Small Pox Quarantine Law To Be Enforced

At a meeting of the County Commissioners, City Officials, and health officers backed up by a large number of citizens, at the court house Wednesday afternoon it was decided that the quarantine law would be enforced to the letter, on every party quarantined. The law and penalty for violating same is printed in a four column ad in this issue of the Journal, turn to it and read it. This law is going to be enforced to the letter, regardless of person. Every one present went on record to stand 100 per cent behind the Health Department, and report all cases where they break the law. (And they will be handled.) The fine is not less than $10 nor more than $1000. So when the health department puts a yellow flag on your gate and tacks up a card, you had better stay in your yard for some one is going to see that you stay in. This small pox situation can be stamped out in fifteen days if everyone will give their full co-operation in the matter. And if they do not, they will be considered undesirable citizens and will be made to do it.

The quarantine is a premises quarantine, there is no intention of placing a quarantine on the city, for that is not necessary. But the quarantine of the premises is going to be strictly enforced. The citizenship is behind the health department.

THE MOTION MADE

Motion duly made and seconded that the City Commission of Muleshoe, Commissioners' Court of Bailey County and a mass meeting of citizens assembled hereby unqualifiedly support the City and County Health Department and City and County Health Officers. We hereby recommend and insist on absolute quarantine of all cases of small pox and other contagious disease. We further recommend and insist that the City and County Health Officer strictly enforce all Health laws and regulations. We especially request said Health Officer, or any Citizen to report any violation of quarantine regulations to the proper officers that such persons may be prosecuted. We earnestly ask and solicit the support of every citizen to the end that contagious disease may be stamped out. Carried unanimously.

City Commission,
Commissioners, Court,
Citizens.

NOTICE TO TAX PAYERS

Due to the fact that, H. A. Douglass, Tax Collector, is under quarantine and will not be in his office for some time, we will appreciate it very much if you would come in at once and pay your taxes and register your cars and trucks, before the last minute. As we will not be able to take care of you in the rush days, the latter part of the month.

Ivan B. Mardis, Deputy.

W. B. McAdams, rural route carrier on No. 2 is erecting a modern chicken house on his five acre farm just on the outside of the city. He expects to build a home as soon as the weather permits.

N. F. Green and wife are the proud parents of a fine boy. He arrived Saturday night.

Put The Lid On Air Tight

As the County and City officials and the citizenship in mass meeting, Wednesday, resolved to absolutely enforce the State Quarantine Law, which is published in this issue of the Journal in a four column ad. We want to say, as it is going to be enforced, it should be did, without fear or favor. The lid should be put on air tight, or take it off entirely and let the State department come in and quarantine the town. That would mean that no one could come to town or go out of town. We do not believe in allowing one fellow to have a permit to leave the premises and make the other fellow stay in. Make them all toe the mark. That's the way we feel about the matter. We don't say there has been any favors shown, but there must not be, if full co-operation is had.

Notice To Parents

By the order of the County Health Officer, A. R. Matthews, M. D., we have been advised to make the following announcement.

School will not start in Muleshoe until further notice. All children that have not had small pox must be vaccinated, before entering school.

Levi Pressly has been appointed county attorney for Bailey county due to the vacancy made by the resignation of Robt. A. Sone, who is now located at Floydada, with a similar position.

J. T. Lindsey, who lives just out of town two miles, on one of the best 12 acres farms, is building an addition to his already modern chicken house. The cow, and hen are two important factors on this farm and are paying dividends.

Henry Lavigne, of Auburn, Neb., was here this week looking after his land interests. He was greatly surprised at the rapid development that is going on here in the agricultural line.

Legion Radio To Be Given Away

The American Legion boys announce this week that starting Monday, January 17th, thru the assistance of some of the merchants of Muleshoe, they are giving chances on a $160.00 1927 model, six tube Newtrowound Radio Receiving Set. They advise that this is a continuance of the plan last year and that chances sold last year are good on this set. The chances issued by the merchants here will cost nothing and will be issued with every $1.00 purchase. In giving the Radio Set away the boys are fulfilling an obligation that they feel they owe the people and have arranged to give it on the night of the last Lyceum number, sometime the latter part of February, to the person present that holds the lucky number.

Merchants issuing chances are: E. R. Hart Lumber Co., C. D. Gupton & Son, Gardner Dry Goods, Burrow Lumber Co., Valley Motor Co., and McCarty Drug Store. The set is on display at the Valley Motor Co.

D. E. Cox Transferred To Lockney, Roubinek In Charge Santa Fe

D. E. Cox left Tuesday morning for Lockney, where he has been transferred as Santa Fe agent. We regret very much to see Mr. Cox leave the city as he has been an active member of the civic affairs of this city for several years. He has also made us a splendid agent.

Cloy Roubinek, former clerk is now in charge of the local station. It is hoped that he will be given the place left vacant by Mr. Cox.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this method of thanking our friends and neighbors for their kindness and help during the sickness and death of our Dear Little Wilma, also for the lovely flowers. It is our prayer that the Lord will bless each and ever one of you.

Editor Solves Bula Cotton Farmer Troubles

Seven Cent Cotton Is Tough On Bula Man

Seven cent cotton and forty cent meat.
How in the World can Bula people eat?
Flour up high, cotton down low.
How in the World can we raise the dough?
Our clothes worn' out, shoes run down.
Old Slouch hat with a hole in the crown.
Back's nearly broke, fingers all sore and cotton going down to raise no more.
Seven cent cotton and ten dollar pants,
Who in the World has got any chance?
We can't buy clothes, we can't buy meat,
Got too much cotton and nothing to eat.
We've got no homes, we've got no wealth.
Losing our credit and ruining our health.
Can't help each other, what shall we do?
I can not solve it, so its up to you.
Seven cent cotton and bollies cracked,
The load's too heavy for poor Bula backs.
We're a good set of farmers as all know well.
But something is wrong as sure as H---.
Some worked hard; we've groaned and sweat.
Now we are ruined—we're a blowed up set.
No use talking, any man's beat, with seven cent cotton and forty cent meat.—R. J. B., Bula, Texas.

The Answer

When cotton's low and eats are high,
It occurs to the Editor to diversify
Would be a sane and easy way
To bring about a better day
With butter at fifty-cents a pound
And cream at forty the whole year round,
With turkeys high and going higher,
Is enough to kindle a great desire
To raise more birds and little less hell
In a land where opportunities dwell.
If we'd give more time to the dairy cow,
And a better feed to the old brood sow,
We'd not worry about the price of meat—
For we'd have plenty for ourselves to eat,
With thirty-five cent eggs and a dollar hen,
Why, oh why, will the children of men
Ruin their fingers and break their back
Picking seven cent cotton and dragging a sack.
With corn in the crib and chickens in the yard,
With meat in the smoke-house and tubfuls of lard,
With cream in the pitcher and honey in the mug,
With butter on the table and lasses in the jug—

Chevrolet Announces Entirely New Line of Cars

Surpassing all its former achievements as the world's largest manufacturer of three-speed transmission cars, the Chevrolet Motor Company, today announces an entirely new line of automobiles, heralded as the most beautiful in Chevrolet history.

