Low turnout expected in Mitchell vote

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

Voter turnout is expected to be low in Tuesday's Democratic runoff election for Mitchell County sheriff. Early votes cast total 176, which represents 3.6 percent of registered voters.

Acting Sheriff Patrick Toombs, who topped a field of six candidates in the March 10 primary with 1,072 votes, faces reserve Colorado City Police Department officer David Ginkinger, who got 443 votes.

The winner of the runoff faces Republican George Oliver in the Nov. 3 general election. Oliver has been a patrolman for the city police department the past two years.

Voter turnout through Tuesday will probably be lower than the 2,425 voter turnout for the primary, which was 50 percent of registered voters, officials say.

"It'll probably hurt me some," Toombs said. "Of course, he'll (Ginkinger) probably have the same problem I will; that's getting people back out to vote.

"I've been trying to stress to everyone, they need to get back out to vote." Ginkinger could not be reached for comment this morning.

"There's a lot of interest" in the runoff, assured County Clerk Joan Beach, "But it seems like it takes a lot of races to get people in."

The early vote turnout is "pretty good," she said, "for just one race."

The campaign has centered on experience and familiarity with the people.

Born in Lamesa and raised in Borden County, Toombs, 32, said he is running on his record. He has been a sheriff deputy in Mitchell County nearly three years and was appointed acting sheriff last summer after the sheriff was suspended on sexual harassment charges filed by the county attorney.

"I feel like I've been pretty familiar with the people here," Toombs said.

Ginkinger, who works for Production Operators Transmission System in Snyder, has lived in Mitchell County 15 years. An advertisement he ran in the local newspaper says, "I know Mitchell County," including the people and places. The ad also points out that he is a certified peace officer with law enforcement experience.

Is waste site Clinton's nightmare?

JACKSONVILLE, Ark. (AP) — When Sharon R. Golgan describes her city, she calls it a nightmare. Bill Clinton might be tempted to do the same.

For as long as he's been gover-

For as long as he's been governor, Clinton has been caught in a bitter struggle over tons of toxic remains from a chemical plant that produced much of the Agent Orange herbicide sprayed during the Vietnam War.

State and federal agencies are cooperating in the destruction of 30,000 barrels of chemicals. Many are laced with dioxin, a compound so toxic it prompted the town of Times Beach, Mo., to be abandoned.

Indeed, the dioxin concentrations in chemicals being burned here are sometimes even higher.

But even as the incinerator here burns night and day, Golgan and other environmentalists are trying to stop the government — and the Arkansas governor who is campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"He has no regard to the environment at all," said Golgan, 43, a leader of local protest groups.

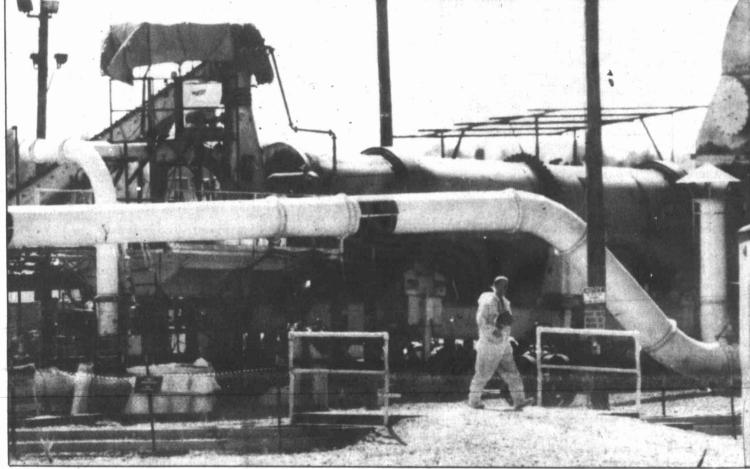

"We're mad at Clinton because he has never taken a stand except for incineration," said Ruby Brown, a 60-year-old widow who is president of People Against A Chemically Contaminated Environment. "I take no pleasure in saying I feel like Jacksonville is a dumping ground."

Critics argue that unburned dioxin escapes into the air during the incineration process. They say the waste material instead should be stored or exported — or perhaps destroyed with some new chemical technology.

Kenneth L. Smith, Clinton's special assistant for natural and cultural resources, said the governor backed incineration because it was the only disposal method the Environmental Protection Agency barely 300 yards from scores of homes. It is one of the few visible signs of what worries this town next door to Little Rock Air Force Base.

Three sites covered under the federal Superfund toxic waste cleanup program are located in Jacksonville. One is the former dump where the incinerator now burns. The two others are landfills.

The town is one of only a handful of places where dioxin has been incinerated, and federal officials say more of the compound has been burned here than anywhere else in the country.

Chemicals and herbicides were produced at the plant under various owners dating to the 1940s, including much for the military.

Local environmental groups say contamination over the years has caused cancers, miscarriages, birth defects and infant deaths. State and local officials say there is no scientific evidence to back that up.

"I'm not aware of any massive health problems in the city of Jacksonville," said Mayor Tommy Swaim.

No one doubts that pollution has spread from the site over the years. Fishing and swimming have been banned in Lake Dupree at a nearby city park. Wells and property were contaminated.

And dioxin from the plant found its way into Bayou Meto, prompting the state to ban commercial fishing for 100 miles downstream to the Arkansas River. The bayou, once a source of catfish, will be unfishable for hundreds of years, officials acknowledge.

John Wicklund, a consultant to EPA on the project, said that once the thick toxic stew inside the yellow plastic drums is destroyed the plant's soil and buildings themselves are to be incinerated. Waste once dumped freely in the landfills will be dug up and burned.

The state learned of the dioxin in Jacksonville in 1979, the year after Clinton was first elected governor.

He eventually sided with EPA in agreeing that incineration was the best way to get rid of it. The state took over

Taxes have locals scrambling to finish

Staff Writer

As Wednesday's deadline for filing federal income tax forms approaches, some area residents are scrambling to get their income taxes completed.

"We've had a lot more late filers than last year — your paper said there was 53 percent unreported returns and I think that's about right," said Cindy Reitzer of Cindy's Bookkeeping & Tax Service.

Reitzer and her partner have been coming in early and working late for the past three weeks, she said. "There are people getting refunds who are still waiting until the last minute."

