Sutton County Livestock Show: Sonora Shows Its Best

Sixty exhibitors showcased their hard work at the 2010 Sutton County Livestock Show.

By Ben D. Taylor

The idea of a livestock show is usually misinterpreted by spectators. They see this as an event that only showcases the form structure of domestic production animals (which is only half of the complete picture). What they do not see in the ring is what makes these shows important for our youth. The hours spent grooming, feeding, caring for and working with their animals is the true showcase of their dedication. The short amount of time spent in the ring only tells a fraction of the whole story. If you look deeper you will find that the exhibitors are showing themselves just as much as they are the animals. By that measure alone, the Sutton County Livestock Show of 2010 was an astounding success. This years stock show had 60 exhibitors (up from 53 in 2009) showing over 190 animals. That includes all species (market lambs, meat goats, Angoras, market swine, breeding gilts, steers, and heifers). We also had a class of peewee exhibitors which took a try at it by borrowing goats from 4-H & FFA youth. Their awards were sponsored by the First National Bank. Sutton County Extension Agent Pascual Hernandez commented that, "You can't beat the response we got from all of our sponsors. The only word I can use is amazing. At the auction every exhibitor got at least $1,000 for their animal-the average was $1,200, and the high selling animal went for $2,000. Though the Angora industry has been diminished, we still have a few youth who carry the tradition on. For the first time, we had a class of Angora wethers to show. It was also a first for the breeding gilt show. Another first, was the addition of a medium wool class in the market lamb division. The show committee did all it could to encourage youth exhibitors and we are proud of them for that. We certainly thank all the folks involved in the show. That includes ring stewards, announcers, auctioneer, tabulators, awards committee, sales committee, concessions, and of course, the many sponsors."

Home for A Visit: Castro Rests Amid Navy Deployments

Danielle Castro, who is the daughter of John and Annette Castro, visited home with her boyfriend, Ryan Moreno, from San Diego, CA. Both are stationed at Little Creek in Virginia Beach, VA. Danielle is serving on the USS Oak Hill, LSD 51, which is an amphibious ship. She has been in training to become a petty officer. Ryan is a mechanic and works on all the naval equipment on base. They both have just returned from deployment in South America and both have orders to deploy to Afghanistan next year.

Ryan enjoyed his visit home with Danielle and was really impressed with the way our community pulls together to honor and support our troops, past and present.

Bronco Nation Goes to England: Aguero Cheers In London

By Rachel Aguero

On Dec. 26, 2009, more than 900 cheerleaders and dancers from around the country headed to London, England to march in the London New Year's Day Parade. In order to be eligible to perform in the parade, cheerleaders and dancers had to attend a UCA or UDA camp and try out for the title of All-American. Being selected as an All-American earn them an invitation to travel to London.

Sonora High School JV Cheerleader, Delilah Aguero, a sophomore, was selected All-American at cheer camp held in July. Delilah knew that with this title, she would get the chance to travel to London! What an awesome opportunity for a 15-year-old girl from a small Texas town!! Once she and her parents got all the paperwork and small details in order (like the cost), they got down to business and started fundraising.

After 5 months of intense fundraising, it was time for DD to board the airplane in Dallas for a 9 hour flight to London. This was a nerve wracking day for her parents, especially since the day before, some man had tried to blow up an international plane.

While in London, DD and the other cheerleaders were able to tour some really exciting places. A few of the places were: The Buckingham Palace, Madame Tussaud's Wax Museum, St. Paul's Cathedral, Big Ben, The Tower of London, The British Museum, and The Windsor Castle - which is one of the official residents of Her Majesty the Queen!!! Her favorite place was St. Paul's Cathedral - the church where Princess Diana and Prince Charles were married. She was disappointed that they were not allowed to take pictures inside the cathedral.

On the second night there, the girls were treated like queens at a "Disco Cruise" aboard the ship "The Dixie Queen." They danced the night away under the stars as the "Dixie Queen" cruised down the Thames River.

