SYNOPSIS

Young, pretty Jane Barnes, who lived with her brother, Baldwin, in Sherwood Park, near Washington, was not particularly impressed when she read that rich, attractive Edith Towne had been left at the altar by Delafield Simms, wealthy New Yorker.

Down the path Jane went, the two pussy-cats like small shadows in her wake, until suddenly a voice came out of the dark.

"I believe it is little Jane Barnes. She stopped. "Oh, is that you, Evans? Isn't it a heavenly night?" "I'm not sure.

"Don't talk that way."

"Why not?"

"Because an evening like this is like wine-it goes to my head." "You are like wine," he told her. "Jane, how do you do it?"

"Do what?" "Hold the pose of youth and joy and happiness?" "You know it isn't a pose. I just feel that way, Evans.'

"My dear, I believe you do." He limped a little as he walked beside her. He was tall and gaunt. Almost grotesquely tall. Yet when he had gone to war he had not seemed in the least grotesque. He had been tall but not thin, and he had gone in all the glory of his splendid youth.

There was no glory left. He was twenty-seven. He had fought and he would fight again for the same cause. But his youth was dead, except when he was with Jane. She revived him, as he said, like wine.

"I was coming over," he began, and broke off as a sibilant sound interrupted him.

"Oh, are the cats with you? Well, Rusty must take the road," laughed as the little old dog trotted to neutral ground at the edge of the grove. Rusty was friends with Merrymaid, except when there were kittens about. He knew enough to avoid her in days of anxious motherhood. Jane picked up the kitten. "They would come.

"All animals follow you. You're sort of a domestic Circe-with your dogs and chickens and pussy-cats in the place of tigers and lions and leopards.

"I'd love to have lived in Eden," said Jane, unexpectedly, "before Eve and Adam sinned. What it must have meant to have all those great beasts mild-mannered and purring was silhouetted against the silvery under your hand like this kitten. gray of the night. What a dreadful thing happe Evans, when fear came into the

"What makes you say that now, Jane?" His voice was sharp. "Shouldn't I have said it? Oh, Evans, you can't think I had you

"No," with a touch of weariness,

"but you are the only one, really, who knows what a coward I am-'Evans, you're not.'

"You're good to say it, but that's what I came over for. I am up against it again, Jane. Some cousins are on from New York-they're at the New Willard-and Mother and I went in to see them last night. They have invited us to go back with them. They've a big house east of Fifth Avenue, and they want us as their guests indefinitely. They think it will do me a lot of goodget me out of myself, they call it. But I can't see it. Since I came home-every time I think of facing mobs of people"-again his voice grew sharp-"I'm clutched by something I can't describe. It is perfectly unreasonable, but I can't help

For a moment they walked in silence, then he went on-"Mother's very keen about it. She thinks it will set me up. But I want to stay here-and I thought if you'd talk to her, she'll listen to you, Jane-she always does."

"Does she know how you feel about it?"

"No, I think not. I've never told her. I've only spilled over to you now and then. It would hurt Mother, no end, to know how changed I am.

Jane laid her hand on his arm. "You're not. Brace up, old dear. You aren't dead yet." As she lifted her head to look up at him, the hood of her cape slipped back, and the wind blew her soft, thick hair against his cheek. "But I'll talk to your mother if you want me to. She is a great darling."

They had reached the kitchen "Won't you come in?" Jane

"No, I've got to get back. only ran over for a moment. I have to have a daily sip of you, Jane.

"Baldy's bringing a steak for dinner. Help us eat it." "Sorry, but Mother would be alone. "When shall I talk to her?" "There's no hurry. The cousins are staying on for the opening of me-" His voice broke. "Evans, as if I could."

Again her hand was on his arm. He laid his own over it. "You're the best ever, Janey," he said, husk-ily—and presently he went away.

Jane, going in, found that Baldy had telephoned. "He kain't git here until seven," Sophy told her. "You had better run along home," Jane told her. "I'll cook the steak when it comes.

Sophy was old and she was tired. Life hadn't been easy. The son who was to have been the prop of her old age had been killed in France. There was a daughter's daughter who had gone north and who now and then sent money. Old Sophy did not know where her granddaughter got the money, but it was good to have it when it came. But it was not enough, so old Sophy worked. "I hates to leave you here alone, Miss Janey.

"Oh, run along, Sophy. Baldy will come before I know it."

Jane went through the kitchen to the back door, throwing an appraising glance at the things in the warming oven, and stood waiting on the threshold, hugging herself in the keenness of the wind.

Presently her brother's tall form

"I thought you were never coming," she said to him. "I thought so, too." He bent and kissed her; his cheek was cold as it touched hers. "Aren't you nearly frozen?"