"We've had a few come in to pick up extension forms, but some people think it's an extension on paying. They have to pay what they owe even though they file an extension," said Tommy

Richmond, manger of H&R Block.

At H&R Block, however, this April appears a little bit slower than tax time last year, Richmond said. Even though January and February saw standing room only crowds at the establishment, he added.

"I have three legal size boxes full of extensions," said Sonora Honey of Honey Tax Service Inc. About 50 percent of the extensions are not being sent in with a check or money order for payment, Honey said.

The Internal Revenue Service will penalize all those who fail to pay any money by the deadline, but is often forgiving if the taxpayer includes at least a portion of the money owed, she said.

Her office has been open seven days a week most of the time since Jan. 1.

Caterpillar, UAW resume Chicago contract talks

CHICAGO (AP) — Caterpillar Inc. and the United Auto Workers met to resume contract negotiations in their five-month labor dispute today.

Even as Caterpillar and the UAW representatives met this morning in suburban Hinsdale, the company proceeded with plans to replace strikers who defied an ultimatum to return to work.

The meeting at the invitation of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service is the first since March 26 in the strike launched Nov. 4, which has idled almost 13,000 workers.

As he entered the mediation service building with a delegation of local union presidents, UAW secretary-treasurer Bill Casstevens would not say whether he was optimistic about the chances for progress.

chances for progress.
"We'll see what happens," he said.

Asked the same question, Caterpillar spokesman Bill Lane said, "No comment."

Meanwhile, the company hopes to test about 400 applicants today, said Caterpillar spokesman Gil Nolde by telephone from Peoria. They are among the thousands of people the company said called in response to ads placed last week after Caterpillar told the striking union employees to return to work or lose their jobs.

Although the company's stance on replacement workers has increased bitter feelings among striking workers, many expressed optimism today that the Hinsdale meeting might lead to a resolution of the dispute, said Paul Mantzke, vice president of Local 145.

"A lot of them are putting a lot of hopes in this meeting," he said. "We're hoping for the best."

Hundreds of union employees resumed their vigil today outside Illinois plants, hoping to discourage people from crossing picket lines.

"We can't stop people from going in, all we're doing is being out there to protest what Caterpillar has done," Mantzke said.

Caterpillar, the world's largest manufacturer of earth-moving equipment, claims its back-to-work ultimatum has drawn back 750 workers. The union disputes the figure.

The company began advertising for new employees on Tuesday, saying it hopes to have some working by May 1.

Caterpillar wouldn't say how many people responded, but Illinois Bell reported thousands of calls to overloaded company phone lines the first day the ads appeared in newspapers.

Caterpillar spokesman Gil Nolde said Sunday that the company expected to process 50 applications an hour today in Peoria. Applicant testing also was planned at Caterpillar plants in Decatur and Aurora, he said.

The UAW has said it will not sign a contract allowing replacements to keep strikers' jobs.

Caterpillar also is recalling laidoff workers, spokesman Bill Lane said Sunday. About 2,400 workers laid off before the strike have first right to return and will be considered strikers if they don't,

8 in custody in robbery-slaying

KINGWOOD (AP) - Three men remained in jail on capital murder charges while five juveniles also were in custody in connection with the robbery-slaying of a recovering stroke victim.

Authorities said they expected the ninth suspect in the case, also a juvenile, to surrender to investigators today

Karl D. Nowlin, 44, was found beaten and fatally shot in the head Thursday, lying beside his Shar-Pei, Missy, who also was shot to death.

"One of the kids told him they were going to kill his dog, and he told them, 'If you're going to kill the dog, kill me," Harris County Sheriff's detective Ronnie Phillips

And they did, the detective said.

Harris County Sheriff's investigators said suspects took Nowlin's wallet, which contained $50 and an automatic teller card.

Danny Reagan, 18; Antonio Dooley, 17; and William Johnson III, 17, were charged with capital murder and were being held without bond in the Harris County Jail, officials said late Sunday.

Five juveniles also are being held. Another juvenile suspect remained at large Sunday, but authorities said they expected the teen-ager to surrender today.

Detectives said Nowlin often paid neighborhood boys $100 to mow his lawn. He told friends others needed the money more than he did. Nowlin's fortune was derived from his family's local

Man's disappearance still puzzling

"I'm looking for the beast," the man replied.

David Stone, 29, of San Diego was wearing shorts and a T-shirt and carrying a yucca walking stick, Rivers recalls. It was the last time Stone was seen alive.

Six days after the encounter, Stone was declared missing. His skeletal remains were found in the desert near here last Feb. 23 by three men hunting javelinas.

"It was the most bizarre case I ever worked on," former Hidalgo County sheriff's Deputy Bill Cavaliere says. "It was just about the strangest thing that ever happened around here.

When Stone was declared missing, searchers turned out in force. Airplanes, bloodhounds and ground teams scoured the countryside between Rodeo and Road Forks, in New Mexico's Bootheel near the Arizona state line.

Before his disappearance, Stone had been traveling from San Diego to El Paso, Texas, to be best man at the wedding of his best friend, Steve Haskins, son of University of Texas-El Paso basketball coach Don Haskins.

Periodically, search and rescue teams practiced near where he vanished.

"All the time we were out there we knew we were really trying to find out what happened to David Stone," says Hidalgo County search leader Ralph Dawdy.

The original search was one of the strangest in his experience. Dawdy says.

'We never saw where he got his water. We never found tracks near a windmill. We never found discarded food wrappers. We're not used to looking for people who don't want to be found," he says. The Stones and other investigators pieced together this itinerary: After leaving San Diego on Oct. 29, David Stone checked into a motel in Eloy, Ariz., and slept a few hours, then drove to Tucson. At 10:22 p.m. he got $200 from an automatic teller machine. At 4:03 a.m. next day he bought high-tech campaigners. Brown has raised about $2.5 million in small donations from some 40,000 Americans with his 1-800 number and recently held an "electronic town meeting" in which computer enthusiasts could type questions into their personal computers and Brown would type answers in return via a computer communications network

Democratic front-rynner Bill Clinton raised $200,000 from supporters in Arkansas with a single phone call from New Hampshire carried to speakers in 300 locations in his home state connected by telephone conferencing.

