

A HISTORIC DECISION

The historic Supreme Court decision of March 27, which held, in the words of Justice Stone, that there is no constitutional immunity "from income taxation of officers or employees of the national or a state government or their instrumentalities," apparently removes all legal obstacles in the way of a reform that has long been advocated.

The Twenty-ninth Annual Session of the North West Texas Conference Womans' Missionary Society met at the Methodist Church in Pampa April 11th, 12th, and 13th.

Mrs. Morris Randall presided over the meeting. Mrs. Helen B. Bourne of Nashville was the guest speaker, and Miss Nell Naylor, a Missionary for 26 years in India, gave an interesting work there. Encouraging reports were given from the nine district secretaries of this Conference.

Mrs. J. E. Harrell and Mrs. W. F. Gilbert attended this meeting as representatives of the local church.

Queens for the Fair

When the World's Fair opens in New York in the spring of 1939, the dairy industry will be well represented. Five breeds of dairy cattle—Ayrshire, Brown-Swiss, Holstein, Guernsey and Jersey—will each have thirty outstanding cows in the "Dairy World of Tomorrow." These 150 cows will be milked in the Borden Building on the Central Mall, using a rotolactor equipped with magnetic milkers to do the job. Calves and bulls representative of each breed will also be on exhibit.

The animals are chosen by a special committee from each Breed Association, and will come from all parts of the United States and Canada as representatives of the best that the breed can produce. The Ayrshire cow shown above is one of the animals chosen.

In this exhibit not only the production of milk will be demonstrated, but the handling, bottling and sale of it will go forward under the eyes of the public. About one-third of the milk produced by the cows of this country is used as fluid milk. The rest is sold as butter, cheese, ice-cream, casein for paint, billiard balls, paper sizing, milk sugar for medicines, and in literally hundreds of other forms. The Borden exhibit will tell much of this story and give a better understanding of the place the dairy cow, as exemplified by these pure-breeds, and the milk distributor play in the scheme of things.

WHAT SIXE FORM IS BEST?

If a farmer or ranchman knew ahead of time the ideal amount of land to operate, lots of trouble would be avoided. It would take a profit to choose the correct size, but this is one of the questions farm men and women are trying to settle through county land use planning committees.

W. E. Morgan, economist in agricultural planning with the Texas A. and M. College, who is directing the land use planning work, now underway in all counties in the state, says that there are many factors other than the number of acres that influence the success of a farm.

The profitable size is influenced by rainfall, soils, climate, type of enterprise, managerial ability of the operator, and labor available, so that what might be a whopping big farm in East Texas would be a very uneconomic sized farm unit in another part of the state.

WAR ON THE PINK BOLLWORM

Recently the State Department of Agriculture requested an emergency appropriation to enable the Department to continue up to August 31st of 1939, its work of pink bollworm eradication and control. The amount requested was $11,000.00—This is a meager amount when compared with the damage this insect could do in a single cotton producing county if no efforts to eradicate or control were made.

The Federal Government for 1938-39 appropriated $144,544.00 for control of boll weevil, bollworm, leaf worm, and the flea-hopper for the entire cotton area and added $446,800.00 for control of the Pink Bollworm.

The State Department of Agriculture had an appropriation for the Division of Horticultural Inspection and Quarantine—this division administering regulatory work in connection with control and eradication of pests such as the Pink Bollworm of $15,000.00 and the A & M Experiment station had $13,435.00 for research work along similar lines.

John Olen Chrystal, who has been spending some time in the West Texas oil field working at Kermit arrived in Spur this week to spend a few days visit with his father and brothers, Joe Chrystal and Marion and Pat, respectfully.

THE SPURS First Publication From The Original Manuscript by W. J. ELLIOT An Authentic History Of The Old West  Published Serially By Your Texas Spur

By the day after Christmas, the buyers pronounced the cattle stale. They were finally sold to the first bidder for half a cent a pound less than his first bid. The reason given by the other packer buyers for not making a bid on them was that they had no orders for that weight of cattle. Of course the courtesy extended for staying off that particular bunch of cattle was returned. I will just add that the buyers had a room in the exchange building, to which only they had access, and they usually discussed matters of moment, before going on the market.