"No. Sorry to be late, honey. Get dinner on the table and I'll be

"I'm afraid things won't be very appetizing," she told him; "they've waited so long. But I'll cook the steak-

He had gone on, and was beyond the sound of her voice. She opened the fat parcel which he had deposited on the kitchen table. She wondered a bit at its size. But Baldy had a way of bringing home unexpected bargains-a dozen boxes of crackers-unwieldy pounds of cof-

But this was neither crackers nor coffee. The box which was revealed bore the name of a fashionable florist. Within were violets-single ones -set off by one perfect rose and tied with a silver ribbon.

Jane gasped-then she went to the door and called: "Baldy, where's the steak?"

He came to the top of the stairs. 'Great guns," he said, "I forgot it!" Then he saw the violets in her hands, laughed and came down a step or two. "I sold a loaf of bread and bought-white hyacinths-'

"They're heavenly!" Her glance swept up to him. "Peace offering?" There were gay sparks in his eyes. "We'll call it that."

She blew a kiss to him from the tips of her fingers. "They are perfectly sweet. And we can have an omelette. Only if we eat any more eggs, we'll be flapping our wings." 'I don't care what we have. I am so hungry I could eat a house."

He went back up the stairs, laugh-Jane, breaking eggs into a bowl. meditated on the nonchalance of men. She meditated, too, on the mystery of Baldy's mood. The flowers were evidence of high exaltation. He did not often lend himself to such extravagance. He came down presently and helped carry in the belated dinner. The potatoes lay like withered leaves in a silver dish, the cornbread was a wrinkled wreck, the pudding a travesty. Only Jane's omelette and a lettuce salad had escaped the blight of delay. Then, too, there was Philomel, singing. Jane drew a cup of coffee, hot and strong, and set it at her Congress. Jane dear, don't despise brother's place. She knew it was so by the ring of his voice, the cock of his headhence she was not in the least surprised when he leaned forward under the old-fashioned spreading dome which drenched him with light, and said, "I've such a lot to tell you, Jane; the most amazing thing has happened."

CHAPTER II

When young Baldwin Barnes had ridden out of Sherwood that morning on his way to Washington, his car had swept by fields which were crisp and frozen; by clumps of trees whose pointed tops cut into the clear blue of the sky; over ice-bound streams, all shining silver in the early sunlight.

He had the eye of an artist, and he liked the ride. Even in winter the countryside was attractive-and as the road slipped away, there came a few big houses surrounded by wide grounds, with glimpses through their high hedges of white statues, of spired cedars, of sundials set in the midst of dead gar-

Beyond these there was an arid stretch until the Lake was reached, then the links of one country club, the old buildings of another, and at last on the crest of a hill, a view of the city-sweeping on the right towards Arlington and on the left towards Soldiers' Home.

Turning into Sixteenth Street, he crossed a bridge with its buttresses guarded by stone panthers-and it was on this bridge that his car

Climbing out, he blamed Fate furiously. Years afterward, however, he dared not think of the difference it might have made if his little flivver had not failed him.

Once when he stopped, a woman passed him. She was tall and slender and wrapped up to her ears in moleskin. Her small hat was blue, from her hand swung a gray suede bag, her feet were in gray shoes with cut-steel buckles.

Baldy's quick eyes took in the details of her costume. He reflected as he went back to work that women were fools to court death in that fashion, with thin slippers and silk stockings, in this bitter weather.

He found the trouble, fixed it, motor. And it was just as he was moving that his eve was caught by a spot of blue bobbing down the hill below the bridge. The woman who had passed him was making her way slowly along the slippery path. On each side of her the trees were brown and bare. At the foot of the hill was a thread of frozen water.

It was not usual at this time to see pedestrians in that place. Now and then a workman took a short cutor on warm days there were picnic parties-but to follow the rough paths in winter was a bleak and arduous adventure.

He stayed for a moment to watch her, then suddenly left his car and The girl in the blue hat had caught her high heels in a root, had stumbled and fallen.

When he reached her, she was struggling to her feet. He helped her, and picked up the bag which she had dropped.

"Thank you so much." Her voice was low and pleasing. He saw that she was young, that her skin was very fair, and that the hair which swept over her ears was pale gold, but most of all, he saw that her eyes were burning blue. He had | trolley there. never seen eyes quite like them. The

"It was so silly of me to try to do it," she was protesting, "but I thought it might be a short cut-"

He wondered what her destination might be that this remote path should lead to it. But all he said was, "High heels aren't made formountain climbing-

"They aren't made for anything," she said, looking down at the steelbuckled slippers, "useful."

"Let me help you up the hill." "I don't want to go up." He surveyed the steep incline. "I am perfectly sure you don't want to go down."

