By ASSOCIATED PRESS and PAMPA NEWS STAFF
The Texas Supreme Court today upheld the practice of reappraising property for taxation on a rotating basis — a method used by the City of Pampa for many years.

The high court affirmed rulings of a Lubbock trial court and the Eastland Court of Civil Appeals which said the issue had not previously been passed on in Texas.

City Manager Mack Wofford said Pampa uses a "five-year rotation system regarding property reappraisals." He said he believes the city's system "is, financially, the most feasible means to reappraise property."

"From an administrative standpoint, it would simply be too costly to reappraise all property in Pampa on a yearly basis. That would take more time and staff than the city has to offer."

"I personally believe that in the long run, everyone's property taxes will be equal on comparable property values. It is an equitable arrangement."

Not all Pampa tax payers agree, complaining that residents in some sections of the city pay more property taxes than others under the system. They say that the rotation method gives a break to those taxpayers whose property is not reappraised until some years after comparably valued property in other city sections has been reappraised.

Dwain Walker, business manager for the Pampa Independent School District, said, "To my knowledge, there has been no real protest to the school district concerning the city's rotation system. It has been questioned by some citizens from time to time."

The Pampa ISD uses the same tax role as the city.

The case arose when Brunken Toyota, Inc.; Carlsbad Auto Co., Inc., doing business as Polard Friendly Ford, Inc.; and Don Crow, trustee, sued Lubbock, Lubbock Independent School District, the board of equalization and tax assessor-collector John Brooks.

The suit challenged a 1968 plan by which the city was divided into zones, with a single zone to be reappraised each year over a five-year cycle.

Other cities also follow the practice.

Four zones were created in 1974, and an ad valorem system was adopted for 1975 and 1976.

The plaintiffs, however, sued before the closing of the tax rolls in 1975, alleging that the system was arbitrary and capricious and violated the Texas Constitution.

The suit attacked the selective re-evaluation of certain segments of the community without an adjustment in the values of other comparable properties.

It said this would cause the plaintiffs to pay higher taxes for a time than persons in other parts of the city that had not yet been revalued.

Lubbock and the other defendants argued that the continuing program of re-evaluation of property was in good faith. They said a certain number of units were re-evaluated each year in rotation without discrimination.

The Eastland appeals court noted that a 1918 U.S. Supreme Court case had ruled that to support a claim of discrimination it must be shown that the taxing authority had intentionally violated the principle of uniformity.

The Supreme Court affirmed the Eastland ruling without writing its own opinion.

'...that Zeus might change me to a winged bird' — Euripides

Sure there are the pesky sparrows and the raucous blackbirds providing some seasonal aggravation, but many birds are not so foul. One Pampa briefly tied up Tuesday noon traffic on Sommerville Street while he watched a stately quail cross the road... to get to the other side, presumably. Who doesn't enjoy listening to the antics of a mockingbird, or watching the graceful darting of a tiny hummingbird. Birdly beauty is in the eye of the beholder. This flock of feather wearers were stopped on film near Perry Lefors Field. (Pampa News photo by Ron Ennis)

Texas man bid highest on gold

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Except for some jewelry and a tooth filling or two, Morris Cannan has never owned any gold. But when he decided to buy some, he didn't fool around. He has apparently bought 50 pounds.

Cannan, a San Antonio geologist who usually confines his prospecting to oil and natural gas, was the high bidder Tuesday in the first government gold sale in three years. He was surprised and not especially overjoyed at the news.

"I hate to hear it," Cannan said at his office here. "I didn't know enough about it I guess, because the West Germans and the Swiss bid lower than I did. It looks like my evaluation was poor."

"I never had owned any gold before," said Cannan. "I didn't know that individuals could bid in this sale. I had been curious and inquired around."

He bid $182.35 per ounce for 800 ounces and was the high bidder in the Washington auction. He was the lone individual to submit a bid, with the remainder of the 300,000 ounces auctioned Tuesday apparently going to various West German and Swiss banks for more than $180 per ounce.

