WILL SUTTON DO HER DUTY?

Tomorrow Sutton county will decide whether or not she wants better roads when voters go to the polls to cast their ballots in favor of or against the $175,000 road bond issue. Other counties through which the Old Spanish Trail passes have their eyes focused on this county and will be eagerly awaiting the outcome of the election. These other counties have already voted bonds or have paving, and now it is up to the voters of Sutton county to do their part. Surely this county, the pioneer road building county of West Texas, will take advantage of the opportunity tomorrow and assure a hard-surfaced road from San Antonio to El Paso.

The increase in tax rate will be very little, approximately 15 cents on the hundred dollars or about $2.00 per section, not enough that the ranchmen and other tax payers will ever be burdened. And the land all over the county will be enhanced in value more than enough to offset the additional tax. Each section of land would have an increase in tax of about $2, and what is that compared to good roads?

People all over the county will be benefitted, as $50,000 of the $175,000 will be spent on lateral roads. Of course, that would benefit Sonora, its merchants and citizens, schools and churches; therefore every tax paying voter should want these essentials and should cast their ballots in favor of the road bonds. Let's do our duty.

A Round of Slugs

(By S. U. M. Bull)

With approach of spring comes the baseball fever, and fans and players here are talking baseball for Sonora. It would be well if Sonora had a baseball team that would play during the summer; but to get the boys together for about two games would be worse than no team at all. Sonora could and would support a team if the boys would stay together and keep the team intact for a number of games. This paper will give $15 per month and donate a suit if a team is organized that will play throughout the summer, and it is believed that almost every business house in town would do the same if we had a team that could play a fair brand of ball and keep it up.

In an effort to encourage beautification of the yard and lawns of Uvalde homes, the city waterworks of that place has inaugurated summer rates. The new rates, effective March 20, allows a minimum of 4,000 gallons for $1.50, and only 10c cents per thousand gallons in excess of that amount. It would be a fine thing if Sonora could do likewise, but to do that we would have to have lower rates than are charged here.

There is a fine opportunity in Sonora for an apartment tourist camp—not of the ordinary type but one that will appeal to the wealthier class of people. Half of the apartments could be kept occupied practically all of the time by people living in Sonora who are renting rooms. There are a half dozen or more families here who would rent the apartments and get glad to get them. A tourist camp operator of Kerrville was here Wednesday looking for a desirable location on which to put a modern apartment tourist camp, and if he can get the right kind of location he will come to Sonora.

The fleet-footed Louie Trainer will not need either a bicycle or motorcycle to beat anything San Angelo can enter in the 100 yard dash. Blondy Cross, of the San Angelo Standard, will be convinced that the Sonora speedster can knock off the 100 yards in 10.1 when the district meet is held in San Angelo next month. It is likely that Trainer will be in tip-top shape for the meet and will make Mr. Cross and a few other doubting Thomases in the Rainbow City sit up and take notice.

Voters who favor better roads should cast their votes in favor of the road bond issue here tomorrow. About fifty of the heaviest tax payers are favoring the issue, and if these men are willing to see their taxes increased a fraction, why should the smaller tax payers object to better roads—the best investment the county can make. If the bonds fail to carry then Sutton will be classed among the non-progressive counties, not to mention the fact that a strip will be left unpaved between San Antonio and El Paso.

W. A. Miers, perhaps one of the largest tax payers in the county, believes the bond issue will carry overwhelmingly. And there is Geo. S. Allison, who owns more land in this county than any other one man, favoring the move and will vote for the bonds. Evidently these gentlemen seem to think that it pays to have good roads, and they are right.

The Methodist meeting is progressing nicely and Rev. E. P. Neal is preaching good sermons. The song services are being conducted by E. J. Thomas of Huntsville, and Mrs. Thomas shows much ability at the piano. The pastor extends a cordial invitation to everyone to be present. Morning services begin at ten o'clock and evening services at 7:45. The meeting will close Easter Sunday.

LENT—1931

My Dear People:

Both to those confirmed, and to those whose presence too, is always helpful, we extend to you a hearty invitation to attend our Lent services.