Clinton also reached into 25,000 homes with mailed campaign videotapes

Meanwhile, billionaire Ross Perot has set up an elaborate one bank with 1,200 extensions to help collect the tens of thousands of signatures he needs to get his independent campaign on the ballots calls by area codes and assigns priorities to those with approaching ballot deadlines.

He's also mentioned using interactive closed circuit television and computer networking as a way to reach voters in the fall.

And nearly all the candidates have prepped their campaign staffs, mingled with voters and tapped fund-raising pockets just by lifting a finger - thanks to satellite uplinks and telephone conferencing. The advantages?

"It's making traditional campaign tasks cheaper and more efficient," said Charles Black, a senior adviser to President Bush.

The Bush campaign plans to use a computerized spy system this fall that can determine where an opponent is advertising anywhere in the nation, how often, at what cost and to what audiences.

Robin Roberts, president of Alexandria, Va.-based National Media Inc. which is marketing the system, said Bush would be able to monitor stations in the 80 largest media markets as well as the networks and cable channels.

When a new commercial airs, its audio is "fingerprinted" into digital codes, transmitted back to a mainframe computer, which then monitors television and radio stations across the nation.

The computer can calculate on a daily basis what commercials an opponent is using, where and how often, how much the opponent is spending on advertising, what demographic groups he's reaching and how often he's using positive vs. negative spots

The system, tested by Bush during the New Hampshire primary, could replace the army of volunteers that goes to individual stations on a daily basis to monitor ad activity.

The Democratic National Committee, like many campaigns, has its own computer network called "Donkeynet" that allows state party leaders, candidates and some ivileged donors to dial in for the latest press releases, poll data, convention information and partyrelated news.

Gadhafi may accept U.N. resolution

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) - With U.S. servicemen, but never to the the deadline for U.N. sanctions approaching, Moammar Gadhafi is indicating he might back down from his refusal to surrender to the West two suspects in the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103.

The Libyan leader is reported to have accepted the United Nations' demand with conditions. Such acceptance would appear to fall far short of what is necessary to avoid the imposition of sanctions on Wednesday.

As the Arab community continued to pursue last-minute efforts to try to forestall the air, arms and diplomatic embargo, Libya announced through its official news agency that it will cut itself off from the world on Tuesday.

The agency, JANA, reported that all international travel and communication links will be severed to mourn 41 Libyans killed in a 1986 U.S. air strike.

Wednesday is the raid's sixth anniversary. Libya apparently chose to observe it a day early to keep the sanctions from overshadowing the gesture.

Gadhafi has always marked the anniversary of the U.S. air raid, which the United States said was in retaliation for the bombing of a Berlin discotheque frequented by nothing about the latest Libyan of-extent of shutting off his country. Libya says American bombs killed Gadhafi's adopted daughter in his house in Tripoli during the raid. He was not known to have had a daughter.

President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt met with Gadhafi in Tripoli on Sunday and told newspaper editors on the flight home that Gadhafi told U.N. envoy Vladimir Petrovsky last week of his conditional acceptance to the world body's demands.

The Security Council has voted to impose the sanctions if Libya does not surrender two alleged Libyan agents indicted by the United States and Britain in the downing of Flight 103 over Scotland in 1988, killing 270 people.

Gadhafi contends that would violate Libyan sovereignty.

When Petrovsky left Tripoli last week, he gave no indication of progress toward settling the Libyan impasse with the United Nations.

But in a leaked memorandum to U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, Petrovsky said: 'Libya . . . intends to comply with international law in a manner that does not infringe upon its sovereignty.

Yeltsin's Cabinet is threatening to resign

MOSCOW (AP) - President Boris Yeltsin's Cabinet submitted its resignation today, telling a hostile parliament that abandoning his economic reforms could worsen inflation and block Russia's entry into the world market.

Yeltsin, who is both president and prime minister, asked his ministers to continue working through the end of the parliament session, when he will decide whether to accept their resignations, Deputy Premier Yegor Gaidar said.

The Cabinet had threatened earlier to resign, but went a step further today by actually submitting a letter of resignation.

Women make strong bids for senate seats

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) -California voters in November could become the first in the nation to elect women to both of their state's U.S. Senate seats.

Both seats are open for the first time in California history because Democrat Alan Cranston is retiring and Republican Pete Wilson left to become governor.

Former San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein is the frontrunner for the Democratic nomination for one seat. U.S. Rep. Barbara Boxer is fighting for the party's nod for the other seat.

Neither is campaigning exclusively for women's votes. But each is banking on the fact that women outnumber men 3.5 million to 2.8 million among California Democrats.

Both have made an issue of the Senate's handling of law professor Anita Hill's sexual harassment charges against Clarence Thomas.

The overriding theme of Feinstein's announcement rallies earlier this year was that the Senate, with 98 men and two women, doesn't adequately represent women.

Voter doubts about Clinton

Despite taking the best battering that the New York media and Jerry Brown could dish out, Bill Clinton avoided the kind of defeat that would have turned the lingering doubts about his candidacy into a full stampede in search of an alternative. But, even in victory, Clinton does not yet have the look of a victor.

With his primary wins in New York, Kansas and Wisconsin, Clinton is more than ever the front-runner. The Arkansas governor now has more than half of the delegates he needs to capture the Democratic presidential nomination. That total seems likely to swell as the campaign battleground now turns to industrial states like Pennsylvania and Indiana and Southern states like North Carolina and Arkansas, places where Clinton has already proven his vote-getting strength.

Clinton also looks stronger in light of Jerry Brown's failure to emerge as a plausible alternative. Brown's third-place finish in New York behind Paul Tsongas, who was on the ballot but had declared himself out of the race, and his fourth-place showing in Kansas, where he trailed both Tsongas and "uncommitted," shows that familiarity has revealed to the voters the emptiness lurking behind the pat slogans and 800-number.

Brown vows to go on to the convention, but he, like Pat Buchanan on the Republican side, is a spoiler, not a contender.

Yet the undeniable delegate arithmetic working in Clinton's favor does nothing to erase the voter doubts that still hound him. Nearly half of the New York and Wisconsin Democrats who voted in the primary — and there were many fewer than usual — doubt that Clinton has the integrity and honesty to be president. A full two-thirds still long for a different and more appealing choice than any of those offered them.