The awards will not be officially announced until Thursday.

What will Cannan do with two 25-pound bars of 9995 gold for which he will pay $145,800? "I guess I'll put it in a bank box or something. I don't really know," said Cannan, who first learned about his apparent purchase from reporters. "I'll use it as an investment. I'll probably dream up something."

The geologist said experts had told him the gold was more pure than most available to buyers. Cannan said he hoped that would justify the higher price.

Only 59 bidders applied to buy the gold in Tuesday's auction, compared to 700 at the last auction.

The minimum bid was for 400 ounces.

Government officials said the gold will be transferred from a Treasury vault to any location the buyer pleases. After the last auction, one buyer carried a gold bar with him in his briefcase, government officials said.

The highest commercial bid was by a Swiss bank, which bid $181.26 per ounce for 800 ounces.

Pearly retirement

Besides graduation, spring brings retirement to teachers in the Pampa Independent School District. And Mrs. Mable Torvie, with a cake presented by her third period English class on her last regular day of teaching, will be among the teachers with the most seniority to put down their books and rulers. Mrs. Torvie, head of the English department and a veteran of more than 30 years, will also hear the last strains today of a song she has taught to her classes since the mid-1960's — "Pearly Shells." She will be honored Saturday with Pampa High School retiring teachers Aubra and Frances Nooncaster, Reba Wilson, Martha Fischer and Roberta Kincaid. (Pampa News photo by Ron Ennis)

Ruling may lower eyeglasses costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators are abolishing state bans on price advertising by ophthalmologists, optometrists and opticians in a step that U.S. officials say should lower the cost of eyeglasses and contact lenses.

The Federal Trade Commission is ready to give final approval to a regulation designed to increase competition in the optical industry by lifting advertising bans nationwide.

There now are restrictions on price advertising in 40 states. The commission's staff, in writing the new regulation, said prices are 25 percent to 40 percent lower where advertising is allowed.

Under the regulation, an ophthalmologist or optometrist would be required to give a customer a copy of his eyeglass or contact lens prescription, allowing the patient to shop around using advertising as a guide.

Three professional groups dispense eyeglasses. Ophthalmologists are medical doctors who treat eye diseases, perform eye surgery and prescribe glasses. An optometrist, who is a graduate of an optometry school, examines eyes and fills prescriptions. An optician, with the least required training of the three, fills prescriptions written by his counterparts.

The American Optometric Association, opposing the commission regulation, argues that the ultimate effect may be a reduction in the quality of glasses as corners are cut in production to meet price competition.

Optometrists stand to lose the most from the regulation. If prices are advertised and customers encouraged to shop around, then the optometrists may lose some businesses to opticians.

The Opticians Association of America favors the regulation, which optometrists are expected to challenge in court. The commission proposed the regulation in 1976 after surveys of eyeglass prices showed variations of up to 350 percent in the same city for identical glasses.

The New Jersey Division of Consumer Affairs found that prices for an identical frame with single-vision lenses varied in the state from $16 to $55. Other studies showed variations of up to 250 percent in New York City and 300 percent in Ohio.

The commission staff found that the price differences hurt the elderly most. More than 93 percent of the population over 65 wears eyeglasses, it estimates.

Some 112 million Americans, or about half the population, wear either glasses or contact lenses. Consumers spend more than $4 billion per year on eyeglasses and examinations, the commission says.

UN seeks arms race halt

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The General Assembly special session on disarmament begins a two-week general debate today, searching for a common strategy to halt the nuclear weapons race and divert to peaceful purposes nearly $400 billion spent annually on arms.

Nearly 130 officials, including 20 heads of government and 53 cabinet ministers from the 149

U.N. member countries, are scheduled to speak.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale sets out the U.S. policy this afternoon in an address that is expected to contain no significant proposals. He will speak after Yugoslav Prime Minister Veselin Djuranovic outlines the views of Third World countries that originally called for the session.

