Mexican Laborer Is Run Over by Truck As He Jumps for Hat

A Mexican, employed by Bonna A. Martin east of Gatesville, was the victim of an accident early Monday morning when he jumped from the running board of a truck upon which he was riding to retrieve his hat which had blown from his head. As he jumped he fell beneath the truck and was run over. His thigh and ankle were crushed and his leg was broken in two places. The truck was loaded with hogs and was enroute to Gatesville.

Roy Pennington, driving Pennington Brothers Truck, drove by the scene of the accident near Pulltight soon after it occurred and brought the injured man to Gatesville. Local doctors ordered the man taken to a Waco hospital for treatment. He was carried in a Scott ambulance. Though his injuries are grave it is not anticipated that they will be fatal.

Mary Louise Walkup Injured When Auto Is Wrecked Near Pidcoke

Miss Mary Louise Walkup suffered a bruised arm when the car in which she was riding was wrecked enroute from Pidcoke to Gatesville on Friday night of last week.

Miss Walkup in company with Miss Mary Elizabeth Walley, Harry Dillashaw and Mr. Walley were returning from Pidcoke where the Dramatic Club of the Gatesville High School had presented a one act play when the accident occurred. No one except Miss Walkup was injured although the car was severely damaged.

SUNDAY CROWD SEES AIRPLANE CARNIVAL

The Golf Club grounds was the scene of an air carnival here last Sunday. Peik was here with his aeroplane and presented several novelty flights. Many passengers were carried up.

Perhaps the most outstanding event of the afternoon was the race between a 1933 Plymouth sedan and the aeroplane. The Plymouth was driven by M. H. Shepherd, local Plymouth dealer, who was accompanied by Frank Brooks, another local Plymouth dealer. The Plymouth won the race by a few yards.

The Hindus and Hebrews protected the ox from abuse by his owner.

Voters of Gatesville will go to the polls today to vote on five city officials. Dr. M. W. Lowrey is a candidate for re-election to the office of mayor and is unopposed for the office. Dr. R. Bailey is a candidate for the office of Alderman from Ward 1 to fill the unexpired term of Dr. R. L. Raby. Dr. J. H. Hamilton is a candidate for re-election as alderman of Ward 2. He is also unopposed. L. S. Holmes is the unopposed candidate to succeed himself as alderman from Ward 1.

Evidences are that the election will go off quietly as the voters of Ward 1 go to the voting place at the City Hall and those of Ward 2 vote at the Courthouse.

Only one office is not sought and that is the office of City Attorney for which no one has announced. It is permissible for the voter to write in the name of his choice for this office.

Regardless of the fact that no candidate is opposed every citizen should feel the responsibility to go to the polls and vote.

THE WEDDING MARCH MURDER

by Monte Barrett

Copyright, 1933,

WNU Service.

"The apartment was searched some time between four-thirty and six-thirty. Your struggle with Cardigan occurred about eight-fifteen because that's the time he went through that window. There are a number of witnesses who saw his fall. Fast driving would have taken you to the scene of the so-called accident by about the time you appeared at the farmhouse. It was no trick for an experienced driver to roll his car off the road in loose gravel. You claim you laid unconscious in the ditch for about half an hour. No passer-by discovered the accident. It hardly seems likely that no one passed the spot in thirty minutes. The roads in that section are fairly well traveled.

"Nevertheless, you were not discovered until you regained consciousness of your own accord, you tell me. Then you limped to the farmhouse. That gives you the added time necessary to complete your alibi. Carmody, there was an accident, all right. But it was a deliberate one, planned by you, to throw us off the track. You were never unconscious. That part of your story has been added to make the time fit into the events at Franklin's office so that it would appear to be impossible that you were there."

Kilday glanced slowly about the room. "Where are the clothes you were wearing?" he next asked. "I want to have a look at them."

"In the dressing room, I suppose." Rylie indicated a door across the room. "It was a brown tweed. You'll recognize it, because it was torn a bit."

The detective, rising, backed carefully into the dressing room and, leaving the door open in order to keep the young man in sight, found the suit.