"I do," she hesitated, "but I suppose I can't."

He had a sudden inspiration. "Can take you anywhere? My little flivver is up there on the bridge. Would you mind that?'

'Pronghorn' Distinct From All Other Antelopes

A recent census of the American | In addition to their gracefully antelope, or "pronghorn," shows the years from 1922 to 1924 showed there were only about 26,600 antelopes left of the millions which once roamed the range. The last census shows there are now 131,555 in the country.

In other words there are more than five times as many on the range as there were 15 years ago. There is no animal on this continent more typically American than the "pronghorn." He is so that he is classified as a species, genus and family all by himself. says the American Wildlife Institute.

When alarmed, the skin muscles on the animal's rump throw the long white hairs out into two brightly conspicuous rosettes. When the "pronghorn" takes to flight, these rosettes are visible long after the rest of the animal has merged into the protective coloration of the landscape and can be seen as brilliant white spots dancing over the horizon. A home is more than a house, and yet people live as though it were not true. They build attractive houses, fill them with comfortable furnishings, and think they have a home, no matter how they may live. God is forgotten, pleasure becomes the chief object in life, and money is desired because it buys pleasure. Intoxicants are freely used both outside and inside the home, apparently with no thought of their destructive influence.

Alcohol burned in a stove produces heat, in an engine it produces power, in a man it produces disgrace and disease, and in the home it produces sorrow, suffering, and ultimately destruction. Why should the decent and intelligent people of America supinely submit to the devastation of this juggernaut, the liq- ply. uor traffic? What are you doing

The lesson for today presents three factors which make for happiness in the home.

I. Loyalty to Family Standards (Jer. 35:5-10). When the traditional standards of a family are good and right in the sight of God, they afford a worthy rallying point for the younger generation. The Rechabites were obedient to the instructions of their forefathers. The prophet had subjected them to a test (not a temptation, for he did not expect them to fall) in the presence of the Jews and in the great city of Jerusalem. They were surrounded by the unaccustomed luxury and temptations of the city, and now the prophet tries them further by saying, "Drink ye wine." But they were not afraid to be thought old-fashioned or queer, for they knew that the customs of their fathers were good (see Jer.

6:16), and they stood by them. To depend on that which is good and noble in the past of our people or family, is a sign neither of weakness nor ignorance, but rather of wisdom and strength. What kind of mine look back to? What of the little baby who lay in his buggy while band pick out the bottle of whisky which destroys all of the finest in men and in their homes.

II. Accuracy in Daily Living (Eph. 5:15-21)

"The Greek word rendered 'circumspectly' (v. 15) may be more closely and simply rendered 'accurately.' The thought given is that of painstaking attention to details, under a sense of their importance; a remembrance not only in general but in particular of the duties of the Christian's walk" (Moule). Every phrase in this section of our lesson is overflowing with meaning but we cannot here refer to them all. Note the temperance application. The man who walks accurately will be "wise" (v. 15) and will 'be filled with the Spirit" (v. 18). The inaccurate walker is a "fool" (v. 15), and one of his follies may be in being "drunk with wine" (v. 18). But there is far more in this passage. Spirit-filled people know the will of God and therefore redeem the time. They cultivate that delightful spiritual exercise of home religion known as hymn singing. Have you tried that lately? Gather the family or friends around the organ or piano. Turn off the everpresent radio for a few minutes. Open the old hymn book and sing. Don't overlook thankfulness in verse 20, and then try that golden recipe. III. Unity in the Home (Eph. 6:1-4).

A united family is obviously impossible where one member or more gives his time and money and very life to booze. You know and I know that it just does not work. Think of the havoc thus wrought not only in the lives of the parents, but particularly in the lives and characters of the children.

Let Christ reign in the home and there will be unity. Children will realize that it is right to obey their godly parents. They will honor and cherish father and mother, and God will reward them for it (vv. 2, 3; also Exod. 20:12). But what is more, fathers will be wise enough not to provoke their children to wrath. Much of the trouble in our homes is caused by disobedient children, but sometimes I think even more of it is caused by unwise parents. children need nurture and admonition, but that can be done in kindness and with constructive results if we seek the Lord's help. Father, mother, let me plead with you that you permit no interest in business, social life, or even church work to come between you and your fellowship with your children. That is your biggest job and your greatest opportunity.

Married Man

PROFESSOR WAKES was worried. The letter from Crewe university promised him exactly the appointment he desired. It included a house (and this meant he could keep chickens and study the psychology of the domestic fowl, something he'd wished to study for ages). It also meant a satisfactory increase in salary and increased personal prestige.

But the president demanded a married man, and the last thing on earth Professor Wakes wanted was a wife. Women, in his mind, were composed of those who ministered to his comfort, such as cooks, and those dreadful flappers, whom he didn't know but occasionally glimpsed through what he described as the written word.