In this day and time, we know full well that it is not always our fault that we are not able to attend every service, with that regularity we want to. The strain and stress of this rushing age, is hard on us in our attempt to keep Lent as easily, as our slower forefathers kept it. They did not have the demands we have; however, this is not an apology for church people, it is rather a request that you will practice the self-denial of deliberately thrusting aside what you want to do, for what you are asked to do, in helping your heart and mind to a better understanding of Christian fellowship, love and service. If Christ, the Son of God thought it good to be in a desert place apart, so may we draw aside for a short hour, as often as we can. Lent is perhaps a specially busy time with the Tempter of our Souls. He did not relax even with Christ. A sacrifice which is a hollow canting phrase means nothing. Let us really sacrifice our personal whims, and wishes for Christ's sake and the church. Come to the Holy Communion often, feed on Christ, draw from Him, healing of mind, and body. Draw from him quiet of heart, pureness, newness of life. The benefits of Lent are beyond words. It's a price we have to pay, but it is worth it.

Frederic M. Brasier, Rector.

Electricity Aids the Small City

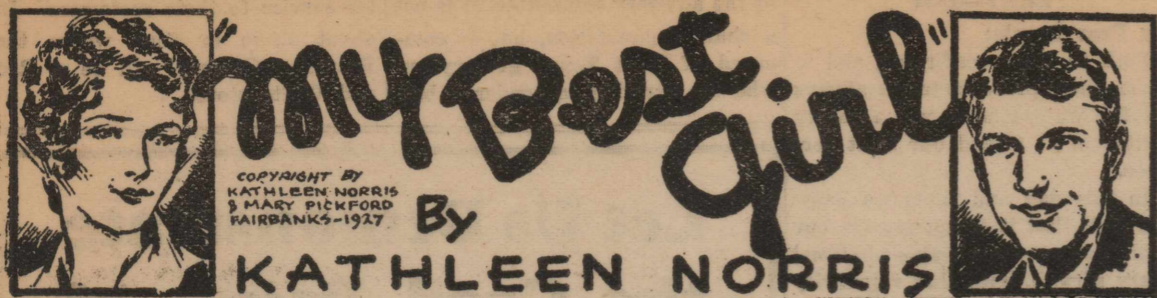

ELECTRIC power has been called by many economic authorities the "Equalizer," because it puts the small town on an equal basis with the large industrial center. No longer is it necessary for industries to locate in congested, expensive and competitive metropolitan districts, for the transmission line system has built an ever-growing network of electric highways, over which is transported unlimited power—available in the smallest of towns at an inexpensive rate.

This development in the electric light and power industry holds forth greater opportunities to the small town than it has ever enjoyed in the past. The "Decentralization of Industry" which has followed this development has been advantageous to the country as a whole. West Texas has profited her full share, and will continue to participate in this new industrial growth throughout the years to come.

The West Texas Utilities Company, manufacturing inexpensive electric power, dependably serves 120 prosperous cities and towns in West Texas, the "Land of Opportunity," distributing its services over more than 2,500 miles of transmission line to a territory approximately 45,000 square miles in area.

Tenth Installment

"Joe, do you and your father talk about things?" she asked, as if she liked the picture.

"Not much. But lately we have been more," he answered truthfully. Her eyes were flashing, and the beautiful little face that had been so pale when he entered was shining with its loveliest radiance now. Suddenly—suddenly she was in his arms.

"Joe—don't!"

"Maggie—you belong to me. We love each other!"

Instantly the little arms went about him, tightened, the small head, with its crown of gold, was pressed, with the little loving, jerking digs of a child's head, against his heart. Joe kissed the top of her head and the rosy ear that a curving filament of gold hair left free, kissed the eyes that were flooded again with tears, and the sweet fresh mouth that was ready, now, to return his kisses.

And to Ma was first announced the engagement of marriage between Mary Margaret Petheridge Johnson, spinster, and Joseph Grant.

In his mother's dressing room, before dinner, he had told his parents the whole story frankly.

Mrs. Merrill took the successive shocks heroically. Her son, working in one of the Stores? Joseph Merrill a stock clerk? And in love with one of the humblest of his co-workers?

All of this had been before dinner. Now it was late at night, and Joe coming in quietly from a dinner and cards with some of the members of his own set, found himself summoned to his mother's room again.

She was in bed.

"Sit down, dear. Sit here on the edge of the bed, if you like," she said comfortably. "I've been thinking of your affair all evening."

"Dad tells me that some man named Baker or Bradley was going to Japan for the firm next Saturday," she began.

"Oh, Brewer, you mean?"

