

Eyes of Texas may have blinked a bit at Alamo

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Any Texan worth his ringtail lizard-skin cowboy boots and Willie Nelson albums knows better than to smear the legend of Davy Crockett.

So what's this?

A past president of the Texas State Historical Association, no less, saying that Crockett might have surrendered and was executed at the Alamo?

And adding that the legendary Tennessean might have had a dismal career in Congress, failed financially and was motivated to go to the Alamo for less than courageous liberty-loving reasons?

But Dan Kilgore — author of a new book entitled "How Did Davy Die?" — said he's got evidence to back up them fightin' words.

"Crockett's heroism seemed to expand in direct proportion to the distance news had to travel about him," said Kilgore, a Corpus Christi accountant and history buff.

Legend and the history books have it that Crockett, a famous bear hunter, frontiersman and congressman, came to Texas to fight for Texas independence and died a heroic death at the Alamo.

The first published account to suggest that Crockett might have been captured instead of dying in battle came in 1975 in the translation of the diary of one of Mexican Gen. Santa Anna's staff members tragic finale to a life that was essentially a failure in achievement of worldly goals" during the Alamo siege.

The diary of Lt. Jose Enrique de la Pena included a paragraph that indicated Crockett surrendered or was captured and then executed when the Alamo was seized on March 6, 1836.

That notation aroused righteous indignation in the Texas press and public.

And there's more bad news, folks.

Kilgore said in his book that there is a preponderance of evidence to substantiate the de la Pena notation. Kilgore said six other Mexican soldiers support de la Pena's story that Crockett was one of several Texans paraded before an unmerciful Santa Anna, who ordered the Texans quickly shot.

Among those is Ramon Martinez Caro, Santa Anna's personal secretary.

"Statements from these seven Mexican soldiers were mutually corroborative and were recorded independently under widely differing circumstances," Kilgore emphasized.

"Their accounts have come to light over a long period of time, several having surfaced only recently. Any one of them, standing alone, could be subject to question, but considered as a whole, the statements provide stronger documentation than can be claimed for any other incident during the battle."

Kilgore goes on to contend that Crockett's death at the Alamo "came as a surprise. He died a poor man with an undistinguished record as a congressman," added Kilgore.

"Throughout Crockett's rise to prominence as a national figure, political enemies defeated him at every turn, although both major parties used him as a symbol at various times and employed the national press to establish that symbol."

Kilgore said Crockett actually came to Texas because of the shame he suffered when he was defeated in his 1835 re-election bid to Congress.

The chief factor in Crockett's defeat was his "passionate opposition" to Andrew Jackson, Kilgore said. He pointed out that James Shackford, a Crockett biographer, believed that hatred may well have had a bearing on Crockett's decision to go to the Alamo.

Crockett found himself on the opposite side of the political fence with Sam Houston, commander-in-chief of the dominant Texas forces and a Jackson political ally. Kilgore said Houston, however, was said to be unable to exercise control over the command at the Alamo.

"Shackford believed that Crockett joined the Alamo defenders to demonstrate further opposition to the Jackson forces that had defeated him in Tennessee and not with any idea of dying for the liberty of Texas," added Kilgore.

Soviets down jet

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei N. Kosygin confirmed today that Soviet interceptors forced a South Korean jetliner to land on Soviet territory and said two of the plane's passengers were dead, Japanese sources said.

It was not immediately known how they died. Japanese officials here earlier said the Soviet Foreign Ministry was keeping them informed about the incident.

Fifty-one of the 110 persons aboard the Korean Air Lines Boeing 707 were reported to be Japanese. The plane had been bound from Paris to Seoul via Anchorage, Alaska.

The sources said Kosygin confirmed to visiting Japanese Agriculture Minister Ichiro Nakagawa the plane was now on Soviet territory and that two other passengers were injured.

The nationalities of the dead and injured were not known. American sources reported that the Soviet Foreign Ministry had told U.S. officials no Americans were believed to be on the aircraft.

The Korean Air Lines Boeing 707 jet, en route from Paris to Seoul with a refueling stop in Anchorage, Alaska, was forced down Thursday after it entered Soviet airspace near the Finnish border close to the Arctic Circle, U.S. officials said.

Airline officials in Paris said the plan carried 97 passengers and a crew of 13, including nine Europeans. It said there were no Americans aboard.

U.S. officials said they had heard speculation that shots may have been fired in connection with the landing, but one said "there is no way to confirm" any such reports.

Airline officials, citing State Department information, said all persons aboard Korean Air Lines flight 902, were safe. The plane left Paris at 1:39 p.m. (7:39 a.m. EST) Thursday.

The South Korean Foreign Ministry said today that information it had indicated the plane made an emergency landing after it violated Soviet territory but "not deliberately."

A spokesman for KAL said today that the airline would send another Boeing 707 to Helsinki, Finland, tonight to stand by to pick up the passengers and crew when they are released.

Meanwhile, U.S. officials were trying to piece together just what happened.

There was no explanation of why the plane entered Soviet air space, but administration officials said radar reports seemed to confirm the intrusion.

A special meeting of the President Carter's National Security Council was convened at 6:30 p.m. shortly after Carter was informed of the incident, associate White House press secretary Jerrold Schecter said.

Later in the evening, Carter was given a 20-minute briefing, White House officials said.

U.S. officials attempted to play down the their involvement in efforts to locate the aircraft and maintain contact with the Soviet and the Seoul governments. The two countries do not maintain diplomatic relations.

Blue kids; no candy

WASHINGTON (AP) — School cafeterias would have to delay selling candy, chewing gum, soft drinks and other snacks until all meals for the day have been served if a new Agriculture Department proposal is adopted.

"We are proposing to prohibit the sale of these foods because we believe they have contributed to a decline in the consumption of nutritious foods in school and to reduced participation in the school lunch and breakfast programs," Assistant Secretary Carol Foreman said today in a speech prepared for the Newspaper Food Editors and Writers Association in San Jose, Calif.

In general, the foods that would be prohibited from sale before the final meal include candy, soda drinks, frozen desserts and chewing gum.

The proposal is aimed at eliminating the sale of sweets that are not part of the regular school cafeteria menus for breakfast or lunch.

Munitions blast kills four

CLEBURNE, Texas (AP) — Authorities face the grisly task today of searching for remains of four persons killed when a series of explosions leveled a complex of three small buildings at a munitions plant here Thursday afternoon.

"All they have over there is a big hole," said Johnson County Sheriff Stuart Huffman.

Witnesses said the force of the explosion sheared foliage from nearby trees, shattered windows and buckled garage doors of houses 200 yards away. Mrs. Vernon Weis, who lives more than 300 yards from the center of the blasts, said her house was jarred from its foundation.

The remains of the victims were scattered as far as 400 yards away, authorities said.

Fireman said the explosions sent a column of smoke billowing hundreds of feet into the air. The smoke could be seen in Fort Worth more than 20 miles north of here.

Authorities, combing the 430-acre site, called off the search at dark Thursday for remains of the victims. But Samanie said the search would resume this morning.

Beeson and Dr. Arthur Raines, Johnson County medical examiner, have the grim job of identifying the bodies from collected remains.

Witnesses said there were three explosions, a big one followed by two smaller ones. However, Samanie and Cleburne Fire Chief Red McVicker said there were two blasts.

Mrs. Weis said she was in a bedroom and protected by a wall of her stone house when the first blast shattered her windows, twisted her house on its foundation and damaged the roof. She said the force of the explosion threw her onto the bed.

W.D. Dogget witnessed the 1973 blast at the GOEX plant and had just returned to his nearby home when the plant exploded again Thursday. He said the concussion this time was twice as bad as the 1973 explosion.

Mrs. Billie Glass, a worker in the leveled powder room, said she owes her life to her son's illness. She left the RDX section of the plant that morning after school officials said her young son was running a high fever.

Another worker, Patricia Layton, quit two days before the 1973 explosion, but went back to work at the plant eight months ago. She would have also been in the blast area if she had not taken her son to baseball practice less than an hour before Thursday's explosions.

Police Chief Richard Mills said today that his investigation shows there "is nothing to preclude natural death" as the reason 65-year-old Fred Wayland "Shag" Broadnax was found dead in his home Thursday.

The body of Broadnax was discovered lying in his living room floor at 1015 E. Gordon by his niece Mrs. Lorena Curlee who is visiting from California.

Broadnax was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Venora Cole at approximately 7 p.m. Mrs. Cole has ordered an autopsy on Broadnax to determine cause of death.

Broadnax was reportedly found with an elastic bandage wrapped around his neck.

Although at this time foul play has not completely been ruled out, Chief Mills said so far police have found nothing which "would indicate anything other than natural death."

The Chief said that Broadnax had been in ill health and that the bandage around his neck "may have had something to do with medication."

Chief Mills said a full investigation of the death will continue. However, he added that "at this point, I have very strong feelings that the cause of death will be related to natural causes."

He said police will know more

Consolidating failures

They never give up. Officials of Health Education and Welfare (HEW) agency are now advocating another approach to nationalizing health care. This time, health programs for the poor is the new approach.

The program proposes government sponsorship of groups of 20 to 30 physicians. They would be based in municipal hospitals in large and medium sized cities. Also advocated is the establishment of a large number of new community health centers staffed by smaller groups of physicians.

Ruth Hanft, HEW's deputy assistant for planning, calls the program "Urban Initiative" and says the planning has been underway for a year. The White House and the Office of Management and Budget now have a preliminary outline for the project.

The heart of the proposal Mrs. Hanft says, is the establishment of physician groups which would each serve about 30,000 residents in poverty areas. This would include people whose health costs are paid by Medicaid and the working poor who have difficulty paying medical bills.

Payment for the physician groups would come from Medicaid or from federal subsidies. Mrs. Hanft estimates the cost to reach about $1 billion by mid-1980s. She sees near 22 million urban poor getting help from the program.