He rang the bell. Mrs. Lawrence had acted as housekeeper for him and his crony, Assistant Professor Dawson (in the ethnology department) for seven years. He had some respect for the judgment of Mrs.

"Ah, good morning, good morning," he said fussily when Mrs. Lawrence appeared.

"No bad news, I hope, professor?" she asked, taking an indicated chair by the window.

'No, er, that is to say, I fear is is bad for you, and, er, for me, too. I have been very comfortable in your house, Mrs. Lawrence, very comfortable, indeed."

"I am thankful you will get the recognition you deserve," cried Mrs. Lawrence. "Of course, I shall miss you, but I must not think of myself when such a fine offer comes your way.'

A noble-hearted woman, said the professor to himself, and good-looking, too. Never noticed it before. "But, er," he continued aloud, "there is one consideration that will, I fear, prevent my accepting the

Mite Meadow Mouse Builds Home in Scarecrow's Pocket

By THORNTON BURGESS

A queerer place to build a home You'll never see though far you roam. Look high and low and all around You'll never find it I'll be bound.

W HEN little Mite Meadow Mouse ran for his life from Redtail the Hawk through the rows of young corn in Farmer Brown's cornfield he didn't have the least idea where he was going. His one thought was to get away from those dreadful claws stretched out to clutch him. So he dodged and ran and ran and dodged. Now it just happened that he ran in the one direction in which he could find safety, and that was straight toward the scarecrow Farmer Brown's boy had set up in the middle of the cornfield to scare away Blacky the Crow and his relatives. It looked very much like a man, very much indeed. It was this that frightened away Redtail and saved Little Mite. You see, while Redtail wasn't sure that it was a man, and having learned long ago that the most foolish thing anyone can do is to run a needless risk, he decided not to go too near. And so it was that Little Mite was saved by

But lovely girls I should be glad to have he kept on running just the same, you meet. There's Marty Sales, hoping that he would come to a safe hiding-place. And so at last he came to the scarecrow. Now Little fidgeted with a paper knife and Mrs. Great World so short a time that he Lawrence hoped he might not intend had never seen a man, and so he a personal injury to any marauding wasn't at all afraid of the scarecrow because it looked like a man. "Well," said Mrs. Lawrence, "if It didn't move, so right away he made up his mind that it was nothing to fear. He was very, very anxious to get somewhere out of sight, and the opening to one of the pants legs looked like a good place. He hesitated just a moment and then up he scrambled.

Presently he came to a mass of the scarecrow. Then Little Mite was sure this was a safe place. You see he knew all about hay and straw, and as he burrowed his way in he felt quite at home and for the first time since he had run away from home he felt quite safe. He was very tired after his long run from Redtail the Hawk, and so the first thing he did was to make a place big enough to curl up in comfort. Then he went to sleep, and for once he had no bad dreams.

When he awoke he couldn't think where he was at first. Then he remembered. It was dark and cozy and comfortable in there, and he decided that it was a very good place to stay if he could find enough to eat without going too far away. He felt quite sure that he would be safe there, and perhaps if he stayed there his father and mother might, just might, happen along that way some First he would find out all about his new hiding-place. So he burrowed his way up through the hay and straw until he came to a queer substance such as he had never seen before. It was made of threads very close together. He tried gnawing this queer substance, but the threads caught in his teeth and he gave that up. Of course you know what it was. It was the coat which Farmer Brown's boy had fastened around the bundle of hay and straw to make it look like a man.

Little Mite had a perfectly glorious time exploring. He climbed all over and through that scarecrow. He even climbed up to the battered old hat that was on the very top. And the more he explored the better he liked it. He found a lot of seeds still clinging to the hay with which the scarecrow was stuffed and this meant food for a little while without running a bit of risk. But what pleased him most was a pocket in the old coat. Was there ever a better place for a nest? He ran in and out of that pocket ever so many times and at last he made up his mind that there was where he was going to live. So he began to carry the softest bits of hay he could find into the pocket to make a bed. Then he made a wonderful find. He had nibbled a hole in the lining of the old coat and there was the softest stuff! It was cottonpadding. He promptly carried it to the pocket to make his bed of it.

By BETTY WELLS In days of old, Beau Brummells fine upholstered furniture. And so hay and straw. It was the body of fastidious housekeepers made doilies to put over the backs of their cherished chairs. These they called, appropriately, 'tidies' or "antimacassars" (because men used macassar oil on their hair).

These days men may not go in quite so much for hair oil, but the backs (and arms) of chairs still get the brunt of wear. So antimacassars turn up in very good society. Personally though, we say that they must be used with discretion, for often they spoil the looks of nice upholstered furniture.