That seems unlikely to happen. Barring a Clinton collapse, it's getting harder to imagine a scenario in which a brave knight rides up on a white horse to rescue the Democrats. The once-plausible alternative, Tsongas, considered a return to active campaigning, but decided against it after Clinton won the New York primary.

That means it is up to Clinton, who, like Tsongas, has offered sensible ideas for curing America's economic and social ills, to use the next two months to convince his own party that he has the character and judgment to be president and to direct the attention of the alienated majority away from his foibles and toward his message.

If he can't do that, the nomination that now seems his may not be worth having.

I contribute my success in life, such as it is, to many people with whom I have been associated along the way. The one person who most often comes to mind is my ninth-grade school teacher at Center Point School in 1934 — Walker Bailey.

Center Point was a three-room school with a small student population. Mr. Bailey (about 25 years of age) was the principal and teacher for the three highest grades, the basketball and softball coach for both the boys and girls teams. Mr. Bailey was, generally speaking, Mr. "Everything" that took place at Center Point. However, there were a few items that was never a problem for Mr. Bailey; assistant principal, bus drivers, maintenance chief, security chief, school nurse (if he had a first-aid kit not many people was aware of it), student counselor - just to mention a

There was no janitor to start the fire in the "pot belly" stove in each room or to carry in the coal to keep them going. I suspect that Mr. Bailey utilized some "boy power" in his accomplishment of ome of these chores. One way or another all of these things were achieved daily as a matter of life so many things come to mind. For instance, Mr. Bailey's wife, Wynelle, was a student in the classroom as well as a "star" on both the basketball and softball teams (each player was a star no substitutes available). I don't recall an incident in which she corrected Mr. Bailey on any point in the classroom or on the playground. This is a variance from my experience with a wife over a period of several years. My question for Mr. Bailey — what is the secret?

In my reminiscence of my early

One other mystery that comes to mind - we never missed a ballgame at a neighboring school bus to lack of transportation! # What to do about trash?

James J.

Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON - Time is running out on Rick-Rah. That's the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA), adopted by Congress in 1976 and now up for a six-year reauthorization. The problems presented under the law are formidable, but they have to be tackled head-on.

This is the question: What can we do with our trash?

One answer may be that only heaven knows, for mere mortals are having a terrible time of it. Answers must be found that are politically feasible, ecologically acceptable and financially affordable. This is a tough one.

Comparative data are hard to come by, but there is good reason to believe that Americans are the trashiest people in the world. We generate 180 million tons of municipal solid waste every year more than half a ton per Experts disagree on whether the rate at which we generate trash is increasing. The Office of Technology Assessment estimates that we will go from 3.6 pounds per person per day in 1986 to 3.9 pounds by 2000. A study just released by the Heritage Foundation says, no, per capita volume is holding steady and the OTA's estimate rests on assumptions that haven't proved reliable in the past.

The OTA argues persuasively that many areas are running out of space for landfills. The Heritage study says, no, "there is no shortage of land for landfills." Heritage says the total waste produced in the next 100 years could be dumped in one one-hundredth of 1 percent of the total U.S. land mass -- a meaningless statistic if I ever saw one.

Political, environmental and financial concerns all meld

together. Nobody wants a landfill dump in his back yard. Nobody wants the environment polluted by leaching toxins and incinerator gases. A few cities are experimenting with ways to make homeowners pay for garbage collection according to the amount of trash they generate. Many cities are trying to farm out their problems of trash disposal to private companies. The costs are going up, in part because of picayune federal regulations, and states increasingly are refusing to accept trash from neighboring states.

The leading bill in Congress is S.976, sponsored by Sen. Max Baucus of Montana. In its original form the bill was cast in the classic mold of Washington's bureaucracy. It would have imposed all sorts of new requirements on the states and localities. It would have set specific, detailed rules on recycling, and it would have vested sweeping powers in the Environmental Protection Agency.

Fortunately, the bill now pending in Baucus' Environment Committee has been sensibly modified, but it still breathes the spirit of Papa Knows Best. It weaves the kind of sticky cobwebs of regulation for which the Rick-Rah is famous.

The Heritage study cites an example. Under the Clean Water Act of 1972, a municipality is required to file a simple form attesting that a fence restricts entry to a water treatment plant. Under Rick-Rah, a city must submit "an additional 25 pages detailing the fence design, the location of fenceposts and gates, a crosssection of the fence's wire mesh, and other technical matters.'

Nothing is simple about trash disposal. A Newtonian law applies: To every action there is always opposed an equal reaction. If it were decreed that everyone must squeeze his own orange juice, there would be less trash from paper cartons but more domestic trash from orange rinds.

The Baucus bill proceeds on the assumption that the first approach should be to reduce the paper and plastic products that go into packaging. Stepped-up recycling has the next priority, followed by incineration and landfills. But if sanitary packaging is reduced, more food will go bad. If disposable diapers are banned, more electric power and detergents must be used in the washing of cloth diapers.

Under Rick-Rah a vast deal of research is being done, and surely this should be continued under any bill that may be agreed upon. The danger in this area, as in countless others, is that research can do more harm than good if it results in uniform federal recommendations for widely varying local problems. Localities -- and individual industries as well -must be given great discretion and much leeway in figuring out their own answers.

The revised Baucus bill goes to the full Environment Committee after markup on April 29. The bill is well-intended, but it still needs an awful lot of work. Copyright 1992 Universal Press

God has a sense of humor

By JOHN LAIRD EL PASO - Ever on the lookout for new and effective ways to enlarge the flock, Pastor Guy Jones recently invited people to come sin with the choir.

"I typed it myself," Jones, pastor at Fort Boulevard United Methodist Church, said with an embarrassed laugh. "I guess I just got in too big a hurry, but everyone at our church seemed to enjoy the typo.

There it was, for all to see in the bulletin given to everyone entering the church on Sunday: 'We are giving an open invitation to all members to come and sin with the choir." Now, that sentence in itself would be considered a novel attempt to increase church membership. But Jones, like many columnists and other writers, simply did not know when to stop. The preacher just HAD to add one more sentence, which effectively doubled the laughs:

'We are giving an open invitation to all members to come and sin with the choir.'

"The more the merrier!" Was this true? Were the fine folks who live in that quaint section of El Paso around Fort Boulevard actually redefining the role of the choir in the modern Methodist church? Hey, I LIKE that. A progressive attitude should be considered a basic component of religion today.