Man lost leg, saved bridge

PITTSBURGH (AP) — For three hours workers tried to free Ralph Winner's shattered leg from collapsed bridge girders. Then as a light rain fell, a surgeon perched on a 2-foot-wide beam high above the Monongahela River and cut off the screaming ironworker's right leg.

"I have never had to make a decision to do what we did today," said Dr. Ronald Stewart, head of the Presbyterian-University Hospital emergency crew who ordered the amputation Tuesday. "I hope I never have to make it again."

It was either take Winner's leg or risk collapse of the shaky bridge, officials said. Winner, although sedated with morphine and shock-stemming fluids, remained awake during the ordeal on the 120-foot-high bridge that he had been helping prepare for demolition.

Paramedics said it took less than five minutes for Dr. Joseph Young to cut off Winner's leg at the knee.

"We thought we were losing him. We were just running out of time," said Glenn Cannon, director of the city's medical emergency team.

Winner, 48, of suburban North Hills and employed by Martin's Explosive Corp. of Anchorage, Alaska, was listed in good condition late Tuesday at Presbyterian Hospital after more than two hours in the operating room there.

River traffic below the bridge stopped during the three-hour rescue effort. About 200 people watched silently from a bridge 10 feet away and heard Winner shout while physicians worked.

"Up until nearly the end, he was all right," said an unidentified ironworker. "He knew what he was saying. He just kept saying how he wanted the steel off of his leg."

Winner was using a power saw to cut a hole in a beam to make room for an explosive charge designed to drop part of the bridge into the water below. The 67-year-old bridge, which was closed two years ago, shifted, and Winner slipped into the hole he was cutting.

His right leg was cut through quarters of the way through and his left leg was trapped when heavy steel girders slammed together.

Cannon said three vertical beams had held the bridge from collapsing. But when the bridge shifted, one broke loose and a second was cut away to free Winner's left leg.

"That left one vertical plane holding the bridge together, and that's where his right leg was caught," Cannon said.

Bridge experts from the state Department of Transportation and the American Bridge division of U.S. Steel Corp. were lifted by crane to the top of the span to check its stability.

"They said if we did any more moving or cutting that bridge was going to come down," Cannon said.

Why student therapy?

The federal government is threatening to cut funding to psychiatric counseling centers on college campuses. Naturally a great cry has gone up about the lack of humanity in such a suggestion.

The pro-counseling people cite the multitude of mental stresses now burdening college students: the demand for As rather than gentlemanly Cs; the spirit-crushing jostling to get into medical and law schools, the absence of jobs for graduates, and skyrocketing costs, and so on. They even bring up the doubled suicide rate over the last 10 years.

It is true college students today have a tough time of it, raccoon-coated innocence is long since past. But that has to do with the overwhelming psychic investment now placed in a college degree. From grade one a college diploma is touted as the sine qua non of the happy life; nor is there time to study with leisure, essential to the classic idea of a liberal education.

Small wonder the rising anxieties; no wonder the suicides among students. And for nothing! The idea that a college degree opens the gate to a more rewarding life is one of the most preposterous, and insidious, to-be-devil people of the modern age. There is no truth to the assumption, as countless studies have shown. Only bureaucratic personnel managers, themselves suffering a severe culture lag, still require them.

To the extent our economy rewards individual enterprise people will earn abundantly, not because they hold a sheepskin, but because they serve others in the marketplace. To the extent the information revolution supersedes the classroom people will be exposed to a cornucopia of philosophy and literature they will not get in four or six years of regimented curricula.

The healthiest and most learned people we know hold a mild contempt for our antiquated higher education system. Many have dropped out.