On Jan 1, 2010, it was time to march in the parade!! What an awesome experience! The weather was beautiful, not a cloud in sight! The cheerleaders welcomed the sunny day and were in awe of the thousands and thousands of spectators.

Unfortunately, all good things must come to an end. On Jan 2, 2010, after ringing in the New Year in London, it was time for the cheerleaders to return to the USA. Delilah made it home safe and has been on cloud nine ever since.

Delilah is the daughter of Richard and Rachel Aguero of Sonora, Texas.

Uncle Mort and First Things First...

By Dr. Don Newbury

With a new calendar still thick with pages, it is tempting to extend more patience to my Uncle Mort, stopping just short of taking as gospel whatever falls from his lips. He is famous down in the thicket for yapping away in his shadow-box sparring with silence and even long pauses. Only his appointments with sleep make possible snippets of silence for which the region is otherwise known.

Now he's claiming to be "full of fix-up analysis" concerning the turmoil in the Texas Tech football program, and the "tragic death of the University of Arkansas hog mascot."

If his intent was to pique my interest, it worked. "I've moved these issues to the top of my list," Mort sputtered. "To give both of them due consideration, I've put aside plans to organize a torch-light march on Washington. Me and a few other East Texas toughies have a single demand: That all members of Congress take a page from the Nascar handbook, the one requiring drivers to wear decals of sponsoring corporations. If they'd do that, we'd at least know who our D.C. leaders are driving for..."

He expressed sadness about the brouhaha at Tech. Mort thinks there are few winners, with all parties significantly diminished.

"We're suffering from information overload, hearing way too much stuff from every direction," he moaned, "and some of it is probably true." He contends that the ugly scenario in Lubbock could be the springboard for "national reconsideration of higher education priorities by 'big-school, backboned presidents'." Mort, with one more brand to burn, made another strong statement: "When I hear the words 'coach' and 'agent' linked together, I wince." Continuing his ramble, he said that "all the 'coach hiring/firing news' these days reminds him of the musty line about how people who enjoy obeying laws and eating sausage had best not watch either of them being made. He thinks big-time coaches' contract sagas should be added to the list...."

The phone cracked; maybe a swarm of mosquitoes buzzed through the signal.

Talking faster than ever, he lamented the "untimely death of Tusk II," Arkansas Razorbacks' 500-pound Russian boar mascot. The porcine seemingly "gave his all" for the team in its 20-17 conquest of East Carolina in the Memphis, TN, Liberty Bowl.

The remainder of his conversation came through in bits and pieces, but here is what I deduced, subject to possible correction later....

Mort thinks that the Pirates' ace field goal kicker, Ben Hartman, was victim of a "hog hex." The team's all-time leading scorer, he kicked game-winning field goals in six previous games, including four as time expired. Against the Hogs, however, he missed on four, including three of 39 yards or less in the late going. He had booted a school record 77 straight extra points, and in the 2008 season was voted "best under pressure" by opponents in Conference USA. Hecklers may have chanted "shanks a lot" to this nationally-recognized kicker who'll have nightmarish memories of his final collegiate game.

Mort mentioned the word "tuckered" as he re-thought his "hog-hexing" theory. "Why he probably over-worked his heart," my uncle analyzed. (Tusk II was pronounced, hmmm, "un-alive" just two days after the game. Though there was no autopsy, swine flu has been ruled out. Some Arkansas hecklers noted that the mascot had served four years, so technically, his eligibility expired at the same time he did.)

Razorback rooters are heartened that his little brother, Tusk III, is ready to assume the mascot role. (Detailed info at wholehog.com.) A final thought on the subject is that maybe we've been using the "old South" expression wrong for decades. Should it be "root hog AND die?"...

Let him who would enjoy a good future waste none of his present.