Jones, though, could not stop He just HAD to add a third sentence, which served to triple the humor: "Just make a joyful noise for the Lord!"

A church member asked Jones early that morning if he had seen the bulletin. "I said of course I'd seen it. I TYPED it." Then Jones was invited to scrutinize the bulletin more closely. "And when I saw it, everyone roared with laughter. What made it even funnier was that the choir had asked me to sing with them that Sunday and I agreed to try to help out.' So picture this: After his written invitation for everyone to come and sin with the choir, Jones stepped into the pulpit for his sermon titled, "True Identity." And then, as if to assert his true identity, he concluded his sermon and walked over to join the choir for the anthem.

Surely, God has a sense of humor. We are reminded of this every time a preacher wanders through a church unaware that his wireless microphone is still on and private conversations are being broadcast throughout the building.

God must roar every time a church newspaper publishes something like: "Sunday's sermon is titled, 'What is Hell?' Come early and hear the choir rehearse. We are reminded of God's humor each time a preacher says, "It is kisstomary to cuss the bride." God's humor is alive in the face of a child who says her favorite Bible story "is the one where everyone loafs and fishes."

As long as good-sport preachers and inept typists such as Guy Jones keep humor alive in religion, even the harshest skeptics have reason to enter God's HOBBS, N.M. - The Howard College rodeo teams moved up in the region standings via their performance at the New Mexico Junior College Rodeo this weekend.

The Howard women won the rodeo with 215 points. Eastern New Mexico University was second with 200 points and Tarleton State University was third with 130 points.

The HC men were second with 215 points. Tarleton won the rodeo with 330 points and Western Texas College was third with 185.

That moves the HC women to within 200 points of the second place team. The HC men are within 240 points of second place. The top two individuals in each event and the top two teams advance to the National Finals Rodeo in Bozeman, Mt. #### Hockey strike comes to end

NEW YORK (AP) — By a vote of 409-61, NHL players Saturday ratified the collective bargaining agreement that ended the first strike in the 75-year history of the league. The regular season resumed

The agreement extends the regular season from 80 games to 84 beginning next season with owners and players sharing revenues for the final two games on a partnership basis; increased the players' playoff fund from the current $7.5 million to $9 million and the minimum salary to $100,000: set the entry draft at 11 rounds with a supplemental drafty of one selection for each non-playoff team. Also, the clubs agreed to recognize that the players own exclusive rights to their individual personality, including their likeness; established a new salary arbitration procedure.

Couples earns green jacket

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Now that Fred Couples has answered skeptics by earning his first Masters title, the question becomes how many more he'll win.

"Fred has a game that could win this tournament as many times as a Nicklaus or a Palmer," said Couples' friend and foe, Raymond Floyd. "He's perfect for this golf

Couples, the best player in the world for the past 10 months, earned his first major title Sunday by shooting 2-under-par 70 at Augusta National to beat runnerup Floyd by two strokes

Admirers of Couples' game, including Floyd, have said he's destined for superstardom. Sunday's victory was a big step in that direction.

"Any player wants to win major tournaments," the 32-year-old Seattle native said. "This puts me in a category where I feel much better about my game.

Playing in the final twosome, Couples took a two-shot lead by sinking a 20-foot birdie putt at No. 9, and he stayed ahead the rest of the way. His shakiest moment came at the par-3 No. 12, where his poor tee shot defied gravity by stopping on a steep embankment.

Raes Creek and a likely double bogey were just a couple of feet

"Biggest break of my life," Couples said. "You don't ever get a break like that. "Most balls that hit there would absolutely come back in the water," Floyd said. Couples nearly had to put one foot in the creek to hit his next shot. He took an awkward stance, careful not to clear his throat and send the ball tumbling into the water, and chipped to within two feet of the pin.

He made the putt for par. "I was nervous, because I felt like if I got by that hole, I was going to win," Couples said. He was right. A player once sad-

Fred Couples is cheered by the gallery on the 18th green after winning the 1992 Masters at the Augusta National Golf Club Sunday. It was Couples' first major victory.

While Couples may someday approach the accomplishments of Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, it should be noted that several players in recent years have fallen back to the pack after winning one or two majors. Nick Faldo, Payne Stewart and John Daly — who all finished 13th or worse Sunday come to mind.

At any rate, Couples has cleared a big hurdle.

Third-place finisher Corey Pavin (67-278) and Steve Pate (67-281) closed with nice rounds but began too far behind. That was also true of Mark Calcavecchia (65-285), whose seven-under 29 on the back nine broke the tournament record.

Jeff Sluman (71-280) and Mark O'Meara (70-280) tied for fourth. Sharing sixth with Pate and Baker-Finch were Nolan Henke (70), Nick Price (73), Greg Norman (68), Ted Schulz (72) and 1987 champion Larry Mize (68).

Defending champion Ian Woosman tied for 19th at 75-283. Couples' victory broke a four-year winning streak by Europeans at Augusta National.

After Couples tapped in for par on No. 18, he hugged his wife, Deborah, then headed to the awards ceremony.

The fifth-year guard, averaging 26.1 points on 60.3 percent shooting in seven games this month, has led a stretch of 12 victories in 13 games that has pulled the Celtics within one game of first place in the Atlantic Division.

Detroit and New York played the lowest-scoring NBA game in 37 years, with the Knicks losing ground to Boston while the Pistons stayed a game behind the Celtics in the race for homecourt advantage in the first round of the playoffs.

New York scored just 10 points in the second quarter and 13 in the third while holding the host Pistons to 10 in that period. The combined 23 points tied the NBA record for fewest points in a third quarter, set by Philadelphia and Houston on Feb. 2, 1975. SuperSonics 126, Timberwolves

Pig shines in dog obedience class

CLARKSTON, Mich. (AP) P.J. doesn't seem to mind that all of her classmates are dogs. But the affectionate pig puts her hoof down in choosing between a dog biscuit or pig chow as a reward in the obedience class

'She'd rather have some Purina Pig Chow or munch a bunch of peanuts," said Mary Beth Jones, director of the Trainer Obedience Center

P.J. is an 8-month-old Vietnamese potbellied pig who lives with her owner, Jodi Miller, 25, in the Detroit suburb.

