will give it the longest wearing qualities. Every part is the same as its duplicate in your Ford car or Ford truck.

Our stock of parts is complete. And our Ford garage and Ford mechanics are at your service at all times. Drive in when replacements or repairs for your Ford car may be necessary. Save your car and also your money.

South Dakota on Monday ratified the woman's suffrage amendment by an almost unanimous vote, it being the twenty-first state to do so. Only fifteen more state ratifications are necessary. An effort is being made in all other states to have the governors to convene special sessions to ratify, and likely they will do so, in time to permit women to vote in the next presidential election. So far only one state has positively voted against ratification. Why delay longer? Why put off the inevitable, why kick against the things that are sure to come?

The greatest profiteering is said to be in diamonds. A stone of one carat weight sells for $200 to $300, according to quality. To produce that stone in the rough cost $7. Properly cut it could be sold at a handsome profit for $30. As the diamond industry is controlled by a close monopoly it is possible to make such tremendous profits, for as a diamonds merchant says, "as long as there are pretty women, men will buy diamonds for them." Americans are the greatest purchasers of diamonds, and the sole question with the diamond sellers is, what will the Americans pay?