Embodied in the new line, which goes on display throughout the country today, are hosts of improvements, many of which were found hitherto only in larger and more costly cars. The economies of tremendous volume production have made possible the marks of distinction which individualize the new line, according to a factory statement.

The new cars are mechanically finer, entirely new in body lines, smarter in appearance, complete in equipment and outstanding in the display of colors. Seven models, five closed and two open cars, comprize the line. One model, rakish, beautiful sport cabriolet has been added.

Some of the standard features on the new models are as follows—AC air cleaner, AC oil filter, balloon tires, bullet-type headlamps and cowl lamps, newly designed radiator shell, one piece full-crown fenders, heavier running boards, larger steering wheel, new instrument panel, new tire carrier assembly and co-incident ignition and steering lock.

Beauty and refinement has been stressed in the design. Appointments have been catered to with a thoroughness that promises to please the most fastidious motorist. Succeeding the smoothest Chevrolet, the new line has been built to establish a new standard in the low price field.

All closed bodies are by Fisher and finished in Duco. The seven models are finished in five smart color combinations, with contrasting color stripes emphasizing the body head. "Fish-tailing," a crowning achievement of the designer's art, hitherto employed only on the more expensive cars, lends a striking appearance to the rear deck of the Coupe, Sport Cabriolet and Roadster. A reduction in the 'over-all' height of the cars without sacrificing head room, makes for a more racy contour.

The radiator of polished airplane metal follows a new design. It is longer and larger and with the centrifugal water pump provides for high cooling efficiency. Sweeping one-piece full crown fenders are topped off by bullet-type head-lamps with cowl-lamps to match.

Steel disc wheels in colors are standard equipment on all models. Natural wood wheels are optional at a small additional cost.

The Chevrolet motor has been made even smoother and its efficiency further improved by the use of new and improved oil pump. Another advance on this year's car is the use of an AC air cleaner, which supplies clean filtered air to the carburetor and prevents dirt and grit from getting inside the motor and damaging moving parts.

Greater mileage, fewer oil changes and a minimum of motor wear is promised as a result of the adoption of an AC

SCIENCE IS USED TO BARE CRIME

Novel Apparatus Registers Guilty Excitement.

New York.—Using specially devised apparatus to measure the electrical resistance of the human skin and an electrical stethoscope which enabled the audience to hear the thumping of the heart of the person under examination, Dr. A. P. Link, instructor in psychology at New York university, demonstrated to the New York Electrical Society how science can aid in detecting and apprehending criminals.

Three persons selected from the audience were sent out of the room under sealed instructions. One of the trio chosen by lot went to a room on the tenth floor of the building where a letter was taken out of an overcoat pocket.

From the envelope $10 was removed, the letter was replaced and the "culprit," whose identity was not disclosed to Doctor Link or those in the audience, returned to the auditorium.

Doctor Link then subjected each of the three to electrical psychology tests. The emotions aroused by the guilt of the "robber" became instantly evident on the records of the apparatus.

An electrical stethoscope, specially devised by the Bell Telephone laboratories, amplifying the heart-beat sounds more than 100,000 times, enabled the audience to hear the thumping of the heart. When the young man who had opened the envelope and removed the $10 was asked questions bearing on the "robbery" his quickened thumping of heart when the key words were mentioned was instantly made evident.

In addition to the quickened heart beat of the one who removed the $10 from the envelope, "guilty excitement" was also demonstrated in the form of a moving spot of light thrown on a screen in full view of the audience. The spot shot clear across the screen when the person questioned became unduly excited.

Doctor Link explained that excitement lowered the electrical resistance of the skin. This, he said, was especially when an effort was made to lie or to conceal the truth.

According to Doctor Link this reaction is entirely outside the control of the person examined. He said this apparatus was "a complete give-away of the emotions which the robber was attempting to conceal." Doctor Link also explained a number of psychological tests, electrical and otherwise, now in use for the selection of employees, either for hire or promotion. He said these tests must not be used as inflexible guides, but as an aid to the general common sense.

Philadelphia.—Bowing to time, showing signs of age in its vacant windows, and its moss covered, drooping verandas, a bleak, weather-beaten house, perhaps the most interesting structure in Philadelphia except Independence hall, today is crumbling under the blows of the pickax and the wrench of the crowbar.

This stolid three-story dwelling, of "the cupola era," rising on its high knoll above one of the declivities of Washington lane, in Germantown, once sheltered Charlie Ross, the boy whose disappearance has remained one of the mysteries of America and whose name through a half century was carried in hope, anxiety and despair to all corners of the earth.

Now it is being torn down to make room for the progress of a new generation which remembers little of the tragedy which came to the occupants of this house.

Mansion Became Church.

The Ross mansion, for the last decade, has been the seat of the Cliveden Presbyterian church. With the growth of the congregation it was found inadequate and a new church has been erected to the rear of the house. Now the house itself is being razed and on its site another church is to be built.

In the disappearance of the Ross home, Philadelphia loses one of its greatest shrines of the curious. From every section of the country have come visitors to gaze in awe at the old stone dwelling which has stood throughout the years a mute reminder of the tragic search for the lost boy.

More than fifty-two years have passed since that July day in 1874 when golden-haired Charlie, four-year-old son of Christian K. Ross, disappeared. The boy was playing on the lawn of his father's estate when he was enticed away by two men believed to have been responsible for his death. William Mosher and an accomplice drove up to the estate in a spring wagon and with promises of candy and a ride lured Charlie and his elder brother, Walter, into the wagon.

The four drove off and at the corner drug store some distance away Walter was given 25 cents to buy candy. When he returned with his purchases, the wagon, the two men and his little brother had disappeared. Charlie was never seen again by his family.

Until his death 23 years later, Christian Ross, the father, spent his life and fortune in an unsuccessful worldwide search for his boy, but no definite word was ever received concerning him.

Several times messages emanated from Mosher, promising Charlie's return if a large ransom were paid, but nothing came of the desperate father's attempts to comply with these requests.

Finally, without betraying the secret of Charlie's fate, Mosher and his comrade were killed in another city during an unsuccessful burglary.

Ample Coal in Colombia for World 500 Years

Chicago.—When American coal supplies are exhausted, the world may look to the republic of Colombia for fuel, Dr. Alberto Benavides, consul of Colombia, said here, in planning for the welcome in Colombia to be extended the Illinois manufacturers and merchants who visit his country in February.

"Colombia," Doctor Benavides said, "has enough coal to furnish the world its supply for the next five centuries."