Thank You Notes

There are many, many people that helped make my trip to London possible. I would never have been able to accomplish this goal without the help of the wonderful people of Sonora! Thank you to all of you that baked cakes for my bake sales and those who bought them. Thank you to everyone who ordered Krispy Kreme donuts or Mudhouse candles, also to all of the students of Sonora Middle School who kept coming back for popsicles and glow necklaces!! Thank you Bronco Nation who donated money at the Dec. 18th Lady Broncos game! Thank you to all who donated money just because you wanted to help me out! Thank you to the following businesses that helped sponsor me: Sutton County Steakhouse, Taco Grill, Rockhouse Gift Boutique, JMC, Ol' Sonora Trading Company, One Stop Gift Shop, Tidwell Production Company and Uvalco Supply of Uvalde, TX. Thank you to the Sonora Chamber of Commerce for letting me set up a table at Sutton County Days. I would especially like to thank my mother for fundraising like a mad woman and reaching our goal and my dad for getting me to and from the airport. Last, but not least, I would like to thank my cheer sponsor, Mrs. Jennings, for making me try out for All American!!!! I would've never done it, without her encouragement.

Sincerely,
 Delilah Agüero

Citizens of Sonora and Sutton County

My sincere thanks to each of you who attended the reception held for me last Wednesday at The Bank and Trust. I was honored and feel very blessed to have been chosen by the Mayor and City Council as the new city manager for the wonderful City of Sonora. This is a great community and with your help, we will make it even greater. It was a privilege to meet everyone. Please come by City Hall anytime-my door is always open. A special thanks to Ann Kay and the Friends of Historic Sonora, KHOS Radio and The Devil's River News for sponsoring the reception and additionally to The Bank and Trust for hosting the reception in their beautiful bank.

Happy Trails,
 Judy Miller

We would like to thank all those who participated in our local Salvation Army drive to make our first year a success. Thanks to all your generous donations, we were able to help several local families in need during the holidays. A special thank you goes to Dairy Queen, Alco, Sonic, The Mercantile on Main & Food Center for allowing us to set up at their locations. We would also like to thank all the young men & ladies who stood out in the cold for us and rang the bell. They did a fantastic job. Hope to see you again in December of this year.

Thanks Again
 Terry N Duckworth, Chairman & Juanita Estrada, Treasurer

A special thank you to Father Fernando for the wonderful service, St. Ann's Choir for the beautiful music, and the Guadalupanas for the delicious meal and kind words of support during Marie's funeral. Thank you Lizzie Chavez for the beautiful songs at the cemetery and to Amanda and Mage for leading the Rosary at the funeral home.

We would also like to thank the pallbearers; Juan Carlos Gonzales, Lemuel Lopez, Juan Jimenez, John Lopez, Jr., Tony Barrera, and Johnny Rodriguez.

Sandi, thanks for making all this happen.

Lions Roar

Don Surrige, Tom Blazé, and Tony Lane

Submitted by Frank Wamble

The Lions Club hopes all will have a Happy New Year. Our first meeting of the new year was almost flawless. Tradition has it, that the first meeting of each month we have a little birthday for the membership. The party went as planned recognizing the birthdays of Mr. Bill Stewart, Mr. Archie Crenwelge and Col. Pete Bradley. The only flaw was NO ICE CREAM. This will be fixed for future parties.

The club welcomed Ms. Judy Miller, the Sonora City Manager, and we hope she will accept our invitation for membership. We assured her that women are members and we would love to have more of them.

Our program focused on Vision Care with a program provided by Mr. Tom Blazé of the Lions Eyeglass Recycling Center. Tom provided a first class Lions Vision overview which was extremely beneficial to our club and will benefit children in our community. He talked about all the programs the Lions are involved with, but the new Childrens Eyeglass Program supported by the Lens laboratory located in Midland will be the main focus.

The bottom line is lowering the cost of children's eyewear. The Lions can help. After an eye exam we can provide frames and armed with the prescription can have the lens lab make the lens inexpensively. Thanks, Tom, for a first class program and support of the Lions for over 37 years. You are always welcome in Sonora.

The Eye Glass points of contact for Sonora Lions Club are Mr. Tony Lane 325-387-5235 and Mr. Don Surrige 325-387-2883.