'We call her our swine child," said Miller, a student at Oakland University. "I began looking for an obedience class for her after the vet thought she needed to be more socialized."

from 3 p.m. the previous day

Instructor Laura Christiansen said P.J. is adjusting well after a shaky start among the canines.

"She was really shy and just squealed in panic every time a dog came near her," Christiansen said. Now, P.J. is comfortable playing with the dogs

Miller said it took her a while before she found a dog trainer willing to take on a pig as a pupil.

The other trainers just laughed at me," Miller recalled. "But this school did a lot of research to adapt their training for P.J."

Jones said the housebroken P.J. is capable of learning just as much as a dog.

Mandela announces separation

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - Nelson Mandela said today he was separating from his wife Winnie after 33 years of marriage but denied it was linked to new charges about her role in a kidnapping case.

The announcement by the African National Congress president comes at a time when allegations against her have threatened to divide the anti-apartheid movement. Mandela declined to give details on the separation.

"In view of the tensions that have arisen owing to differences between ourselves on a number of issues in recent months, we have mutually agreed that a separation would be best for each of us," he told reporters.

Looking tired and under strain, the 73-year-old Mandela said: "My love for her remains undiminished.

There was no immediate response from Mrs. Mandela, 57. ANC officials would not say if she would stay on as the ANC's social welfare director or retain her membership in the organization's governing body.

Allegations about Mrs. Mandela's role in kidnapping four black youths have been a source of controversy for years. Many ANC leaders fear Mrs. Mandela's notoriety will damage her husband and the movement as it seeks to become the first black government of South Africa.

Mrs. Mandela's followers are among the more radical elements of the ANC. She has sometimes rebuked the movement's moderate stance and has a reputation for provocative statements. Mandela has said his wife played a major role in the struggle against apartheid. The Mandelas have clashed publicly on such subjects as the role of women. But the main cause of their separation is thought to be incompatability after he spent 27 years in jail - nearly all of their marriage - for trying to overthrow the white government.

Strains began appearing in the relationship shortly after Mandela's release from prison in 1990, with reports of disagreements and long periods apart.

The Sunday Times of London reported April 5 that the Mandelas planned to separate.

"I hope you appreciate the pain I have experienced," Mandela told reporters today.

Underlining the political seriousness of the announcement, he was flanked at the news conference by the two other top ANC leaders, Oliver Tambo and Walter Sisulu

Earlier today, Mrs. Mandela denied accusations from one of her co-defendants that she beat four young men, one of whom was later found dead. In a statement released by her lawyer, she said the allegations by her former driver, John Morgan, were false.

Superfund cleanup works to undo a century of heavy metals pollution

KELLOGG, Idaho (AP) -Eleanor Gearhart's three sons were not yet alive in 1973, when a crippled smelter spewed hundreds of pounds of lead into the Silver Valley air. But their mother worries, just the same.

The boys, ages 6, 9 and 17, have had their blood tested for lead poisoning. "As of right now, they don't have anything that I know of," their mom says.

But that does not allay her fears, or those of other parents. Only a massive cleanup of the heavy metals that have contaminated this swatch of northern Idaho will do

It all started with a bag-house fire at the Bunker Hill smelter that knocked out filters in the smelter's flue and stack system in 1973.

Rather than shutting down and repairing the pollution-control system, the smelter sent untreated material up the main smokestack for six months, said Ian Von Lindern, a consultant for the state Department of Health and Welfare.

'Honestly, folks, this is a situation that hasn't occurred anywhere else in the Free World that we know of," Von Lindern said.

The health effects were immediate. Children, who are more likely to put rocks and dirt in their mouths, are most at risk for lead poisoning, which can stunt growth and diminish intelligence.

In 1974, a study of 201 children living within a mile of the smelter found unhealthy amounts of lead in their blood — an average of 65 micrograms per deciliter. The national standard was 25 micrograms at the time.

million. The case was settled for an undisclosed amount in 1981,

By 1991, 49 children tested in the one-mile area had average bloodnational average, said Jerry Cobb, director of the Panhandle Health District in nearby Silverton.

site. A century of mining has left the area so polluted that it may be the turn of the next century.

Still, the fear remains. That is why Gearhart sent her sons for blood tests, and that is why she has joined the Moms and Grandmas, a small group of Silver Valley health assistance along with a

Everyone in the group has a story to tell about an illness or lead levels of 7 micrograms, the defect they believe is the consequence of being "leaded." For many, blood workups are an annual ritual. They want the federal

The resodding project could eventually be extended to more than 1,000 tainted yards.

Cleanup and reclamation activities also are under way in nonpopulated areas tainted with lead, arsenic, zinc and other heavy metals after a century of mining and smelting.

The goal is to get off the Superfund list and "get on with our lives. We're getting close to it," Cobb said. A final plan for the overall Superfund cleanup could be finished by late summer, Meyer said.

Then, a series of owners and operators must be persuaded to sign a consent decree on who will pay the cleanup costs, he said.

"It's a very complex law There's a lot of liability," he said. 'It's also a very big site.

Gulf Resources and Chemical Corp. of Houston closed Bunker Hill in 1991. The next year, it sold the complex to the Bunker Limited Partnership, now controlled by three northern Idaho businessmen. The partnership filed for protection Bankruptcy Code in 1991.

Gulf Resources, the partnership and 13 other companies have been named by the EPA as potentially responsible for the cleanup. The agency is in regular contact with the companies.

A beer drinker displays the visible effects of lingtime indulgence as he poses in this photo. Science has found an explanation for the beer belly. A Swiss reasearch report in the New England

Journal of Medicine suggests that when people drink alcohol, their bodies burn up fat much more slowly than usual, depositing the fat in the paunch,

Booze slows body's fat burning

BOSTON(AP) - A study foundthat booze makes the body burn fat more slowly, which helps explain those beer bellies, saddlebags and spare tires on heavy drinkers.

The study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, tackled the question of alcohol's effect on the way the body uses different nutrients. Its conclusion: Alcohol throws off the body's normal disposal of fat.

Any fat that is not burned is stored. That means flab in the belly, the behind and thighs anywhere people tend to put on

"If somebody wants to drink at a party and avoid weight gain, he has to reduce his fat intake," said Dr. Paolo M. Suter of the University of Zurich, the study's principal author.