Leaving Chicago, February 1, a group of 78 Illinois manufacturers and merchants will take a Caribbean sea cruise for trade promotion purposes, touching two ports in the republic of Colombia—Barranquilla and Puerto Colombia.

"This treasure land of promise," Doctor Benavides said, "is nearer to the United States than any other South American country.

"Gold is found in almost a free state in every river of the republic. Every mineral known to mankind is found in Colombia in abundance. There is one port where the platinum of the world is produced."

Worth It

New York.—John M. Reiss, a nephew, has been awarded a fortune that requires three hours to count. It consists of $4,481.80 in pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters, found in the room of Mrs. Tillie Reiss.

Section Hand Heads $2,000,000 Business

Marysville, Kans.—From railroad section employee to control of a $2,000,000 manufacturing corporation in a few days has been the accomplishment of James W. Reynolds of this city.

Reynolds obtained a layoff last month from his job with the Union Pacific railroad here, and a few days ago a corporation to manufacture a railway spike of which he and two associates have control was organized in Chicago. The concern is the Superior Spike company.

About the time of the World war Reynolds invented a boltless rail joint. He was without capital to market his invention. One day on the right of way he found a paper which contained the name of C. E. Farris, Rineon, N. M., roadmaster for the Santa Fe railroad, who at that time was president of a steel manufacturing company with headquarters at Kansas City.

They became acquainted and a partnership was formed to introduce the boltless rail joint.

Girl Spurns Cinderella Role to Remain Servant

Phoenix, Ariz.—Jackie Henley, nineteen-year-old Denver girl, would rather continue as a servant than play a Cinderella role as the adopted daughter of J. M. Freeman, wealthy retired stock broker of Phoenix.

When Freeman was told that newspaper stories of his proposal to adopt the girl had caused probation officers to criticize Judge Ben Lindsey of the Denver juvenile court for making the case public, he said he had abandoned his plan because of protests from her mother.

"I answered the girl's advertisement in a Denver newspaper," said Freeman, "and she came to Colorado Springs to see me, accompanied by her married sister. I explained that I needed a companion who wanted and needed a good home, and who would be willing to take care of me in my illness."

Judge Lindsey after talking to the girl, found that she preferred "a life as a domestic in Denver rather than be the pampered adopted daughter of an aged wealthy man."

Heavyweight Mayor of Tokyo Is Fencer

Tokyo.—Tokyo's new mayor, Hiro-michi Nishikubo, is one of the most renowned fencers in Japan, despite his 238 pounds of weight.

Nishikubo, who was elected to succeed Mayor Izawa when the latter resigned because of ill health, is called by the Japanese the "Mussolini of Japan," as he is said to be, temperamentally, much like the Italian duke.

For years, Nishikubo, who is sixty-three years old, has been a master of the sword. When Marquis Okuma came into power 11 years ago, he appointed Nishikubo as chief of the metropolitan police board.

Award Woman Rail Clerk Bravery Medal

Philadelphia.—The directors of the Pennsylvania railroad awarded heretofore service medals to eight employees in recognition of extraordinary acts of heroism and valor beyond the regular line of duty. President W. W. Atterbury presented the medals.

Miss Edna B. Drake, clerk in the Pendleton shops, Cincinnati, Ohio, was the first woman to be awarded the medal. She rescued a man from serious injury and possible death when he attempted to cross the railroad tracks in front of an approaching passenger train.

Bureau Makes Record in Measurement of Time

Washington.—The measurement of time to an accuracy of from one to two hundred thousandths of a thousand has been effected by the bureau of standards.

The measurement is ten times as fine as obtained by any previous method, bureau experts said. In physics research the measurement is believed to be of great value, as it is estimated that light travels nearly two miles in one hundred thousandth of a second.

A tuning fork, a pendulum swinging in a vacuum, a photoelectric cell, an oscillograph or tiny mirror mounted on two wires in a strong magnetic field, and a high speed camera constituted the measuring apparatus.

PUPILS' HONESTY IS PUT TO TEST

Rich Children More Prone to Steal Than Poor.

New York.—Studies of honesty among school children in cities and towns of the East indicate that children of wealth are most prone to steal money, that girls more often cheat in the class room and boys in games, and that honesty is in direct proportion to intelligence.

The tests are being made by psychologists engaged in a "character education inquiry" at the Columbia university.

A majority of the pupils were reported as lying, when asked questions to which they felt an affirmative answer should be given. For instance, "do you read the Bible every day?" Ninety per cent said they did, according to Dr. Mark A. May, one of the psychologists.

Doctor May is on a three-year leave of absence from the Syracuse university faculty.

Ingenious tests were devised to measure such abstract quantities as stealing, lying and cheating tendencies. Children were asked to solve a puzzle which involved the use of 69 cents in various coins. The object was to see how many would take the money.

Among the 250 Jewish orphans of New York's East side only ten dimes disappeared. When the same test was given to children of the rich in an exclusive school it was found 18 per cent took money, while in one case the coins disappeared, box and all, and in another a pupil hid a 25-cent piece, claimed an error and asked for a second, which also disappeared.

 INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Read and Study the Bible.

God's Instructions to Israel as to the Use of the Scriptures (Deut. 6:4-9).

1. The central truths to be taught (vv. 4, 5).
 (1) The unity of God (v. 4).
 "The Lord our God is one Lord." This was a testimony against the polytheism existing among the Gentiles of that day.
 (2) Man's supreme obligation (v. 5).
 "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, soul and might." God should be loved with all the heart, soul and might because He is the alone and supreme God. This being the first and great commandment, we know what is man's supreme duty.
 2. How these truths are to be kept alive (vv. 6-9).
 "These words which I command thee this day shall be in thine heart." In order that God's Word might be in the heart they were enjoined—
 (1) To teach them diligently unto thy children (v. 7).
 The most important part of a child's education is that given in the home in the Word of God.
 (2) "Shall talk of them when thou sittest in thine house" (v. 7).
 This is the right kind of home life.
 (3) Shall talk of them when walking with our children and friends (v. 7).
 What more interesting, important and uplifting topic upon which to converse with our friends.
 (4) Shall talk of them when retiring for the night (v. 7).
 The last thing upon which the mind should rest before going to sleep should be God and His truth.
 (5) Talk of them when rising in the morning (v. 7).
 How fitting that God should speak to us through His Word the first thing when we awake.
 (6) "Bind them upon thine hand for a sign" (v. 8).
 This was literally done by the Jews as portions of the Scriptures were worn upon their wrists.
 (7) "They shall be as frontlets between thine eyes" (v. 8).
 This also was literally done by the Jews even to wearing portions of the Scriptures in little boxes between eyes.
 (8) "Thou shalt write them on the posts of thy house and on thy gates" (v. 9). They were to be constantly before their eyes.
 11. Paul's instruction to Timothy as to the Scriptures (II Tim. 3:14-17).
 In this chapter Paul makes clear to Timothy that perilous times would come. False teachers would arise within the church and lead astray sentimental and unsuspecting people as neurotic women. People professing godliness would deny its power by godless living. So awful will this condition be that those who live godly lives shall suffer persecution. Paul's own life of suffering was an example of what fidelity and testimony would bring. In the last days he predicts that this attitude on the part of these false teachers would be intensified, for "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse."
 In the face of such trying circumstances Paul exhorts Timothy—
 1. To remain steadfast, to abide in the eternal truths which had been taught to him (v. 14).
 He assures him that though trying times would come and violent storms of opposition would beat heavily upon him, Timothy would find the Word of God an abiding, unshaken foundation. The Holy Scriptures will abide even when heaven and earth have passed away; therefore the necessary thing is to abide in them.
 2. The knowledge furnished by the Word of God was sufficient for the perplexing and trying times through which he was to pass (v. 15). The Bible furnishes wisdom which can be found in no other place. This wisdom, as all true wisdom, leads straight to Jesus Christ, who gives salvation.
 3. The Scriptures are inspired of God (v. 16).
 Inspiration here means "God-breathed." Because of this fact they should be held with confidence.
 Abiding in the Scriptures will perfectly equip the minister for his work (v. 17).