"The basic reason for this program simply is that Medicaid isn't doing the job," Mrs. Hanft concluded.

HEW officials state that their agency has the authority to establish the program, but the approval of Congress is needed to acquire the necessary added funding.

We think Mrs. Hanft's conclusion is correct. Medicaid is not doing the job it is supposed to do. However, it is doing a real job on the taxpayers and it becomes difficult to believe that a change in course and pouring more money into this bureaucracy will solve anything.

True, it will advance the cause of socialized medicine and give us a great big push down the road to disaster already posted by Great Britain.

It will gain the support of our bleeding heart brethren who are always more than willing to use other people's money for their charitable inclinations. It will also help assure the growth of HEW and enhance the career opportunities for dedicated growth-oriented agency officials.

Whether or not it will be any more successful than Medicaid in reaching stated goals is highly unlikely. The present track record for Washington bureaucracy leaves a good deal to be desired. And HEW so far has not detracted from the level of esteem gained. We hope Congress does not get snowed on this new ambitious program.

Surprise! We will live

"Wanted: A Journalism That Understands Technology." That was the title of an address delivered recently by syndicated columnist John Chamberlain at the National Issues Seminar for Editorial Page Editors held in Washington, D.C. The text of the address has been published in booklet form by the United States Industrial Council Educational Foundation under the same title.

The purpose of the address was to substitute facts for myths and, in the process, debunk some of the environmental fantasies which, combined, have had such an influence in holding this country back when it should be moving ahead.

The press, Chamberlain contends, has too often been guilty of perpetuating environmental fables, "not because of reportorial venality, but because of the nature of news. It is too much to hope that the average reporter will know enough to discount claims about the poisonous qualities of plutonium as compared to botulin or arsenic when he is racing to meet a deadline on a speech by Ralph Nader. But a longer view on editorial pages would have done much to mitigate the damage caused by the prime contributors to the Age of Fable."

Why, Chamberlain asks for instance, isn't the name of John J. McKetta known in every newspaper office and broadcasting office in the land? And why isn't Petr Beckmann's "The Health Hazards of Not Going Nuclear" must reading in editorial sanctums everywhere?

Professor McKetta heads the Department of Chemical Engineering at the University of Texas in Austin, while Dr. Beckmann teaches electrical engineering at the University of Colorado at Boulder.

The Chamberlain address is, of course, too lengthy for us to give it little more than a superficial treatment here in the limited space available; however, in view of the current intense local interest in auto pollution, we found his comments with respect to the findings of Professor McKetta particularly fascinating and thought that, perhaps, our readers might find them of interest, too.

In brief, Chamberlain said, McKetta had determined that some 270 million tons of carbon monoxide are spread annually by man, mostly from cars in the northern hemisphere. But, what the researcher found puzzling for a time, he said, was the fact that the carbon monoxide levels in the northern and southern hemispheres was the same.

How could this be, McKetta asked, when there were nine times as many cars in the northern hemisphere as in the southern? He found the answer when the results of some agricultural experiments became known.

Fungi in the soil, it was discovered, use carbon monoxide in their own metabolism. Thus, when we spew forth car exhaust, we are actually enriching the soil. There happens to be more land north of the Equator, so maybe, McKetta reasoned, the nine to one car ratio favoring the north is a good thing.

"This does not mean that we should encourage the sale of defective carburetors in Los Angeles," Chamberlain noted, "but it does tell us that we can stop worrying about total asphyxiation all over the country."

Similarly with oxides of nitrogen, which environmentalists fear will do us in, McKetta found.

While certainly not advocating spreading these oxides wantonly in crowded areas, Chamberlain went on to point out, McKetta has shown, without doubt, that 97 percent of the oxides of nitrogen in the air comes from the decomposition of organic matter. "Nature has a cycle: the nitrates go into the oceans as runoff. They feed the plankton, which, in turn, feed the fish. Oxides of nitrogen, then, can be a blessing."

As for air pollution in general, Chamberlain concluded, McKetta found that man cannot hold a candle to nature. Three volcanoes — Krakotoa in 1883, Mt. Katmai in 1912, and Hekla in 1947 — put more pollution into the atmosphere than man has ever put there since the beginning of his time on earth. "Sometimes," says Dr. McKetta, "he thinks nature is laughing at us" and our fears. "Surprise," he says, "we are going to live!"

Interested readers can obtain the booklet, "Wanted: A Journalism That Understands Technology," containing the full text of Chamberlain's address by writing to the United States Industrial Council, P.O. Box 2686, Home Federal Building, Nashville, Tenn. 37219.

Clearer concept

The Washington Daily News

In talking with educators today, all too often we have a feeling that when it comes to any discussion of local problems in schools, they tend to hold back or to be reluctant to discuss the problems openly and clearly.

We fail to understand why this is so, and to be as honest as we can, perhaps our feeling is not realistic. Perhaps when educators seem to gloss over some matter that we see as a problem, perhaps it is not the problem that we imagine.

Now, talk about discipline in our schools, and educators seem so often to want to leave the impression that discipline is not the major subject or to want to leave the impression that discipline is not the major subject that a parent thinks it is.

Talk about certain attitudes, and the educator so often seems to feel that educational directions belong to the educators and that the parents are not knowledgeable enough to understand the subject fully.

What we are really trying to say is that too often there seems to be a roadblock today between the educators and the parents of those to be educated. Somehow there is an invisible curtain there, and it should not be so. We need to wipe away the cobwebs so that we all meet on common ground.

Let restraints and reluctance to discuss openly and freely be resolved. We are told that so often there is the tendency to see racial overtones in discussions between parents and educators. That should not be so.

We have come a long way in race relations. Yes, we still have a ways to go, but we are on our way.

Whatever problems exist today in education should be laid on the table for all to see and to know. It is no time to hold back, be reluctant, or for any of us to underestimate the other.

By Richard L. Lesh, President Chamber of Commerce of the United States

WASHINGTON — Would you be surprised to hear that:

- The "richest" half of America's taxpayers pay 93 percent of the personal income tax?
- Loopholes and fringe benefits are of most value to the low-to-middle income group?
- Americans owe more to their government than a medieval serf owed to his overlord?

It's all true. These are just a few of the iconoclastic revelations contained in a mind-blowing article on tax policy appearing in the March, 1978, edition of "Harper's" magazine.

The article was written by Paul Craig Roberts, who is both college professor and Senate staffer. His simple thesis is that we are all being taken by a parasitic government in unholily alliance with good-hearted tax "reformers" who place their faith in a few simplistic slogans without ever checking the figures.

Mr. Roberts first demolishes the myth that the low income group is most heavily taxed, while the rich escape. All you have to do he points out, is examine the data published by the Internal Revenue Service. You learn that taxpayers in the bottom 50 percent by income, pay only 7 percent of the personal income tax, while those in the top 50 percent pay 93 percent. Is this a fluke caused by heavy taxes on the low-middle group? No. The highest 1 percent pays 19 percent. This hardly sounds like soaking the poor for the benefit of the rich.

Furthermore, he says, if you counted untaxed aid to the "poor," such as food stamps, housing subsidies, and other forms of welfare, you would find that "their real income exceeds that of many taxpayers."

Tax "cuts" to "help the poor" are popular with the government for two reasons, he says. First, because the poor don't pay any taxes, so it costs the government nothing. And second, because inflation soon moves people out of the lower brackets and into the range where they do owe taxes.

What about those famous "loopholes" that are said to allow the rich to avoid paying their fair share? "Fringe benefits are a larger percentage of a $15,000 salary than they are of a $100,000 salary, and so are itemized deductions," Roberts points out. "deductions are the primary income shelter for those in the middle to lower tax brackets, where most of the income is," he says. And that is why the government wants to eliminate the deductions, so it can get its greedy hands on more of your money.

"The greatest loophole of all in our income-tax system," Roberts says, "works for the benefit of government. It is the loophole that allows government to use inflation to increase taxes on constant and even declining levels of purchasing power without having to legislate higher tax rates."

Over the last 10 years, wages have just kept even with inflation. But wages plus taxes have not, because "the government's revenues don't simply rise by the amount of the inflation, they rise by 1.65 times the rate of inflation" thanks to the progressive tax code.

Worst of all, says Roberts, those who feed at the public trough are not even worried by the prospect of taxes so high that they wreck the economy, because that would call for new government aid programs and more government employees to run them.

What can be done? A flat, across-the-board tax cut large enough to compensate for inflation plus the push into higher brackets would help temporarily. Another possible solution being discussed is "indexing" the tax code for inflation, so taxes remain the same on the same purchasing power. Still another is constitutional limit on the total amount of national income that may be taken by the government.

These alternatives are worth a lot of thought and discussion. One thing I can guarantee you: If we don't save ourselves, no one else will do it for us.

Gyps against small business

Sylvia Porter

(Last of five columns)

The scam is a hit-and-run swindle designed to make a big killing all in one shot from countless thousands of small business victims — and then to scam. Most scam swindles are continual, operate year after year with slight variations.

If you're lured into a scam deal, you, the victim get nothing — not defective office supplies, not a police certificate to put on your auto's windshield in the hope of avoiding a parking ticket, not even the illusion (albeit totally erroneous) that you are helping minority workers by contributing to a phony civil rights organization. Just zilch, with the exception of a sock in the bank account.

Their whereabouts are still unknown.

And the retailers were merely half the intended victims. The other half were suppliers, for the company sent out hundreds of orders for merchandise to manufacturers, jobbers, wholesalers, covering products ranging from motor boats to diamond rings — all to be delivered by June 25 to the firm's warehouse.

Payment was to be C.O.D. The warehouse turned out to be the ground floor of a tenement in Queens, New York, which the firm had rented a few days before. The long July 4 weekend was obviously the target date for the two halves of the scam to come together with a potential take of several million dollars.

