WHOLE COUNTY FAVORS SHOW

At a meeting called by those most actively interested in the establishment of a permanent Parmer County Live Stock Show, and held in the auditorium of the Friona school on Monday night, plans for such an undertaking got well under way.

The meeting was well attended by epresentatives from all parts of the county, who were most directly interested in the establishment of such an organization which will tend forcibly toward the production of a higher type of livestock throughout the county and also the neighboring

SYNOPSIS

In Spanish-governed California of 1783 a conflict between Church and State is represented by two friendly enemies, frail old Fray Junipero Serra, Franciscan missionary, and Don Pedro Fages, civil governor. After telling Serra he is sending to Mexico for his wife and son, whom he has not seen for eight years, he refuses his aid toward founding the Santa Barbara Mission. Dona Eulalia agrees to go to California, accomfor eight years, he refuses his aid toward founding the Santa Barbara Mission. Dona Eulalia agrees to go to California, accompanied by her duenna, Angustias. Don Pedro sends for Serra, telling him that two priests are on their way from Mexico with Eulalia and young Pedro and that he is leaving to meet them. Fages engages a young Indian girl, Indizuela, as maid for Eulalia. Eulalia sails from San Blas. It is a desolate trip. From the port of Loreto, a large cavaleade loaded with Eulalia's party starts out for the long overland trip. Eulalia, accustomed to luxury and comfort, bitterly regrets having been persuaded to come. The two priests, Fray Mariano and Fray Bartolomeo, call on her and arouse her suspicions as to their genuineness. As the cavalcade stops at various missions, Eulalia hears rumors of the approach of her husband. While Don Pedro plans a great fiesta to welcome his wife, Eulalia plans her costume. Don Pedro welcomes his beautiful wife and young son. Eulalia is toasted as the Queen of the Californias. On the long journey to Monterey, the reunited couple are royally entertained at the Presidio at San Diego. Eulalia disapproves of the democratic relations of Don Pedro and his people. Pleading weariness in the midst of the feast she goes to bed where Angustias tells her she knows Eulalia is again to become a mother. Don Pedro is disturbed by the developments in the character of the priests and dreads Serra's disappointment in them.

That night she sat long at the lieutenant's lavish table, laughing and chatting with the company, complimenting the food, applauding the music.

"Now that I am leaving Califor-nia so soon," she thought, "I can enjoy things while I am here. It will be an experience to remember, and to tell about." Beneath her feet Escabellito squirmed in his sleep. Eulalia prodded him, and he was still. "Yes," she whispered, "I am leaving California-soon.'

CHAPTER XI

Along the King's Highway, where foot of king had never trod, nor royal hoof rung out, Fray Junipero limped slowly. He had been on a two strong brothers of Saint Franbeen the journey, pleasant the visiting with his brothers, and gratifying the reports he had heard. The missions were flourishing; converts, crops and cattle increasing.

He felt happy and satisfied. By his side trudged Pio, bearing a vellow umbrella, which shaded arms ached, for the umbrella as the hours passed.

The father, beneath that moving spot of shade, was tracing in retrospection the first of all these many steps that had led him through life on his apostolic journeyings.

That had been over half a century ago in Mallorca, the jewel of the Balearic Isles in the Mediterranean

Seventeen years old, Miguel Jose Serra had walked from his native village, Petra, to the capital city, Palma. His pious parents, amid their tearful farewells, begged him to ride the family burro, but the youthful pilgrim, in his heart already dedicated to the holy San Francisco, shook his head. So he set his rope-soled sandals-his alpagartas-on the road that stretched ahead of him, for half a century, across half a world.

In Palma, doffing the dress of a Petran peasant for the Franciscan habit and cowl, he doffed at the same time the name the peasants had called him. Miguel Jose Serra was gone. Now there was Brother Juniper only. Fray Junipero Serra. San Francisco had a devoted follower, Junipero, who would steal from the altar itself, if by stealing he could feed a hungry mouth. No larder in Asis was safe from his plundering. The good saint called the little brother, Jester of the Lord, saying: "Had I but a whole forest of such Junipers!" So he who traveled from the Mediterranean to the Pacific called himself Junipero.