This may not be done today. As an Eastern story teller once replied to a question regarding locusts: "O' king, who can tell?" It is only natural for buyers to get what they want to buy as low in price as they can. If a moral conscience has awakened in the breast of the packer-buyer, then the plea of "have a heart" so often then heard, must have been answered for the benefit of all except John Chinaman. The consumer, poor devil, he gets it going and coming. Even today with the Processing Tax (1935).

ANOTHER DANCE CHAPTER XLIX

I am not going to tell you of a dance given by Major Mose Harris, Editor of the Espuela Bulletin, but of an incident or two that might possibly be related to it. The Major and his family were Orthodox Jews. In those days little was cared for what nationality a man might be, provided he was square, a man of his word, and a good fellow. The Major was that, besides he had two mighty pretty daughters, Misses Essie and Annie Harris. I hardly need to say that the whole family was very popular.

Then as well as present, "Water of Life" was quite as much in evidence in the best circles, with this difference, that no cowboy would ask his or any other girl to dance with him if he had one too many under his belt.

This dance was promised us at the end of the spring work.

It so happened that was one year we had lots of rain. Anyhow the freighters from Colorado City were delayed. Held up on the bank of Double Mountain River. There was no bridge over it then, and that was one creek that allowed no liberties to be taken with it. The barrel of whiskey expected for the dance was on the far side. Something had to be done as Jess and Tuck had only about a quart of the genuine article left, and the barrel. The Elite Saloon was closed for the rest of the day but not vacated.

The store keeper of the Espuela Store was absent and Bill, as usual, was sent to fill out until he returned. When Jess called for the following articles: 1 lb. Arubuckel coffee, 1 lb. Star Navy tobacco, 1-4 lb. Cayenne pepper, 4 bottles of Tobacco sauce, and 2 lbs. brown sugar; I wondered what he could possibly want with them, more especially as he boarded at the hotel. I asked him if he was going to start house-keeping. His reply was for me to keep my mouth shut and I would find out later.

In about an hour or so I had occasion to draw a fresh bucket of water from the well behind the store. On turning to reenter the store, I saw smoke coming from every crack and opening of the saloon which was next door to the store. Thinking it on fire I ran and kicked on the back door. It was immediately opened by Tuck who asked me what I was making such a racket about. He said it was all right and to go on. I realized then that there were other rats than those cooked in China.

After a while I was visited by both Jess and Tuck who insisted that I visit them and pass verdict on their skill as chemists. To do the right thing I went with them. With a flourish, Jess set a bottle and glass on the bar. I smelt the bottle and it seemed all right, so I obliged. Even now when I think of it, I can still feel the burning. It was liquid lightning, and must have had a most peculiar effect on others.

The house Major Mose lived in was a two story house with a hall up stairs, having a door opening on the roof of the porch, which was about nine feet from the ground. While the dance was on, I was standing on the roof of the porch, just outside the door, with Miss Essie.

Tom White, one of the farm boys, had managed to get upstairs and seeing through the open hall door, the lighted saloon, decided to visit it again. In a quick march he stepped through the hall door way on to the porch roof, and down. Miss Essie and I stepped to the edge of the roof and looked down, expecting to see a man with a broken neck or legs. White, as he arose from his knees, looked back over his shoulder and remarked, "That's a damned high step." The relief was so great we both had a good laugh over it.

IN MEMORY OF CHAPTER L

Some men are outstanding above all others, in every profession or trade, such as surgeons, statesmen, artist, and even confidence men, and are usually acclaimed and given recognition of their skill while alive, but sometimes that recognition is delayed until long after death. While some few have taken the Lone Trail and after a short while been completely forgotten.

It is said that, "comparisons are odious;" so it is not my purpose in any way, even the slightest, to comment unfavorably, on the skill with a rope, (or lasso), as shown by the late Will Rogers. It was in the Panhandle of Texas where Will Rogers learned to use the rope with such amazing skill. His memory is dear to us all. His skill with a rope is so well known that it is only by the mention of his name that I can bring out what I hope will be of interest to many.

Two years ago I saw the mention in a newspaper of the death of Charlie Binyon in Montana. Just the announcement, nothing more. It is in his memory that I write this short story.

I have seen many cowboys who were masters of the rope, some more skillful than others. My old friends Bud Campbell, Handy Cole, Tol Merriam, and Jack Morris were all most proficient. They knew Charlie Binyon probably better than the writer, but of this, I am sure, not a single one of them would have felt the least touch of jealousy when compared with Charlie Binyon.