To illustrate with a recent New York City-based scam:

Reliable Sales Co. (that is the real name but it wasn't set up shop in April 1977 at 2 Penn Plaza in Manhattan, a fancy sounding address which the promoters obtained from a space rental firm for $75 a month. The scam operators had some art work made up and catalogs printed, then contracted for a mailing of 18,000 catalogs in late May-early June to retailers across the nation, primarily drug stores and camera shops. The catalogs offered consumer goods of every description — cosmetics, crayons, cologne, cameras, clocks, TVs, cat food, crackers, candy bars, coffee makers, calculators, etc.

Although quick work by the local Better Business Bureau and the postal inspectors foiled a big take, the principals were tipped along the way — and the law could not collar them.

Don't get caught in either half of a scam:

- Automatically suspect bargain prices. How can this company offer me such a bargain — and why should it?
- Ask your normal supply channels what they know about the company and call telephone information in the firm's city to find out if it's a new listing. Often, phone operators can tell you if the listing is less than three months old.
- Investigate addresses. "Reliable" could not have had a warehouse at 2 Penn Plaza. Where then? Get an address and check it.
- Ask manufacturers you trust if they have heard of this "wholesaler" and request references. "Reliable" did not have any good references and refused to supply any when requested. It had five bank accounts in different New York City banks, none open more than a few months. Longevity is often more revealing than a balance.
- Look for inconsistencies in the catalog. Since when is a "dealers' confidential price list" mailed unsolicited with a bulk mail permit? The catalog offers every type of consumer goods, yet describes the firm as "wholesaler to the trade." What trade?
- Don't underrate your own creditworthiness by believing their line about shipping on "open account" only after you have established your credentials. Why should a mail order solicitation insist on having your money "up front"?

Hundreds of items were priced at up to 50 per cent BELOW normal wholesale prices. Under the terms of purchase, a minimum order was $250, with no price changes if orders were in by June 20, the "extended sale date"; a deposit of 25 per cent was required with all orders but if you paid in full with the order, you could deduct 2 per cent from your check; shipping charges were 5 per cent of the gross order. And the firm's return policy was generous:

"All merchandise carries a complete guarantee and is returnable for a full refund if dissatisfied for any reason."

There was only one hitch: what was returnable to whom? Nothing was ever shipped! Reliable Sales was gone from its prestigious New York City address before the end of June 1977. On July 1, the U.S. Postal Inspectors obtained arrest warrants for the principals. They also had skipped from their Manhattan apartments.

Petition for fired educator

Nearly 1,000 students, teachers and other concerned Detroit citizens are demanding the reinstatement of a veteran educator, Dr. Anne B. Parks, fired March 11, 1978, for refusing to pay forced dues to a union of which she is not a member.

Leading the petition drive is student Edward Sweeney, who wants to put Parks, a guidance counselor and social studies teacher with over 40 years' experience, back on the job at Detroit's Cody High School. Helped by friends and fellow students, Sweeney has collected 993 signatures at last count — including the names of one-third of the teachers at Cody High.

While the supreme court ruled 6-3 that the "agency shop" (forced collection of union dues from non-union members) was legal, it also unanimously ruled that such funds could be used only for collective bargaining, not for ideological or political purposes. The court then remanded the case to Michigan's courts, which are still trying to determine what portion of union dues, if any, is used on actual representation in bargaining.

Parks offered to comply with the supreme court's decision by putting her "agency fees" in escrow until the court decides how much of the money is being illegally spent for politics. The offer was rejected, and the DFT demanded that the Detroit Board of Education fire Parks. The board caved in to the union demands.

"The many who signed this petition," he said, "represent the vast majority of Americans who believe that no teacher — or anyone else — should be fired simply for refusing to pay into Big Labor's political slush funds." According to a poll by the respected Roper Organization, 69 percent of Americans are opposed to forcing public employees to support a union in order to work for the government.

"Contrary to all its rhetoric about 'helping' teachers," Larson said, "the DFT's heartless order to fire Dr. Parks rides roughshod over the wishes of teachers and students alike."

The efforts of Sweeney and his friends respond to the quiet dedication of Dr. Parks, who told the youth not to petition on her behalf out of concern for his schoolwork. When Dr. Parks learned that she was to be dismissed in the busy period before Easter, she informed the school administration that she was willing to work with the students until the spring recess without compensation. Not only was the offer flatly rejected — the union had Dr. Parks barred from school grounds.

The firing of Parks was another chapter in a decade-long struggle featured in "Reader's Digest" (November, 1975) and later fought in the United States Supreme Court.

"The students rallying to Dr. Parks' defense aren't experts on the legal apparatus that allows union bosses to have teachers fired," said Larson. "They only

On equality

By RICHARD L. EVANS (The Freeman)

No doubt all the trees in the forest fundamentally have equal rights and privileges. But they don't all grow to the same height, and it would seem rather foolish to cut the tall trees down to the level of the lesser ones to satisfy the theoretical demands of an unnatural formula. And it would seem just as preposterous ruthlessly to pull the short trees up to the height of the tall ones. If we did, it would mean their uprooting — they would wither and die, as all things do unless they grow by themselves from their own roots.

And so, to those who would like to eliminate differences among men, it should be said that if it were possible to do so, progress would cease.

Equality cannot therefore mean to bring all men low. It must mean opportunity for each man to rise to those heights to which his energies and abilities will take him — and allow all men the same privilege — to the end that progress may continue, and that thereby all will find benefit.

Equality which means less than this is not equality at all — it is slavery.

'Homophobia' grips Boston

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Homosexuals upset by a sensational child molestation case are trying to convince the public that there is nothing inherently wrong with sex between men and boys.

The effort, led by a group called the Boston-Boise Committee, is in reaction to what homosexuals say is a growing wave of "homophobia" in a city where they once felt they could live without harassment.

Thomas Reeves, 39, a Boston-Boise leader, said the group was upset with what it felt was sensationalized news coverage of the arrest of 24 men for alleged sexual contact with adolescent boys at a house in nearby Revere, the indictment of the men and what it says has been the exploitation of the case by District Attorney Garrett Byrne.

"Boston had a reputation until this happened of being one of three or four cities in the country where gay people could live and be left alone," Reeves said. "I know people who are leaving. I thought this was a place where I could be open and myself. Now I'm beginning to wonder."

Boston-Boise has protested various police activities it says are aimed at homosexuals, but its most explosive issue is "boy-love" — sexual relations between adult men and adolescent boys.

Bob Wellington, art director of the Bay Community News, said: "Most of us who are on the committee had intergenerational sex when we were teenagers. The only people we ever made contact with were older gay men. We couldn't find any kids our own age. I was so frustrated that I was very happy to meet another gay person."

Boston-Boise has not officially endorsed man-boy sex, but its leaders say such encounters are a fact of growing up for many teenagers. Until now, however, homosexuals have studiously avoided bringing up this subject in public.

"It appears that this is the beginning of a generalized attack on the gay community," said Edward Hougen, the group's co-director and pastor of a homosexual church. "So we had to step in. If we had kept quiet because this is an emotional issue, there would be no end to it."

The group, which put "Boise" in its name to recall prosecutions of homosexuals in Idaho in the 1950s.

Since then, the 120-member group has protested a hotline set up by the district attorney for tips about homosexual activity and picketed a library where plainclothesmen arrested homosexuals in the men's room.

Reeves, a history professor at Roxbury Community College, says he "is the group's only 'boy lover.'"

"I feel it is important to say it is possible to be a man and have a variety of relationships with adolescents, including sex, and still be an ethical, upstanding individual," he said. "Those relationships can be beneficial, and there is nothing wrong with adolescents and men having sex. Sex is not a vile, awful thing. Sex is loving and caring."

Reeves, who has an adopted, bisexual 19-year-old son and lives with a 28-year-old man, says: "Boys between the ages of 14 and 16 just need sex all the time. They need to get it out of their systems. Some adolescents have a need to actively seek and seduce older men and do so regularly."

19 bodies lie entombed in No. 9 mine

FARMINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — The bodies of 19 men will lie entombed forever in the No. 9 mine here.

Against the wishes of the dead men's widows, the Consolidation Coal Co. has decided to cease recovery efforts, 10 years and $11 million after explosions ripped through the shafts and killed 78 miners.

And millions of tons of coal will remain unmined because of federal and state closure orders and a miners' taboo against taking coal when the bodies of their brethren remain inside.

R.E. Samples, Consol's chairman and chief executive officer, announced Wednesday the company would halt recovery efforts because deteriorating working conditions made it unlikely that the remaining 19 bodies would ever be recovered or the cause of the blasts found.

"This brings to a close over nine years of treacherous recovery work during which 59 bodies were recovered," Samples said.

He noted that a 1974 agreement with the families of the victims called for recovery efforts to go on only so long as it was "safe, reasonable, feasible and practical to do so."

"We have long since gone well beyond that point," Samples said.

But 19 widows disagree.

"It was their negligence that killed them, and I think it's their job to recover them so we can have a proper burial," said Sarah Kaznoski, widow of Pete Kaznoski Sr.

Moro's family pleads for trade

ROME (AP) — Aldo Moro's wife and children appealed to the government today to negotiate with his kidnapers, but the ruling Christian Democratic Party's chief parliamentary allies urged rejection of his captors' demand for release of jailed terrorists in exchange for the former premier.

Premier Giulio Andreotti's government, which has refused so far to deal with the kidnapers from the Red Brigades, made no immediate comment on the plea. Meanwhile, the cabinet was meeting to discuss an ultimatum received from the kidnapers Thursday.

The family in a statement appealed to the government to "take a realistic attitude and declare availability to ascertain terms" for his release.

It said Moro's wife Eleonora appealed personally Thursday to leaders of the government and the Christian Democratic Party, of which her husband is the president.

Il Popolo, the Christian Democratic Party newspaper, said the picture was "evidence" Moro is alive, and "there exists no doubt about the authenticity of the message" that accompanied it.

Christian Democratic officials said the party secretary-general, Benigno Zaccagnini, also received another letter from Moro Thursday night, but they refused to disclose its contents. They said the signature appeared to be genuine.

