Threatened Meat Shortage Curbed: OPA Opened Up

Arrangements have been made insuring Coryell county and Gatesville people will not suffer from lack of meat, but patriotic housewives will have to adopt as their slogan "More Pork in My Menus". If your local merchant cannot provide you with as much beef as you want, it is not his fault. Judge Floyd Ziegler, president of the Chamber of Commerce, N. Foote, local representative of the Food Distribution Administration have been working for more than a week on the problem and following a trip to Dallas, Ft. Worth and frequent telephone calls there and to Washington, have been assured an ample supply of meat will be available here. The meat may not be exactly the kind of meat desired, and Gatesville has been allowed an additional temporary quota of 50,000 pounds of dressed meat for June, which must be bought in ration of five pounds of pork to 3 of beef. Pork includes fresh pork, hams, bacon, canadian bacon and wieners. A temporary shortage may be felt, but a permanent quota of 45,000 pounds of meat per week has been recommended assurances have been given that Washington will approve this recommendation.

Coryell County Boy Died Of Wounds, Mar. 29th

Pfc. Boyd W. Rose of Gatesville and Coryell county, who had been with the troops in North Africa, died March 29th from gunshot wounds "somewhere in Africa". Pfc. Rose enlisted July 1, 1940 and was with the first troops to go to North Africa. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Rose of Gatesville. We are sorry we don't know more about this young man, and we would like to be able to tell more about his life in Coryell county and Gatesville.

ASTP Unit To Be At North Camp Hood: Collegans

Because of the demands of modern war, the Army needs a constant supply of engineers, doctors, psychologists, language experts and technicians. The draft has cut off the supply of these men usually turned out by colleges, and to meet this need, the Army Specialized Training Program will send selected soldiers to colleges and universities for training in these fields. The ASTP unit at North Camp Hood will give a basic training to the potential candidates, and after 13 weeks they will be classified and sent to specific colleges. They will come from all branches of the service, or as a result of tests, will be tagged for ASTP before induction. The Army has given pre-induction tests to 200,000 young men with high school education, and those who passed will be among the ones sent to the new ASTP unit at North Camp Hood right after their stay in a reception center. ASTP soldiers will be future officer material and will find a gap in an all-out war effort, also, the country's need when the war is over. Boards at the post are examining all eligible soldiers now for possible college training. Mr. and Mrs. W. Tom Young visited Mrs. Johnnie Hoard in Kings Daughters Hospital Sunday. Ray Franklin spent this week end with Mr. and Mrs. John Derrick.

THAT RAT MAN'S TO BE HERE AGAIN; EDUCATED KILLER

Beginning, June 14, the City of Gatesville will sponsor a rodent control program similar to the one last year, which is by an A. & M. man, in cooperation with the Central Texas Health Department. All business establishments will be expected to cooperate in helping place the baits as the shortage of labor will limit the crew to a small one. Poison used is dangerous, and much time can be saved in putting it out and taking it up. The small crew will not permit going into private residences, but residents of this vicinity are asked to call on the Central Texas Health Department for assistance. Here's some "do's and don'ts": 1. Tie up all pets. 2. Have the place selected for the crew to place the baits. 3. Have a man ready to assist the crew when the bait is brought to your establishment. 4. Do not pick up dead rats with bare hands.