Now his journey was nearly done. As he paced steadily on, dazed a "Enemies — hum," said Eulalia the County of Brittany. It was the lit is probable that the ice retreated little by the sun, and the disregard-stroking an eyebrow with her little daughter of this count, Constance, from northern United States at least ed emptiness of his body, a beauti- finger. ready to come home? I am waiting for you—" "Not yet, Father Francis; yet a little while! I have work-work. Another mission-for Santa Barbara!' "Good, little Brother. But soon.

You are awearied!" Fray Junipero felt the warm earth on hands, face. He stirred and lifted himself. The vision was gone. Only a brown road stretched before him, while overhead a flock of birds circled and cried. Pio's dark face leaned over him in concern, and he heard the young Indian's voice as though from a great distance.

"Little Father-you are aweary!" He pulled himself erect on trembling limbs and grasped his staff with its strong smooth shaft and little cross at the top.

"Yes, you are aweary, and hungry. Eat, Padre."

He pulled from his pouch some young green onions he had carried from the Mission San Antonio de Padua and held them out to the father, who crunched absently at the pungent, slightly withered roots. A vision-a miracle!" he exultlong journey, visiting each one of cis. Two men of God to help me his beloved missions. Happy had found the Mission Santa Barbara. God has heard me! My prayers have not been in vain. Santa Barbara shall have her mission at last. Praise God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Ghost!"

All along the flowery miles beside the sea, over mountains and through the father as well as himself. Pio's canons, Eulalia wondered about the famed missionary, Fray Junipero. seemed mysteriously to gain weight | What manner of man was he? According to the fathers at all the missions they had visited, he was a sainted miracle worker. With these opinions her husband concurred sincerely, and added other praises of his own. Not only was he a saint, but he was a man among men, strong, fearless, resourceful; un complaining in the midst of suffering. In short, the Governor gave him a soldier's merits in one phrase

-a good campaigner. In spite of all this, Eulalia felt that he withheld some opinion of the padre, and was puzzled to know what it might be. Now that they were approaching Monterey, and she would perhaps meet the Padre Presidente before night, she set herself to discover her husband's real opinion of him.

"Tell me, Pedro," she asked tentatively, "more about Padre Serra. I have heard much of him, even in Mexico City. He seems to be the most important person in California. apart from yourself, my dear. I shall have to associate with him, perhaps confess to him. What is he

The Governor hesitated and plucked reflectively at his beard. 'Stop doing that!" ordered the "When you do that I know you are thinking what you will say instead of saying it outright."

"Well," he said, but still caressing his beard, "I usually think before I speak. And doing this helps me to think. You have heard all I can say about Padre Serra. I like

"Don't do that!" he laughed. 'When you do that I know you are thinking what you are going to say, Eulalia laughed. "But it helps me think," she mocked. The Governor still held her hand.

How dear, how charming she could be, thought he.

"So you are enemies. Why?"
"My dear, Church and State have ever been enemies. Their aims are too widely apart for them to work together sympathetically. That is especially true in California. The aim of the Crown-the State-in California is, frankly, the acquiring and holding of this country, and protecting it from other acquisitive nations-England, Russia. The aims of the Church are the conversion of the heathen.'

He loosed her hand absently and pulled his beard.

"And-" prompted Eulalia. "I, representing the State, must do my duty. I must see that the Church does nothing to jeopardize the Crown's holdings. Father Serra is the church in California. He would like to see all the soldiers sent out of the province, and be left here with the rest of the Franciscans, alone to work things out his own way."

Eulalia pricked up her ears. "He wishes the soldiery away from the province?"

"He does."

"And you?" "My dear, he would do anything to get me away from here. I believe he would stop at nothing under the sun to rid California of my pernicious influence."