Andreotti and other leaders of the government party had met until 2 a.m. discussing the situation, but there was no word of any decision. Previously they rejected repeated appeals from Moro to exchange him for jailed terrorists, contending that he was acting under duress.

Press reports today said Interior Minister Francesco Cossiga threatened to resign if the government bowed to the terrorists' demand.

The Communists, Social Democrats and Republicans, three of the six parties making up Andreotti's parliamentary majority, called on the government to continue to reject the kidnapers' demands.

The "state cannot compromise on principles and laws on which the national community and civilized living rest," said a statement from the Communists, who the ultra-leftist Red Brigades denounce for cooperating with the Christian Democrats.

The Social Democrats said: "Democratic institutions cannot enter into a pact with those who spill blood on the streets day after day."

Moro's family, some of his friends and some intellectuals and churchmen reportedly have urged the government to relent in its opposition to negotiate with the kidnapers. Some small political factions to the left of the Communists also have asked the government to negotiate.

Il Popolo, the Christian Democratic newspaper, said "we hope and want that a way out could be found," and "every possible attempt" should be made to save Moro's life. But the newspaper took no stand on negotiations with the kidnapers.

The ultimatum spoke of "hundreds of communist prisoners in the concentration camps of the imperialist state" but did not specify how many must be released. Nor did it specifically demand freedom for the 15 Red Brigades members, including founder Renato Curcio, on trial in Turin. An estimated 400 leftist extremists are in Italian jails, serving terms for arson, murder and other crimes of violence. They include about 150 members of the Red Brigades, Italy's most active urban guerrilla organization.

The communique was accompanied by a photograph of Moro behind a copy of a Wednesday newspaper to support the communique's statement that the announcement three days ago of his execution was a hoax. But investigators said since he was not holding the paper, it could not be considered definite proof he was alive. They said they were making tests to determine if the paper had been superimposed on an earlier photo of Moro and then photographed.

After copies of the photograph and the ultimatum appeared Thursday in Rome, Milan, Turin and Genoa, authorities halted the hunt for Moro's body in and around Lake Duchessa, in the mountains 72 miles northeast of Rome.

A message Tuesday attributed to the Red Brigades said Moro had been executed and his body dumped in the lake. Divers finally found a body there Thursday, but it was that of a local man who had been suffering from a nervous breakdown.

The communique Thursday said Tuesday's message was a fake manufactured by Andreotti and his "accomplices" as part of a "psychological war" to win public sympathy.

Mrs. Moro, her son and three daughters had been publicly silent since the abduction March 16. But they were reported to have urged the government privately to negotiate Moro's release.

The Red Brigades in a communique Thursday said Moro, 61, was still alive but would be executed unless the government agreed by 9 a.m. EST Saturday to negotiate the release of "communist prisoners."

Interior Ministry sources said experts determined the authenticity of both the communique and a photo demonstrating that Moro was still alive. It showed him with a copy of a Wednesday newspaper headlined "Moro Assassinato?"

Washington (AP) — House and Senate negotiators, after a stormy session with Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger lasting into the early morning hours, said today they had reached a basic accord on the proposed deregulation of natural gas.

Although sources, who declined to be identified, said there was still a chance the negotiations might break down, most conferees expressed guarded optimism that a compromise may be near. An agreement would break the deadlock stalling President Carter's year-old energy program.

They said two relatively minor differences remain to be resolved on the controversial deregulation issue.

But Rep. Harley M. Staggers, D-W.Va., said he hoped that those differences could be settled in about an hour later today. Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who leads the Senate conferees, said the negotiators decided to sleep on it because "some of us are tired."

Another meeting was scheduled for later in the day to take up the issues not yet resolved. Both involve the kinds of gas that will be eligible for deregulation on January 1, 1985, the date conferees have tentatively selected for lifting federal price controls.

On Thursday, Carter took note that a year had passed since he submitted the energy program to Congress.

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — The son of Galveston's police chief has been charged with shooting two rookie officers after a barroom brawl.

Lt. Walter Lacey of the detective department said Eddie Galvan, 29, son of Chief Ernest Galvan, had been charged with aggravated kidnapping, deadly assault on an officer and attempted capital murder.

EUREKA, Calif. (AP) — Several Indian tribes are protesting the spraying of plant-killing chemicals on forests near California's largest Indian reservation because, they say, the practice destroys brush trees and weeds important to their way of life.

Timber companies use a herbicide to kill vegetation that interferes with the growth of commercially valuable trees. One of the herbicide's victims is the tan oak, used in making acorn soup, which has been part of the Indians' diet for centuries, said Peter Jackson, a member of the Hoopa Valley Tribal Council.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal judge has issued an order barring Conrail clerical union employees from participating in a wildcat walkout or work slowdown. Union officials had said there was a possibility of walkouts at Conrail facilities because workers were unhappy with the railroad's transfer procedures.

U.S. District Judge John B. Hannum, at the request of Conrail lawyers, issued the order Thursday after meeting with the lawyers and the International Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Carrier Clerks, the union representing 22,000 workers.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A press run of the San Francisco Examiner was delayed for three hours when a power panel blew up, injuring an electrician.

The power failure Thursday also affected computers, electric typewriters and most of the lighting systems in the Examiner and parts of the nearby San Francisco Chronicle building.

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. car and truck production is expected to pass 4 million by Saturday, running almost dead even with output a year ago, a trade publication reports.

Ward's Automotive Reports said 4,033,494 vehicles will have rolled off production lines by Saturday, just 250 fewer than during the same period in 1977.

WASHINGTON (AP) — There may be more stars in the Milky Way galaxy with life supporting planets encircling them than previously had been believed, two astronomers say.

Helmut A. Abt and a research assistant, Saul G. Levy, estimate that about 10 percent of the galaxy's 100 billion stars could have planets orbiting them. And, they say, the more planets there are, the higher the chances are that some might be inhabitable.

The two scientists are from the Kitt Peak National Observatory in Arizona.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A committee of reporters has cleared syndicated columnist James J. Kilpatrick of accusations that he violated rules prohibiting members of the congressional press gallery from lobbying or promotional work.

The Standing Committee of Correspondents dismissed the allegations against Kilpatrick at a meeting April 13. Two other reporters leveled the charges against the columnist for his writing a monthly column for a U.S. Chamber of Commerce publication and for accepting a $3,000 lecture fee to address a Society of Real Estate Appraisers convention.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taking into account the rising cost of living, the Labor Department is rejudging the national poverty level.

The department says from now on a non-farm family of four with an income of $6,200 is considered as living in poverty. The figure was $5,850 a year ago. The poverty level for a farm family has been increased from $4,900 to $5,270.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government will increase Veteran Administration home loan guarantees by $7,500 under a bill approved by the House Veterans Affairs Committee.

Under current law the Veterans Administration guarantees $17,500 of a mortgage taken out by a veteran. Under the legislation, that figure would increase to $25,000. The bill also increases burial allowances for wartime veterans and increases compensation for those disabled in military service.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan will attempt to rescue the stalled Middle East peace negotiations next week during a visit to Washington.

The State Department confirmed on Thursday that Dayan would visit Washington for consultation with U.S. officials. The department said the visit will curtail mediation efforts now underway by U.S. Ambassador Alfred Atherton, who was to arrive in Egypt today.

Names in the news

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford has been sitting in on a hospital program on drug and alcohol dependence to help him better understand his wife's current treatment for over-medication, his executive assistant says.

"It's a combination of materials that expands peoples' awareness of different types of dependencies," Bob Barrett said Thursday of the educational sessions being offered at Long Beach Naval Hospital.

Betty Ford, 60, was admitted to the hospital April 11 for what doctors described as a "problem with medication." The former first lady had reportedly been taking the medication for pain caused by a pinched nerve in her neck and for arthritis.

Barrett could not say how long Mrs. Ford would remain hospitalized, but said she was "doing great." He added that Ford has visited his wife almost every day this week while attending the sessions.

Barrett said Ford had asked if he could sit in on selected portions of the program for "his general awareness" of Mrs. Ford's condition.

The program consists of two weeks of seminars, speeches and presentations designed to provide the most current information on alcohol and drug dependence, Barrett said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Woody Allen, whose films have brought laughter to millions, isn't smiling about a biography he claims he never authorized. Allen and Eric Lax, who collaborated with the comedian in earlier works, filed suit Thursday in U.S. District Court here against Drake Publishers Inc., which put out the book "Woody Allen — A Biography" last April 1.

Both claimed the Drake biography was unauthorized and contained copyrighted material lifted by author Lee Guthrie from books Allen and Lax had written previously.

OTTAWA (AP) — The Maltese Falcon it's not. But the gyrfalcon is still a rare bird and is thus a fitting gift for royalty, namely King Khalid of Saudi Arabia, a Canadian official says.

The king will receive a gyrfalcon from the Canadian government this weekend as a symbol of friendly relations between the two nations, Tony Keith of the Canadian Wildlife Service said Thursday.

Richard Fyfe, a wildlife service biologist, will accompany the bird on a commercial flight to Saudi Arabia and discuss with Saudi officials ways of improving their falconry program.

The Canadian bird will live in air-conditioned quarters to help it cope with the Mideast heat.

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Declared "as healthy as a horse," Billy Carter has been discharged from a hospital after several days of medical tests.

Dr. Paul Brown said President Carter's brother was fit to resume his appearances on the celebrity circuit.

Carter was admitted to the hospital Sunday and released Thursday.

Strangler kills 7th

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — The specter of a strangler who killed six elderly and middle-age women in the same neighborhood over a six-month period has moved to a different neighborhood, with the discovery of the body of a seventh victim.

A widowed first grade teacher, Janet T. Cofer, 61, was found strangled Thursday in her home about three miles from the Wynnton Road area where six women were strangled between last Sept. 16 and Feb. 12. All the victims have been widowed or single.