January 2010 Is School Board Recognition Month

Standing L to R: Don Gibson, Tommy Van Winkle, Jesse Bustamante, Jerry Jimenez, Tryon Fields, President; Vice-President; Barbara Jennings, Secretary; Dawn Cahill, and Carol Pope

Submitted

Governor Rick Perry has proclaimed January as School Board Recognition Month to help highlight the contributions of dedicated men and women who take the time to care about our local schools. Sonora ISD will join districts across the state to thank board members for voluntarily tackling the enormous job of governing local school districts.

"As advocates for our children, school board members face difficult challenges es. These local citizens, our neighbors, are elected by the community to make critical decisions that directly affect the future of our youth. They work tirelessly, devoting countless hours to help ensure a quality education that will lead our students to success," said Don Gibson, Sonora ISD Superintendent.

"Our school board members are a vital link between the community and the classroom. They bear responsibility for an annual budget of $27,000,000, over 925 students, 175 employees, and three campuses. Their job is not an easy one, but they have a commitment to serve their community and ensure that all students are given every opportunity to excel through education. Help us show appreciation to these board members for giving of themselves and caring so much about every child enrolled in our schools," Gibson said.

The men and women serving Sonora ISD as board members are: Tryon Fields, President; Tommy Van Winkle, Vice-President; Barbara Jennings, Secretary; and Jesse Bustamante, Dawn Cahill, Jerry Jimenez, and Carol

Lady Colts Basketball: Battle The Ozona Lions

By Coach Kirkland

The Lady Colts did a great job against the Ozona Lady Lions. The girls played the best they have all year, as they have learned to play as a team. They really worked hard on offense to get the ball where it needed to be. They really have been playing like they practice, which to me means that they have been playing really hard. These girls come out every morning at 7 a.m. to practice, and also do a new program that Coach Sine firmly believed in when he first came here called B.F.S.

The girls as well as the whole coaching staff really believe in this program, and believe that it starts from a young age to install hard work in these girls. Both 7th grade teams are playing great, and with 37 girls total they all play as a team, and play great together. I have enjoyed being their coach this year, and can't wait to see what their futures are. The great thing about being able to coach these young athletes is to know that, yes, you are their basketball coach, but to teach them that just having fun, and working hard in all that you do makes you a better person. I am very happy and pleased with these girls, and the teaching staff as we all work together to make sure that these athletes learn the value of student/athlete, teamwork, hard work, and team unity.

The Severity of Her Deafness

A concerned husband went to a doctor to talk about his wife.

He says to the doctor, "Doctor, I think my wife is deaf because she never hears me the first time and always asks me to repeat things."

"Well," the doctor replied, "go home and tonight stand about 15 feet from her and say something to her. If she doesn't reply move about 5 feet closer and say it again. Keep doing this so that we'll get an idea about the severity of her deafness".

Sure enough, the husband goes home and does exactly as instructed.

He starts off about 15 feet from his wife in the kitchen as she is chopping some vegetables and says, "Honey, what's for dinner?" He hears no response.

He moves about 5 feet closer and asks again. No reply. He moves 5 feet closer. Still no reply. He gets fed up and moves right behind her, about an inch away, and asks again, "Honey, what's for dinner?"

She replies, "For the fourth time, vegetable stew!"

The critic is one who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing.

Commissioner Staples Chairs New Council Aimed at Focusing the State's Renewable Energy Policies

AUSTIN - Agriculture Commissioner Todd Staples called to order the new Texas Bioenergy Policy Council. The council was created by the 81st Texas Legislature to make the state a leader in bio-fuel and biomass production. Commissioner Staples chairs the 18-member board, which is comprised of policy makers and industry experts.

"The Legislature has given this council a powerful opportunity to put together a strategic roadmap for attracting sustainable bioenergy to Texas," Commissioner Staples said. "Texas is a leader in both energy and agriculture. By intersecting two of our state's largest industries, Texas can position itself as a global leader in the future production of renewable energy."