Before I ever saw him work, I had heard comments by the boys in the branding outfit on his skill with a rope. These men were all without exception top hands and from long experience as cowboys well able to judge the skill of another with the rope. To Charlie Binyon, then working on the Two Circle Bar Ranch, they awarded the crown. He was then and while he live, without a peer.

It was in the early summer of 1889 that we made the first branding on the round-up ground known as the Mouth of Jordan, right where the town of Girard now is. There we had an exceptionally large number of cattle in the round-up, and as a consequence a large number of calves to brand. We had been joined while on the round-up by some of the men from the Tens and from the Two Circle Bars, at that time ranches adjoining The Spurs. Among those men were Berry Pursley, Charlie Binyon, Dock Schultz, and Jeff Patterson.

After the strays and the cattle for the two herds that were being made up were cut out it was dinner time and after eating the branding was started. The Spurs never used a corral to rope and brand in, all such work was done from an open round-up. Joe Stokes was the branding boss, and he elected Charlie Binyon as one of the two men to do the roping.

My work allowed me to watch the roping, especially when it became known that Charlie was to be one of the ropers. The flankers were all on tiptoe and after a short while, called for Charlie to bring out the calves from the round-up caught by the hind feet, front feet, or of either, as their fancy called for, and out they came as called.

Many experts can do that, but I have never seen anyone other than Binyon who could do so without once in a while missing a throw. While Binyon was roping during that evening, he caught by actual count nearly 400 calves without once wasting a loop. Of course he changed horses and had a rest of a few minutes, while flankers were changed, after each hundred calves were branded. It was immaterial what horse he rode, provided the horse was used to the rope.

While the other was relieved, Binyon kept on roping until he made up his rope, and with a laugh and wave of his hand, he pulled out after the stray cut which had long before left for home. Binyon was the only roper I ever saw who swung the rope with his wrist. He did not use his arm extended as most cowboys do while after a calf in the round up. The throw was made seemingly without effort or haste.

The total branding for that evening was close to 600 head. When the round-up was turned loose there were still unbranded calves in it but it got too dark to distinguish them from those branded, so they had to be turned loose with the herd. Please keep in mind that the cattle were continually in motion, and that the mothers of those calves were Long Horns.

WHAT PRICE GOLD?
Gold, as anyone will agree, is a pleasant commodity to have. But economists have been wondering for some time if it isn't possible to have too much of it—so much, indeed that there is danger of it becoming economically valueless.

The case in point is the U. S. government. Five years ago we had a little more than 195,000,000 ounces of monetary gold. Today we have over double that amount—431,200,000 ounces. And the yellow metal is still coming into this country from abroad at an accelerating rate rather than diminishing rate. Hardly a week goes by without a gold shipment.

If this gold were melted down into a single ingot, it wouldn't be as imposing a spectacle as you might imagine. It would make a bar measuring 62 by 20 by 20 feet. But that bar would have the incredible value—of our artificially established gold price of $35 per ounce—of over $15,000,000,000.

More important than the mere money value of our gold is the fact that it represents pretty close to 60 per cent of all the monetary gold in the world. Almost equally important, as the U. S. News points out, is the fact that the remaining forty-odd per cent is extremely badly divided. England and France have the bulk of it. A number of small powers have some. And three of the great powers, Germany, Italy and Japan, have practically none—not more than 4 per cent of the total.

Gold is flowing into this country for a variety of reasons. One is that under our law, the Treasury must accept every ounce offered and pay $35 for it in our currency, whether it can be used or not (and today, our gold reserve is almost infinitely greater than our requirements, figuring on the most conservative basis). Another, increasingly potent reason is that European capital is frightened over the possibility of war, and wants to get its money as far away from the scene of pending hostilities as possible. The outlook then, is for our gold imports to continue to soar. Even today, it is coming in at the rate of $109,000,000 a week—and if that rate were to be continued, in three years we would have every ounce of monetary gold in the world.