FOUR NAZIS STILL AT LARGE IN ESCAPE FROM INTERNMENT AT NCH

Four young German prisoners of war were pursued Thursday night by federal agents after a fifth fugitive from North Camp Hood, 4 1/2 miles from Gatesville was captured at Flat, eight miles south of the internment cantonment. An MP captured Hans Massouer, 21, one of the escapees in Flat, the Camp Hood public relations office said. Bloodhounds were being used by FBI agents to track the Germans in the densely wooded bottom lands of the Leon river in CORYELL COUNTY. Officers along the Texas-Mexican border were on the alert. Seven men were in the group trying to get away from the camp and were caught at the camp however, and one of these carried a map of south Texas and Mexico. The four remaining at large with descriptions were listed as: Adolph Bodenberg, 22, five feet, eight inches, 137 pounds, blue eyes, brown hair, light complexion. Indwig Jung, 21, 5 feet 11, 158 pounds, gray eyes, blond hair, light complexion. Harold Stallejen, 22, six feet 6, 150 lbs, hazel eyes, brown hair, light complexion. Ralph Dieschang, 22, five feet 6, 154 pounds, blue eyes, brown hair, ruddy complexion. It was reported the prisoners cut thru the tents in which they were living, crawled under the recreation tent, and then escaped thru the fence that surrounds the internment area. The men were wearing either blue denim prisoners uniform or old gray-green German uniforms.

"OLD GLORY" GOES UP FOR GOOD OVER NORTH CAMP HOOD

At the recent opening of ceremonies at North Camp Hood, 4 1/2 miles from GATESVILLE in Coryell county, this is the picture of the 38x28 (?) which was put under the direction of North Camp Hood's post commander, Col. T. M. Thirkeld, who had just had turned over to him the camp by Major Thomas J. Gammie, Area Engineer. This was the most beautiful part of the opening ceremony at North Camp Hood, and we've yet to see a sight like this enormous American flag waving from the flag staff in the Headquarters triangle. —Photo, Courtesy The Dallas Morning News.

OVEN CANNING

before you begin

All fruits and tomatoes, and tomato mixtures containing at least 50 per cent tomatoes, may be processed by the oven method. However, Lone Star's Home Economics Director, Albertine Berry, does not recommend this method unless the heat of the oven can be accurately controlled and maintained, because a constant, even temperature is most important. In oven canning, follow these steps:

Be sure that the oven heat can be accurately controlled.

Preheat and maintain oven temperature at 250 degrees, making sure that temperature does not build up during the processing time.

Use only tempered jars and check them to see that none are cracked or nicked around the rim.

Count processing time from the time oven door is closed. In filling jar, have at least one-half inch headroom at top.

In removing from the oven, be careful that cold air does not strike the hot jars. Place them on several thicknesses of towel out of drafts until they have cooled to prevent breakage.

Complete seal immediately upon removing jars from oven if necessary.

Aid to Enemy

"Any American who willfully neglects to pay his taxes on time or to invest every cent he can in War Bonds is surely giving aid and comfort to the enemy . . . We have a job to do and we are all called for service to our country. Our dollars are called to service too. Let us all ask ourselves, 'Shall we be more tender with our dollars than with the lives of our sons?' " — Secretary Morgenthau.

Miss Belva McCoy Weds
Lieut. Clyde L. Harlow
June 2nd

Miss Belva McCoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. McCoy and Lt. Clyde L. Harlow, of Boston, Massachusetts were united in marriage Wednesday, June. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Lawrence Hayes, pastor of the Gatesville Baptist church. The bride was given in marriage by her father, B. E. McCoy.

The bride was attired in a white linen dress, street length, with a lace-paneled skirt and carried white accessories.

Miss Dorothea Frazier served as an only attendant of the bride. She was dressed in a tan, two-piece suit and had brown and white accessories.

Huron McCoy, brother of the bride, acted as best man. Mr. McCop is from Tyler.

Mrs. B. E. McCoy was dressed in a charming tan silk print with black accessories. Pinned to her dress was a corsage of red roses.

Miss Mamie Sue Halbrook, organist, played the wedding music. Preceding the ceremony, she played "Ava Maria" and during the ceremony, she played "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms". Mrs. A. W. Ellis sang "At Dawning" and "Because".

After the wedding a short reception was held in the bride and groom's honor by Mr. and Mrs. B. E. McCoy.

The three-tiered wedding cake with a miniature bride and groom in uniform was cut by Mrs. R. W. Palmatier and Mrs. Wendell Lowrey presided at the punch bowl.

Immediately after the reception the bride and groom left for Houston.