"Ah," said Eulalia, deep in

"He did rid himself of me once, you remember. Humph! The charges he made against me! And the terrible journey he made, sick and suffering as he was, to present them to the Viceroy. He nearly died, with his crippled leg. But his belief in what he was doing led him on, successfully, that time. I admire him. On my soul, I do." The Governor laughed.

"But I came back." Eulalia's mind was working rapidly. So the Padre Presidente was that manner of man! One strong in belief in his duty-but one who would stop at nothing, as the Governor had said, to gain his ends in regard to forwarding the Church in "A strange man," she said aloud. "But I have made up my mind that we are going to be friends. Yes, good friends. He should be a comfort to me in this strange land."

The Governor frowned doubtfully, then reached for his wife's hand

"Splendid!" he cried heartily, squeezing her fingers. "Perhaps you can change his opinion of your husband. Then we can all live here happily, you and I, and all the children, in California for the rest of our lives!"

She withdrew her fingers. "Perhaps," she said softly, "per-

"Yellow?" The Governor leaned forward. "Ah, yes, I see. I know who it is. It's Fray Junipero, and Pio carrying his yellow umbrella!

Andale! We will overtake him." Fray Junipero, lost in unearthly dreams, was startled at the sound of hoof-beats so near him, and moved off the royal road hastily as the gay party of riders dashed toward him. The Governor reined in his mount, which reared upright on quivering haunches, and faced the missionary. "Hail, Father!" he cried, waving his hat. Then he dismounted hast-

Fray Junipero blinked, and sald softly, "Ah, your Excellency!" With an impulsive gesture Fages put both hands on the monk's shoulders. The face, though browned and weather-beaten, gave the impression of being pale and wan. The deep lines were deeper, the silver tonsure whiter. Beneath his hands he could feel the shoulders, in their hot coarse brown covering, so bent, so thin, trembling. But it was Junipero Serra's eyes that startled him. Fiery with strange inner fires, they burned in his bony skull, not meeting the Governor's intent look, but darting avidly among the company

Pedro Fages dropped his hands. He half turned from the missionary, avoiding his searching look. For a brief second he stood tense, still, his hand on the hilt of his sword. Then he flung his head up abruptly. "Father Junipero . . ." he began bravely. But Junipero Serra interrupted

"Don Pedro!" he cried in a trembling voice, holding out his hands fearfully. "Don't tell me . . . but I had a vision . . . a promise! Ah, praise to God on high! There they are! Ai, ai, my Brothers! Come here, closer! Let me see you . touch you! You are holy men, an answer to prayer!" He stumbled toward Mariano Rubi and Bartolome Gili holding out his arms, tears streaming down his cheeks. The two did not move, but stood as though stricken in their tracks. Serra threw his arms about them looked into their sullen faces and his eyes. In his joy, the fervid missionary noticed none of these things. He looked about him for the Governor. "Ah, forgive me, my son, for not greeting you!" he cried. "You and all your party have my blessing!"

WHAT TO EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Describes the Precious MINERAL SALTS

That You Must Have in Order to Build Strong Bones, Sound Teeth, Healthy Nerves, Rich Red Blood

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

HE human body is often compared to a machine, but it is far more wonderful, far more complex, than the most intricate machine ever designed to run without stopping, day in and day out, for upwards of 70 years, is also a fully equipped chemical laboratory. For if a chemist should grind a man to bits and analyze the pieces, he would find at least 18 chemical elements, and possibly traces of several others.

In addition to oxygen, carbon, hydrogen and nitrogen, the body contains a wide variety of mineral materials, which are necessary to its proper functioning-and even to life itself. The list includes calcium, phosphorus, potassium, sulphui, sodium, chlorine, magnecopper. All these substances must be furnished to the growing child -through food and drink-and generous amounts must also be supplied daily in the diet of adults, to replace the minerals that are constantly being used up.