"Brewer. Well, Brewer isn't going. In fact, he's leaving the Stores, I believe. What I suggested was, that you go for the firm to Japan. It would mean a very sensible chance to wait a little, to get a new perspective on this engagement and this girl, and Dad's idea was that it would be a very easy way to break off your present relationship with the Stores."

"Now, Joe, why not get your passports, and take up Brewer's tickets—in less than six days, you would be at sea, and have time to think all this out, and get your mind cleared about it all. Tell your Mary Margaret that you are being sent away by the firm—she's very young, she's extremely young, and if—when you come back, you both feel the same way, there'll be plenty of time to make plans then."

"You see, Joe, marriage is more than falling in love. You want to be proud of your wife, as the years go by. A girl who belongs to an entirely different class of society not only makes her husband unhappy—makes him the butt of ridicule and pity for his friends, but she herself is bitterly unhappy, too. She doesn't know how to amuse herself, she has no resources . . ."

It went on for a long while. And for a long while he listened. Then she said, more lightly:

"Now run along to bed, dear. We've had enough of this for one day. But tomorrow—think it over. It's late, Joe. Get to bed quickly and go right to sleep, dear."

He obeyed her as far as getting to bed was concerned.

But sleep was a different matter. Then it was Monday again, and there was a pleasant fresh bustle of girls busy in the Mack.

The front door and the side door were propped wide open, and fresh damp air blew through the place that would be hot and close and jaded so soon. Joe, on the mezzanine floor, stopped up there for a minute and stood looking down at the confusion and activity of the store.

And presently, with an odd, sharp twist to his heart, he saw Maggie.

He had rather dreaded meeting her today, after yesterday. But, unexpectedly, he wanted to talk to her now—be near her, assure himself that this little willing slave of a whole hurried scene was in a special sense his property.

And presently, running upstairs, she nodded to him joyfully.

"Hello, Joe! Say, Joe—" And her smallness and sweetness and her absurd little-girl seriousness were beside him.

"Hello, Mary Margaret! How's the world with you this morning?"

"Happy, huh?"

"I guess I've got enough to make me happy," she said soberly.

"You aren't scared of thirty-five a week?"

"I'm not scared of anything. I wish—I wish they would fire you, Joe!"

"Fire me!" he repeated.

"Joe—to show you how much—I like you!" she faltered. "If you came home to me some night, fired, and if we didn't have a cent—"

"Maggie!" The call was rising into a chorus downstairs. "Maggie Johnson! What'd you do with them all-linen monogrammed handkerchiefs? Maggie! Hustle and get me about a half box of them red hatchets and cherry trees—at the candy counter!"

And in another second she had fled down the stairs.

Serious days, these, for Joseph Grant Mackenzie Merrill.

For he had got into the habit of talking confidentially with his father.

"She loves you, does she, Joe?"

"Sure she does."

"And she's straight and pretty and intelligent?"

"She's quicksilver."

"It would be hard for you to go to Japan next Saturday, Joe, and leave her behind?"

"Oh, no. She's only eighteen—just eighteen." Joe paused.

"You haven't thought of marrying her and taking her to Japan with you, Joe?"

Joe looked at his father.

"I merely suggest it. I don't want you to miss—anything good, my boy."

"We could postpone your sailing for a boat or two—no use rushing things. Then you two get away, and your mother—and your wife's family—can reconcile themselves to the idea by degrees."

"Wife's family!" The boy repeated the phrase in an undertone.

"It doesn't frighten you, Joe?"

"Not—you don't know her!—but not when it's Maggie."

Joe took Maggie to lunch the next day. The firm wanted him to go "on a trip," he told her, and she must go along. She had to have her picture taken, and they'd have to be married. And after twenty-three minutes in seventh heaven, they jumped into a taxi, went up to the city hall, and got a marriage license.

"They wanted me to start tomorrow, Maggie!"

"Tomorrow!"

"But now we're going to put it off a couple of weeks, so that you and I can combine the trip with our honeymoon."

Maggie and Joe, both finding themselves drawn for the Friday night shift, whispered a rapturous plan for dinner together late that evening, when their work should be over, at eight.

Joe's aristocratic mother called him to the telephone at about five o'clock. She and his father were coming into town tonight, she said, to stay at the St. Paul, and see him off tomorrow, and they wanted to know if he would like anybody else invited to an informal little good-bye dinner?