Supposed Grail Chalice on Exhibit in Britain

Manchester, England.—A glass cup of the First century, which it is thought might have been one of the four believed to have been used by Christ at the Last Supper, will be placed on exhibition at the Rylands library.

Much secrecy about the cup's Biblical significance is being maintained by Dr. James Rendel Harris, the noted scholar, who now possesses it. It is hoped the cup will throw additional light on certain portions of the gospel text. The cup was discovered in Crimea by a German archeologist who was an associate of Doctor Diessmann, the famous New Testament exegetist of Berlin university.

The cup, broken in transit to England, has been mended. It is golden yellow and was made in a clay mold, probably in the glass factory of Sidon. It is four and one-half inches high and bears an inscription in Greek.

Moving 75-Foot Palm

For more than thirty years a giant palm tree stood guard before the entrance of the old Southern Pacific railway station at Los Angeles. A new building was erected on the old site and popular sentiment demanded that the tree be saved, although the railway people had determined to chop it down. The wrecking train used by the railway was finally put to work and the big tree was hoisted aboard a car and sent to the exposition grounds, where it remained the rest of its days. It was the second time it had been moved, as it originally took root beside the harbor 20 miles from the city. It was brought to its second home when that part of the country was part of a ranch.

Hot Water If Back or Kidneys Hurt

Begin Taking Salts if You Feel Backache or Have Bladder Weakness

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders. In all means, drink lots of good water every day.

Daddy's Evening Family Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE YELLOW RAG DOLL

She was only a little doll, made of yellow rags. But she was very pretty, even though old rags and gone into the making of her.

Not Very Tall.

She was not very fat and she was not very tall. If her mother stood her up on the floor, taking hold of her darling little yellow hand, she did not stand up higher than the height of an ordinary sized book.

But she was the most perfect little doll for taking around anywhere, and no one ever objected to having her along.

Sometimes people will object, strange as it may seem, to having dolls always carried along, but the yellow rag doll was never in the way. She never could be in the way.

Even when her mother took her shopping and the cars were so crowded she was still not in the way. Her mother was not very tall, either, though of course her mother was much, much taller than the size of a book!

Her mother had the bluest of blue eyes and the waviest brown hair, and the softest skin. Her mother's name was Betty.

When Betty went shopping "her" mother went, too, so that three of them went shopping together—Betty and her mother and the little yellow rag doll.

The little yellow rag doll's name was Nancy. Betty thought Nancy such a pretty name.

Sometimes in the car it would be so crowded that each would sit on each other's lap.

There would be just room for Betty's mother to sit down, and then Betty would sit on her mother's lap and Nancy would sit in Betty's lap.

One day they all went shopping and Nancy fell on the floor. But a kind, kind lady picked her right up and she was not hurt in the least.

Besides her mother kissed her and her mother's mother kissed her, so really a little yellow rag doll could not complain after that.

It was always so nice when Betty's mother kissed her. It seemed quite a special honor as though a queen had kissed her.

Of course they did not spend all their time shopping, as you might think from this.

Sometimes they went to the seashore and sometimes they went off for picnics in the country, where Nancy took a nap in the warm brown grass which had such a sweet smell and made one feel so much like sleeping.

It made Betty fall asleep, too, and even Betty's mother and Betty's daddy had been known to take naps.

Sometimes they went to the circus, and Nancy had already seen a circus with her mother twice.

"That, you will admit, is a good deal for a little yellow rag doll."

And Nancy had been to four summer-time parties and five birthday parties and she had met a number of other very nice dolls.

Some of them were more beautiful than she was, but she did not feel uncomfortable for she knew how much her mother loved her and the other mothers and dolls knew it, too.

And that will make up for anything. Even a little yellow rag doll knows this.

Then she had been out coasting and she had been riding in an automobile any number of times and she had even been taken to church, though of course that was not usually allowed.

Still she had behaved very well, but she did not grumble when she was not allowed to go next time for her mother told her that dolls, even darling, adorable dolls did not go to church.

So Nancy lived the happiest kind of a life ever a yellow rag doll could live, and her mother Betty was so proud of her and so happy with her.

From the time when they got up in the morning until they went to bed at night and Nancy was kissed good night—many, many good nights—they were as happy as ever a doll and a mother doll could be.

And that, as you know, is a great, great deal!

FRENCH COOKING

There is much to be said for starting at least one meal a day with a good hot nourishing soup. The following are a few culled from French cuisine:

Chestnut Soup.—Put into a saucepan a cupful of shelled chestnuts. Cook on a slow fire without boiling for half an hour, then remove the brown skin. Put the chestnuts into a mortar with a slice of dry bread and pound to a paste, adding a little bouillon to soften the bread from time to time. Pass through a strainer, add bouillon and cook for another half hour. Serve with croutons.

Onion Soup.—Peel six large onions, cut into thin slices. Cook lightly in butter. When partially browned add a tablespoonful of flour and continue cooking until the mixture is brown. Add water, salt and pepper and cook for a half hour or until the onions are tender. Strain if desired and serve on toast with grated cheese.

Pot au Feu.—The meat used is a piece of stew or shoulder or leg. Many cooks think the addition of the bones and feet of a chicken add the finest flavor. Cover with cold water and simmer for two hours, skimming once or twice. Now add vegetables such as carrots, turnips, parsnips, leeks and onions, with a sprig of thyme, a clove of garlic and two bay leaves with a stalk of celery. Cabbage and potatoes, too, may be added. Add a little kitchen bouquet to give a brown color. Serve very hot when the vegetables are cooked.