Minerals Necessary to Life

It is vitally important that the homemaker should understand the function of these various salts and where they can be found. For if certain minerals are lacking in the body, the heart will stop beating. Without others, the bones cannot form properly. Still others are responsible for the rich red blood that makes the difference between a healthy person and a sickly one. Laboratory experiments have proved that if you leave out the smallest trace of the mineral known as manganese, you destroy the love of a mother for her child. And nutritionists-but unfortunately not mothers-are well aware that less than a thousandth of an ounce of iodine makes all the difference between a normal man and an imbecile.

* * * Calcium-Captain of Minerals

Calcium deserves its ranking position as the captain of the minerals, because it builds the bones. and plays an important part in or body framework. And the bony skeleton is to the human being what steel is to a building. Calcium is also the chief constituent of the teeth and upon healthy teeth rests the health of the digestive system and, in turn, the entire body. For food that is improperly masticated is imperfectly digested and fails to nourish prop-

About 99 per cent of the calcium in the body is found in the teeth and bones. If the body does not receive an adequate supply of this mineral in pre-natal life and during the growing years, the bones will be porous, distorted and easily broken, and the teeth will develop cavities and eventually may fall out.

In addition to being the principal material for making and maintaining the bones and teeth. calcium increases the strength and pulsations of the heart and helps the blood coagulate in case of injury, thus keeping you and hunger. Obesity is frequently the your loved ones from bleeding to death. That is why an extra supply of calcium is fed to patients just before an operation.

Calcium Builds Will Power

There is a close relationship between calcium and sound, healthy nerves. And this precious substance likewise helps us to concentrate mentally-it strengthens our will power-and assists us in acquiring that "do or die!" attitude toward life, which is essential in an age when we must all struggle or go under

Yet despite its importance, it is estimated by that outstanding authority, Henry C. Sherman, Professor of Nutrition at Teachers College, Columbia University, that one-half of the American peopleeven those with plenty of moneyare literally starving for calcium, because they do not know the food sources of this vitally important mineral.

* * * Where to Obtain Calcium

The foremost sources of calcium are milk and cheese, which is milk in concentrated form. It is chiefly to provide adequate calcium that homemakers must follow the rule of a quart of milk daily for every child, and a pint for each adult.

Vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce, celery, asparagus, string beans, cabbage, carrots and cauliflower are also a good supplementary source of calcium. And some fruits, such as oranges, figs, strawberries and bananas likewise supply significant amounts.

* * * Indispensable Phosphorus

Like calcium, phosphorus is required by the body in relatively large amounts, and like calcium, it is especially important in the sium, iron, manganese, iodine and diet of children, because it is deposited in the bones, along with calcium, as calcium phosphate.

Phosphorus is indispensable for all the active tissues in the body regulating the neutrality of the blood. It can be obtained from whole grain cereals, eggs, dried beans, cheese, lean meats, and root and leafy vegetables.

* * * Iron-King Pin of Them All

But measured in terms of food essentials, iron is king pin of them all. It is the supreme element in nutrition because it is necessary for the formation of the hemoglobin or red pigment in the blood. And it is the hemoglobin which carries purifying oxygen to every cell in the body. Recently, it has been discovered that copper is required for the proper utilization of iron. "Red blooded" is a term understood by everyone to denote health and strength, and it is iron that makes us red blooded. When your children grow pale and listless, lose their pep and lack appetite, it is likely that they are starving for iron. If you become short of breath and "pant" when going up hill, or upstairs, even though there is nothing wrong with your heart or lungs, the chances are that there is insufflcient red pigment in the bloodnot enoug to take up an adequate supply of oxygen and carry it to the millions of cells throughout the body. There is no excuse for cheating yourself or your children of a full measure of iron, for this mineral can easily be obtained from liver, egg yolk, whole grain cereals, molasses, dried fruits, dried peas and beans, nuts, lean meats and green

* * * lodine-Molder of Men

Almost everyone has heard that odine is the mineral which helps to prevent that disfiguring enlargement of the neck, known as simple goiter. But few people realize that it is the principal constituent of thyroxin, secretion of the thyroid gland, and that the thyroid functions normally only when sufficient iodine is available.