The smartest idea I've run across along that line was the use of a firm fine net the color of the upholstery. This was used to cover the arms of a chair entirely with just a panel over the top of the back. It didn't "jump out" or distract in any way from the effect of the uphol-

Lace or net antimacassars in ivory or white can be used on dark furniture in quite an informal or quaint room. But don't use them in a room that stands on its dignity. If the furniture covering is light in color, lace or net antimacassars may often be used very gracefully since they won't contrast sharply. For flowered materials, why not have tidies made out of the same material? They are even more serviceable and, of course, harmonize with the furniire as well as the remainder of the room.

Slip covers for protection of pershable upholstery have more style. As a matter of fact, if you want furniture coverings in fragile coverngs, life's a lot simpler all around if the material is made up into a removable cover in the first place. or new slip cover fabrics are prehrunk and washable and made to fit like a tailored suit. And I for e prefer that idea to a "tidy." @ Betty Wells-WNU Service.

FRIONA WEATHER

Friona and vicinity has been fav ored during the past week with a great variety of weather, from a hot, sultry afternoon to the gray chilly, even cold disagreeable days with some rain and some hail.

Two days, Monday and Tuesday brought rain and hail, heavy in some localities with some hail damage, and light in other places. Some getting a reported two inches of moisture while at Friona and in the immedi ate vicinity, both rains would barely make a half inch of moisture Considerable hail damage is report ed in some parts of the county, but not verified, and the same may be said in regard to a small twister in the west or southwest part of the couny, Tuesday evening. It is believed, however, that enough moisture has been received in all parts of the county to aid the wheat crop and to justify the planting of row crops.

WASHINGTON .- Jesse H. Jones, the Houston banker who has been the "greatest lender in the world" as head of the RFC since he was appointed to that body by President Hoover, was recently offered the post of secretary of the navy by President Roosevelt, but declined it with thanks.

Jesse's friends insist that it was nothing but a move to shelve him. as everybody knows that the post of secretary of the navy under this administration is merely a niche for a figurehead.

The suggestion was made by the President for two reasons. One was that he intended at the time to transfer RFC, under his powers granted by congress in the reorganization bill, to the department of

If Jones had accepted, it was made clear to him by the President, Emil Schram, now a member of the board of directors of RFC, would be put in Jones' place, but would of course have been under Hopkins.

Jones' Economic Views Held in Low Esteem

The other reason for the move the President thought about making was that while he has great respect for Jones' ability, he has none for his economic and social views, regards him as a potential enemy to the New Deal, and dislikes his political

In fact, the proffer of the navy portfolio was made only after several senators and members of the house, with whom the President had discussed changes he proposed making under the reorganization bill, told him he would run into a hornet's nest on Capitol Hill if he tried kicking Jesse Jones around.

The President was told that there was not only the certainty of trouble, but the real probability that congress might actually veto the whole set of changes-under its power to disapprove within 60 days-if the President should attempt to put Jones, in whom Congress has great confidence, under Hopkins, about whom congress is very skeptical. So he tried to kick Jones upstairs, but Jones preferred the floor he has been working so long.

As a matter of fact, Jones, though a conservative at heart, is probably the most powerful figure in Washington outside the White House and its immediate environs.

Business Enters Period Of Watchful Waiting

'Watchful Waiting" is now the attitude of business, big and little, as contrasted with the earlier prodding and pleading for relief at the hands of congress from what it regards as the harsh and distorted economic philosophy of the New

Answer? Twofold. Business believes firmly that it will get relief from New Deal oppression-not only changes in the law, but in the administrative agencies—as a result of the election next year. The second reason is the possibility of war. War in Europe without United States participating would mean a spurt in business War with the United States participating - and most business men think we could not stay outwould mean activity to the utmost of everybody's power, just as in 1917 and 1918. All of which makes most of the pending legislation, in which normally there would be tremendous interest, of much less importance to the people most affected. For instance, neutrality. No one believes any neutrality law now enacted would stand 10 days if war broke out and it were manifest that the new law interfered with something this government wanted to do-help the democracies, for example, by shipments of war supplies which would be forbidden by the law.

As for taxes, everyone knows that if the United States got into the war there would have to be a new tax law, which must raise ever so much more money than at present. This would make whatever tax revision might be passed this session unimportant. Not that anyone thinks there would really be anything like the Bone measure, designed to "take the profits out of war."

Wagner Act Useless In Event of War

Then take Wagner act revision. Everyone knows congress would act very differently in a war emergency in dealing with amendments to this law, if indeed there were any necessity for touching it at all in a war emergency. Labor's attitude would be very different. There would be little interest and no sympathy for any move to restrict nours, all the pressure in the world for getting more wages.