Mrs. Harlow was born and reared here and graduated from the local high school. After graduation she attended North Texas Teachers College in Denton and afterwards taught for two years in El Campo public schools.

Lt. Harlow served with the National Guard before Pearl Harbor and is now stationed at Camp Hulon, Palacios, as an instructor in Headquarters R.A.A.T.C.

The couple will make their home in Palacios, Texas.

An Original Story

What Has Gone Before
Jack Tobin and the Kid are touring the country exhibiting a "Geek", or fake wild man.

When the Kid first started on this career, he was warned by an old timer, as to the type of life he was getting into, and the different types of people that he would meet; he was also advised that some were good and some were bad, and for him to be one of the good.

So far he has met practically all the types that the old timer had told him about, and had quite a few experiences not mentioned.

In the preceding chapter one of their number, the bat-man, is killed while giving the crowd a thrill.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

It was at the State Fair that the Kid met Doc. Doc wasn't a doctor in the tone sense of the word, no M.D., but to everyone in the show business he was "the Doctor".

Doc was one of the last survivors of that old class of itinerant clan of medicine men, springing from the one time world famous but now almost forgotten Kippapoo Indian Sagwa. One of the last survivors of a mellowed era when the Medicine Men wore gold pieces for buttons, winged collars, and dressed in the finest style, vended herbs from the back of wagons, surely you've seen Doc or one of his kind.

The Kid never tired hanging around Doc's pitch joint; not only because he had a colored fellow named Lucky Boy, who was a fine entertainer, and after Doc had made his lecture, would pass among the people selling the herb and yelling: "sold out Doc, I'm sold out; Doc I'm yelling till I'm black in the face. Sold! Out!" then he'd take some more out and sell them, but also when Doc wasn't pitching he'd tell the Kid stories about his experiences.

Doc had amassed a couple of pretty good sized fortunes in his time, but promptly lost them again. He'd hold up a whiskey bottle and look at it and say: "Kid old John (meaning John Barley Corn) has whipped many a good man," then he'd take a drink.

Hadn't that old Geek told the Kid just about the same thing when the Kid was first starting out? Maybe that fellow did know a thing or two at that.

Doc had ran away from home when he was thirteen years old and had joined a carnival. His first job in show business, if job it could be called, was being the Geek. Yes sir, even in those days shows like Hilda Alive were flourishing.

One day Doc, they called him Happy then, was with a show playing near the now extinct Nesperse Indian Reservation, in the Buffalo Hump county, Panhandle District of Idaho, and the town bar tender, drunk as a Lord staggered into a group of Carnies sitting around a fire trying to keep warm: "I want somebody to dance," he says but nobody answers. "Which one of you guys can dance?"

"Happy can dance," someone volunteers, and the very unhappy Happy was pushed out to the middle of the circle.

"I can't dance," was all he could say, but this fellow just pulls out two guns and started shooting around his feet.

Well Happy soon learned the terpsichoren art.

"Who ever said you can't dance. Why boy your a good dancer, come on over to my saloon, all you guys, the party's on me, and my friend Happy," (notice, the my friend Happy) is going to be the bartender."

Well that saloon was etched in Doc's memory, the false front and the crude signs such as "No liquor sold to Minors or Indians," and the picture over the bar of the four bar flies, leaning on the bar, and the bartender behind it, and captioned, "Waiting for a Live One." Yes you must have seen that one some place, it's one of the great American works of art, and most of us are more familiar with that one, than we are with Whistler's Mother, or Mona Lisa.

How many times have you walked into a bar and saw the same scene? Waiting for a live one! It's the truth, that makes a thing great, and no imaginative genius could have struck straighter or truer than that drawing.

Doc was only thirteen then, and that's giving Old John Barley Corn a tremendous advantage in age and experience.