A task force of investigators from the Columbus police, the Georgia Bureau of Investigation and the state crime lab was increased Thursday afternoon. Some state agents had been taken off the case a month ago for lack of solid leads to pursue.

But neighbors remained frightened or angry that the killer remained at large.

"I'm just going to have to sell my house," Rebecca McRae said. "With Janet gone in this terrible way I can't stay here any longer."

Police Chief Curtis McClung said the style of the slaying left investigators convinced that

Mrs. Cofer's killer is the strangler.

Mrs. Cofer was strangled with a stocking, as were four other victims. It was not immediately known whether she was sexually assaulted, as were some of the earlier victims.

Mrs. Cofer was last seen Wednesday evening as she drove home alone from choir practice at the Wynnton United Methodist Church, declining a neighbor's suggestion that they ride together.

When she failed to report to work Thursday morning at Dinn Elementary School, a detective went to her home, saw evidence of forced entry through a window and discovered the body.

Mrs. Cofer was usually accompanied by a pet dachshund named Buffie, who neighbors said would always bark in warning. But Buffie was killed two weeks ago by a car. Her next-door neighbor said Mrs.

Cofer was looking for a new pet.

Trudy Bone, Mrs. Cofer's former Sunday school teacher, said the victim had turned down an invitation to move in with her because one of her two sons often stayed overnight.

Soviet bothers US press

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance began his second day of arms control talks in the Kremlin today intending to press for an explanation of Soviet interference with the American media.

U.S. officials said suppression of wire service photographs and CBS film of a protest outside the U.S. Embassy Thursday by the Russian wife of an American college professor appeared to violate the Soviet promise in the 1975 Helsinki Agreement to support freedom of information.

Vance also planned to take up with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko the plight of the woman, Irina McClellan, who was seized by Soviet police when she tried to chain herself to the embassy fence. She was released after three hours, but the police put a guard on her apartment, apparently to keep her inside.

Mrs. McClellan, 38, has been refused permission to join her husband, a professor at the University of Virginia.

Although Vance was prepared to give prominence to the human rights issue, U.S. spokesman Hodding Carter said it would not impinge on the negotiations to try to clear up issues blocking agreement on a treaty to limit long-range nuclear weapons.

"The two are separate," Carter said. He reported after the first talks Thursday that Vance and Gromyko were "negotiating seriously on major items" and "the atmosphere is good."

In the past the Soviets have complained that the United States was linking the arms negotiations to domestic issues and imperiling relations between the two superpowers.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev stayed away from the table again today, but Vance expected to meet with him before the talks wind up on Saturday.

For the second day, the talks concentrated on resolving differences on both sides standing in the way of a new treaty to limit strategic nuclear weapons.

"We have not moved off that," Carter told reporters.

But he said human rights as a subject was on the agenda, along with the Middle East and Soviet activity in Africa.

Moreover, the spokesman

Carter argues for tax plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter told six Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee today that his "modest" $24-billion tax cut plan has the support of 75 percent of the American people.

"What we did end up in the way of tax reform is quite modest," the president said at a White House meeting. "It's a package I believe has overwhelming support by the American people."

Although Carter indicated Thursday he will do some horse-trading after hearing that his tax plan stands no chance of passing Congress intact, he told his visitors today: "We need a tax stimulus of about $25 billion."

Carter, contending the package is "important for the country," said the tax burden Americans bear is too high for their income.

At a similar White House meeting Thursday, key members of the Ways and Means Committee told the president that his plan stands no chance of passing Congress — an attitude that has become increasingly evident.

The committee chairman and two members of the tax-writing panel left the session with the impression, they said, that the president is ready to talk with advisers and key congressmen about a negotiated reduction.

Press secretary Jody Powell said, nevertheless, the administration sees no reason to alter its plan and that Congress will be blamed if the economy suffers from lack of a tax cut.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the committee chairman, told reporters after the meeting that, "The president can now go back and talk to his advisers. . . Obviously the bill is going to be a lot different from what he recommended and there has to be some determination of what to do."

Ullman said he would try to hold the net tax cut to $15 billion.

Later, he met again with

Ullman said he and Mondale had made progress on a "possible alternative."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., another Ways and Means member invited to the White House session, said he expects Carter to meet with more committee members and "look for a package that can be salvaged."

"The bill is in big trouble," Rostenkowski said.

The committee recessed its meeting until Monday after postponing consideration of a number of Carter recommendations.

The president's $24 billion proposal for reductions was to be partly offset by increases totaling nearly $9 billion. In preliminary decisions going against Carter's recommendations, the committee has eliminated the total increase package plus $1 billion.

Simple arithmetic, should the tax increase portion of the package remain canceled, indicates that the best Carter could hope for in reductions would be about $14 billion.

But both sides are aware that all decisions so far are only tentative and might change significantly before a deal is struck.

Now pending before the committee are motions to ease capital gains taxation rather than tighten it as Carter would like.

There also is a move to drop the whole notion of additional tax cuts, while merely keeping in effect reductions of $9 billion enacted two years ago but scheduled to expire.

While Ullman, Rostenkowski and Rep. Joe D. Waggoner, D-La., were giving Carter the bad news, Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., the speaker of the House, said he will push for the president's plan.

"I would have to predict we would have to go with the tax cut," he told reporters. "We'll have to sit down and have a talk."

The pleas were entered Thursday in U.S. District Court as hundreds of current and former FBI agents gathered outside in support of the three defendants.

Gray, Edward S. Miller, former assistant director of the FBI's domestic intelligence di-

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Fair skies and mild temperatures dominated the Texas weather picture, but forecasters warned of the possibility of scattered thunderstorm activity, particularly in North Texas by the evening hours.

Only a few patches of clouds in South Texas and in the Panhandle kept the state from reporting fair skies statewide. Early morning temperatures ranged from the 30s in the mountains of Southwest Texas to the 50s in South Texas. Early morning extremes ranged from 42 at Lufkin, Wichita Falls and Dalhart to 58 at Del Rio.

The three have been charged with unlawfully ordering brake-ins of private homes while the bureau was trying to locate members of the Weather underground between December 1972 and May 1973. The homes belonged to relatives and acquaintances of members of the radical group.

National weather

By The Associated Press
Much of the Southeast, except for southern Florida, enjoyed a break today from the rainy, windy weather that plagued the area most of this week. But there was no respite for mountainous Northern California, where snow was falling.

Southern California escaped the snow, but high winds were expected to whip up sand and dust making for tough driving conditions.

Forecasters called for continued fair skies in South Texas, partly cloudy skies in Northwest Texas and mostly cloudy skies in Northeast Texas. It was to be windy in Northwest Texas.

Highs today were expected to range from the 70s in North Texas to the 90s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Early morning temperature readings included 43 at Amarillo, 44 at Texarkana and Dallas-Fort Worth, 43 at San Antonio, 44 at Houston, 56 at Corpus Christi, 61 at McAllen, 54 at Lubbock, 55 at El Paso and 49 at San Angelo.

Take time to ease job strains

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe that I, a 62-year-old man, am actually writing a letter to Dear Abby, but I have a problem I cannot solve. How do you or your consultants (perhaps a minister or psychiatrist) feel about deathbed promises?

The situation is as follows: I am very much in love with a 60-year-old widow. I am a widower. Our children are grown and independent. This widow and I both had good and faithful spouses. I lost mine two years ago, and she lost hers three years ago. We met by accident. Neither of us was looking for anyone.

After keeping steady company for a year, we are very much in love and want to marry. However, my wife, on her deathbed, asked me to promise her that I would never marry again. I made that promise, and now I feel guilty because I want to marry. What obligation have I to a dead spouse, and what should I do?

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: First, shed those guilt feelings. Deathbed promises are almost always made under emotionally charged circumstances. Your only obligation is to yourself. Go ahead and marry the lady, and the sooner the better. Life is for living.

DEAR ABBY: I had a buffet dinner party at my home recently to which 12 of my relatives were invited. (One was my mother.)

The party was scheduled for 6:30. At 6:25 my mother arrived with a giant pot of turkey soup. I was caught by surprise. My dinner was already prepared and there was no way I could have served my mother's turkey soup. For one thing, I don't have enough soup bowls or soup spoons to serve 12, and even if I had, turkey soup wouldn't have been appropriate with the meal I planned.

I politely told my mother that I would put her turkey soup away and save it for another time. She was miffed and let me know it. Was I wrong, Abby? She keeps bringing it up to me that I wouldn't let her serve her turkey soup. How can I make amends for my gross error?

IN THE SOUP DOWN SOUTH

DEAR IN: You weren't wrong. Tell your mother you gobbled up her turkey soup later and it was delicious.

DEAR ABBY: Our car was damaged by a drunken driver who works at the same factory as my husband. The estimated cost of having it repaired is $700.

My husband didn't want to have the other man booked for drunken driving, so instead of calling the police to report it right away, my husband called the man's wife to take him home and sober him up.

The wife couldn't sober him up, so she came back to the scene of the accident and told the police that she was the driver of the car, instead of her husband. My husband backed her up.

My husband and I have been going round and round about this. I told him that he was dead wrong to have agreed to such a thing—the police should have been notified at once, and if they booked the other man for drunk driving, it might teach him a good lesson. I do not think drunken drivers should be protected. What do you think?

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: I'm with you. Not only is the drunken driver now free to repeat the offense (and possibly cause a more serious accident), but also your husband is a party to falsifying an accident report—a serious offense!

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters For All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband is 10 years older than I and had a heart attack eight years ago. Making love scares both of us and the last four years his impotency has really discouraged him. I hear the same story as the other woman who wrote you. My husband says, "I'm older than you."

He uses sleeping pills and the doctors have even had him on anti-depressants and Valium only occasionally, but he still uses sleeping pills and has for eight years.

I believe he had too many nerve pills and he has really cut down. No anti-depressants, and Valium only occasionally, but he still uses sleeping pills and has for eight years.