And consider the wage and hour act. There would be no inclination to remove any floor under wage lev-In wartime that would take care of itself. But there would be tremendous opposition to any attempt to restrict working hours.

So, all in all, with the prospect of more friendly President who would sign legislation from a more friendly congress (everyone knows that it would be terribly difficult to muster a two-thirds vote to override a Roosevelt veto of any change in existing law that he did not approve), plus the possibility of a war emergency, why get all hot and bothered about changes which would run only (a) until the next President came in, or (b) until war

Roosevelt Reverts to Quarterback Tactics

Two developments in connection with Franklin D. Roosevelt's recent actions hint a remarkable change in his role as political leader. They reveal a new Roosevelt, apparently a compromiser, but perhaps, to revert to his own description of himself long ago, a quarterback, circumventing his opponents by trick plays rather than ruthlessly crushng them by overwhelming force.

It may be, of course, that he learned something from the purges, both the nine he lost and the one he won. In the nine he lost he discovered that he could not defeat the senators on their home grounds. In the one he won, that fight against John J. O'Connor, he discovered that the price of victory was high and its fruit disappointing. He beat O'Connor. He ob-faithful Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, as chairman of the powerful house rules committee, and he has seen the actual power in that committee, as a direct result of the defeat of O'Connor, pass into the hands of Eugene E. Cox, of Georgia, who averages ten instances of opposition to New Deal objectives to every one of O'Connor's insurgencies.

The two recent instances, which are taken by some to indicate a men, both of whom are Democrats. one of whom is intensely conservative at heart, and the other formerly regarded as much more radical than Roosevelt himself. The conservative is Jesse H. Jones. The radical is Sen. Burton K. Wheeler.

Wheeler in Background During 1932 Campaign

With two other radicals, Wheeler was kept in the background during the 1932 campaign. It was thought that Roosevelt was sure of the liberal vote, as against Herbert Hoover, and hence speeches by Wheeler, Huey Long and Clarence C. Dill would do him little good. In fact they might do harm by alienating conservative support.

After the election Wheeler found he was sidetracked for a different The President was very fond, personally, of Bruce Kramer, for years national committeeman from Montana, and Wheeler's bitterest political enemy in the state. As a result Kramer got all the gravy, be.

and Wheeler was ignored. Wheeler sizzled within, but kept peace on the surface, for five years. But if he was bidding his time for revenge, he could not have planned it better himself when the opportunity to oppose the President on the Supreme court issue presented it-

Now the President is courting Wheeler. One might think Wheeler was the only man on Capitol Hill he trusted!

It isn't like Roosevelt! Assuming its genuineness, it is the first time of record he has ever forgiven anyone who dealt him such a blow-and a blow below the belt, as he regarded it-as Wheeler gave him on the court issue.

Nor is it like Roosevelt to abandon his scheme to get rid of Jesse Jones without a fight, merely because he was told Jones had too many friends on Capitol Hill to make possible his being shifted under Harry L. Hopkins! It's worth waiting

American Way Dramatized in Novel Classes

Wisconsin Educator's Plan Dramatizes Democracy For New Voters.

By PRESCOTT WALDEN

"It's something like when you hear a band playing and marching down the street. You almost tingle with excitement when you actually realize that the future of your country is as much your business as anybody's."

A bright-eyed, 21-year-old girl at Manitowoc, Wis., speaking. Up her way, thanks to an idealistic university professor named Dr. R. J. Colbert, democracy is being dramatized for 700 - odd boys and girls who become actual fleshand-blood United States citizens on May 21.

Citizens already? Yes, they were born that way, most of them. But for several years Dr. Colbert has told his University of Wisconsin extension class that this country needs something to "enliven citizenship participation." There's too much taken for granted, too little interest manifested in the government our forefathers sweated and died for.

Idea Catches Fire.

Last fall, at Manitowoc, Dr. Colbert's idea caught fire. A newspaper man left the class, went back to his desk and wrote an editorial. Manitowoc's Judge A. H. Schmidt proposed that Dr. Colbert's class sponsor the project. A. L. Nimtz, director of the Manitowoc vocational school, was drafted as general chairman. Here's how the idea

Every "new citizen" in Manitowoc county received a personal invitation to join a citizenship class,

PLAN'S FATHER-Dr. R. J. sion division of the University of Wisconsin, Madison, reading stacks of mail received each day asking information on the citizenship change in Roosevelt, relate to two 38 classes in all being formed. For the past five months these groups have been meeting under local and university instructors, hearing county and municipal officials, businessmen and school teachers. On May 21 all 700 will gather at Manitowoc where-for probably the first time in the United States-every young man and woman in the county turning 21 will be inducted into citizenship and will swear, to the chief justice of Wisconsin, an oath of allegiance to the national constitution and the state of Wisconsin.