Exactly how alcohol suppresses fat disposal isn't clear, however. Researchers said the body may prefer to burn alcohol first, or alcohol may have some other effect on metabolic processes in the liver.

healthy men who were put on diets that included about 3 ounces of pure alcohol a day, or the equivalent of about six beers or six shots of liquor. They burned about one-third less fat.

"This is one good explanation of why people get fat drinking alcohol," commented Dr. Clifton Bogardus of the National Institutes

Of course, not everyone who drinks gets a spare tire. It depends on what they eat. Beer guzzlers and whiskey drinkers who subsist on hamburgers and potato chips will almost certainly put on pounds, while vegetarians who sip wine

When people eat extra carbohydrates — sugar or starch they tend to burn most of it. But the body burns extra fat sparingly. The Swiss study found that alcohol further suppresses fat disposal. The finding "points to the fact that energy balance over the long term has a lot more to do with fat

The researchers evaluated eight balance than anything else we eat," said Bogardus. "The main way to stay thin is not to eat fat."

The study was conducted during two sessions. In one, alcohol made up 25 percent of the volunteers' calories, but their total daily calories did not change. In the other, they drank enough alcohol to increase their daily calories by 25

On both diets, the men burned about one-third fewer fat calories when they drank alcohol.

The study also found that when people substituted alcohol for food out did not increase their daily calories, they still burned less fat, but more total calories. The reason appears to be that alcohol boosts metabolism.

While this finding provides a strategy for drinking without gaining weight, there are drawbacks. Bogardus noted that people who carefully substitute alcohol for fat might end up with extra fat, even if

U.S. lawyers setting up shop in Russia

Lawyers.

"It's like being around at the time of creation. American lawyers working in Russia aren't only interpreting law but helping create a new legal system," said James Sitrick, chairman of the executive committee at Coudert Brothers, a New York City law firm that has an office in Moscow. Eight U.S. law firms have already established offices in Moscow and that might be just the start, according to Peter Pettibone, legal committee chairman of the Trade and Economic Council, a New York City-based organization that works to ease trade with the Commonwealth of Independent States After three years in Moscow, the Baker and McKenzie law firm expanded from five to eight lawyers this year and is searching for a larger space, according to Alan Siegel, a partner at the New York City office.

"What we're seeing now is many people going to Russia to assess the situation, which is necessary before investments start," said Pettibone, a partner at Lord, Day and Lord, Barrett Smith law office in New York.

The demand for international lawyers arose in 1987 when President Mikhail S. Gorbachev first allowed foreign investors to own minority shares in joint ventures. Coudert Brothers opened the first American law office in 1988.

American lawyers in Russia are not practitioners of the law: 'I don't know if it would suit a Russian client well to have an American lawyer representing him in court," said Ed Lieberman of the Cole Corette and Abrutyn law firm of Washington D.C. "It might offend Russian juries." Instead, they work as legal advisers and consultants to Western companies that do business there. The number of such businesses Marathon Oil recently won the rights to drill in the Sakhalin Islands. And others are preparing to move in.

Lieberman said lawyers help demystify Russia. Companies new to Russia need help with everything, including where to lease space and how to hire native English-speaking employees. Lawyers for Coudert Brothers have supplemented their legal training with courses in Russian or Russian studies to facilitate their dealings. Lawyers use the Federal Register to keep track of changes in U.S. government regulations and legislation, but there is no such thing in Russia. "We have to read six newspapers a day to get changes," said Lieberman. "You always have to be alert.

CALCUTTA, India (AP) -Howrah railway station is a blur of motion and noise, a corridor for 900,000 passengers a day. It also is home for dozens of families and hundreds of children.

One day last June, 40 children who sleep, work, play, beg and sometimes steal in the huge redbrick station gathered in a circle on the concrete floor. As commuters stared in astonishment, they had their first day of school.

Two months later, the class moved across the road, behind the vegetable market, to an illegally built one-room shack with thatched walls and a sagging red-tile roof.

There, sitting on the floor with small chalk slates on their laps, homeless kids aged 5 to 13 are beginning a long climb toward a better life.

The syllabus is basic: reading, arithmetic, hygiene

Dozens, perhaps hundreds, of self-help programs brighten an otherwise bleak future for the homeless of Calcutta, but hardly make a dent in the ever-increasing thousands of ragged street children.

Howrah Station was the gateway to the capital of British India, the Asian hu of the vast British Empire. Now it is on the edge of one of the world's great slums. Shanties cluster around the Victorian terminal where the rich and royal stepped from plush coaches.

Calcutta is a decaying city of open sewers and overflowing garbage, of millions of slum dwellers and an estimated 400,000 homeless fighting a daily battle for survival.

It overflows with migrants from the countryside and refugees from the recurring disasters in Bangladesh. The city's population doubled in 30 years to 11 million, outpacing the government's ability to house or educate its citizens.

A recent survey estimated Calcutta has 56,000 homeless children under age 18, more than half of them between 6 and 10.

Unwanted HIV-positive babies find some help

toddlers play in Vanessa McKnight's back yard, blowing bubbles into the wind and rolling in the grass.

All were diagnosed at birth as having the AIDS virus. Some will outgrow the diagnosis; others won't live beyond childhood.

"I try not to dwell on that part," said Mrs. McKnight, a foster mother for ChildKind. "You just love them for as long as you can."

ChildKind, a non-profit organization, has placed 22 HIV-positive in two foster homes in Atlanta and one in Savannah. It also operates the state's only day care center for HIV-infected children.

ChildKind is the only organization in Georgia and one of the few in the nation that targets HIVpositive babies. It takes in such pabies who are in state custody because they are orphans, have been abandoned or have mothers who are in drug treatment, said program director Gail Evans.

Some are temporary wards whose mothers or relatives may eventually claim them.

Others, like a 2-year-old boy at Mrs. McKnight's home, were rejected for adoption. He was put up for adoption at birth, but when his adoptive parents discovered he had the AIDS virus, they sent him back.

"They said he was damaged ods," Ms. Evans said, hugging goods," the child she fondly calls "my best buddy.'

"You can't catch AIDS from baby drool," said ChildKind volunteer Sadie Britt, holding 15-month-old boy-and-girl twins. 'If you could, we'd all be dead by

Not all the children will develop AIDS.