Chicken Bouillon.—Take a pound of stewing meat, and an old rooster or lean pullet, cut into small pieces, cover with cold water and simmer; when it has begun to simmer add seasoning—an onion stuck with cloves, a few herbs and carrots and turnips cut into bits. Cook until the meat is very tender. Drain and serve.

Food for the Family.

For those who like the filling but do not eat pastry try the filling in cups.

Pumpkin Pie in Cups.—Put a rim of pastry around custard cups after filling them with pumpkin pulp and bake as usual.

Cranberry Ice.—Cook cranberries for sauce and strain them, add an equal amount of sugar syrup and freeze. Make the syrup by boiling two cupfuls of sugar with one-half cupful of water. Cool and add to the juice. Freeze and serve in cups.

Turkey Gilet Soup.—Chop the cooked giblets fine, then put through a coarse sieve. Thicken the liquor in which the giblets were cooked with a little butter and flour cooked together, then add cream to the giblets and brown stock to make the quantity desired.

Chestnut Stuffing.—Blanch a pound of Italian chestnuts, boil until tender and put through the ricer. Add one cupful of bread crumbs, one-half cupful of shortening, one tablespoonful of poultry seasoning, a half cupful of raisins, salt, celery, pepper and cayenne to taste.

Cabbage Salad.—Shred a firm white head of cabbage and dress with cream, add a dash of vinegar and sugar to taste with a bit of salt.

Eggs Marchesa.—Butter muffin tins and set upon the stove to warm. In the bottom of each put a teaspoonful of soft bread crumbs, add a dessert spoonful of milk, then a fresh egg carefully broken, season with salt, paprika and pepper. Over this drop a lump of butter, more bread crumbs and a little grated cheese. Bake in a moderate oven for ten minutes. They should be a golden brown and when a knife is run around the edge and they are turned out on a hot platter, they look like brown puff balls.

A hot egg sandwich is most appetizing for a quick lunch. Fry a little onion in butter until the onion is light yellow, then drop in an egg. Cook until done, put onto a piece of hot buttered bread, cover with another and serve.

Rochester Jelly Cake.—Cream two-thirds of a cupful of butter, add two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of milk, and three cupfuls of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat well, and to one-third of the batter add one tablespoonful of molasses, one cupful of chopped raisins dusted with one tablespoonful of flour, one-fourth pound of sliced citron, one-half teaspoonful each of nutmeg and allspice, and two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon. Bake the plain batter in one, placing the fruit layer between the two plain layers and put together with jelly or marmalade.

The Pageant of the Raisin

THE raisin industry of America is mainly limited to a few counties in California, where the climatic and irrigating conditions are ideal—Fresno county producing the major portion of the crop or some 60,000,000 pounds annually. As a natural consequence the city of Fresno determined to make the most of the situation, set itself up as the Capital of Raisinland and annually celebrates the fact by holding the Pageant of the Raisin.

Pates were scratched, histories searched, the tale of the raisin unearthed and around it there was woven a story which reaches back to the Garden of Eden.

The Bible intimates that "old man Noah" planted the first grape vine near Mt. Ararat. The first dried grapes or raisins of which accurate account was found likewise had to do with Armenia.

The valley of the San Joaquin, reasoned the Fresnoans, is "The Garden of the Sun." Therefore, why not a pageant "From the Garden of Eden to the Garden of the Sun?" Accordingly, an annual raisin day—usually during the latter part of April—was decided upon and the people of the valley set about to bring the raisin and Fresno into their own.

When King Grape, preceded by the bare of bands and accompanied by his followers, arrived in "Main Street" Fresno had become the mecca of so many people who happened in to see what all the excitement was all about that it scarcely knew what to do with them. Obviously, they "did it again" next year. Now, most folks know that Fresno is the home of the raisin.

The Veiled Prophet

IT LONG has been the custom of some of our southern cities to have an annual jollification in the shape of a mystical parade or carnival. In 1878 a band of good fellows in the city of St. Louis, who loved and missed these good times, laid the plans for an organization by virtue of which the Veiled Prophet has mysteriously appeared, usually on Tuesday evening of the first week in October, annually ever since.

The prophet and his followers are unknown, but they have been so enthusiastically received that the steady growth of the importance of the event has kept pace with the great progress of the city.

No one knows from whence the prophet comes or whether he disappears. At the appointed time, preceded by the blaring of trumpets, he slips into the city and appears gayly arrayed on a brilliantly decorated float, surrounded by his followers, and followed by a number of floats depicting some historic event parades the principal streets—the whole constituting a pageant of splendor the like of which is seldom witnessed.

No expense is spared in the preparation of this celebration, which is free—for the good people of the city and surrounding territory who care to come and witness this spectacle.

The parade is usually followed by a grand ball. The lady whom the prophet selects to lead the grand march is made queen of the ball and accorded marked social distinction.

The ball of 1887 was graced by the presence of President and Mrs. Grover Cleveland.

The Mason and Dixon Line

THIS famous "line" which for generations served to mark a distinct separation in national thought had its beginning in the boundary line between Pennsylvania and Maryland. No other real or imaginary line in America has been mentioned so frequently that its political meaning was better known than its geographical location.

It was run by two English surveyors, Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, in 1763-1767, to settle an 80-year dispute between the families of William Penn and Lord Baltimore. In those days Pennsylvania was a somewhat indefinite region between Maryland and New England.

The line was marked by milestones brought from England, every fifth one carrying the coat-of-arms of Penn on one side and of Baltimore on the other. After carrying it over the mountains to a point 244 miles from the Delaware river they came upon an Indian war path leading through the forest and their Indian escort told them that it was the will of the Indian nations that they return. As obedience appeared to be the better part of wisdom, Mason and Dixon returned to Philadelphia in 1767 and were discharged.

In ordinary usage the line begins at a triangular post of granite, its sides lettered M, D and P, respectively, at the dividing line between Delaware, Maryland and Pennsylvania and extends westward, over mountain, through valley and across plain—a "chain of stones through the woods."

Car Shortage Overcome by Co-operation

The Santa Fe gives this a practical demonstration in 1926. You are invited to read this account of an achievement which saved Santa Fe patrons millions of dollars.

Five years ago one of the most serious transportation problems was the handling of very heavy freight traffic resulting from unusually large production and requiring prompt movement to secure favorable markets.

Even though the railroads did their best, car shortage and congestion were the natural results of such peak movements. And because of this slowing up everybody suffered. Such losses involved not only large sums of money, but partial paralysis of business. These transportation enemies now have been overcome.

To illustrate, the Santa Fe in June and July, 1926, had an enormous wheat crop to handle from Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas to the big markets. To provide for prompt handling 12,500 box cars in first-class condition had been distributed on sidetracks in the territory where they would be needed.