A wide variety of physiological disorders have been laid to iodine result of thyroid disturbance. Specialists contend that stubborn skindiseases are associated with disorders of this gland. Many people are accused of laziness who are really suffering from thyroid deficiency. And competent authorities claim that the thyroid likewise influences mental make-up and emotional tendencies.

Iodine is found chiefly in seafood and in fruits and vegetables grown near the sea. In inland regions, where soil and water are poor in iodine, health authorities frequently add it to the drinking water. And the use of iodized salt is also recommended. By these simple measures, thousands of growing children can be saved from the disastrous results of iodine deficiency.

In general, it can be said that if the minerals calcium, phosphorus, iron and iodine are supplied in adequate amounts, the other minerals will be automatically fur-

THESE pictures tell their own story.

Laura is "made up" for the camera and taken to the famed sea shore at Miami Beach. Like a movie star, she has a "standin" (above) while primping for the photographer. Both "stills" and moving pictures are employed to bring the nation's attention to this shapely young lady and the resort city she advertises. Straight poses and stunt pictures like the water bicycle (lower left) are prepared by the ingenious press agents. A few weeks later Laura sees her picture as it appeared in papers throughout the nation.

A Splendid "Service" for Floors

Floors receive rougher treatment than any other part of the home—and it is floors that show up to poorest advantage when neglected-best advantage, when properly cared for! Up to now attractive floors have required some little time and attention, but this is no longer necessary. For into the field of domestic preparations has come "self-polishing wax"—liquid-smooth, simple to apply, lovely to see. This remarkable preparation goes on easily, quickly, and dries in 20 minutes! Its results are 4-fold: The floors are protected—they are preserved -they stay freshly-clean longerand they are beautified! A quality self-polishing wax protects and preserves, by forming a film over the surface-hard enough to withstand friction and grinding wearand-tear. It induces floors to stay clean longer, because dirt and cause it is shimmering, transparent, and brings out the natural beauty of the wood. And what more could the home-maker ask. for? There are, however, various qualities of self-polishing wax available. Only the best should be used, for both the appearance and condition of the floors. But the finest self-polishing wax is a joy to use-its lasting results a

Same Old Four Will Fight for National Flag

By GEORGE A. BARCLAY

WHEN the front runners of the spring baseball season have petered out and the morning glory rookies who looked like the reincarnation of Ty Cobb have folded, the National league pennant race will settle down to a dog fight among the same contenders who battled it out in 1937.

Four teams-the New York Giants, Chicago Cubs, St. Louis Cardinals and the Pittsburgh Piratesagain will hold the balance of power in the senior circuit. How they will rank in the final standings is anybody's guess, but all four will hold berths in the first division, leaving the Boston Bees, Brooklyn Dodgers, Cincinnati Reds and the Phillies to scramble for positions in the second

The race will probably be close, as usual, but not in the sense that powerhouse ball clubs will be involved. The standard of play should be about the same as last year, and that wasn't anything to brag about considering what happened to the National league team, in the All-Star game and later to the pennant-winning Giants in the world series when they met the Yankees.

No Rookie Wonders

Reports from the training camps and the spring exhibition games indicate that there will not be any radical change in the personnel of any of the four leaders. Here and there a newcomer may break into the regular lineup, but the freshmen probably won't be sensational or nu-

The champion Giants will be shy of strength in the infield, with first base still a problem, with the ageing Mel Ott on third and Whitehead grease cannot become imbedded away from his post at second be-in the wood. Charlie Grimm is difficult to muster enthusiasm about them as a pennant winner. Yet they cannot be dismissed. Undoubtedly Charlie Grimm has the best-balanced team in the league. It is still a young team, comparatively speaking.

The Cub outfield was the vulnerable spot last year, but it looks as if this might now be solved with Joe Marty doing a smart job in center and Carl Reynolds standing ready to help Demaree and Galan. Spring reports indicate an improved pitching staff. The presence of Tony Lazzeri should help.