Is sexual love dangerous for people with heart conditions? How do you cope with depression? My husband is 57 years old.

DEAR READER — This is not an unusual problem. Depression after a heart attack probably happens in at least half of the people who have them whether it is recognized or not. Often the person is very capable of covering up his true feelings. You should expect a reaction when a person is faced with the type of life crisis a heart attack represents, or for that matter any other serious life threatening illness. Depression is common in the middle years anyway. I am sending you "The Health Letter" number 10-10, "Depression: The Ups and Downs of Life," for more information about this common problem. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

Impotence in the man or lack of interest in sex by the IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — When you feel you won't make it until the 5 o'clock whistle blows, take a walk break. Or stand up at your desk or work counter — find a spot where you can hide from the public if you need to — and stretch strenuously and luxuriously, the way a cat does.

Even such mild physical exercise will help ease the stresses everyone faces daily, says Jude West, associate professor in the University of Iowa Center for Labor and Management, who advises business executives on dealing with stress.

"But executives don't have a corner on tension on the job," he says. "Some of the suggestions they use to handle work worries could ease your job headaches, too, whether you're the new secretary or the supervisor who hires secretaries."

"First, try to get a handle on what about your job is setting your teeth on edge. If you can get rid of at least some of the causes of stress, your day will be smoother."

Among the problems that West considers the main causes of occupational stress are these:

Role ambiguity: This means you don't know who's supposed to do what. Extricate yourself from this trap by pinning your supervisor down concerning job boundaries, West counsels. Everybody needs a clear understanding of what's expected of him or her on the job, he points out.

Role conflict: This can range from being bugged by calls from a spouse about personal problems to resentment at put-downs from a supervisor who doesn't know as much about your job as you do. Don't fume inwardly at needing from others, the professor advises. Speak up and insist on a square deal.

Role overload or underload: Having too little to do or too easy a job can make days drag. Monotony can be almost as demoralizing as feeling frantic when you're run ragged or get into a job over your head.

Other job situations that can tie you in emotional knots, West points out, are changing work shifts, facing continual deadlines and unfair treatment on pay and job status.

"Don't take your job with you on breaks and during your lunch hour," West urges. "A brisk 10-minute walk outdoors and a tall glass of fruit juice will clear out the cobwebs and relax tense muscles better than a coffee break in a smoke-filled room."

West takes a dim view of "working" lunches. Both you and a colleague will be wise to lunch with someone outside your office rather than together, he says.

If you sit a lot on your job, devise your own private battery of simple exercises for brief work breaks to accomplish two goals: to ease physical aches due to muscle tension and to distract you from job worries for a few minutes.

Suggested exercises: Look out a window at a distant object every hour or so to rest eye muscles after close work. Shrug your shoulders as high as they will go; next, move them back and down; then relax, arms and shoulders limp. Tense your abdominal muscles as you sit, pulling in hard; relax. Elevate your feet a few minutes on a chair or box.

If you have to stand a long time at work, vary your position. Relieve tension in your lower back by resting one foot on a stepstool or thick telephone directory occasionally.

"When you feel tight as a fiddle string, take a five-minute mini-vacation," West suggests. "Sit with your eyes closed, let your arms hang loose, your head fall gently forward."

"Then recall in vivid detail a memorable experience — maybe strolling on a Caribbean beach; or hiking in the Canadian Rockies. Then you should feel as refreshed as a kid who's played hooky, but without his guilt."

much sitting, right, sit erect with arms extended sideways at shoulder height, feet on floor 18 to 20 inches apart, knees bent; touch right hand to left foot and return to starting position; touch left hand to right foot and return. Do this two or three times first day, then add one a day up to 15.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

It's probably just a rumor, but I heard that a mother in the East admitted to making a "mistake."

Is that a crazy? Right in front of her daughter she said, "I made a mistake and I'm sorry and wish to be forgiven."

Boy, even if it is just a rumor, it's enough to scare you half to death. I mean, what parent in his (or her) right mind would chance letting a child know a parent isn't perfect?

I was 30 years old before I found out. My mother had given me a biscuit recipe and left out the baking powder. My biscuits came out of the oven and looked like a stack of loose change.

Mother looked at them for a moment and said, "I must have forgotten to mention the baking powder. I made a mistake."

I just looked at her and felt a little sick like the first time I saw the tooth fairy flushing my front tooth down the john. Mistake! My mother?

There were times when I was growing up that I thought she might "break" but she never did. Like the time she told me not to slam the door and the wind blew it shut and even though I was on the other side of the room she reached over and gave me a rap. All she said was, "That was for all the times you slammed the door and I never caught you."

Perfection in parents is an unwritten law. Children seem to sense it right from the beginning. I was telling a story one day of how when my son was a baby I was bathing him on the dryer in the kitchen and turned my back for just a moment. He fell onto the floor. As I told the story he was standing in the doorway eavesdropping and shouted, "Hey Mom, you made a mistake!"

"Bite your tongue," I said. "I just wanted to see if you would bounce."

I have always found parental perfection to be a pain in the neck. I mean it. It's rotten being right all the time... even when you're wrong. It's awesome to always be on the side of goodness, right, and reason. So many times I wanted to lean over and whisper to y child, "I blew it." But I remembered my mother's admonition, "Give 'em an inch... and they'll take a mile."

I hope there is a mother in the East who has broken the humble barrier. I hope it starts a trend among parents who can admit to being human.

It would not only raise the age of innocence... it would lower the age of forgiveness... and you can't start too young for that.

A SYMBOL OF SAFETY

When the ship is in danger, we can depend on the life-boats to take us over the seas to safety. It is comforting to glance at the life-boat when the seas are rough.

Our Armed Services are a symbol of safety when our country is in trouble, when war threatens to raise its ugly head. In the past, when war has come, our servicemen have not hesitated to give their lives to protect and defend us.

There is a special Day each year when we remember and honor our servicemen who have died in the defense of our blessed country. Let us not forget, as individuals, to honor these dead and give thanks to God for those who protect us even now. Remember them as you attend church this week.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Micronesia wins political freedom

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States' far flung central Pacific trusteeship — has won American blessing to go its own way politically, but it will be a form of independence under which the United States retains "full authority and responsibility for security and defense matters."

Making a "significant departure" from previous policy, the United States has agreed to allow islanders to form their own government, but in association with the United States, which retains a veto power to protect its strategic interests.

"Whereas in the past we always felt U.S. defense interests could be buttressed only by a close political relationship, the new policy is different in that it provides for U.S. defense interests for 15 years, come what may in political relationships," Ambassador Peter R. Roseblatt, the chief U.S. negotiator, said in a recent interview.

The agreement, concluded with Micronesian representatives at Hilo, Hawaii, April 7-9, clears the way for islanders to vote July 12 on a proposed constitution for a Federated States of Micronesia, after four centuries as colonial wards.

Micronesia is also the last of 11 trusteeships created by the United Nations after World War II.

The eight-point Hilo agreement provides that Micronesia, by treaty, would delegate powers in defense and foreign affairs to the United States. Continued U.S. aid will be negotiated. Either side could cancel the agreement at any time, but the United States would retain a veto in military matters for the first 15 years, no matter what.

The 2,125 islands of Micronesia, which span 4,000 miles between Hawaii and forward U.S. bases in Guam and the Philippines, cost the United States 6,288 killed and 22,810 wounded to capture from Japan in World War II. The island earlier had been a Spanish, then a German, colony.

While the United States used the islands for atomic testing and still test missiles at Kwajalein atoll, the paramount U.S. interest has been to deny the use of the islands to any other power.

Although the constitution declares that Micronesians "become the proud guardian of our own islands, now and forever," Nakayama concedes that economic dependence on the United States is a fact of life.

For every dollar it earns, Micronesia spends five. The difference is made up with U.S. aid, which amounted to $87.9 million in 1976.

Spinks arrested in drug probe

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Police said World Boxing Association heavyweight champion Leon Spinks was arrested early today after he failed to produce a driver's license and was under investigation for possible drug violations.

Spinks and his companion were still in police custody shortly before 7 a.m. No formal charges had been immediately filed, a spokesman said.

The arresting officer, Francis Corona, said officers seized two small bags or sacks, one containing a white powder substance and the other possibly marijuana.

Corona said the white powder substance was found in a small sack inside the 24-year-old boxer's hat after he tossed it on the roof of his car while being questioned. The other sack was in his clothes. Corona said both substances would be analyzed.

A female companion with Spinks, identified as Charlene Gunn, 26, was also arrested. Corona said, for interfering with an officer and for possible drug violations. Corona said a substance, also believed to be marijuana, was found on Miss Gunn.

Corona said the Spinks was stopped after police saw him drive into a restaurant parking lot around 4 a.m. with his lights off.

Officers crack down on race horse drugs

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Federal authorities have begun a crackdown on the use of illegal drugs on race horses in Louisiana.

Indictments issued by federal grand juries around the state accused doctors, owners, trainers, jockeys and others of using powerful drugs to speed up or slow down horses at race tracks.

The head of a strike force that concentrates on organized crime said the operation traces back to the Mafia, but that no "family" people were named in Thursday's indictments.

Four indictments issued in New Orleans named five trainers or jockey agents. In Alexandria, a federal grand jury indicted a veterinarian and a jockey agent.

Each man was charged with distribution of an illegal drug — either cocaine, which is a stimulant, or powerful pain killers named dilaudid and fentanyl, better known as sublimaze.

Maximum punishment on each count is 15 years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

In Shreveport, U.S. Attorney Joseph Cage charged John W. Lambert Jr., a veterinarian in Lafayette, La., as the supply source of the drugs. He was indicted on four counts charging distribution of cocaine and fentanyl.

Albert Stall, chairman of the Louisiana Racing Commission, said cocaine stimulates a race horse to more speed; dilaudid or fentanyl make a horse forget its aches and pains when the time comes to run.