The demand for cars, however, resulting mainly from the use of "combines,"—which converted wheat standing in the field in the morning into wheat ready for loading in the afternoon,—was largely in excess of what had been anticipated.

For fifty days the average wheat loading was 1,050 cars per day, exceeding all previous records by 84 per cent, with one single day's maximum loading of 1,569 cars.

This huge crop, notwithstanding the new and rapid method of harvesting, was moved with a negligible car shortage, without congestion, and with little or no delay, something never before accomplished under similar car-loading demands.

What made such a result possible? Co-operation of everyone interested and the loyal and efficient work of Santa Fe employees.

To meet the crisis the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association, with the consent of other railroads, diverted to the Santa Fe every available box car at Chicago regardless of ownership.

*The Santa Fe also had the most hearty and helpful co-operation of Regional Advisory Boards, Terminal and Port Committees, State Grain Inspection Departments, State Railway Commissions, and the United States Shipping Board. Shippers and receivers of wheat also helped. And there was the whole-hearted support of its own employees.

This is a practical and convincing proof that co-operation can meet every transportation demand, eliminate car shortage and congestion, and save producers and shippers hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

The Santa Fe wishes to express its sincere appreciation of this co-operation and of the efficient and loyal service of its employees.

STORY FROM THE START

Lydia, with her baby sister, Patience, returns from play to the untidy home of her father, Amos Dudley, in Lake City. Her father's friend and her own devoted admirer, John Levine think it is time the Indians on a nearby reservation were moving in order that the white men might have this land. The next day, Lydia, Patience and company, Kent Moulton, playing by the lake, are accosted by an old squaw. Lydia gives her food, Margery, small daughter of Dave Marshall, the town's banker, joins them. Margery, falling in to the water, is pulled out unhurt but frightened. Her father blames Lydia and Kent for the mishap, until Lydia explains. Lydia enters high school. At her first party the other girls ridicule her homemade costume. Levine tells Amos his plan to take timber from the Indian reservation and ultimately have it opened for settlement. Patience succumbs to diphtheria, leaving Lydia feeling that her trust in God is lost. She finds comfort in the loving kindness of John Levine. A note of Amos', backed by Levine and held by Marshall, is due and cannot be met, Lydia pleads with Marshall, and for her sake he agrees to renew it

CHAPTER VI

The Cooking Class

Lydia with parted lips and big, wistful eyes stood quietly beside Miss Towne.

"What you giving us," said Kent. "Red's my favorite color."

"Red's all right," Olga tossed her head, "but that dress! She ought to know better. A five-cent cheese cloth would have been better'n that."

Kent was truly enamored of pretty Olga but he looked at her angrily.

"You girls make me sick," he grunted and started dodging among the dancers, across the room to Lydia's side. Olga stood put.

"What's the matter?" asked Charlie Jackson.

"Oh, I just said Lydia's dress was a fright and Kent went off mad."

Charlie in turn stared at Lydia. Kent in the meantime was grinning at Lydia amiably.

"Hello, Lyd! Want to dance?"

"I can't. Don't know how," replied Lydia, despondently.

"Easy as anything. Come on, I'll teach you."

Lydia seized Kent's lapel with fingers that would tremble slightly.

"Kent, I dassn't stir. My back breadth don't match and my skirt hangs awful."

"Oh, shucks!" replied Kent, angrily. "You girls are all alike. Red's my favorite color."

"Mine too," said Charlie Jackson at her elbow. "What're you two arguing about?"

"Her dress," growled Kent. "I don't see anything the matter with it, do you?"

"Nope, and it's on the prettiest girl in the room, too, eh, Kent?"

"You bet," returned Kent, believing, though, that he lied, for Olga was as pretty as a tea rose.

Lydia blushed and gasped.

"If you won't dance, come on over and have some lemonade," suggested Kent.

"If I sit in the window, will you bring me a glass?" asked Lydia, still mindful of the back breadth.

"You take her to the window and I'll get the lemon," said Charlie.

Kent led the way to the window. "You're a good old sport, Lyd," he said. "Charlie'll look out for you. I gotta get back to Olga."

He returned to make peace with the pink organdie. She was very lovely and Kent was having his first flirtation. Yet before he went to sleep that night the last picture that floated before his eyes was of a thin little figure with worn mittens clasped over patched knees and a ravished child's face looking into his.

Charlie Jackson sat out two whole dances with Lydia. Their talk was of Adam and of fishing. Lydia longed to talk about Indians with him but didn't dare. Promptly at ten, Amos appeared at the front door.

Lydia's first party was over. Amos and old Lizzie were charmed with Lydia's description of it and were sure she had had a wonderful time. But Lydia felt that the dress had made of the party a hideous failure. She knew now that she was marked among her mates as a poverty-stricken little dowdy whom popular boys like Kent and Charlie pitted.

And yet because life is as kind to us as we have the intelligence to let it be, it was out of the party that grew slowly a new resolve of Lydia's—to have some day as pretty hands and as well-shod feet as Olga and Hilda and Cissy, to learn how to make her dresses so that even the composing of an organdie might not be beyond her.

John Levine was running for sheriff on the Republican ticket. He was elected early in April by a comfortable majority and invited Amos and Lydia to a fine Sunday dinner in celebration at the best hotel in town.

Lydia's life was so different from that of any of the children that she knew, that growing into adolescence with the old bond of play disappearing, she fell back more and more on resources within herself. This did not prevent her going faithfully once a month to call on Margery Marshall. And these visits were rather pleasant than otherwise. Margery was going through the paper doll fever. Lydia always brought Florence Dombey with her and the two girls carried on an elaborate game of make-believe. The intricacies of which were entirely too much for Elviry Marshall, sitting within earshot.

Amos' garden was a thing of beauty. Its trim rows of vegetables were bordered with sunflowers, whose yellow heads vied in height with the rustling ears of corn. Amos had a general grudge toward life. He had a vague, unexpressed belief that because he was a descendant of the founders of the country, the world owed him an easy living. He had a general sense of superiority to his foreign-born neighbors and to the workmen in the plow factory.

But in his garden, all his grudges disappeared. He always felt nearer to his wife, in the garden. She, too, had been bred on a New England farm. He always felt as if the fineness of the rows was for her.

Lydia greatly preferred weeding the garden to cleaning the house. Indeed the contrast between the fine garden, the well kept patch of lawn and the disorderly house was startling.

One afternoon in August, clad in her bathing suit, now much too small for her, she was working in the garden, when a voice behind her grunted: "Eat!"

Lydia jumped and turned. The old squaw of two years before stood begging. She was as pitifully thin as ever. As she stared at the ugly old Indian, Lydia's throat tightened. She seemed to feel baby Patience's fingers clinging to hers in fear.

"Want some vegetables?" she asked, motioning toward the garden.

The squaw nodded eagerly and held up the dirty apron she was wearing. Lydia began slowly to fill it, talking as she worked.