He went on through life and by sheer intelligence and initiative would reach success, but as he would attain a triumph Old John Barley Corn, would push him off in about the same manner as the game that children play, called King of the Mountain. One of the group fights his way to the top of a mound or a pile of sand, as the case might be, and he's the King for awhile, but inevitably someone will sooner or later push him down and he has to start at the very bottom again and do it all over, sometimes they "never come back".

There are quite a few of these fellows traveling the road even today, and are sometimes judged harshly, and every obstacle is thrown in their way, but undaunted they overcome each new menace to their means of making a livelihood.

A truly American institution, and living examples of that great American axiom, "You can't keep a good man down."

Their products are as good as most remedies and the active ingredients are in accordance to the Federal Laws written on each box or bottle.

Whenever these fellows chance to meet along the way, a celebration is held and the amount of money each takes in is rapidly inflated in the individual's mind, until figures such as you see on box cars are ultimately reached, but, no one believes the other and it's just a good natured contest to see who, in the language of the fraternity, can cut up the biggest jack pot, or in plain English, tell the biggest lie.

After setting in on one of these sessions, it's hard for the initiated to figure out why it is that they are as a general rule "broke" but such is usually the case, I say usually, not always, and when they are "in the chips" (have money) a freer spender can't be found any where. This is I believe the answer to why they're usually sans funds, and in most cases when they have it a poker game or crap game is held.

One of these happened which Blieve is worth mentioning here, in a hotel room, and lasted for three days and nites.

Doc's colored entertainer had a room with a colored family where one of the sons was a bellhop in the hotel in which the game was going on, and as they called each other Doc, he got the impression that they were all Doctors, and they sure did tip him.

One day he strutted up to Lucky Boy and much to Lucky Boys amusement, declared, "Boy am Ah makin' money I got a lot of rich Doctors in mah Hotel and they're playing Pokah for thousands of dollahs."

Lucky Boy was well named, he could shoot craps as well as he could sing "When the Mellon's Ripe in Dixie," and any other minstrel song you could name. Although he couldn't dance a lick, he thought he could and he'd make his feet move plenty, and one of his favorite laugh getters would be to pick out a big fat negress, as black as he could find, in the audience and say: "See that high yellow gal out there? I know what she's saying. She's saying, Lawd I wish that, that was mah man."

But I was telling you about his dexterity with African dominoes, or his proficiency in jig town golf.

All the gambling concessions at the State Fair were closed before they opened, sort of nipped in the bud, so to speak; and one fellow who owned a string of these concessions got the idea to set up a tent and have a big game for the Carnies, sort of on the order of the privilege car on a train, show, but instead of a railroad car, just set up a tent.

Every thing was on the up and up, a chuck a luck cage was used and one of the dice taken out, leaving two. You've seen a chuck a luck game haven't you? A sort of bird cage with three dice in it.

Well that's what they used and Lucky Boy was one of those crap shooters who either won all or lost all, no shooting a dollar and dragging it in, not him, he'd shoot it, leave it lay, until it either got so much no one would or could fade (cover it), and he'd fade anybody for as little or as much as they wanted to shoot, up to his last cent.

That nite he came out of the game with a roll of bills that would choke a herd of elephants and brother did he get drunk? I'll say he did, besides winning all the money, he'd also won five or six of the concessions, luck, stock and barrel. If the incident could have ended there, it would have been a happy ending, at least from the standpoint of the slickers getting outsmarted, but just like the man who went to the well too often, so too, did Lucky Boy go to the privilege top too often, the next night he lost everything he had and had to draw on his next week's salary for coffee and money the next morning.

Everybody who ever knew Lucky Boy liked him and when he died, yes he died that winter, in the "Dixie" he loved so well. It was a shock, and at his death an incident happened to show that those traveling vendors of remedies of all descriptions are humans and pretty good humans at that.

Lucky Boy, wasn't young anymore and had lived heard and fast as most everyone in show business, at least the old timers had; he'd drank heavily and become too sick to work, so Doc sent him to a hospital.