But such independence threatens the existence of professional educationists. Here is the pattern, the educationists now define: 1. Convince young people of the lie that learning is something that cannot be done by them, through their own volition, but something that can be done to them — usually by professional "educators." 2. Ignore the supply-demand equation by training people for jobs that will be, by the time they graduate, unavailable or obsolete. 3. Because the most sensitive cannot handle the mental stress precisely because of the systemic contradictions, bring on the psychiatric therapists.

The pattern is not dissimilar to what is happening on high school campuses. The unrelieved boredom of the compulsory classroom encourages experimentation with dangerous drugs. When the drug situation threatens the community the police announce they will spread "paranoia" among students contemplating drug involvement. Clearly an absurd and outrageous perversion of the system.

Somebody once defined "fanatic" as one who, when the fallacies of his objectives become apparent, redoubles his efforts. It is now painfully evident that those who clutched the great educationist delusion for lo the better part of the century, and now their progeny, have adopted a kind of fanatic's eye view of the importance of their establishment.

If the promise of the educationists' had been fulfilled, and everybody who passed through their portals were made healthier, wealthier and wiser, there would be little need for treating so many students psychiatrically. Would there?

Future of our free society

By Dr. MILTON FRIEDMAN
(Editor's note: Dr. Friedman is a Nobel Laureate and senior research fellow at Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace, Stanford University. Following are highlights of his keynote address before the National Association of Manufacturers Congress of Industry in Washington, earlier in 1978.)

When Abraham Lincoln was nominated for the Senate in 1858, he said, "A house divided against itself cannot stand. I believe this government cannot endure permanently half slave or half free. I do not expect the house to fall, but I do expect it will cease to be divided. It will become all one thing or all the other."

Lincoln's words are as applicable to our time as they were to his. In this country in the past half century have been moving away from a free society and toward an increasing degree of slavery. Not the kind of slavery that Lincoln talked about, but a kind that is no less destructive of the basic greatness and freedom of this country, a slavery in the form of an increasing role of government in our economy, of an increasing extent to which we are the subjects and the government the master, instead of the other way around.

If we continue the trend to a collectivist economy, a society controlled by government, we shall lose not only our economic advantages, but also our political freedom. However, we need not continue in that direction. We can take thought and halt it, and the question is, shall we halt it? Shall we move instead toward a greater degree of freedom and reduce the extent to which we are being controlled?

Make no mistake about it: Human freedom cannot exist — has never existed — without a viable, healthy, free market economy. And that is what is being destroyed.

What does free enterprise mean? It does not mean that private enterprises shall be free to do what they want, including restricting markets and keeping out competitors. Free enterprise means that anybody shall be free to set up an enterprise, to start small and grow big. And yet, in that sense, you are not free in this country to set up a bank, unless you get a certificate of convenience and necessity from a government official. You are not free to become a lawyer or a physician or a plumber or a mortician, or a host of other occupations, unless you can get a license from a state body, certifying that you may offer your services for sale.

You are not free to go and raise money on the capital markets, unless you fill out the 400 or more pages of forms that the Securities and Exchange Commission will demand of you, at a cost which has had as one of its major effects a strong handicap to the emergence of new small enterprises in this country.

If we examine the controls over income and property, every individual in this country works from the beginning of January to the end of May, roughly, in order to support governmental expenditures. Over 40 percent of the income of the American people is now spent on their behalf by civil servants, bureaucrats and others whom they have chosen to spend their money for them. And with respect to freedom, it clearly means that we have given up control over 40 percent of our resources. We talk about how we must avoid Socialism. Yet 48 percent of every corporation is owned by the U.S. government, because 48 percent of each corporation's net income is taken away by government taxes. We are 48 percent Socialist.

The record is clear: We are predominantly a free society, but we have an enormous range of restrictions on our freedom, and those restrictions will grow and grow unless we can bring a halt to the expansion of government power.

The closest approximation we ever had to a free society in this country was unquestionably in the 19th and early 20th Century, a period about which myth has become more dominant than reality. It was a period of the greatest progress in the well-being of the ordinary man that the world has ever seen. And yet it has become enshrined in myth as the period when robber barons were going around the country grinding the poor people under their heels out of sheer malice.