Diz Is Question

The league's big question mark is the St. Louis Cardinals and the biggest question mark on the team itself is Dizzy Dean. If Dizzy makes a comeback and his brother Paul is able to pitch at all, Frankie Frisch's Gas House Gang who are tough enough to win some games on sheer nerve may wind up on top. Dizzy was a chastened athlete in the early stages this year and his effort to make people forget his 1937 flop may result in some gilt-edge pitch-

The Pirates will be shy of grade A pitching, but they should have a powerful attack once more. The Waner brothers aren't getting any younger, but they're still effective. There isn't much future ahead this year for the Bees, the Reds, the Dodgers and the Phillies. Bill McKechnie, one of the most resourceful managers in baseball, may get results at Cincinnati, but it would be too much to expect him to work any wonders in a single year. Casey Stengel has inherited a scrappy team in the Boston Bees, but there isn't much punch there. The Dodgers may have helped themselves in getting Dolph Camilli at first and with Larry Mc-Phail in the saddle as general manager there may be further efforts at improvement. The case of the Phillies looks rather hopeless. There are a number of weak spots and not nearly enough strong men

Baer in Comeback

The Baer brothers-Max and Buddy-are tough fellows to figure. A while back everybody agreed that Max was through as a heavyweight and the rising Buddy was the hope of the Baer clan. Now the reverse is true. Max is headed straight for another chance at the heavyweight title with fair prospects of success and Buddy is headed straight for the discard.

Buddy was an 8 to 5 favorite to beat Gunnar Barland in New York recently. Dopesters said he would win handily. Instead he took a ter-the short end of 7 to 5 odds against Tommy Farr. Everybody expected him to take a licking. Instead he pounded out a decisive victory.

Max has been called "the man who could fight but wouldn't." He apparently wanted to fight the hight he met Farr. It was his battle all the way. He slammed Farr to the canvas three times in fifteen rounds. Joe Louis and Jim Braddock weren't able to put Tommy down once.

Winning back the prestige he lost when he was so ingloriously beaten by Joe Louis two years ago, Baer showed he could take it as well as dish it out. Farr hit Baer aplenty. Max's left eye was completely closed before the fight ended. But is immunity to punishment bears out Joe Louis' contention that he hit Baer harder than he had ever hit any other man and still couldn't knock him out. You will recall that Max took the route of a technical knockout that time.

So Max is now on the way back. He did more than pull himself level with Schmeling in the heavyweight runner-up class in taking the decision over Farr.

Double Play Expert

Baseball men say that Joe Tinker, immortal shortstop of Frank Chance's old Cubs, and the man who started the "Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance" brand of double plays may be back in the game again this year either as a manager or coach.

A little over a year ago Joe Tinker was near death of Bright's disease down in Florida. Physicians had just about given him up, when some baseball pals came to the rescue. Joe Stripp, now of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was one of them. He told Tinker he had a job for him as an instructor in his baseball school when he recovered. That was the best medicine Joe had had. He got well and less than two months after his life was despaired of, he was actually teaching youngsters in Stripp's school last year.

Later that year he managed the Orlando Gulls of the Florida State league and when the financial support of the club gave out, he trayeled to Chicago for a reunion of old-time Cub stars.

Here and There

Arnold Statz, known as "Jigger" who was once a member of the Cubs outfield, claims to have the longest record of continuous service as a player in organized baseball. He has been at it 23 years. He started in 1915 and is still going strong as center fielder of the Los Angeles club in the Pacific Coast league. Incidentally, Statz is one of the best golfers in baseball. Manager Burleigh Grimes of the Brooklyn Dodgers won 270 games in his active pitching career, being exceeded in victories only by Cy Young, Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson and Eddie Plank Johnny Corriden, oldest son of Red Corriden, Cubs coach, is a freshman at Indiana university and hopes next year to earn a varsity track letter.