If a mother has AIDS, her baby tests positive because babies carry their mothers' antibodies, said Margaret Oxtoby, a pediatric AIDS expert at the federal Centers for Disease Control.

By about age 2, babies develop their own immune systems and reject maternal antibodies. That's when doctors determine which babies actually are HIV-infected and which just appeared to be infected at birth.

"Only a quarter or a third of the babies will be actually infected with the virus," Oxtoby said. "Of those who are infected, some will become sick in the first year, others will be well even until school age, but most will symptoms by age 2."

About 6,000 HIV-infected women have babies each year, the CDC said. Only about 2,000 of those

ATLANTA (AP) — Seven robust babies will actually carry the AIDS

Before ChildKind was formed in 1989, many HIV-positive babies in Georgia lived in hospitals because they had no where else to go. There are no estimates of how many are in hospitals now.

But hospital care costs about $1,000 a day, compared with $100 a day at ChildKind. The organization is funded by state and federal money and donations, Ms. Evans

Mrs. McKnight went to college to become a teacher. That was before she volunteered at Childkind and was asked to become a foster mother. She and her husband James, a psychologist, don't know which of their foster babies will get

But they have little time to spend on worries.

Some, like a 2-year-old boy at Mrs. McKnight's home, were rejected for adoption. He was put up for adoption at birth, but when his adoptive parents discovered he had the AIDS virus, they sent him

On this day, Mrs. McKnight took a short break from several hours of washing, folding and putting away her babies' clothes.

"Sometimes I don't have time to breathe," she laughed. "They're into everything. And now they're at that age where they want to dress themselves. I'll come into the bedroom in the morning, and they'll have blue and purple socks on and they'll have thrown their shoes out the window!

"But they're so proud. 'Look Mama,' they say. You can't get mad at them.

The chaos keeps her from even thinking about the remote possibility of contracting the virus.

"I know the first thing you're supposed to remember if a baby is bleeding or needs a diaper change is to take precautions, and I recommend that everybody should use gloves," Mrs. McKnight said. "But I myself don't grab gloves. They're my children and I just do what I have to do."

Two or three volunteers help with daytime care for the babies, who range from 15 to 27 months old. A volunteer spends the night when any of them are sick, or when Mrs. McKnight is caring for infants.

Births to teen-agers hit 20-year low

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Births to teen-age mothers in Bexar County have dipped to a 20-year low, but local health officials aren't sure of the reason for the new figures.

Possible factors include increased abstinence and birth control or more abortions

For 1991, countywide birth statistics show that 728 babies were born to girls younger than 17 — the lowest actual number since 1983 and at 3.3 percent the lowest percentage of total births since at east 1970

Officials, while acknowledging that campaigns for safe sex-birth control and abstinence might be influencing some teens, wonder whether more teens are opting for abortions.

They have asked the Texas Department of Health to compile data on abortions conducted in Bexar County.

"Sex education, family planning, more awareness because of AIDS I don't know what any of those factors are," San Antonio Metropolitan Health District planner Scott Highley said. "And the great unknown is, are more teens getting abortions?

"All we know is births. We don't know pregnancies."

The county also recorded its lowest rate of mothers 17 and under since 1970, with 1,414 births making up 6.4 percent of total births.

Meanwhile, births to girls age 14 and younger increased slightly, although their percentage of total births remained about the same.

'All we know is births. We don't know pregnancies.' Scott Highley District planner

In Bexar County last year, 22,049 babies were born, up from 21,830 in 1990. The overall birth rate declined slightly, from 18.5 births per 1,000 population, to 18.2.

Patricia Sidebottom, executive director of Planned Parenthood of San Antonio, hesitated to credit sex education with the overall decline in teen-age mothers.

"That's a real hard thing to measure. We always like to think it's working. Obviously, something's happening that's positive," Ms. Sidebottom said.

"As far as the HIV-AIDS scare, it is hitting home to some of the kids who are more attuned to it. There are still a lot of them out there that don't believe anything could happen to them.'

Skalicky plays in Denton

Mary Skalicky, organist, Big Spring, performed in the public organ Masterclass of Marie-Madeleine Durufle'-Chevalier at the University of North Texas, College of Music, on April 4.

Ms. Skalicky played the Fugue on the Chorale "Ad Nos, ad Salutarem Undam" by Franz Liszt (1811-;1886). The Fantasy and Fugue on "Ad Nos" was Liszt's first and largest work for organ. It is considered to be the most exciting and technically difficult. The Chorale was composed by Meyerbeer and is sung by the Anabaptists in his opera "Le Prophete."

Mom who sacrificed resents father who didn't

DEAR ABBY: I have been divorced for eight years. I have one daughter, "Jane," who is now 22. When my husband divorced me, he also "divorced" our daughter. There was no contact with Jane, unless she initiated it. No Christmas gifts, no birthday gifts, nothing - even though she always remembered her father on those occasions

I could not understand it; he was a very loving father to Jane while she was growing up, but the "love" cooled off after our divorce.

Jane will be graduating from a private college in May. This will be a tremendous relief for me, since I assumed the entire financial burden of her college education. (I suggested he share the expense, but he flatly refused.) I am not wealthy by any means. I had to should not have to share her graduation day with her father, who practically disowned her these last eight years.

Jane says I have no right to take that attitude, and regardless of who paid for her college education. he is still her father, and she wants him to see her get her diploma.

I will leave it to you, Abby. Who is right? - JANE'S MOTHER DEAR MOTHER: Even though Jane's father does not "deserve" to be at her graduation, if she chooses to invite him, it's her graduation.

DEAR ABBY: So you enjoy limericks — but only those that can be repeated in polite company. Here are two of my favorites:

and it should be her decision.

A canner exceedingly canny One morning remarked to his granny,

"A canner can can "Anything that he can, "But a canner can't can a can, can he?"

This might be slightly marginal, but it's not really offensive:

A corpulent maiden named Kroll Had a notion exceedingly droll At a masquerade ball Dressed in nothing at all

She backed in as a Parker House

I enjoy your column, Abby. -FRAN DIRTING, IRVING,

TEXAS DEAR FRAN: Thank you for the limericks. I may never enjoy eating a Parker House roll again.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)