"When you say 'good-bye to everyone,' you mean to my girl, too, Mother?"

"My dear—I only meant that it is a separation, and things will be different when you come back, and however sweet and charming your girl, as you call her, may be, if your feelings had changed . . ."

There had been more of this. Joe had presently interrupted it unsympathetically:

"You'll be at the St. Paul, Mother?"

"Yes, dear. And we'll take a room for you there."

"Thanks. Well, I'll tell you who I'd like to bring to dinner, Mother. I'd like to bring Maggie."

"I want you and Dad to meet her. My plans have changed slightly. I may not sail tomorrow. Anyway, I want you to meet her."

He could hear panic behind her carefully cheerful tone.

"Certainly bring her, Joe. Under those circumstances, perhaps I'd better not ask anybody else."

Joe had seized upon this instantly:

"How do you mean 'under those circumstances?'"

But his mother had been too smart for him.

"Merely, dear, that your father and I would like an opportunity to really know her a little."

"I want you to meet my mother and father, Mary Margaret," he told her, as they toiled to and fro with crates and trays of merchandise. "They want us to have dinner with them tonight."

"Honest, Joe?"

"They're living at a hotel, now," he said.

"Joe, where is your father and mother's hotel?"

"It's right on the square, opposite the new bank building."

"Oh, right near the St. Paul?"

"It is the St. Paul."

She eyed him incredulously, amusedly.

"Yes, it is! Now you tell another."

Joe, within a few hundred feet now of its august doorway, felt a first prick of misgiving.

"Joe, you're kidding!"

"No, I'm not, darling. This is just a restaurant, like any other, and you'll find the food isn't as good as your own cooking.—The young lady will leave her coat, too, please. Lebeau, Mr. Merrill's table, please."

They were in the hands of the bowing, obsequious head waiter. Maggie did not hold Joe's hand, but she kept her frightened little person close in the shadow of his as they entered the warmth and intimacy and beauty of the Legend Room.

White tables, at all of which were diners, brilliant big lights far overhead, and little lights on the tables, women whose shoulders were bare and whose hair was moulded into close caps of curls, jewels and voices and perfumes and flowers and soft music—it was all a wild whirl to her stunned senses. Her shabby little shoes, her plain little gown moved beside Joe blindly. She heard him say: "My mother, Maggie." She saw a steel-bright, handsome face looking at her under

FORD SAFETY

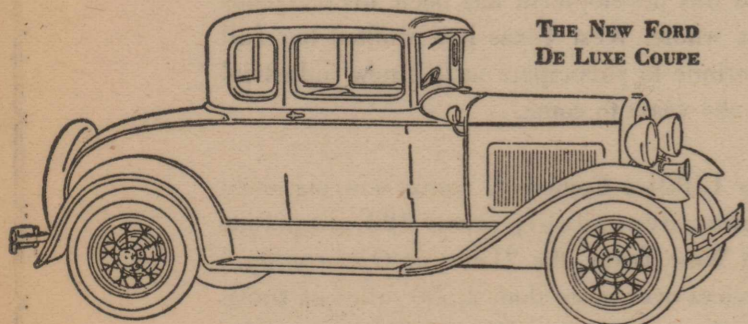

Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield has saved many lives in collisions

EVERY new Ford is equipped with a Triplex shatter-proof windshield. This is made so that the glass will not fly or splinter under the hardest impact. It has saved many lives and prevented injuries in many automobile collisions.

This shatter-proof glass windshield is just one of many features that make the new Ford a value far above the price. Others are the silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, sturdy steel body construction, four Houliaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, extensive use of fine steel forgings, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

In addition, you save many dollars because of low first cost of the new Ford, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

NOT A TAX

NEED BETTER ROADS

It is a fact that Sutton county needs to build a hard-surfaced road to the Crockett county line, not to mention the advantages of all-weather lateral roads through out the county.

Sonora has an opportunity to become a distributing center for this sector, but to accomplish this we need more and better highways, and the only way to get this is to vote the bond issue, Saturday, March 28.

CLOSE THE GAP

(AN EDITORIAL)

If Sutton county fails to vote the $175,000 road bonds Saturday, March 28, there will be a gap left in the Old Spanish Trail between San Antonio and El Paso that will not have hard-surfacing. Other counties through which the highway passes have voted bonds or have paving, and it is up to Sutton to do her part. Surely "The Stockman's Paradise" cannot afford to let the opportunity to link up the Old Spanish Trail go by.