"This settles it," he said. "Come on. Get some clothes on. You're going down to headquarters with me."

"You have lost your mind," declared Rylie Carmody hoarsely. "Suppose I told you who I intended to meet at Westport at nine o'clock last night? Would you believe me then?"

Kilday smiled. "Sure," he agreed. "Maybe you did have an appointment to meet some one at Westport. If you were clever you did it would strengthen your alibi."

"But I'll tell you something else." He leaned forward, all trace of the smile vanished into the stern lines of his face. "I'll bet you a hundred dollars that you never kept that appointment."

"You couldn't. Not and be at Franklin's office when you were."

CHAPTER XIII

In Search of a Key.

AN AWNING stretched above the sidewalk below, saved Peter Cardigan's life when he plunged through the window of Jim Franklin's office.

In reality, it was only the space of a second, but to the falling man it seemed an interminable period. Then he crashed into the steel support of the awning, the blow catching him midway between the knee and thigh on the right leg. Its force spun him around, so that he fell on his left side.

He did not recover consciousness until some time later, at the hospital, after the attending physician had had time to determine the extent of his injuries. His right foreleg was badly fractured. His left arm was broken and, in addition, three ribs were cracked.

"And a black eye," the doctor added. "If there's anything else wrong with you, we haven't been able to find it."

Peter never replied. He was thinking with chagrin of the quarry who had escaped him in that bitter struggle in the darkened room.

Kilday kept him informed of the progress he was making. It was the novelist's third day in the hospital.

"How are you feeling?" the sergeant inquired with more than ordinary solicitude. "How are the aches and pains?"

"They'll take care of themselves." Peter studied his friend's anxious expression. "What's on your mind?"

"A habeas corpus hearing to release young Carmody on bail," was the reply. "It's set for this afternoon. I wish you were feeling better. I think the district attorney would like to have you in court as a witness."

Peter smiled. "I'm afraid I wouldn't be much help," he said. "I can't believe Rylie Carmody is the fellow I fought in that office. And I can't believe Franklin was murdered merely to stop the wedding. It doesn't seem reasonable."

"And yet," argued the detective, "the one thing you could remember about your assailant was that he wore a tweed suit. Carmody was wearing a tweed suit."

Peter raised his unbandaged arm in protest, wincing from the pain of the movement. "Almost anyone could wear a tweed suit. That isn't enough to convict young Carmody."

"But coupled with everything else, it is," the detective stubbornly persisted. "The minute I heard what had happened to you, I started my search. I knew from what you told me that you had put up quite a battle. Your opponent certainly would be battered up. Young Carmody has a black eye and is considerably bruised up, otherwise. He was wearing a suit that answers your description. He claims he was in an automobile accident, but it looks as though that were just a cleverly arranged scheme to account for his appearance, as well as his whereabouts, at the time you were having your fight. He claims he had an appointment at Westport at nine o'clock, but admits he never kept it, and won't tell us who he was supposed to meet. He gave our detective the slip that afternoon, so that he had his first opportunity to visit that apartment. And he had a motive in the crime. There's enough to hold anyone on, Peter, and I'm going to hold him."

The novelist studied his friend gravely. "All logical," he admitted. "I'm not sure about one point. In my fight, I don't know whether I battered my antagonist or not. Oh," he smiled, "I know I was considerably battered. But the other fellow was landing his blows on the head, I was hitting to the body. He was aiming for a knockout, and I was trying to wear my man down; working in close as much as possible. I felt sure that if I could make a rough-and-tumble affair of it, I could beat him. I think I would have, too, if I had not dived through the window, attempting to tackle him. All of which means nothing," he admitted, "except that I don't know that I blackened one of his eyes. I can't remember it, although I'm reasonably sure I left some black and blue marks on his body."

"In a fight of that sort," Kilday objected, "you might have landed a dozen blows you can't remember now."

"Admitted," Peter agreed. "But Rylie Carmody's black eye isn't conclusive evidence. How about Dan Bullis? Does he show any signs of having been in a fight?"

"None that I could see."