U.S. Attorney John Volz of New Orleans said the indictments flow from the work of an FBI agent who posed as a trainer at various race tracks in Louisiana and in New Hampshire.

Cornelius Heusel, head of the Southwest Organized Crime Strike Force based in New Orleans, told a news conference the investigation is far from over.

In a statement issued by his office, Stall said some of the drugs such as dilaudid, a synthetic heroin, was spilling from track usage to off-track addicts, with "heroin users paying as much as $10 for one dilaudid pill."

In addition to Lambert, the grand jury in Alexandria indicted Steven Lee "Bimbo" LaLande, Lafayette, a jockey agent, on one count of unlawful distribution of cocaine.

Those indicted in New Orleans included:

- James J. "Frenchie" Duet and Edwin "Sonny" Rivere, one count of distribution of cocaine, one count of conspiracy.
- Tony J. Cuccia, a trainer and horse owner, two counts of distribution of fentanyl and one count of distribution of dilaudid.
- Cuccia and Lonnie B. Abshire Sr. and Edmond J. Fabacher, owners and trainers, each on one count of conspiracy to possess fentanyl and one count of distribution.
- Fabacher, on a separate indictment detailing one count of distribution of cocaine, one count of distribution of fentanyl.

Colleges avoid tax showdown

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas college coordinating board decided not to second-guess the courts Thursday and avoided a showdown over a suit challenging the property tax used to finance state college construction.

"It will be a lengthy court battle and at least three or four years before we have the opportunity to change this tax," said board vice chairman Newton Gresham of Houston. "I think we should make decisions (on campus construction) on the basis that these funds will be available."

A suit by Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, could radically affect financing of 17 state colleges and universities. Peveto sued in state district court here April 5, alleging the tax is not levied equitably from county-to-county.

The University of Texas at Arlington became the first college asking for approval of a construction project since Peveto's suit.

The board voted to approve construction of a $3.5 million stadium at the UT-Arlington, but only after school officials said other money is available if the property tax can't be used.

UT-Arlington and 16 other colleges and universities share the proceeds from the 10 cents per $100 tax according to their enrollment.

"This institution is at the end of the line on resources available," Kenneth Ashworth, commissioner of higher education, said in opposing Arlington's request.

"By choosing to spend the last of its sources of funds — if Peveto is to prevail — to finance the stadium and not academic facilities," Ashworth continued, "this institution would not have funds available to build nursing and other academic structures."

UT-Arlington President Wendell Nedderman said the school lacks facilities for intramural sports and relies on a high school stadium for conference sports.

"We're not asking for a Cadillac of stadiums — just one with 12,000 to 16,000 seating capacity," Nedderman pleaded.

Board member Dr. G.V. Brindley of Temple asked if approval of the stadium would jeopardize a $9.4 million nursing school facility.

The nursing school has top priority, answered President E.D. Walker of the University of Texas System.

"But there are not sufficient funds now without the ad valorem tax to construct the nursing school," Walker said. "Even if we did not build the stadium, we could not begin the nursing school."

In other action, the board approved a $20.8 million, 17,000-seat expansion of the Texas A&M stadium.

Houston assistant chief fired

HOUSTON (AP) — Assistant Police Chief Carrol M. Lynn, charged with obstruction of justice after being arrested by federal authorities April 10, has been fired.

Police Chief Harry Caldwell said Thursday he offered Lynn an opportunity to resign but Lynn "opted not to take it."

Lynn, 45, who had been assistant chief since Dec. 3, 1976, also is a former police chief and the highest ranking Houston police chief ever accused in federal court.

Assistant City Attorney Al Levine said he made Caldwell's offer to Lynn to accept the former chief's resignation. Levine described the offer as "a matter of courtesy."

Lynn has been free on $50,000 bond since his arraignment before U.S. Magistrate Lingo Platter following an investigation by the FBI.

Conviction of the charge carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

In his announcement that Lynn had been served papers of indefinite suspension, the same as being fired, Caldwell said the reason for the firing

"is based on the facts in the affidavit filed before the U.S. magistrate in the recent case resulting in his arrest."

In the affidavit filed by the FBI, Lynn was accused of telling former Houston businessman James Vincent Holden that he could have certain charges against Holden dismissed for a fee of $45,000.

The FBI report said Holden made two payments to Lynn, totaling $26,000, but that $25,000 has been recovered.

Barbara, Reasoner lose anchor spots

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC News President Roone Arledge says Harry Reasoner will lose his anchor position on the "ABC Evening News" this summer. Barbara Walters, reportedly receiving $1 million a year for her services, also will give up anchor chores but will remain in a featured role as an interviewer.

Announcing reorganization of the poorly-rated news show, Arledge said Wednesday that Reasoner "did not fit into the plan."

"I don't think he's made any secret of that and I agree with him," Arledge said. But the news chief, who came to the job last summer, declined to say whether Reasoner would be kept in any capacity.

There was no immediate response from Reasoner, who has asked ABC to release him from his $500,000-a-year contract two years early to return to CBS and "CBS Reports."

Under the reorganization, Frank Reynolds will function as a sort of first among equals as the network's "primary" anchor. He will be in charge of the news desk in Washington, where 40 percent of the news normally originates. There will be no New York anchor person.

Men and machines fight the oval

By DAVE MUSICK
Sports Editor

Pampa's Jimmie Youree has a weight problem. Between Saturday evening and early September, the rangy 155 pounder expects to lose the equivalent of his body weight.

Youree doesn't work in a steam bath or swim in shark-infested water. What he does do and it can be just as hot and as dangerous - is race stock cars at Southwest Speedway in Amarillo.

As for his crash (not a favorite word around stockers) diet, Youree says it's not unusual to lose 10 pounds in an evening's racing. Over the 20-week season, the intense concentration and physical exertion can whittle a man down. Which says something about the sport of racing.

So why does Youree do it? For the thrill of competition, the measuring of one's abilities. And for the camaraderie with other men who test themselves on the oval track.

Talking with Youree, one can't help but notice the respect he has for those drivers who combine ability and style. "Good ole boy" is a phrase that abounds when Youree speaks of clean, tough competitors, the men who race to win - but not at any cost.

For the 'outlaws', the men outside racing's unwritten code, the soft-spoken Youree has a smile but few words.

He'd rather speak of those aspects of the sport which make it all worthwhile - like the hours spent fine-tuning his machine until he knows the limits to which it can be pushed.

every response which can be expected.

Youree began in December preparing for Saturday's opening race. Another block for his 351-cubic-inch Ford Cleveland engine was required. The car was built from the ground up. Everything that might give a driver the edge has been utilized. Countless hours of labor that will culminate under the lights of an oval track in Amarillo.

Youree got started by watching the races. Then he expressed an interest in participating. His wife Pat had heard it so often that she told him to start putting a car together. Not long after, Youree entered his first race. Pat was in the pits that night and ever since.

What was the feeling of that first race?

"The first time I went out on the track, I thought someone would have to fasten my safety belt for me. I had the butterflies bad. Still get 'em before each race."

Youree may get the butterflies but what he races for is the first-place trophy. The 1976 Southwest Speedway Rookie of the year was running second last year until he encountered car difficulties. This year he hopes it will be better.

A racing publication indicated some other driver has the edge in the upcoming season. The article mentioned Youree as someone who would put the heat on.

Youree looked at the paper and grinned. "How do they figure he's got the edge. I know one old boy who will be over there trying to win," he said.

Morgan one game from record

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "I'll get it now. The pressure is off," says Cincinnati's Joe Morgan, a game away from setting an all-time fielding record for second baseman.

Currently tied with Jerry Adair and Bobby Grich at 89 consecutive errorless games, Morgan can break the record tonight when the Reds send Tom Seaver against San Francisco's Bob Knepper.

Morgan has a chance to reach the milestone in his own backyard. He grew up in Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco.

He kept the streak alive Wednesday night in Los Angeles, surviving a controversial decision by the official scorer that drew fire from the Dodgers. Morgan's fifth inning throw to first was wide, pulling Dan Driessen off the bag. Driessen dropped the ball, but the scorer — Dick Robinson of Pasadena — gave Reggie Smith a hit on the play.

Adair set the record during the 1964-65 seasons while with the Baltimore Orioles. Grich, also of Baltimore, duplicated the feat in 1973.

There was a time when Morgan, now one of the game's most versatile performers, wasn't known for his defensive skills.

Ironically, the year Adair set the record, Morgan — then in his first full big league season with the Houston Astros — had the most errors (27) of any National League second baseman. Woeful field conditions in the brand-new Astrodome, and lighting problems, didn't help.

"I was adequate. But adequate isn't in my vocabulary," said the 5-foot-8 Reds' star who has won five consecutive Gold Glove awards.

"That's why I'm prouder of my defensive records than my offensive awards — because I had to work harder at that than any other part of my game," said Morgan, who won successive NL Most Valuable Player awards in 1975 and 1976. He and Ernie Banks are the only two NL players to win the award two straight years.

After averaging 20 errors a season in his first four years at Houston, Morgan decided to do something about his defense.

"For night games I went to the ballpark every day at 3:30 in the afternoon. I took ground balls and worked on double plays until 5:30. I then went up into a place I had found and took a nap. Later, I returned to the field to take batting practice and work with the other's before the game started," he recalled.

"It was tough on me, but it was worth the price," said Morgan.

In the meantime, he gathered game films of Bill Mazeroski, the Pittsburgh Pirates' fielding great who holds the all-time record for double plays.

"He was the best in baseball at making the double play. I patterned myself after him. That's why I don't cheat. I keep my foot in the middle of the bag probably longer than anybody. Sometimes you pay for it," said Morgan, whose shins are scarred from 16 years of spike wounds. Once he needed 17 stitches. Another time, 15.

"You have to be mentally tough to play the position, whereas shortstop calls for grace and range," said Morgan, who played shortstop before becoming a pro.