Commissioner Staples set forth the criteria that will guide the council as it works to meet its goal of making

Texas the renewable energy capital of the world.

"For bioenergy policy to be successful in Texas, we must ensure it is sustainable, equitable and defensible," Commissioner Staples said. "The bioenergy industry in Texas must be able to stand on its own two feet; the government should not set mandates and choose winners and losers; and taxpayers must have confidence in and see benefit from the policy."

The council heard its first testimony from attorney and federal policy analyst Curt Rich. Rich is an expert on issues related to energy, the environment and tax policy. He believes the Lone Star State has the resources to lead the world into a new century, where renewable fuels join fossil fuels to power the planet.

"Texas is in a very good position and has the opportunity to be the cradle for advanced biofuels of the United States," Rich said.

Two legislators sit on the panel - Sen. Craig Estes and Rep. Rick Hardcastle.

"This is the Legislature's latest effort to make sure we are in a position to one day have energy independence," Sen. Estes said. "This council needs to work together to better Texas and to assist in developing new fuels for our great state."

The bioenergy council will meet over the next year to develop a comprehensive action plan that will offer recommendations for the 82nd Texas Legislature to use as a guide to foster the responsible growth of bioenergy in Texas.

More about the Texas Bioenergy Policy Council

Commissioner Staples' charges to the council:

1.) Study the status of the Texas bioenergy industry.

The study will evaluate the current state of feedstock development, infrastructure and production capacity, research initiatives and policy/funding structures as they relate to and affect the Texas bioenergy industry.

2.) Utilize the bioenergy study to develop a strategy to establish a stable bioenergy industry in Texas and encourage financial investment in renewable energy infrastructure to promote economic development and adequate energy resources in the state.

3.) Develop a process to ensure the pursuit of scientifically and economically viable bioenergy projects in the state. Identify the elements a bioenergy project must have to be successful and provide assistance to entrepreneurs and other stakeholders in evaluating proposed technologies and projects.

Texas QU chapters withdraw from Quail Unlimited, Form Quail Coalition.

Submitted

Quail Unlimited Chapters from across the state of Texas announced that they have unilaterally resigned from Quail Unlimited following prolonged issues with the national organization based in Edgefield, SC. The Texas Region has historically been the largest region for QU and has been responsible for as much as 30% of QU's national fundraising. For several years the Texas Chapters have been critical of administrative overhead and fund allocation by National QU. The alienation was compounded by continuing financial and leadership turmoil and reduction in services at QU.

On November 18, the Chairman of the Texas Council of Quail Unlimited, Tim Connolly of Wichita Falls announced his resignation from the Quail Unlimited Board of Directors. Connolly a non-paid director has been involved with quail conservation in the state for over 20 years and a vocal advocate for reform at QU.

"QU has some major financial issues and I wouldn't attribute all of their problems to the economy. A series of bad decisions has lead to the situation they are in today," Connolly said "Financial burdens weighing on QU include commitments to employee retirement plans, loans on the headquarters building from holding national events over the past four to five years and continuing to pay a staff of 24 employees."

Concurrent with the dissolution of the Texas QU Chapters, the leadership of each chapter voted unanimously to create Quail Coalition, Inc.

The process of incorporation was well underway by Park

Cities Quail; the Dallas based nonprofit who withdrew from QU in June '09. The group formed a Texas corporation and has applied for 501(c)3 status. Quail Coalition, Inc. anticipates 501(c)3 approval in mid-January and will be governed by a statewide group of volunteer directors.

"We are excited to be a part of Quail Coalition" said Joe Crafton, Chairman of Park Cities Quail. "We will start with over 3,000 committed quail hunters across Texas and leadership that has proven to be the most committed and accomplished among all sportsman conservation groups" "The money we have raised has been used here in Texas for non profits such as the Rolling Plains Quail Research Ranch. It has already made a difference" "This is a much better model. Our members have been very clear, more for quail conservation, less for administrative overhead."