Peter reached for a cigarette lighted it, and thoughtfully watched the smoke clouds roll ceilingward before he spoke again. "Of course this lets the woman out," he began. "Neither Choo Choo Train nor our mysterious woman in blue was capable of putting up the scrap that I ran into. And of course, if the motive of the crime was to halt the wedding, the crime was committed by a woman, with the single exception of Rylie Carmody."

"Of course there was Webster Spears," put in the detective. "But he was already under arrest. You didn't run into him in that office."

"Which means," continued the novelist, "that either Rylie is our man, or else the wedding itself wasn't the motive. I've already explained why I can't think it was Rylie. A man contemplating murder doesn't advertise the motive, the way he did. We still have the Bullis angle. The murder might have been political, as you first suggested. Or, as I have previously suggested, the woman in blue may be the key to the case."

"She is the only factor of the case that remains unexplained. I still believe it is logical to assume that Franklin was killed in a fit of jealous rage, over a woman, not by a woman. Why couldn't it have been that woman's brother or husband? Sergeant, either you are right, and Rylie is our man, or we still have to locate a blond woman with whom Franklin had an affair."

"There's one thing I never thought to ask," Peter continued. "Did you discover how Franklin's apartment was entered? Did the person who searched those rooms have a key, or were you able to find where he forced his entrance?"

"He must have had a key. None of the windows had been forced and the locks showed no signs of having been tampered with."

"Well, who had keys to Franklin's apartment? We had Franklin's, on his key-ring. Fletcher had one with him. We'd better talk to Choo Choo Train again. She had a key to that apartment. Our burglar used her key, or else—"

"Or else what?"

"Or else our woman in blue had a key, too."

"I'll soon find out," promised the detective. He used the telephone to call Choo Choo Train, who promised to come to the hospital immediately, bringing her key to the murdered man's apartment with her.

"While we're waiting," Peter suggested, "tell me about Franklin's office. Were you able to determine how my assailant got in there?"

The detective admitted he was puzzled. "The reception room was a wreck," he said. "You must have staged quite a battle there. That's about all we were able to find out, however. There was no fire-escape from which any of the windows could have been entered. The main entrance was the only means of access to the suite. If that door was forced, we couldn't tell it."

"Dunbar helped us, too. Aside from his key, and Franklin's, which you had, there were three other keys to that door. Two of them belonged to clerks in that office and have been accounted for. The third was the janitor's. He, too, tells a straight story."

"So it looks as though our visitor walked in through a locked door,

"I'm Sorry," She Said. "The Papers Said You Were Seriously Hurt."

en?" Cardigan mused.

He reclined against his pillow and stared fixedly at the ceiling through the smoke of a constant procession of cigarettes.

"But how about the outside of the building? Was there any ledge by which the intruder could have reached those windows? Every sensible question has an equally logical answer, if it can only be found."

Before they could explore the question further, the actress arrived. Choo Choo's black-lashed eyes turned first to Peter.

"I'm sorry," she said. "The papers said you were seriously hurt."

The novelist smiled briefly. "The doctor says I'm to have a short leg that will make me limp a bit," he said. "But I'm getting used to the idea. After all, I'm fortunate to be alive, even if I must carry a permanent souvenir of the experience with me. How about it, Miss Train? Do you care for men who limp?"

"I adore them," declared the actress swiftly. "I detest men who either walk, act or talk just like every one else." But she was obviously at a loss as to how to continue the conversation and turned abruptly to Kilday with the question. "Why did you send for me?"

"You have a key to Franklin's apartment. I want to see it."

The actress searched in her purse and produced the key.

Without saying a word, Kilday carefully compared it with the other key in his possession, the one on Franklin's key-ring. It was identical.

"That is the only key he gave you, isn't it?" he asked.

"Yes."

Lilian Harvey Makes American Film Debut In "My Weakness"

Lilian Harvey, the sensational Continental star, will make her American screen debut in B. G. DeSylva's Fox musical, "My Weakness," when it comes to the Palace Theatre on Thursday.

Rising to unchallenged leadership in Europe during the last four years and climaxing her meteoric career with "Congress Dances," Miss Harvey was signed by Fox Film on a long term contract and is expected to repeat her great success in Hollywood.