The interesting question is, what produced the shift from that relatively free society to our present 48 percent Socialist society? It was not produced by evil people for evil purposes. There was no conspiracy. What produced the shift, in my opinion, was an unholy coalition of well-meaning people seeking to do good, and of special interests trying to use the power of government to promote their own particular, immediate interests, reinforced by a change in political philosophy from an emphasis on individual responsibility to an emphasis on social responsibility.

That shift started in the 19th Century, but it did not really take off until the New Deal of the 1930s. And in the past 50 years, it has gone very far. In 1928, total government spending at all levels was 10 percent of the national income. Two-thirds was state and local; the federal government spent 3 percent. Today, government spending at all levels is 40 percent of our national income and two-thirds of that is federal spending.

That's only one index, not necessarily even the most important.

Today, increasingly, governmental officials who are desperate to keep their jobs and their influence are a major special interest, preventing an elimination of bad programs and reduction in the role of government.

However, there is one thing which government and government alone can do. Government... has an effective printing press on which it can turn out green pieces of paper and, as a result, government and government alone is the source of inflation. Nobody else is responsible for it.

But there are some favorable signs which lead me not to despair of the preservation of a largely free society.

The most favorable of all is the inefficiency of government. If government were really spending efficiently that 40 percent of our income which it now takes, we'd be through. But fortunately, it's spending 40 percent of our income and getting 20 percent, roughly on a two-to-one ratio. And this in turn promotes a recognition on the part of the public of the inefficiency of government and it promotes a reaction against government. That reaction is very manifest. Its most promising sign today is the result of taxpayer movements in various states toward constitutional amendments limiting government spending.

What is the role of business in reversing the trend of more powerful government? Business as business can do little. But businessmen are citizens, they are individuals. This country is a democracy, it is a representative government. People are doing these things that many of us regret in Washington because it has been politically popular to do so. You and I can do our share as individuals to persuade our fellow citizens that this is a road to a collectivist state, a road which, if long continued, will destroy both our prosperity and our liberty. And if we do that, we can do a great deal to help turn back the tide.

Inflation problems

WASHINGTON — You have trouble saving; and may be dipping into savings to pay routine bills. A raise — if you're lucky enough to get one — doesn't seem to do much good. Most of the luxuries have been cut out of the budget; and still it's difficult making ends meet. Those are the effects inflation is having on many consumers.

For the business man, inflation also causes problems: His costs — raw materials, rent, credit, wages, utilities, insurance, fees, taxes, etc. — keep on going up. But raising prices to cover the increased expenses is difficult, because customers resist higher prices. If prices cannot rise, it is difficult to maintain product quality. He treads a thin line between survival and bankruptcy.

It is unrealistic to expect people in either of these positions to be very receptive to a call to "sacrifice" to end inflation. Rising wages and prices in the private sector are largely symptoms of inflation, not causes.

The cause of inflation is not difficult to understand. When the federal government spends more money than it takes in, in a high employment economy, the difference must be made up somehow. Some way to make it up is to raise taxes openly another way is to impose the hidden tax of inflation, by creating new money faster than the economy can create new goods and services.

Since voters are fed up with tax increases, the politicians are making up the difference with the inflation tax, and hoping no one will be smart enough to hold them responsible for it.

And in a sense, the politicians are only partly responsible. We all — collectively — tend to want more from the government than we are willing to pay for. Our representatives should make the tough decisions on who gets what from the money available. But it's politically more expedient to try to give everybody what he wants and let inflation take care of the overdraft.

As long as the federal government is running record deficits, inflation is not going to be controlled by anything business of labor can do. And jawboning from the director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, or from the President himself, deserves to be recognized for what it is: a political ploy.

For the record, the deficit for fiscal (budget) year 1977 was $45 billion. It will probably reach $53 billion for fiscal 1978. And the projection for 1979 is $60 billion.