"Where do you live?" she asked.

The Indian jerked her gray head toward the north "Big Woods."

"But that's twenty miles. It must take you a long time to walk it. Poor thing!"

The squaw shrugged her shoulders. Lydia stared at the toothless, trembling old mouth, hideous with wrinkles, then at the gaunt and shaking old hands.

"Haven't you anyone to take care of you?"

"All sick—boy sick—man sick—girl sick. All time sick, all time nothing to eat."

"But won't some other Indian make you a garden, a little one?"

Again the squaw shrugged her shoulders. Her apron was full now. She produced a string from inside her waist and tying the apron up bag-like, she slung it over her shoulder. Then she gave Lydia a keen glance.

"Friend," she said, briefly, and turning, she tottered painfully out of the gate.

Followed by Adam, Lydia walked thoughtfully out upon the little pier Amos had built. It was hard to understand how the Indians with all their rich pine land could be so poor. She resolved to ask her father and Levine about it and turned a somersault into the water. She swam about until tired, then turned over on her back to rest. Lying so a shadow drifted across her face and she raised her head. A gray birch bark canoe floated silently beside her. In it, in a gray bathing suit, sat Charlie Jackson.

"Goodness!" exclaimed Lydia. "How in the world you do it so quietly, I don't see. Come on in. It's as warm as suds."

Charlie shot his canoe to the pier and in a moment was floating beside Lydia. She took a deep breath, let herself sink and a moment or two later came up several yards beyond him. He did not miss her for a moment, then he started for her with a shout. A game of tag followed ending in a wild race to the pier.

"You certainly are a little sunfish in the water," panted Charlie, as they sat with feet dangling off the pier.

"Ought to be, I'm in it enough," returned Lydia. "Charlie, there's a poor old squaw came here today. What's the matter with the Indians? Why don't they work?"

Charlie's mouth twisted in a sneer. "Why don't they work? Why don't the whites give 'em a chance? Dirty thieves, prowling round like timber wolves. Ask Dave Marshall. Ask that gumshoeing crook of a Levine. Don't ask me."

"Levine's not a crook," shouted Lydia. "He's my friend."

The sneer left Charlie's face and he laughed. "Your friend is he, little sunfish!"

"Yes," said Lydia, furiously. "He gave me Adam," hugging the dog's ugly, faithful head. He immediately tried to sit in her wet lap. "And he's done as much for me as my own father."

"If he's your friend," said the Indian gently, "I won't speak against him to you again."

Lydia instantly was mollified. Charlie was so old and so young! He was so different from Kent that starting into his deep black eyes, Lydia suddenly felt his alien race.

"I must go in and dress," she said. "It's time to get steeper."

Charlie nodded and untied his canoe.

"Daddy," Lydia said that night at supper, "why should Mr. Marshall and Charlie Jackson both say Mr. Levine is a crook?"

Amos ate a piece of bread meditatively before replying. "Any man that goes into politics in this country leaves his reputation behind him. You and I'll never have a better friend than John Levine."

Lydia nodded. She was only a child, after all, and still retained implicit faith in the opinion of those she loved. She went back to school that fall full of interest and importance. She was a sophomore now and very proud of the fact that she knew the ropes. Her arrangement with Billy held for his second-year books. With much pinching of the grocery money, Lizzie had achieved two new galateas and so while she felt infinitely inferior to the elaborately gowned young misses of her grade, Lydia was not unhappy.

She planned a real feast for Thanksgiving. She negotiated with Billy Norton for the exchange of two pounds of fudge for a brace of wild duck. The Saturday before Thanksgiving, she gave the house its usual "lick and promise" and then started out with her skates to enjoy the first ice of the season.

She had a glorious morning. There was no snow and the lake had frozen crystal clear. The air was breathless. As she skated she chanted, to improvised tunes, bits of verse.

She hunted through Scottish mountains and moors, she whirled from Ghent to Aix and still high-hearted and in the land of visions, took off her skates and entered the house. She banged the door, then stood for a moment staring. Elviry and Margery were seated before the living room stove, while old Lizzie sat on one edge of Amos' arm chair eyeing the two belligerently.

Margery was wearing a new fur coat. Her beautiful black eyes looked out from under a saucy fur-trimmed hat with a scarlet cloth on the side. Elviry wore black broadcloth with fox collar and muff. Lydia, in a remodeled coat of her mother's, and her old tam and mended mittens, recovered from her surprise quickly.

"Hello!" she said. "When did you come? This is the first time you've ever been in our house, Mrs. Marshall, isn't it?"

"Yes," replied Elviry, "and," with a glance at Lizzie, "I wouldn't be here now if Mr. Marshall hadn't made me."

"Oh, mamma," protested Margery, "I wanted to come."

"You hush up, Margery! What I came for is that Mr. Marshall would like to have the three of you come to our house for Thanksgiving dinner."

Lydia suddenly giggled. "Don't worry, Mrs. Marshall, we can't come. We're going to have company ourselves for Thanksgiving."

Elviry gave a huge sigh of relief. "Well, that's too bad," she said. "We're going to have a grand dinner, too."

"So are we," retorted Lydia.

"How's Florence Dombey?" asked Margery. "Mamma, can't I stay and play with Lydia a while?"

"Well, she's a few minutes," said Elviry, loosening her furs and settling back in her chair. "It's a real small place, Lizzie, but you can do so little work now, I s'pose it's just as well."

Lydia had produced a pasteboard shoe box of paper dolls which she gave to Margery. She cuddled Florence Dombey in her arms and gave one ear to Margery's questions as to the names and personalities of the paper dolls, the other to Elviry's comments.

"It ain't so small," sniffed Lizzie. "It's bigger'n anything you ever lived in, Elviry, till Dave sold enough lumber he stole from the government to start a bank."

"Land, Lizzie, don't be so cross," said Elviry. "I suppose you've heard the talk about John Levine? He's getting in with that halfbreed crowd up on the reservation that the Indian agent's such friends with. They say Levine's land hungry enough to marry a squaw. He's so dark, I wouldn't be surprised if he had Indian blood himself. Land knows nothing would surprise me about him. They say he's just naturally crooked."

Lydia and Florence Dombey suddenly stood in front of Elviry.

"Don't you say such things about Mr. Levine," said Lydia slowly, cheeks bright, eyes as blue as Florence Dombey's.

"Well!" exclaimed Elviry, beginning to pull her furs up, "I don't seem to be able to please you two with my conversation, so I'll be going. Margery, get up off that dirty floor. I never cared much about Amos' wife, she was too proud, but at least she was clean. She'd turn over in her grave if she knew what this house looked like. Come, Margery, the horse will be cold, standing so long."