Born in England, of English parents, she was taken to Germany as a small child. The war broke out shortly after and Miss Harvey and her mother could not leave the country. She was educated in Germany and later in Switzerland, learning to read, write and speak German and French as fluently as her native English.

She made her theatrical debut as a dancer in Vienna, and on the opening night, tripped and fell over the footlights, landing in a kettle drum. It took the combined efforts of the drummer and two violinists to extricate her, while the audience roared with laughter. What might have been a tragedy for an ambitious young actress, turned into good fortune. Robert Land, a Sasha Film director, was in the front row and was much impressed with the little girl's beauty and charm, and promptly offered her a contract.

"The Girl in the Taxi," "Mazie," "The Love Waltz," "Hokus Pokus," "Princess at Your Order," "The Fair Dream" and "Congress Dances" were other outstanding pictures which firmly established her as Europe's greatest box office attraction. All of her pictures were made in English, German and French, but one, "Congress Dances," has been released in America.

Strong Supporting Cast

She is said to have a role made to order for her in "My Weakness," in which she shares starring honors with Lew Ayres. Her supporting cast is unusually strong, including Charles Butterworth, Sid Silvers, Harry Langdon, Henry Travers, Irene Bentley, Irene Ware, Barbara Weeks, Susan Fleming, Marcelle Edwards, Jean Allen, Marjorie King, Gladys Blake and Mary Howard.

DeSylva, in addition to being the producer, wrote the story and collaborated on the script with David Butler, the director. He also collaborated on the songs with Richard Whiting and Leo Robin, and no less than three song hits are included in "My Weakness."

DeSylva and Butler have been teamed up before, having written and produced "Sunny Side Up" and "Just Imagine," both outstanding successes of recent years.

ON TEXAS FARMS

By W. H. Darrow
Extension Service Editor
A. & M. College

Seventeen Wharton county 4-H club boys have marketed 11,074 pounds of beef calves for an average net profit of $8.50 per calf. The calves got off to a good start in feeding because of being creep fed five or six weeks by F. E. Mick, cattle feeder of Iago, before being placed with the boys.

"We had the cow, and the nursery man wanted; I wanted shrubs and did not feel that I could buy them, so we traded. I got abelia, nandina, Italian cypress and wax leaf ligustrum for foundation plantings near the house. I intend to get native shrubs from the woods to come. So says Mrs. Walter Williams, a home demonstration club member at Chapel Hill in San Augustine county.

Many of the contracted acres in both cotton and corn are to be terraced this year in Llano county. Four-H club boys of Llano High School have a farm level and plan to help farmers run lines.

Terraces 35 feet wide and 24 inches high have been built recently on 800 acres of McCulloch county land as a result of Federal Land Bank requirements. Several thousand acres more will be terraced soon under county agent supervision because of these requirements.

From 28 cucumber vines Mrs. J. B. Patterson of Holt Home Demonstration Club in Hutchinson county has put up 65 gallons of cured pickles, supplied cucumbers for sandwich spread, pickled all the fresh ones the family could eat, and furnished some to neighbors.

There were 4000 head of cattle on feed in Hale county last winter, according to a county agent report.

Mullin—Terraces built 12 years ago by John Calaway of Mills county have increased his acreage yields by 6 bushels of corn per acre, 8 bushels of oats per acre, one-third more cotton per acre, and 800 pound more grain sorghums per acre.

This kind of increased production is in line with the present national agricultural readjustment which aims to reduce surpluses by removing acres and to encourage efficient farming on the remainder, explains W. P. Weaver, county agent.

Heampstead—With 14 farmers seeding from one to 12 acres retired cotton land to permanent improved pastures, February was a banner month for pasture improvement in Waller county, reports J. V. Bush, county agent. From these seed plots 800 acres of retired cotton land may eventually be seeded, he says. Six more farmers expect to seed pastures this spring.

According to W. S. Near who sowed dallis grass and Korean lespedeza in native pasture last spring, the improved pasture is now grazing more than twice as many livestock as native pasture.