Bosox take three from Brewers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

When the Milwaukee Brewers opened the season by battering Baltimore for 40 runs in three games, Manager George Bamberger, who spent 10 seasons in an Orioles uniform, cracked that "things could be worse. I could still be their pitching coach."

Bamberger was singing a different tune Thursday after the Brewers received a taste of their own medicine.

"They wiped us out and I just want to get out of here," he said after the Boston Red Sox bombed the Brewers 10-4 with a 16-hit attack and scored 26 runs in sweeping a three-game series at Fenway Park. "They're the best hitting team in the league," Bamberger added.

That was the only American League game played since New York-Toronto and Detroit-Cleveland were rained out. In the National League, the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Houston Astros 5-1 and the San Diego Padres blanked the Atlanta Braves 2-0 while St. Louis-Pittsburgh and Montreal-Chicago were washed out.

Butch Hobson, called "the best No. 9 hitter in baseball" by Texas Manager Billy Hunter, belted a three-run homer and Fred Lynn, who had four hits, lined a two-run shot in the third as the Red Sox breezed to their seventh consecutive victory and a 6-0 home record behind Bill Lee's seven-hitter.

Randy Jones pitched a three-hitter with ninth-inning help from Rollie Fingers and Bob Davis rapped a two-run fifth-inning single off Phil Niekro, who allowed only two hits.

"I had a nice smooth tempo going, so I just took my time and didn't force things or try to push myself," said Jones, the 1976 Cy Young Award winner who is battling back from arm surgery. "Everything seemed to fall into place today."

Despite Niekro's 0-4 record, Davis said he "had the great knuckleball. The bottom was falling right out of it."

Milwaukee pitcher Moose Haas suffered a partial tear of the flexor muscle in his right elbow and will be sidelined for a month or more.

Dodgers 5, Astros 1
Steve Yeager's three-run double broke a tie as Los Angeles scored four times in the sixth inning and snapped Houston's four-game winning streak behind Doug Rau's eight-hit pitching.

Jackson, Leonard in welter-weight

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Steve Zouski may now be known as a giant killer in amateur boxing circles. Just ask heavyweight Clenton Cochran.

In Thursday's round of the AAU Senior National Boxing Championships, Zouski gave away 60 pounds and seven inches to the 6-foot-6, 260-pound Cochran, and decked him twice.

After suffering a standing eight-count in the first round, Zouski, of Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., dropped Cochran, of Spring Lake, N.C., in both the second and third rounds.

The referee stopped the fight in the third round because of a Cochran head injury and awarded the victory to Zouski.

Zouski faces defending champion Greg Page of Louisville, who knocked out Richard Cade of Ft. Hood, Texas, Thursday.

It was Page's third knockout in the tournament. A pair of Page right crosses to Cade's face early in the second round staggered the Texan into a standing eight count. As Cade looked on in disbelief, the referee continued the count to 10 and ruled a knockout when the boxer failed to raise his gloves, signifying a willingness to continue.

In the lightweight class, all three contenders won by decisions.

Defending champion Anthony Fletcher of Philadelphia outpointed Ray Mancini of Youngstown, Ohio; former Olympian Davey Armstrong of Puyallup, Wash., beat Daniel Avery of Lynn, Mass.; and defending bantamweight champ Johnny Bumphus of Nashville outlasted

Michael Hess of Albany, Ore.

In other fights, long-time adversaries Clint Jackson and Roger Leonard moved closer to another showdown in the welter-weight class.

Jackson, a Nashville deputy sheriff, exploded a pair of overhand rights to the jaw of Michael McBride and sent the Houston fighter through the ropes to end their bout midway in the first round.

Leonard, the older brother of Sugar Ray Leonard, barely survived the steady pressure of Don Modicue of Monroe, La., in gaining a split decision. The victory by the Palmer Park, Md., fighter was not popular with the Mississippi Coast Coliseum crowd.

Hispanics favor tough laws on illegal aliens

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, says a questionnaire — to which only a 50th of Texas Hispanics responded — shows an overwhelming majority favor tough laws concerning illegal aliens and the Americans who hire them.

Bentsen said Wednesday that 100,000 persons with Spanish surnames were sent questionnaires concerning aliens. He said of about 2,200 replies, 82 percent "see a real need for legislation to deal with the illegal alien problem."

"This is not a scientifically valid 'poll' and I do not view the results as such," said Bentsen. "But it is significant to me when a substantial number of people indicate so clearly their desire to clamp down on illegal aliens."

Another item on the poll was reaction to President Carter's proposed Illegal Alien Reform Act. Only 34 percent said they favored the measure. Forty-one percent expressed opposition.

One measure included in the president's plan calls for a temporary work visa program. Fifty-nine percent said they were against that part of the measure, and 34 percent were for it. Other results of the poll were:

—A "forgery proof" Social Security card that would be shown to an employer by all prospective employees. Eighty-two percent for, 13 percent against.

—Penalties against employers who hire illegal aliens. Seventy-one percent for, 13 percent against.

—Increased enforcement along the U.S.-Mexican border. Eighty-two percent for, 16 percent against.

—Granting amnesty to illegals who entered the U.S. prior to 1970 but who have resided here since that time with a record of good behavior. Fifty-three percent for, 41 percent against.

Deregulation would mean cheaper airline fares

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air travelers could look forward to cheaper fares and more vigorous airline competition if the House approves legislation that passed the Senate by an overwhelming margin.

The airline deregulation bill, first proposed by the Ford administration and embraced by President Carter as an anti-inflation measure, faces an uphill House battle.

The Senate bill, approved 83-9 Wednesday night, would give the airlines their first limited authority to inaugurate new service and to raise or lower fares without prior permission from the Civil Aeronautics Board.

It would be the first fundamental overhaul of federal regulation of airline routes and fares since the CAB was created 40 years ago.

Carter called the Senate action "an important step in the fight against inflation" and urged quick action by the House.

He said the bill would "put an end to a form of government regulation of business that is not only unnecessary, but also counter-productive from the public's point of view."

While supporters said the bill would result in improved service and lower fares by increasing competition, opponents said it would allow the airlines to concentrate on high-profit routes and neglect service to smaller communities.

Considerable opposition was expected in the House, where the Public Works Committee's aviation subcommittee has tentatively approved a substitute measure making little change in the present regulatory system.

Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., the bill's chief sponsor, said he hoped the House would note the "tremendous vote" and pass a bill by the end of the year.

The Senate measure would allow fare reductions of up to 35 percent and increases by as much as 5 percent without prior CAB approval.

The bill contains a 10-year guarantee of continued service to small communities now served by airlines.

Wrong man got Pulitzer Prize

NEW YORK (AP) — The Pulitzer Prize for spot photography awarded earlier this week to a United Press International photographer was given to the wrong man, the administrator of the prize says.

The photograph showed a hostage being held at gunpoint in Indianapolis.

"We're going to have to take the prize away and give the $1,000 to the man who took the picture," Pulitzer administrator

Robert T. Baker said Wednesday.

He said that "it was an honest mistake, resulting from the large number of pictures that were taken that day."

The mistake was discovered when Blair claimed the picture was his. Schweiker and William Lyon, UPI vice president for news pictures, inspected the negatives and agreed with Blair.

Robert E. Page, vice president and general manager of UPI, notified the advisory board of the Pulitzer committee.

"An honest error occurred during the handling of the large number of negatives and the crediting of the winning photograph to Schweiker," Lyon told the Evansville (Ind.) Courier.

Page said 15 prints were prepared out of 24 rolls of film taken during the Feb. 10 ordeal. The mixup was made as the pictures were identified prior to transmission.

When Schweiker learned Monday that he had won an award, he told reporters, "I'd forgotten I'd been entered and didn't even know what picture won the prize until it came back over the wire."

Blair, who has submitted photos to UPI since 1971, was not available for comment.

Tot, 7, weighs 24 pounds

PARAMOUNT, Calif. (AP) — If Sgt. Miriam Travis, a child abuse crime specialist, had run into tiny Rebecca Holmes by accident, she would have guessed her age at 1 year. But the 32-inch, 24-pound girl is 7.

The deputies who took Rebecca from her home found her on a cot behind a screen in a bedroom, but they believe she was kept much of the time in a closet 8 feet high with floor space of about 4-by 2½-feet. She was wearing diapers and a pajama top.

"It was messy," Mrs. Travis said of the closet. "There was fecal matter. There was evidence that she was kept inside a closet, but we don't know for how long."

Commenting on earlier statements that the child was confined in the closet for five years, a deputy said it could have been longer or shorter.

Rebecca, who deputies say cannot walk or crawl, also has difficulty speaking, officials say. But she had no difficulty warming up to the deputies.

Alicia Hernandez, 30, and Danny Holmes, 33 — Rebecca's parents — were booked for investigation of child abuse Tuesday. Holmes, a laborer, was also booked for investigation of possessing the drug PCP, or angel dust.

Two other children, Danny, 9, and Alice, 13, appeared to be well treated, said deputies who went to the house on an anonymous tip.

Danny and Alice were taken to a foster home; Rebecca was taken to Long Beach Memorial hospital where she was reported in good condition.

Rebecca at first was surprised to see the deputies, but as she was being driven to the hospital, "she was very excited to see the things she would see as we passed down the street," Mrs. Travis said. "If we laughed, she would get all excited and her body would shake. It's something we will never forget."

"She was a very happy child with us. She began to mimic the words we were saying," Mrs. Travis added.

Police said the family had lived in five homes in the past seven years in this working class suburban area southeast of Los Angeles.

Judge orders shirt out

DALLAS (AP) — Lawrence D. McLennan probably wasn't as happy when he left a Dallas County criminal courtroom as his T-shirt would have led one to believe.

McLennan was being arraigned Wednesday on a marijuana charge before Judge Robert H. Stinson, who took issue with the T-shirt the man was wearing, saying it didn't fit in with courtroom decorum.

"It (the shirt) said 'I'm so happy I could defecate. But he used a four-letter word,'" the judge explained later.