New AgriLife Extension Associate for Cancer Prevention Hired

SAN ANGELO - Fighting cancer through education and early detection are the cornerstones of Marcie Owen's new job.

Owen, a veteran health educator, fills the new Texas AgriLife Extension Service position headquartered in the Texas AgriLife Research and Extension Center located just north of San Angelo on U.S. Highway 87.

Owen's job is one of four statewide positions funded by a grant from the Cancer Prevention and Research Institute of Texas. She will serve as the regional program support for AgriLife Extension agents to implement projects relating to cancer prevention, risk reduction and early detection. She also will coordinate and assist with AgriLife Extension's many ongoing health-related initiatives.

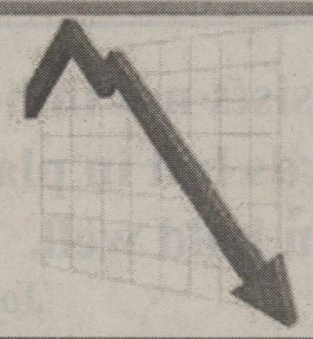

Owen earned a bachelor's degree in therapeutic recreation and a master's degree in occupational and adult education from Oklahoma State University. She also holds teaching certifications in elementary education grades one through eight, and pre-kindergarten through high school certification in special education, math and English as a second language.

Until she joined AgriLife Extension, Owen was employed by Shannon Medical Center in San Angelo where she was involved with initiating, developing and implementing school health programs for 12 schools in six school districts. In that role, she provided training and technical assistance to program staff, community organizations and academic professionals. She also developed school health tool kits and coordinated workshops and conferences.

Prior to her work with Shannon Medical Center, Owen taught in the Grape Creek and San Angelo Independent School Districts, and served as the executive director of the Children's Advocacy Center of the Concho Valley and as San Angelo's former Saint John's Hospital director of education.

Living with Celiac Disease Wheat-Free

Submitted By:
Kelly L. Thorp, MS
 County Extension Agent-FCS
 Texas AgriLife Extension-Sutton County

In 2008, it is estimated that some three million Americans have celiac disease. Those with celiac disease cannot tolerate the protein gluten that is found in wheat, rye, and barley. Gluten can also be found in oats if they are processed in the same plants that process wheat. Although it is sometimes called gluten intolerance, celiac disease is an intestinal disorder, so in reality, it cannot be a food intolerance.

For people with celiac disease, gluten damages the lining of the small intestine. The damaged intestine cannot absorb nutrients very well, which can lead to malnutrition. The symptoms of celiac disease include a painful rash, abdominal cramps, appetite loss, bloating, chronic diarrhea, joint pain, muscle cramps, weakness, and weight loss.

Because those with this lifelong disease cannot tolerate the gluten in wheat, they require a gluten-free eating plan. Once gluten is gone from meals, the small intestine can heal, which may take months or years. Once the intestine heals, nutrient absorption improves, symptoms disappear, and those with celiac disease can live a long, healthy life.

Those who have celiac disease must read food labels. Look for ingredients that contain gluten, such as: barley, rye, triticale; wheat (including durum, graham, semolina, kamut, spelt, emmer, faro); malt or malt flavoring (can be made from barley); malt vinegar (made from barley); and oats and oat products, which can be cross-contaminated with gluten-containing grains.

If you or a family member has celiac disease, here are some guidelines:

Eat grains and other starchy foods that do not contain gluten.

These foods include potatoes, buckwheat, corn, millet, nut flowers, quinoa, rice, and soy. Although oats contain the gluten protein, avenin, research shows that pure oats in moderation (1 cup, cooked) are safe.

Shop for gluten-free (GF) products in the marketplace. Dedicated GF bakery products (breads, cookies, cakes, and pies) are available in some grocery store chains. Major food brands offer GF lines (flours, soups, pizza, lasagna, macaroni and cheese, crackers, and pretzels).