Decatur—A swing to more and better roughage for dairy cows in Wise county is predicted by Guy Powell, county agent. Temporarily farmers are finding cottonseed hulls a satisfactory roughage; plans are being made to dig and fill trench silos this year. Ten farmers are preparing to build these silos and more are expected to do so later.

Mt. Vernon—Although the county agent has been too busy with the cotton campaign to help farmers with terracing, 100 men and boys previously trained to do the work are carrying on. Terracings has been a general practice here for years but is on an increase now because of the acreage reduction program.

Nearly every geological age has produced crude oil—but by and large the oldest ages seem to have produced the best of it for lubricating purposes. For this reason Sinclair uses the oldest Mid-continent paraffin-base crudes in making Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil—crudes which have mellowed and filtered under earth for an average of 80 million years.

Furthermore, Sinclair Opaline contains no petroleum jelly—that non-lubricating element which makes motor oil thick and sluggish when cold—thin and watery when hot. Sinclair Opaline has a genuine full body that is all lubricant—no waste. Try a crankcaseful. Note how seldom you need to add oil.

VOTING FOR LOCAL APPRECIATION

In a number of cities and small municipalities throughout Texas citizens are casting their votes at this time of the year for the election of city officials. Likewise, the same procedure is underway in Gatesville.

Today, April 3, the voters of Gatesville will have an opportunity of going to the polls and voicing their individual sentiment on a ballot which will in turn elect to office a mayor, an alderman for ward number one, another alderman for ward one to fill the unexpired term of the late Dr. R. Raby and an alderman for ward number two, and a city attorney.

Gatesville has been blessed with clean city politics and a board of conscientious city officials for many years and it is up to the citizens of this city to keep that same record with a clean slate, unmarred by the filth and graft that exists in so many Texas towns and cities today.

The quiet way in which city elections are held in Gatesville is indicative of the fact that little friction exists—yet regardless of this fact the voters should go to the polls and vote their appreciative of the splendid city government which reigns in Gatesville.

ACTIVITIES OF BANK ROBBERS

(From the Waco News-Tribune)

Bank robbers appear to be as active as ever in the southwest. A census has been taken of their manifestations as well as their loot-taking. Twelve banks were the sufferers in the last month and a half. Loot-taking totaled $56,000 and in only two cases have the peace officers captured the desperadoes. There is said to be a reason for it. Drastic reductions in travel allowances of Texas rangers and other officers have also handicapped the officers of the law "that robbers now find it possible to be safely out of reach of capture in a few hours." Well, let Uncle Sam do it. For many years and years he was the great father of the world. Now he is confining himself and his activities and disbursements to the 48 commonwealths of the republic "and outlying districts."

Making Reporting Easier at Geneva

Newspaper correspondents attending the sessions of the disarmament conference and other gatherings in Geneva were provided with pocket radio receiving sets that enabled them to hear the proceedings while wandering about the building or sitting at ease in their retiring room.

WORLD FOREIGN COMMENT

A RESPECTABLE gentleman of Throckmorton suggests that instead of the world powers scraping their armaments, they turn them over to China and let her mop up on Japan, ending the Japanese peril once and for all. The disarmament of the nations would be accomplished also. This writer thinks this is a splendid plan, provided some method can be evolved by which the Chinese can be prevented from fighting one another as soon as they get all the "guns". As this gentleman avers, "if something of this kind is not done soon, Japan will take over all of China and the yellow peril will be a reality". Continuing, "Either Japan must be destroyed or China will be, and it is up to the other nations which they would prefer".

Modern Japan reminds one of pre-war Germany—imperialistic, autocratic, and dominated by a strong military party. Indeed, the Japanese seem to have expansionist ideals something like the Pan-Germanists of Imperial Germany envisioned. In following out their policy of dominating China and Asia, they are certain to collide with Russia or America or both—preferably both from our standpoint if they have to collide with us in the long run. And, Imperial Japan is not going to hesitate to resort to war in order to fulfill its expansionist program any more than Imperial Germany did in 1914. Form your own conclusions, dear readers.