Doc would go to visit him from time to time and would try to cheer him up; telling him he'd be all right and would soon be back at his job, but Lucky Boy could see the handwriting on the wall, and one day when Doc went to visit him, said: "Doc I'm a sick niggah, and I want you to promise me one thing, Doc please don't let 'em hang me on a hook."

What he meant by hanging him on a hook was, that in some localities when people die and they haven't any relations to claim their bodies, and they leave no money to pay their funeral expenses, their bodies are given to Medical Schools, and hung up on hooks and when a part of a body is wanted for the class to study, one is taken from the ice box and cut up.

This was that fellow's fears in his last hours; he wasn't afraid of dying, all he was afraid of was being hung on a hook in an ice box.

"Don't worry, Lucky Boy," Doc assured him, "you're not going to die, but when you do, you won't hang on any hook, I'll see that you're properly buried." Lucky Boy did die, but when his body was buried, he wasn't hung on the hook.

This would be a pretty good place to live, if everybody would think as much of his fellow man, white or colored, as Doc did that old Darcy.

After hearing this the Kid often wondered if some day when his span on this earth was over, would he be allowed to rest peacefully or be hung on a hook? I wonder.

It's a tough business at best son, just a few weeks to work—why did the words of that old Geek haunt the Kid when he thought about these things?

Dear Friends:

For more than two years most of us have realized that it was absolutely essential that this Nation should pass some legislation to control the recklessness of certain labor leaders who have seen in the present world crisis an opportunity to "feather their nest". Each time we have tried to act, there has been a great hue and cry to the effect that Congress was about to "destroy the rights of free labor". This cry has been nothing more than a smoke screen. No one has desired to injure the loyal, patriotic workers who make up the bulk of the labor unions of this Nation, but a relatively small number of leaders, who are personally getting rich out of the fees they charge American workers, have been making as much noise as a pack of coyotes on a cold morning. None of them have pointed out just how the proposed legislation would actually hurt any honest working man or just how in the absence of legislation they were going to carry out the promises that these leaders have all repeatedly made that "there will be no strikes during war time". Every citizen knows that the unions have failed ignobly to carry out the no-strike pledge. Evidently the union leaders are either incapable or unwilling to keep their pledge. If they are sincere and want to keep their word but simply can't do so, they should welcome the help of the government. If they are insincere and are deliberately violating their pledge as John L. Lewis is admittedly doing, then all honest and patriotic labor leaders should want the government to control him not only to protect our Nation but to protect the good name of organized labor itself. Certainly organized labor cannot expect to continue to hold the public confidence and support and at the same time prove itself untrustworthy to the Nation in time of war.

True—it is said that labor unions are voluntary organizations, and it is no affair of the government whether their internal affairs are conducted honestly or not. The same contention was made in regard to political parties, but the courts all hold that government has a right and a duty to see that their primary elections are honestly conducted. The same thing was said of banks, but the courts all hold that the public should not be forced to suffer the losses of irresponsible banking, and all banks must submit statements of their financial conditions regularly. Does not the public have more interest today in the responsibility of the United Coal Mines than in the solvency of the First National Bank? And as to being true voluntary organizations:—at how many government war plants can an American citizen get a job without belonging to a union? You don't have to belong to a union if you don't want to work, but if you are to do your part in a defense plant, you don't have much chance without paying union dues. Doesn't it seem reasonable that the union should be required to account for the dues it collected?—And yet the head of one of the great labor organizations of this land stated just a few days ago that if any of the Members of Congress should be so presumptuous as to vote for such controls of labor unions that all of the resources of his great organization would be used to bring about that Member's defeat.