Bands will play, flags will fly in the lake breezes, President Clarence Dykstra will speak 10 minutes and Gov. Julius P. Heil will present to the chairman of each of the 38 citizenship classes the certificates of electorship for their groups. With that simple ceremony, the boys and girls of Manitowoc county will become citizens of the United

There's something about it-must Wisconsin's chief justice told the Milwaukee Journal that "there are today literally millions of people who would give everything they possess, be it great or small, for the privilege of calling themselves American citizens. We who are born under the flag should be at least equally appreciative of the privileges and opportunities we freely enjoy."

Within a few weeks after the plan was initiated, Wisconsin's state legislature unanimously passed a bill making it mandatory for country school superintendents to see that similar programs are set up in each ounty every year. And when he finds time to return to his office, Dr. Colbert is greeted by bagsful of mail from all parts of the country asking information about the proj-

It's apparently clicked, and one very good reason is that most Amer-Icans consider democracy on trial today, an institution which can exist only if citizens learn to fight for curious sights for travelers and also light of the famous Sandvig collecit, to dramatize it like the dictators | apt illustrations of boat building for | tions at Lillehammer.

EYES ON THE BALLOT BOX-Anxious to exercise their voting privilege-yet not so anxious as to forget its significance-are these new voters at Two Rivers, Wis., who are shown reaching toward a sample box during one of the Manitowoc county classes. Born in the Great War era, they are among the Manitowoc county groups being schooled in what the American form of government means, both in theory and practice.

have dramatized totalitarianism. Whipping up of "an eagle-screaming sort of Americanism"-false patriotism-is not the aim, says Dr.

Emphasize Local Government.

"What we hope to do is acquaint the new citizens with their government. Because most of the tax dollar is spent at home, our emphasis is placed on the local unit of government. We try to show them how they can get the most out of their government. If we can encourage and stimulate discussion and inspire and create a more dynamic enthusiasm in governmental affairs, I believe we shall have made a big step toward our goal.'

The Manitowoc plan has been directed toward the young voter. But the seeds of the campaign have already blown far afield.

"We have finally succeeded," says Dr. Colbert, "in dramatizing citizenship in such a way that practically everybody is becoming citizenship onscious. People who have voted for years as a matter of habit are awakening to realize what tremendous force an electorate can wield.

Requires Demonstration Projects. Dr. Colbert takes this success in stride. Wisconsin is an adopted home to him-has been for 20 years. He is one of the few persons with a joint doctorate degree in the three branches of social sciences, economics, political science and sociology. This is important only because it shows he's a mixture of the academician and practical applicator, a man to whom public administration is something of a fetish. For several years, as head of the University of Wisconsin's extension sociology division, he's been conducting roundtables in cities throughout the state, making each group adopt a major project as a demonstration of how they can participate in public affairs.

Citizenship day at Manitowoc is the outgrowth of one of those projects. Dr. Colbert chuckles as he Colbert at his desk in the exten- recalls how the idea was suggested to other groups before he went to Manitowoc. Not from him, but from other sources, you can learn that these other cities are quite peeved with themselves for missing a golden opportunity that Manitowoc snapped up.

Between tearing open his letters, Dr. Colbert will recall for the visitor at his quiet office in Madison, how he came of age quite a number of years ago. There was no fuss about it. He simply reached 21 and became a voter automatically, which is about the experience of every other native born citizen.

'Learning' Most Important.

Strange, then, isn't it, that we have many classes, rituals and ceremonies for naturalized citizens who become voters. Why not something | tire country for one year.

for native born citizens as well? However, being an educator, Professor Colbert saw the problem from an educational standpoint. He realized that the "learning" was more important than the "graduation," although there was a definite place for both. So he worked out his program in such a manner as to stress its educational end, and yet have a dignified and appropriate ceremony to climax it. Thus, Citizenship day was conceived.

He stresses again and again that this is an objective program. Strictly positive. There are no negativeisms; this is a program of Americanism, not anti-other-isms. Professor Colbert's idea is to make Americanism so interesting and desirable that young Americans (and others, too) will not have any time for foreign isms.

Which, if you ask the man on the street, is what America needs, a darn sight more than a good fivecent cigar!

To Southern States

Central states, southern growers had only one market-that for fresh cucumbers which must be marketed quickly or not at all. It was believed that pickles made in the South had to be salted heavily to prevent spoilage.

Chemists of the United States department of agriculture and the North Carolina experiment station have proved this belief incorrect. They have found that putting the southern cucumbers into the right strength of brine makes firm pickles second to none in quality.