RECENT DISPATCHES indicate that Germany will spend about $300,000,000 more on her army this year than in 1933. This is naturally alarming to the French, in view of the fact that French prestige and solidarity have been weakened by the continued threats of civil war. Germany, so the French claim, is rapidly rearming in violation to the Versailles Treaty. This has been expected and predicted for the last five years, and especially since Hitler came to power.

France is alarmed, but not so much that the people have forgotten personal grudges and the desire to fight things out. The fear of the German big bad wolf is, perhaps temporarily, thrust into the background.

SOVIET SUCCESS in the international field continues to grow rapidly. The latest is a Swedish loan of $2,000,000 for the purchase of Swedish goods. Heretofore, Sweden has steadfastly refused to have any financial dealings with the Soviets, but,

New Frigidaire Accorded Welcome Hand by the People of Gatesville

The 1934 line of Frigidaires, products of General Motors, has been received with extraordinary enthusiasm in every part of the nation. H. W. Newell, vice president of Frigidaire, states in a letter received today by Morton Scott, representative of the company here.

“In the short period of fourteen days since our 1934 Frigidaires were first placed on public exhibition,” Mr. Newell wrote, “the response of homeowners and housewives everywhere has been more than gratifying.

“There is no doubt in our mind that the days and nights spent by Frigidaire research scientists, engineers and cabinet designers to create the new Frigidaires has been more than repaid by the welcome given them by the public.

“I am sure every one of the 15,000 dealers and salesmen in our organization feels as I do, that in the new deal in business and buying, the 1934 Frigidaire is a new deal in refrigeration.”

Fifty-one merchants of Broken Arrow, Okla., signed the only copy of the President's re-employment agreement available in the town.

Health in the 3rd and 4th Grades

The aim of our health lessons at the present time is to form friends habits. Among these is the habit of caring for our hands and nails properly. To help us do this we are playing a little game. This week we are all being very careful to take the proper care of our little finger on our left hand. Especially are we trying not to bite that finger nail. The following weeks we shall work on the other fingers, always striving to have well groomed hands and nails.

The primary pupils have become interested in reading books. We have ten pupils who have read twenty five books. They are still reading and are anxious to add another stamp to their reading certificate.

Coryell County News,
Gatesville, Texas,

Dear Editor and Staff:

I like to read the Coryell County News because I was born and raised in Coryell County. My friends are here and I am interested in them, in what they do, where they go, their health and whom they entertain as their guests.

I take a lively interest in the public roads, bridges, financial and agricultural problems of my county as well as our mercantile establishments, filling stations, theatres and other places of business. I want to know where these things are located and who owns and operates them. In short, I want to keep myself posted on everything that is going on in and around Coryell County.

I can get all this information by reading the Coryell County News and that at a very small cost to myself. This paper under the new regime, published twice a week, gives me home news while it is news. By reading the various advertisements and keeping in touch with the needs about me, I may be able to get after-school employment which will help me in a financial way.

Very truly yours,
Elwood Young.

Coryell City, Texas,
March 1, 1934.

Coryell County News,
Gatesville, Texas,
Gentlemen:

A person that claims to be well educated has to be well informed of the current events of his own time. It is very important to know what is going on in the world at large, but it is as important to be familiar with the occurrences of one's own community.

"Know your home town first," must be the motto of a loyal local patriot. In order to get acquainted with the happenings in the home community, one should read a good home town paper and a paper that serves the interests of all deserves the greatest support and publication.

The Coryell County News tries to serve this purpose in bringing cerning the various branches of the county offices. It places before its readers the problems they have to deal with. And when it opens its columns for discussions of an important matter it becomes the foremost means to arouse and create a spirit of a better understanding and of mutual cooperation. It keeps those who are interested in school and church work well informed.

It tells "Who is Who" in its school column. It serves as a guide for sellers and buyers by its advertisements. For these reasons I like the Coryell County News.

Spanish Village at Chicago World's Fair

Architect's rendering of the Spanish Village to occupy two and one-half acres of ground at the 1934 World's Fair. It will faithfully portray the manners and customs of the Spanish people, and of the homes, churches and shrines of the Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries. This is but one of numerous villages of this character representing different countries that will be an outstanding feature of the 1934 Exposition.