The contract has been let in Kimble county for hard-surfacing to the Sutton county line, and it is understood that the highway department will soon have the gap paved through the Llano section. Kerr, Crockett and Pecos have all voted bonds to pave the O. S. T. in their respective counties.

Whether or not the link between San Antonio and El Paso will be broken will be up to the tax-paying voters of this county Saturday, March 28. What are we going to do about it?

Of the $175,000 to be voted, $50,000 will be spent on the county's lateral roads which will benefit the entire county. It is likely that these bonds will be retired by the state under the gasoline tax plan—the person who uses the highway will pay the cost and not the tax payer.

Many of the heaviest tax payers in this county have signified their willingness to vote for the bonds which is evidence that they believe money spent for good roads is a good investment.

Not only will Sutton county people profit from better roads but Sonora will eventually be benefited. And we are all interested in the progress of our modern little city. If the roads aid our town then our schools and churches would grow. In fact, everybody would be affected.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY

A prominent man said recently that it is every good citizen's duty to do everything possible to aid in the development of his town and county, and added that we would be doing this by voting for the $175,000 road bond issue.

Fifty thousand dollars of the proposed bonds would be spent in improving our lateral roads which would benefit people from every direction.

AN INVESTMENT

Money spent for good roads is NOT a TAX, but is an INVESTMENT that the people will realize dividends from each year. The Old Spanish Trail is one of the leading highways in Texas and the United States, and to have this route paved would be of inestimable value, not only to Sutton county, but to our neighbors. Sonora business men have been losing money as thousands and thousands of tourists have been traveling the border highway because a bad stretch of road existed in this section. To close this gap by voting bonds would benefit the local merchants and that would mean that our schools and churches and civic organizations would be bettered; and surely we want to have these essentials improved. The bonds will not be retired next year, but a period of 30 years will have elapsed before the indebtedness is paid off. During the 30 years the tax rate only would be increased an average of 15 cents on the hundred-dollar valuation, which is less than one-sixth of one per cent. You are interested in your town and county—then do your duty as a good citizen on March 28th.

beautiful scallops of feathered hair set with a jeweled aigrette. She murmured: "Pleased to meet ju," and sank dizzily into a seat.

Mrs. Merrill's handsome eyes flashed with a malicious satisfaction. She had hoped, in her somewhat twisted conception of motherly loyalty, that Joe's girl would not make much of a showing tonight. But she had hardly dared hope for a conquest quite so overwhelming and immediate.

"We took the liberty of ordering, Miss Johnson," she said smoothly, "although perhaps etiquette might have hinted that we wait!"

Joe eyed his mother—shut his jaw hard. But Maggie looked up, and he saw with a sort of delighted terror that she had been angered into selfcontrol.

"I thought you knew," she said clearly, "that I don't know anything about etiquette! Are you—" she pursued evenly, turning to Joe's father—"are you G. J. Merrill of the Stores?"

"I am, my dear," said George Merrill kindly, feeling sorry for the bewildered little thing.

Maggie grew very white and sat back slightly in her chair.

"Joe never told me—I didn't know it," she said in a lifeless little voice.

"But now that you do know it—" and I ought to have told you long ago, and I'm a fool!" Joe said quickly, uncomfortably, "—it does not make one scrap of difference, does it?"

She raised her eyes to his, there was a second of silence.

"Not at all," she answered them, quietly.

STERLING MAN OFFERS REMEDY FOR BOOTLEGGERS

EDITOR OF STERLING PAPER REPLIES TO PROPOSED REMEDY

"A Remedy for Bootleggers," contributed by H. M. Mills of Sterling City, appeared in last week's issue of the Sterling City News-Record and received comment from W. F. Kellis, editor of that paper. The remedy follows:

Is alcohol a good thing for man and society? It would seem from the attitude of a great many good and intelligent citizens of our state and nation that the answer should be in the affirmative. When such prominent men as Alfred E. Smith, late governor of New York and the Democratic nominee for president in the last election, John J. Raskob chairman of the Democratic Executive committee, Dwight W. Morrow, Republican senator elect, Jim Reed, Democratic senator, and a great many other good people that seem to have the welfare of their country at heart, take a firm stand for alcohol, wine and beer, surely they think the use of alcohol, wine and beer a good thing for our people, and if it is a good thing for our people, the more we have of it the better it is, for it is not possible to have too much of anything that is good. We hear people say that education is good for the community; if good, we cannot have too much education. Truth is conceded to be a good thing; so we cannot have too much of truth. Honesty is also conceded to be a good thing for the community; yet you never hear people say we have too much honesty in the community.