Many restaurants have GF menus available on request, so do not be afraid to ask your server if they have such a menu.

Carefully read the ingredient listings on food labels.

Pack gluten-free foods to take with you when eating away from home.

Consult a registered dietitian who can help you develop a gluten-free eating plan. To locate a registered dietitian in your area, for a referral to a registered dietitian, or for additional food and nutrition information, check out the American Dietetic Associations website: www.eatright.org.

Visit the Celiac Campaign website at: <http://celiac.nih.gov> and the National Institute of Diabetes, Digestive, and Kidney Diseases, National Institutes of Health website at: <http://www.digestive.niddk.nih.gov/ddiseases/pubs/celiac/index.htm>.

Genes for Drought-Tolerance, Aflatoxin May Mingle to Boost Corn Production

By Kathleen Phillips

COLLEGE STATION – Scientists plan to put two and two together in a study that will likely yield improved U.S. corn quality and yields.

Two traits that impact corn will be examined by two researchers hoping to use basic scientific discoveries to improve products at the farm level.

Drought tolerance and aflatoxin resistance are the targets of the study by Texas AgriLife Research scientists who have been awarded a $500,000 grant for the project by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The idea is to use basic science which identified the drought- and aflatoxin-related genes in the lab of Dr. Michael Kolomiets and apply them in corn breeding through the expertise of Dr. Seth Murray. Kolomiets is a plant pathologist and Murray, the project's lead investigator, is a corn genetics researcher.

"We plan to use basic knowledge we learned from previous studies and translate that through breeding corn for drought tolerance and aflatoxin resistance," Kolomiets said.

The "basic knowledge" stems from discoveries Kolomiets has made in researching a 13-member family of genes called LOX, or lipoxygenase.

He said one LOX family member is connected to a plant's drought response while another is linked to aflatoxin development.

"A geneticist basically has to break something to see how it works," Kolomiets said. "So in this case, we were able to shut down each gene in the lab to decipher what its function is for the plant biology and the plant's ability to respond to environmental stresses."

It seems that one of the LOX genes is "hijacked" when droughty conditions are ripe for the Aspergillus fungi to ride into the plant with its toxins. Yet another member of the gene family is the reason for plant aging and death once the plant is under severe drought stress.

Lipids – the fats and oils in plants like corn, soybeans, peanuts, tree nuts and cotton – are sought out, it seems, by pathogens like fungi. So, Kolomiets reasons, preventing the gene hijacking – via a mutation of the gene that has been shut down – will help corn plants avoid problems with these weather-related maladies.

Drought is a recurring problem for corn producers – especially in the southern U.S.

and throughout other parts of the world. Aflatoxin, which becomes prevalent in drought years, is a serious issue because it renders corn inedible for humans as well as for many livestock, depending on the content level. Both of these concerns cause a blow to the economy when the corn supply is cut by lower yields or poor quality, the researchers pointed out.

"Loss in Texas from mycotoxins (mostly aflatoxin) was $13 million in 2008 – the highest in the nation," according to the researchers.

Murray and Kolomiets will begin the four-year project in January. They will be assisted by Dr. Tom Isakiet, Texas AgriLife Extension Service plant pathologist, who will train graduate students for the project.

Gov. Perry: Washington Must Exercise Restraint with Taxpayer Dollars

SAN ANTONIO – Gov. Rick Perry today called for increased fiscal restraint at the federal level and the strengthening of taxpayer protection through the passage of an amendment to the U.S. Constitution requiring Congress to balance the federal budget.

"I am convinced that a constitutional limit on Washington's spending sprees and irresponsible borrowing is the only boundary they will understand and heed," Gov. Perry said. "Otherwise, the hard work that Texas and states like ours have done to make prudent fiscal decisions will be washed away by Washington's growing avalanche of excess."