And that's what has the economists puzzled. It is obviously possible, especially in the case of war, that we may find ourselves with practically a complete corner on gold. No other country would have enough to be worth mentioning. And, in that event, they would have to tie their monetary systems to some other standard value. Already that is being done in the fascist countries with their infinitesimal gold reserves. Germany, for example, has virtually announced to the world that it can and will get along without gold. And by the use of the barter system, "blocked marks," etc., it has gotten along so far. Whether it can keep going in the future without imperiling its more or less tattered economic structure is a matter for conjecture.

Pure-Bred Cows Going to World's Fair

This photograph shows the partly completed building which will house the "Dairy World of Tomorrow" at the New York World's Fair in 1939. In it the five pure-bred associations—Ayrshire, Guernsey, Holstein-Friesian, Jersey and Brown-Swiss—will each have 30 outstanding specimens of their breed on display for the entire duration of the Fair. These animals, selected throughout the United States and Canada, are chosen for outstanding merit. They will be milked three times a day on a Rotolactor similar to the one developed at the Walker-Gordon Laboratories. The exhibit will demonstrate the production and handling of milk under best sanitary conditions. The Borden Company is co-operating with the breed associations and will bear the expense of assembling, feeding and caring for the animals.

I Give You Texas
Boyce House

Those who have smiled skeptically (I was one) when the delights and wonders of Old Mexico were depicted with glowing eloquence by travelers need only to make the journey themselves into the neighboring country to find out that the travelers were wrong—they didn't make the descriptions beautiful enough!

It is a story-book land, a place of such sudden and surprising contrasts, of such varying sights and sounds that it leaves the brain bewildered. Imagine comprising all these events into a single day!

Arriving in the City of Mexico a few Sunday mornings ago, we (the members of the Texas Lions' good will pilgrimage) were met at the station by Mexico City Lions. A string band played soft, Mexican melodies, fragrant flowers were presented to the ladies and then we were whisked by car to La Reforma, newest and most modern hotel in the Republic.

Then began a tour of the city. Uniformed soldiers wearing trench helmets were on guard with bayoneted rifles as we entered the National Palace where we saw long reception halls, lined with paintings of statesmen and generals; the dining room, with its crystal chandeliers and ponderous silver, where Emperor Maximilian and Empress Carlotta once entertained, and the Cabinet Room, heavy tapestries at the windows, gilt furniture, thick carpets, and, at each cabinet member's chair beside the long table, a gold-lettered portfolio. Officers pointed out a bullet hole in the back of one chair and then of another; their occupants had been shot to death.

From the beautiful ballroom, the visitors stepped on to the balcony and looked out on the Zocalo (or plaza), the center of the life of Mexico, the view dominated by the twin towers of the cathedral, standing on the site of the chief Aztec temple.

On the walls of the National Palace are the Diego Rivera murals. Here is Mexico's history, told not in words but in painting and so it is a story that anyone with eyes can read. The colors are bright because it is a colorful tale, beginning with plumed dancers and feathered serpents, then the Spanish conquest, Maximilian, Juarez, Diaz, Villa—it is all there, even a depiction of the late industrial exploitation of the people and a presentation of the present policies of Mexico, including the expropriation of foreign-owned oil properties. The lower part of one section was stained with acid; someone, displeased, had tried to destroy the picture.

A drive through the market, thousands of blossoms of unbelievable brightness and size piled in perfumed pyramids; the reddest of tomatoes, the greenest of peppers and the whitest of onions; then a swing down the Paseo de la Reforma, one of the most beautiful boulevards in the world, with its bronze King Charles and its Victory Monument, 150 feet high; then fine homes and finer flower gardens; and Chapultepec Park, with charros wearing costumes in real life as glittering as the raiment in Fort Worth's make-believe Casa Manana—grantees on horseback, with big hats rimmed with tinsy, jingling bells; jackets and tight-fitting trousers of blue, of pink and of green, embroidered in silver or gold; at the hip, pearl-handled, silver embossed six-shooters, and their saddles gleaming with semi-precious stones and precious metals.

And, after that, came the Floating Gardens. Our boats drifted along the canals through vistas of gardens and tall poplars to the music of a marimba band, while native women in the narrowest of canoes glided alongside to sell flowers for a trifle. What a setting for luncheon!

Then there was the bull-fight in the afternoon (there isn't space to describe that dramatic spectacle), then at night to the Palace of Fine Arts (as grand as the Metropolitan Opera in New York) to see the leading dancer of Mexico in Aztec and Mayan dances. And this, mind you, was all in one day—and not the most thrilling day of the visit to Mexico, either!