Lizzie opened her mouth to speak but Lydia shook her head, and the two stood in silence, watching the departure of the visitors. When the door had closed Lizzie burst forth in an angry tirade, but Lydia only half listened. She looked slowly around the living room, then walked into the dining room and thence into the kitchen. She opened the pantry door and stared at the dust and disorder, the remnants of food, the half-washed dishes.

She came slowly back into the living room. Old Lizzie was replenishing the stove, still muttering to herself. Lydia observed for the first time that her apron was dirty. Thinking it over, she could not recall ever having seen Lizzie with a clean apron. A deep sense of shame suddenly enveloped Lydia.

"Oh, I wish someone had taught me," she groaned. "I wish mother had lived. Everybody has to go and die on me! I suppose Lizzie and dad'll be next. Adam helps to keep the house dirty. There's dog hair everywhere."

"Don't you get worked up over Elviry Marshall, child," said Lizzie.

"I hate her," exclaimed Lydia, "but what she said about the house is true. Anyhow, I've learned how to clean pantry shelves, so here goes."

First Locomotive to Make Mile a Minute

The thrill of traveling a mile a minute by rail was first experienced in 1848, when the Antelope, a 10-ton engine built under the direction of Superintendent Minot of the Boston & Maine railroad, covered the 26 miles between Boston and Lawrence in just 26 minutes. The engine had single drivers, six feet in diameter.

Every detail was carefully arranged to give the new engine a chance to break all previous records. Minot selected an engineer named Pemberton to drive the locomotive. Pemberton was reluctant at first, but when Minot threatened to take the throttle himself, he agreed to try. Minot rode with him.

Men were sent over the road to spike down all switches and see that everything was in perfect order. It was before telegraphy had been introduced and to run a mile a minute required careful preparation.

A large crowd gathered at the station and amid cheers and waving of hats, the Antelope began its historic run. Half way to Lawrence, Minot looked at his watch. Fourteen minutes had elapsed. He urged Pemberton to get more speed and Pemberton pulled the throttle wide open. The engine responded and when the train was brought to a stop at the station, Minot's watch showed just 26 minutes had elapsed since the start.—Railway Life.

Balsa Wood Valuable

Half the weight of cork, the Balsa wood of the tropics is coming into use for many purposes other than that of making life preservers and life rafts for which it was introduced in this country. It has marvelous insulating qualities. Fish, ice cream or other similarly perishable articles may be packed in a lightly constructed box of this wood and shipped great distances and delivered in excellent condition. The government is testing airplane propellers made of it and quite a quantity of the wood is made use of in the construction of theatrical scenery which is to be shipped about the country. A New York architect is experimenting with it as an inner sheathing for houses. It may create a revolution in refrigeration.

Locomotive's "Apron"

The sheet iron plate covering the space between the locomotive and the tender is known as the "apron."

Lydia opened her mouth to speak but Lydia shook her head, and the two stood in silence, watching the departure of the visitors. When the door had closed Lizzie burst forth in an angry tirade, but Lydia only half listened. She looked slowly around the living room, then walked into the dining room and thence into the kitchen. She opened the pantry door and stared at the dust and disorder, the remnants of food, the half-washed dishes.

Too Warm for Eskimo

Ikwa, an Eskimo who was imported with some reindeer by a Newark (N. J.) department store, surprised many by huddling near radiators much of the time after his arrival. He explained that the cold of Alaska was dry while in Newark it was wet. Fearing that Ikwa's health might be impaired, store officials sought advice. They were told to put the Eskimo in cold storage to keep him warm.

One day Ikwa went to the storeroom where he found himself in a room where the temperature was comparable to that in his home town.

Entirely New Line Of Cars

oil filter which removes impurities and dirt from the oil supply. A new and larger steering wheel 17 inches in diameter provides for easier handling and adds to the appearance of the car as well. The new tire carrier is mounted on the frame, entirely free from the body and is braced in a vertical position by heavy steel brackets. A new gasoline gauge and a combination stop and tail light are standard equipment.

On closed models new and narrower windshield pillars greatly improve the vision permitting a commanding view of the road. Doors are equipped with remote control handles, making it unnecessary to turn far to the side in opening or closing the doors.

The new instrument panel includes a co-incidental lock that automatically locks both steering gear and ignition. Speedometer, oil gauge, ammeter, carburetor choke and dash light are also placed on the panel. The windshield is of full vision, one-piece VV Fisher design with automatic wiper and rear vision mirror standard equipment on all closed models.

Detailed description of the seven new models indicates the thoroughness which the Chevrolet designers have shown in introducing the new line.

The sport cabriolet which has been added this year, has a four passenger carrying capacity, with a spacious rumble seat. It has a tan whip-cord top and tan upholstery of grain leather. The body is Fisher-built and finished in Royal Oak green Duco. The landau irons, window frames, ledges, windshield frame and automatic wiper are finished in nickel. Bullet-type head-lamps, one piece full crown fenders, tan textile visor and polished radiator shell combine to give the new model a smart appearance. Other interesting items of equipment on the cabriolet are the one-piece tilting windshield, large 17" walnut finished steering wheel, front door-pocket, remote door control handles, co-incidental ignition and steering lock, gasoline gauge and new tire carrier.

The Landau is finished in Biege brown Duco on the body, window mouldings and wheels, with chrome yellow striping on the streamline moulding. The roomy interior is upholstered in brown plush. Oval plate glass windows in the rear may be opened, assuring clear vision and ample ventilation. One-piece windshield with narrow metal corner posts, automatic windshield wiper, sun visor, rear vision mirror, dome and dash lamps, automatic stop light, smoking set and new tire carrier are among other items of equipment.

The sedan is finished in Marine Blue Duco with gold striping on the body moulding. The interior is upholstered in blue corduroy. The coach has a new streamline moulded body, finished in St. James gray Duco, fashionably striped in pistache green. Upholstery is in green corduroy. The two doors are unusually wide, providing for easy entrance and exit.

"Fish-tail" modeling, emphasizing the streamline effect, is also used on the two passenger coupe. The body, window moulding and steel disc wheels of the coupe are finished in Biege brown Duco, with light chrome yellow striping. Blue corduroy upholstery harmonizes with the exterior finish. A spacious ledge is provided behind the seat for carrying small parcels. The rear deck is arranged into a compartment large enough to carry a full-sized steamer trunk.

An equally generous compartment space is available on the roadster on which the "fish-tailing" effect is also emphasized. Finished in Falmouth Gray Duco, with streamline moulding and French Gray striping is disclosed an interesting advance over the preceding model.

The new one-piece full crown fenders and bullet head-lamps give the touring car a distinct appearance of newness. Like the roadster it is finished in Falmouth Gray Duco.

The Chevrolet factories are now in production on the new models, with record shipments leaving every day for various parts of the country.

E. R. Hart has moved the managers house from the old Panhandle Yard to a lot between D. E. Keeney and Earl Harris in the Warren addition, and is having it put in tip-top condition.