This indicates, the department chemists say, that pickles probably can be made anywhere cucumbers are grown if the brining problem is handled right. In fact, since the experimental work in North Carolina, production of pickles also has increased in Virginia, Texas, and other southern states. For the most part farmers are planting small acreages of cucumbers as a supplemental cash crop for cotton or to-

Solving a Difficult Slipcover Problem

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

DEAR MRS. SPEARS: Your books have shown me how to do so many things that I am turning to you for help. I want to make slipcovers for the livingroom furniture because with three young ones the upholstery is soon going to be ruined. The job completely baffles me. I am enclosing a rough sketch of one of the chairs. Can you suggest any way that a removable cover can be made for it? B. A."

If you are prepared to make many neatly fitted openings almost any type of chair may be slipcovered. Either bindings or facings may be used to finish edges where seat and back covers are cut around arms and supports. Where there are so many openings of different lengths, snap fasteners are generally more satisfactory than zippers. If snap fastener tape is obtainable it saves time to whip it to the long edges. The narrow frill for this chair covers a curved line across the front and carving at the top of the front

You can make slipcovers, all types of curtains and many other things for your home with the help of Book 1-SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Just follow the pictures, and you learn to make the lovely things you have been wanting for your home. Book 2 is for those who enjoy fancy work on useful articles for the home and useful novelties, to be made in spare time. Books are 25 cents each; don't forget to ask for the free leaflet on patchwork quilts, when you order both books; the leaflet is FREE with two books. Address: Mrs. Spears, 210 S. That is interesting in view of the fact that, in England, they already are televising events for the moving picture screen. It is indicated that the Du Mont rig may be subject to

With Approach of Warm Weather, C. Houston Goudiss Advises Extra Care in Storing Foods in the Home

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

T IS the proud distinction of America's food industries that notwithstanding the infinite variety of perishable foods which are constantly available, and regardless of the distances they have been transported, even the most delicate foods are delivered to the consumer in a fresh, wholesome condition, with all their fine flavor unimpaired.

The secret of this modern miracle is refrigeration. Vast sums of money have been invested in long trains of refrigerated cars, thousands upon thousands of refrigerated trucks, refrigerated warehouses and refrigeration equipment in stores. All this has been done for a single its bow with a telecast at the inaug- purpose: to keep food fresh and at its best until it reaches

> At this point the responsibility shifts to the homemaker. And if she falls down on her job, then all previous efforts to keep food free from spoilage have been in vain. Homemaker's Responsibility

As guardian of her family's health, one of the homemaker's most important tasks is to see to it that all food is safeguarded against contamination until it reaches her table. This means that perishable foods must continue to be refrigerated properly in the home. For only in this way can they be protected from the ravages of micro-organisms which are always ready to attack foods when conditions are favorable for their growth. Two essentials are necessary for satisfactory food preservation in the home. First, perishable foods must be stored at a temperature of from 40 to 45 degrees Fahrenheit-never at a temperature higher than 50 degrees. Second, the right degree of humidity must be maintained. Too much moisture will encourage the growth of bacteria; too little will dehydrate fruits and vegetables and make them unfit for consumption.

Home Care of Foods

Both requirements are met by a good household refrigerator; and the homemaker who appreci-ates the importance of keeping foods sound and wholesome will regard an efficient refrigerator as an investment in good health. It is especially necessary that the Sleuth to Guard American of spring and summer, in order to that may have become contaminated without any marked alteration in appearance, taste or odor.

> Highly Perishable Foods Milk is often regarded as the most perishable of all foods, because it is an ideal medium for the growth of bacteria. It is, there-

Guarding Against Mold

As a rule, warmer weather also increases the problem of combat-ing molds. For given moisture and warmth, molds will grow on almost anything. However, the most hospitable hosts are acid fruits, such as oranges, lemons, berries or tomatoes; sweets, such as jams and jellies; bread and meat. While molds are physiologically harmless if eaten, they definitely spoil the taste and appearance of food.

Mold growths can be killed by boiling. They are retarded by the dry circulating air of an efficient refrigerator. It is to allow for air circulation that berries should be stored uncovered-if possible, spread out so that the air can reach more than just the top

Frequent inspection of all food supplies, including those in the bread box, and the prompt elimination of any items showing signs of mold, will help to keep it from

Isn't This Why You Are Constipated?

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for hinch and dinner? White bread, meat, potatoes? It's little wonder you're constipated. You probably don't eat enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It's a kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a movement. If this is your trouble, may we suggest a crunchy toasted cereal gest a crunchy toasted cereal-Kellogg's All-Bran-for breakfast. All-Bran is a natural food, not a medicine — but it's particularly rich in "bulk." Being so, it can help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. You won't have to endure constipation, you drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.