So if we conclude that whiskey, wine and beer are good things and good for the individual, they must be good for the community, if good for the community, they are good for the state; if good for the state, they are good for the nation; if good for the nation, the only rational conclusion we can reach is that if they are really good things the more we have of them the better it is for all concerned.

Considering that whiskey, wine and beer are good for the nation, we have a proposition to offer that we think will be a remedy for the much cussed and discussed prohibition question, and also a remedy for the much abused "bootlegger," also the good people that buy from the bootlegger, for without them the bootlegger could not exist.

The proposition is as follows: Let each state levy a special tax known as the "Drink Tax" not to exceed $1.00 on the one hundred dollars valuation of taxable property; The money from this tax to be used as follows:

The state to appoint a commission known as the "Drink Commission" to take charge of all monies and use same:

(1) To manufacture whiskey, wine and beer;

(2) To furnish free drinking fountains and install one in each town in the state, and one for each two thousand population in each city in convenient locations over the city so that every person could find them;

(3) To appoint some county officer in each county to take charge of the drinking fountains, his duty being to see that they are kept filled with good whiskey, wine and beer, each fountain to have three parts, one for whiskey, one for wine and one for beer.

(4) To allow all persons from 5 years to 105 years old to drink at these fountains, each person to furnish his or her drinking cup or glass, water and sugar;

(5) To keep these fountains open from 7 a. m. until 9 p. m., no person being allowed to carry whiskey, wine or beer from these fountains.

(6) In order to lessen the drink tax, each state should repeal all laws against the manufacture of whiskey, wine and beer, and let ev-

The Devil's Dream

(By W. E. James)

"Out from the far, far Southland,
Down by the Rio Grande;
Ending the reign of winter
In our fair Texas land."

This is the time of year when every hillside, every dale, sheds forth the beautiful colors of Texas state flower—the Bluebonnet. In protected nooks in around Sonora, where sheep and goats cannot trespass, one may gather huge bouquets of this symbolical emblem of purity, and with the poet sing:

"Blue as the skies above us,
Blue as the restless sea,
Blue as the distant mountains
Standing up bold and free."

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Vander Stucken are great admirers of the Texas Bluebonnet and have an immense bed of them growing in their flower garden. Mr. Vander Stucken states that some years ago he secured several flowers from his son Joe's ranch, and every since has been bountifully supplied with Bluebonnet seeds. He is also authority for the statement that this particular flower is a native of Texas and cannot be found elsewhere in its wild state.

Did you ever stop to think that the last two people to visit you just before you pass into the "great unknown," are the doctor and the minister? They of all outsiders are there to either bid you God speed—if you have lived that kind of life—or to feel uncomfortable at your departure and to sympathize with your family in the sad hour of your untimely end. Why antagonize the minister or speak slightingly of the great science of medicine? You will need the service of both before crossing the "river."

A number of the high school girls who took part in the Senior play, have been making good use of their gingham sunbonnets and gowns used in one act of the play. These girls are sensible, and let's hope they have already set a fashion that will bring back the "good old days" when mothers wore "mother-hubbards," and had no use for high-priced fandango substitutes as headgear, instead of the very becoming sunbonnet. There is too much stress placed upon fancy clothes, which in turn depletes the pocketbook of many men who can ill afford such might expenditures for dress. The good Book says, in reference to dress and other things, "Vanity, vanity, all is vanity." Besides, what is more soul inspiring than a sweet, lovable young lady in a gingham gown and sunbonnet?

Ex-President Lion W. E. Caldwell suggests that now since the Methodist ladies have lost their coffee pot that we go back to the days of making this delectable brew in tin cans on an open fire. Who among coffee drinkers does not enjoy a can of black coffee, broiled bacon, unions, pickles, etc., cooked a la fish camp style? Perhaps, if the ladies would drench the Lions a few times with the old-fashioned brew, they would soon yell, "enough, enough; here, take this wad of greenbacks and buy another electric coffee urn!" It is worth trying out, don't you ladies think so?