Spain's Romeo and Juliet

The "Lovers of Teruel," Spain's Romeo and Juliet, form one of the most ancient legends of Spain. They were Diego de Marcilla and Isabel de Segura and lived in Teruel during the Thirteenth century under the reign of King James of Aragon. They parted because of family disapproval and languished and died. Their bodies were mummified and they were buried in the chapel of the church of San Pedro.

A CURTAIN of fire is one of nature's great electrical mysteries. In northern latitudes at certain times beams and flashes of dazzling brilliance play across the sky. Sometimes it is like giant searchlights from beyond the rim of the world. The discharge of light is 50 to 100 miles above the earth. With it comes a noise, a low crackling sound like the rustle of silk, believed to be made by the aurora borealis.

On January 25, 1938, the people of London came running from their houses believing that the whole city was afire. All over Europe fire engines rushed to put out non-existent fires. Even Windsor castle was thought to be burning to the ground as the fire department raced to the scene. On that night from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. the most brilliant display of aurora borealis in 50 years was seen over a wide area of northern Europe, extending even to Italy and Portugal. Between New York and Europe short-wave radio went dead.

The cause of nature's most beautiful, mysterious and at times most terrifying phenomenon is unknown. Scientists believe the rays are due to discharges of electricity in the upper atmosphere, and are in some unknown way related to sun spots. Sun spots are dark spots on the face of the sun, seen only through a telescope. They look like cavities and from the rim of these cavities rise whirling flames. Some scientists believe the sun spots are giant flery whirlpools that move across the face of the sun. They seem to cause magnetic storms which in turn disrupt radio communication and also, some scientists believe, affect the weather on the

Sambo Became Sure Debt Was Outlawed

Sambo got a job as a bill collector for a restaurant. By his vio-lent attitude, he forced five timid patrons to pay their debts. Then one day his boss noticed a big colored chap across the street who owed him money. Sambo raced over and grabbed the other man's arm, demanding why the money hadn't been paid.

"'Cause," replied the man harshly, "Ah been in jail fo' a murder Ah committed. Now, what was you stoppin' me fo'?'

Sambo gulped. He wet his lips. "De reason Ah stopped you," he returned nervously, "was jes" to tell you not to worry about payin' dat money.'

TIPS to Gardeners

Young Garden Care

THE value of a garden plant, greatly upon the start it gets; so give the seedlings ample care.

Begin cultivation as soon as rows are visible, if the soil is not wet. Work close to the small plants, cultivating shallower as they grow to avoid injury to root growth.

Cultivate at least once a week. Watering should not be necessary the first week or ten days after seeds have sprouted. Later, young plants may be watered one of two ways: Mark a shallow trench about four inches from the row and run it full of water. Or, using a fine spray, apply water from directly above plants. Watering is most effective when it closely follows cultivation.

Small plants should be thinned, as directed on packets, to allow proper development. Certain vegetables may be used as thinned. For instance, onions thinned may be used as green onions, and lettuce may be picked for immediate use, leaving smaller leaves to de-

Three Being Held on Grain Theft Charges

(From State Line Tribune) Three men were being held in the Parmer county jail, Tuesday afternoon at the time this was written, on charges of stealing grain from farmers in this county, it was revealed through local officers.

The men held are Kirk and King Runnels of Texico, and C. H. Peter son, said to be a brother-in-law of one of the Runnels boys. Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Nobles. Monday afternoon, in the amount of $500.00 for each defendant, and the Sheriff's office announced Tuesday afternoon that they were expected make bond.

The three men, according to the sheriff's department, have made statements of confession to the charges, and will be held over to the grand jury in July

At least three truck loads of threshed grain have been taken from Parmer county farmers by this trio during the past months, it is believ ed. One load, officers claim, was sold to a Texico dealer, while another load was disposed of at Post, Texas, and the third went to Vernon, Texas, in the opinion of officers.

The grain is said to have been the property of Ed Meeks, Dick Hammonds, and another farmer near