"Oldest joke" contest entry: A farmer driving an old mare into town saw a sign, "Speed limit, 20 miles an hour." Whipping the horse, he said, "Don't know whether we can make it or not."

"Ice Caves" At World's Fair To Give History Of Refrigeration

Cleopatra's wine bearers, the Roman Emperor Caligula's barge, a "well-house" of the Pilgrims in Massachusetts, the Aurora Borealis, luminous against frozen Arctic regions, are just a few vivid pages out of the exciting story of refrigeration which will be told from start to finish in "The Magic Caves of Ice," the exhibit being staged at the New York World's Fair by Servel, Inc., manufacturers of gas and kerosene refrigerators.

In describing the exhibit, one of the most unusual of its kind, C. H. Elliott, owner of the Elliott Appliance Co., which handles Servel Electrolux in this vicinity said:

"Those who see the 'Magic Caves of Ice' will gain a new perspective on the relationship of adequate food protection and the development of the means of obtaining it from primitive life to modern day living.

"The exhibit is to be staged in the gas industry's 'Court of Flame' building at the World's Fair. Immediately on entering the exhibit the visitor will find himself surrounded by the strange icicle-like formations of the Ice Age. Long-tapering cylindrical forms known as 'stalactites' hanging from the roof, meet 'stalagmites' another type of geological formation, rising in weird array from the cavern floor.

"Dim lighting, an opening in the cavern walls disclosing a midnight sky brilliant with stars, the Aurora Borealis throwing its mysterious glow over the frigid Arctic, will all add to the realism of the story. A giant Servel Electrolux refrigerator, about 12 feet high, will move constantly on a turntable in the center of the exhibit.

"Outstanding among the sights to be seen in the 'Cave' are ten dioramas which paint a graphic picture of the development of domestic refrigeration from its primitive stages to the present-day silent refrigerator.

"This series of dioramic displays begin with the cave-man and his 'kill,' placed in deep recesses of his cave where cool air kept food from spoiling for a short time; then Cleopatra's wine bearers will be shown, where films of ice formed by the desert night winds were used to cool the beverages and other delicacies served by Egypt's glamorous queen; the Roman Emperor Caligula's barge, recently dug up by archeologists

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts
The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, course or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or over-eat, your stomach often refuses to do its job. You feel sour, sick and upset all over. Doctors say there is a laxative in your stomach. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little blue tablets called KIDANS, relieve the excess stomach fluids harmful, relieve distress in no time and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one little package proves it. Ask for KIDANS for Indigestion.

STOP Scratching

BELIEVE ITCHING SKIN QUICKLY
Even the most stubborn itching of eczema, blotches, pimples, athlete's foot, rashes and other externally caused skin eruptions, quickly yields to pure, cooling, antiseptic, liquid D.D.D. PRESCRIPTION. Clear, greaseless and stainless—dries fast. Its gentleness soothes the irritation. Stops the most intense itching in a hurry. A 35c trial bottle, at all drug stores, proves it—or your money back. Ask for D.D.D. PRESCRIPTION.

from the bottom of an Italian lake, with slaves bringing ice and snow from the far-off Apennines, will be the next scene.

"Further dioramas show a 'well-house' of the Pilgrims in Massachusetts, indicating the partial protection of food in those days; the harvesting of ice in winter, illustrating 19th century refrigeration; and a dramatization of a famous Gibson drawing entitled 'The Gibson Girl and the Ice Man.' This will picture the girl's distance of the 'messiness' of the old-fashioned ice box.

"The all-gas kitchen of today, with its 1939 Servel Electrolux as an integral part of its furnishings; a farm kitchen furnished with the kerosene-operated Servel Electrolux, are still other diorama subjects.

FLOCK OF SOUTHDOWN SHEEP BROUGHT TO McADOO COMMUNITY

He expects to keep the ewes for breeding purposes and to sell lambs to the F.F.A. boys of the McAdoo community. Mr. Jones says he will sell the lambs, which are purebred, to the boys at a reasonable price and he promises as good lambs as can be purchased at his price anywhere. Jones selected Southdown to help improve the flocks of the McAdoo community because Southdown sheep are especially suited for this country and will gain faster than any other breed represented in this community. They are also an excellent mutton