Music lovers were agreeably surprised with the progress of Mr. Rogers' school orchestra, which furnished music for the Senior class play last Friday night. Mr. Rogers, a conservatory graduate of string and brass instruments, has been instructing the orchestra since the beginning of school, and has worked wonders with the raw material he had to start with. Proper co-operation and another year's instruction under the guidance of this able and efficient teacher, will enable Sonora to realize her ambition to have a first-class musical organization.

"Jake" Houston, master of the violin, who comes to Sonora from San Angelo once a week to teach, says Heinie Rogers is one of the best trumpet players in Texas, and adds that he should be for he studied trumpet three years, practicing 12 hours a day. Mr. Rogers is also equally good on the violin.

Two-Gun Ike says: "Tother nite my little boy woke up in the nite and began yelling fer me. I went in where he was at and asked what the heck he wanted. He said, 'Dad, I wanna drink!' That's nothin' to cry about; so do I! Now, go to sleep and fergit it!"

This Woman in 4 Weeks
Lost 17 Pounds of Fat

Here's a letter written October 21, 1929, by Mrs. Fred Barringer of Lewistown, Montana, that ought to be read by every overweight woman in America:

Gentlemen: I started taking Kruschen every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce.

I had tried going on a diet but would get so hungry that my diet would not last long, so I decided to give "Kruschen Salts" a fair trial. The day I started to take them I weighed 256 lbs. and at present, which has been just four weeks, I weigh 239 lbs. And I must say, I feel better in every way, besides looking much better.

May all large people, both men and women, who want to reduce in an easy way, give Kruschen Salts a fair trial. I am sure it will convince anyone!

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks cost but 85c at the Corner Drug Store, or any drug stores in America. Take one half teaspoon in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning. To help reduce swiftly cut out pastry and fatty meats and go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar.

The Kruschen way is the safe way to reduce—Try one bottle and if not joyfully satisfied—money back.—Adv.

himself and family, thus making the state a party in the business since it took the first profit the seller made out of the sales. It was very wrong to furnish the whiskey, have it advertised, offer the temptation, and then punish and disgrace the citizen for getting drunk, knowing that someone would have to buy it so the seller could pay his license, and after buying it he would have no other use for it but to drink it, and if he drank he would get drunk.

Doubtless some of our dry friends will object to paying a drink tax and our bootleg friends may object to free drinks, but all good citizens should be willing to contribute to any good cause for the betterment of citizens and country as a whole.

Personally, I do not think strong drink is good for the country, but I am willing to surrender my views and pay my part of the tax to further any good cause that is for the best interest of our country. If anyone has a better solution to offer for the whiskey business and the bootlegger, we would be glad to hear from them.

H. M. Mills,

But, Brother Mills, if your plan is put into practice, what will become of the poor downtrodden bootlegger? You know, Brother, that the Anti Saloon League, Uncle Sam's division of Navy and Army Prohibition Enforcement and the bootlegger, are the legitimate children of us good Bone Drys. It would be heartless in us to abandon them and leave them out in the cold to starve. We may be ashamed of our offspring, but they are ours. Their mother, the 18th Amendment, says that we are their daddies. She swears that if it had not been for us old rotters, these children would never have been born.

Why not leave the matter as it is? We are all satisfied. We Bone Drys have all the laws we want, and the wets have all the whiskey they want and everybody seems to be happy. Mr. Wickersham reports to Mr. Hoover that Prohibition is "satisfactory" in Texas, because good whiskey can be had at "reasonable prices" in Fort Worth and Dallas. Why not let it alone as long as the wets can buy "good liquor at reasonable prices" and we Bone Drys have all the laws we want?

(7) When this plan is adopted and the fountains installed, all laws against drunkenness, driving automobiles while intoxicated or fighting while drunk should be repealed, for it would be very inconsistent and wrong to furnish strong drink free and then punish the citizen for drinking it.

Strong drink is a good thing and the more drinks we have the better it is for all concerned. Let every body have a good time alike. Under the old license system, the law was very inconsistent and unjust. The state would sell a man a license to sell strong drink to its citizens, and then would enact laws against drinking and punish its citizens for getting drunk, knowing that the citizen would have to buy and drink the strong drink. So the seller could pay his license to the state and make a living for