Well, this afternoon I voted against this leader's orders. I did not vote to hurt labor, but I voted to protect America in her hour of peril. If I am defeated as a result, I will have the satisfaction of knowing that I helped pass some of the regulations that have been long over due. The bill that was passed by a vote of 231 to 141 by the House this afternoon was, of course, a compromise. It was not just what I would have written, but it is definitely helpful. It is much stronger than the bill the Senate sent us. In addition to giving definite legal status to the National War Labor Board, which John L. Lewis now refuses to recognize, and conferring specific power on the Board to compel the attendance of Mr. Lewis or anyone else, and in addition to clarifying the President's powers in regard to strike-bound plants, the bill as passed applies to labor unions exactly the same provisions of law that now prohibit corporations from making political contributions; it provides for the registration of labor organizations with the National Labor Regulations Board and requires all labor organizations to file reports in regard to their fees, expenditures, etc. It requires reports as to the elections of officers. It requires a 30-day cooling period before any strike can be called, and then only after a secret ballot of the employees of the plant. The provisions of the bill terminate six months after the end of the war. These, my friends, are the "terrible, un-American shackles" of which some labor leaders and racketeers have warned Congress proposed to "fasten on the hands of toil". I have yet to meet a man who will say that these regulations are going to hurt him. As a matter of fact, they will hurt no one who is trying to do right. The bill is now back with the Senate. We can only hope that that body will prove its sincerity by passing it without weakening amendments.

Yours for Victory,
W. R. Poage

BAPTIST IN LEON RIVER ASSOCIATION MAKE PLANS VACATION BIBLE SCHOOLS

In the past week Rev. J. T. Ayers, Sunday School Superintendent and Rev. W. A. Sanderford have contacted churches all over the country in setting dates and making plans for the Vacation Bible Schools.

The following churches plan to minister to their young people with this work: Ireland, Leon Junction, Mountain, Turnersville, Purmela, Pidcoke, Mound, Gatesville. There are to be four schools in Gatesville.

Any other communities desiring to have schools, please contact J. T. Ayers, Mound, Texas or M. A. Sanderford, Purmela.

We feel like our churches should do their young people now. Let us make the home front strong moral, spiritually as well as materially.

BAPTIST PLAN OPEN REVIVAL HERE JULY 18-AUG. 1

Plans are complete for an open-air revival to be conducted by the First Baptist Church, July 18—August 1, announces Rev. Lawrence Hayes, pastor of the local church.

The two-weeks meeting with service twice daily, will be held on the church lawn with Dr. S. F. Martin of Memphis doing the preaching and H. Virgil Reynolds, directing the music and having charge of the personal work and visitation.

Mr. Reynolds was with the local church on a recent Sunday evening and his program of directing the music, playing the organ, miramba, and piano, was superb. Many friends of the church have expressed the hope he might be engaged for a revival.

A platform will be erected to take care of the choir, and two pianos, together with space for the large 8 foot miramba Mr. Reynolds uses in connection with his musical program.

Dr. Martin is less known in this area, but his 12 years with the Lamar Ave. Church at Wichita Falls in growing it into one of the larger Baptist church of the state, makes him a popular preacher among Texas Baptists.

The local pastor says that by having the meeting outside, many will attend who otherwise would not be in the services. The general public is invited to attend the revival.

FORMER GATESVILLE RESIDENT OPENS SOAP WORKS,

Seth Moore of Wichita Falls, and formerly of Gatesville has secured a temporary location 2 1/2 miles north of Hamilton and will open a rendering plant.

Trucks will cover a territory of 40 to 50 miles picking up animals and other materials for the rendering plant. The plant will be in operation as soon as necessary critical building materials can be spared by the government.

Mr. Moore is the son of a former Gatesville attorney, Judge R. F. (Bob) Moore. Mr. Moore took an engineering course at Texas Tech and was formerly employed by the Texas Electric Service Company as test engineer and plant operator, but became interested in the conversion of waste materials, and has entered into this business in Hamilton.

AUTO STAMPS OUT SOON AT POST OFFICE

Already they are out in a neighboring settlement, and the local post office announces they're ready to take your $5.00 (and that's all) for the Use Stamp, that you're required to have on your car before June 30 expires.

This is just $5 for using your car whether you can go anywhere or not. Anyway, it helps fight the Axis, and who cares whether they go places or not.