The governor noted that while Texas has demonstrated a strong commitment to fiscal accountability by setting budget priorities that have helped keep the state's tax burden low and economy strong, the federal government continues to burden future generations with an unprecedented and unmanageable national debt. This irresponsible spending has accelerated in recent years, with Congress pressing for massive expansions of Medicaid, imposing cap-and-tax restrictions, and forcing other policy mandates that threaten the economic prosperity of every state. Last month, Congress voted to raise the national debt limit to $12.4 trillion.

As it stands, the national debt equates to a burden of more than $39,000 per person.

The governor today also sent letters to fellow governors and Texas lawmakers asking for their support in calling on Congress to pass an amendment to the U.S. Constitution requiring a balanced federal budget.

"We are responsible to the taxpayers of our states to budget and lead in a fiscally responsible manner in an effort to keep our states economically competitive and our businesses and citizens prosperous," Gov. Perry wrote to fellow governors. "Yet all the responsible and difficult decisions we make will be for nothing if the federal government is allowed to continue to spend our nation into an inescapable pit of debt."

Gov. Perry is committed to protecting Texas taxpayers from runaway spending. This week, the governor also proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution requiring a two-thirds vote of the Legislature to increase taxes, and requiring the Legislature to limit growth in the state budget to no more than growth in population and inflation combined. The governor has also called for the establishment of a statewide inspector general to maximize cost efficiency and effectiveness at state agencies.

Texas Takes No. 1 Destination Spot in U.S. For Fifth Year in a Row

CHICAGO--PRNewswire- More individuals and families chose to settle deep in the heart of Texas than anywhere in the United States in 2009, according to Allied Van Lines' 42nd Annual Magnet States Report released today.

For the fifth year in a row, Texas outshined every other state and took the lead as the No. 1 destination state in 2009 based on Allied's report, which tracks U.S. migration patterns.

Texas realized the highest net relocation gain (inbound moves minus outbound moves performed by Allied Van Lines, one of the world's largest moving companies) of almost 2,000 in 2009, slightly higher than last year's gain of about 1,900. Arizona placed second with a net relocation gain of 566, followed closely by North Carolina in third place with a gain of 564. Colorado and Florida placed fourth and fifth respectively for states with the largest net relocation gains.

"We moved a wide variety of people here this year - from singles to families to retirees and all from various backgrounds, which makes a lot of sense. Texas is just so diverse and welcoming to different cultural and ethnic groups," said Ben Hurwitz, president of Westheimer Transfer & Storage, Houston, Texas, and one of the longest-standing domestic and international agents of Allied Van Lines, a leading moving company worldwide. "We also did a lot of corporate relocations this year for some very large companies based in Texas. And that's not surprising since we're such a business friendly state, too."

The Lone Star State racked up almost 8,800 total shipments and ranked second behind California which had almost 11,000 total shipments and claimed the title of "most mobile state" (the highest volume of inbound and outbound shipments by international mover Allied Van Lines), followed by Florida in third place with just over 8,600 total shipments.

"Texas remains the best place in America to live, work and raise a family," said Bill Hammond, president of the Texas Association of Business. "Our business climate, diverse culture, and unique sense of independence make our state the envy of the nation. Companies like Allied Van Lines, which help relocate families to our great state, are essential to the Lone Star State continuing to shine."

Opinions of Texas have changed in recent years, according to Bill Jones, chairman of the Texas Association of REALTORS®.

"Texas seems to be the cheap seats but with a great view," Jones said. "Just 20 years ago, our wonderful state wasn't the first choice for many people. But now people from all over are noticing we have everything you could possibly want - from reasonably priced housing, to plenty of land for business and housing development, to a wide variety of fine arts and recreational opportunities."

Outbound States

Michigan experienced the highest net relocation losses (more outbound than inbound shipments), followed by Illinois, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and California. A troubled auto industry and housing market most likely continued to negatively affect relocations to Michigan, as Allied Van Lines' outbound shipments of 2,210 were about double its inbound shipments of 1,019 for the state. Illinois experienced the second largest net relocation loss with 942 more outbound than inbound moves, closely followed by Pennsylvania with a net relocation loss of 854, and California with a loss of 459.