If and when the government does its part by reducing spending, there are some things we can all do to help.

1. Stop pressing our representatives for costly government programs. Inflation removes from the left pocket what the government puts into the right.
  2. Limit average wage increases to average increases in productivity. Or better yet, increase productivity to match our expectations for wage increases.
  3. Shop carefully. Competitive pressure is a strong weapon against rising prices.
  4. Demand that the benefits from government regulation at least match the cost of regulation. Perfection is literally priceless...we just don't have the money to buy it.
  5. Adjust tax policy to reward saving and investment. Conquering inflation does not require resigning ourselves to a lower standard of living. But it does require that we rediscover the source of a rising standard of living: investment in better tools for workers which will improve productivity, provide new and better jobs, and provide higher increases for all Americans.
- Government "aid" isn't worth the paper it's written on.

Everybody's business

Untruths faster than fact

By SAM CAMPBELL

Few notions are more energetically distributed than the idea that a dollar is somehow more valuable when it has been taxed away from the person that earned it to be spent by those who did not earn it.

The proposition is advanced on several fronts and in several forms.

Most conspicuously it is advanced on the federal front. The form of the proposition is that the government has the capacity to stimulate the economy. What this means is that the government has power to inflate the currency and that, when more dollars chase more goods, as the saying goes, the goods will run faster. And so jobs will be created as the wheels of industry churn.

Secondly, more cleverly, the notion is advanced on the business front. Here it comes in the form, "Government Awards Huge Contract To Atlanta Firm." Typically an explanation follows that the contract will create unmet jobs. Thereby, Atlantans are lead to believe that the government did in fact stimulate its economy. Furthermore, they can point to such things as increased sales, increased traffic on the freeways, more individuals employed to prove their case.

The truth has a hard time catching up. How does one go about explaining, for instance, that the watered-down currency of inflation represents no more goods, services or buying power than did the pre-inflation currency? The real change was that some of the net borrowers — which is to say the industrial firms — were able to adjust their debt in the early stage of the intensified inflation period. That adjustment in their favor was made at the expense of net lenders, which is to say, the older segment of the population.

As for the stimulation of the Atlanta economy, how can it be denied? Yet what really happened is that the federal government took dollars earned in Los Angeles or Dallas and, through the taxation process, transferred the buying power so represented to Atlanta. What was seen was a mere geographical shuffle. Who observed the mini-depressions in Los Angeles, Dallas or wherever which the dollars were taken from?

The same error is repeated on the academic front. The UCLA Graduate School of Management has come out with a report that California will lose 451,300 jobs and $4.8 billion in income in event the voters decide to cut their own taxes. The UCLA people are simply saying that if a politician spends your earnings they make jobs, but if you spend your own earnings, you don't make jobs. In other words, they claim that a taxed dollar does more than a private dollar.

Yet government individuals and private individuals alike understand that a government job only lasts until the appropriation runs out. The government job then must get another appropriation. On the other hand, a private job tends to last as long as the business succeeds. A private job doesn't have to be renewed year after year by a shift of dollars from earners to non-earners.

Dr. William Allen, himself a UCLA economist, had a terse comment when informed of the university's assertion that a California tax cut would load the unemployment roles.

"I believe somebody loaded the dice."

Today in history

"But how is this legal plunder to be identified? Quite simply. See if the law takes from some persons what belongs to them, and gives it to other persons to whom it does not belong. See if the law benefits one citizen at the expense of another by doing what the citizen himself cannot do without committing a crime." — Frederic Bastiat, "The Law," 1850

Protecting your dependency deductions

Sylvia Porter

(Third in a series of seven columns)

Your dependency deductions, always valuable, could become even more so should the White House's tax proposals become law, for several itemized deductions would simply be wiped out.

This puts a premium on nailing down now every dependency deduction you can get — and there are ways to do this that may pleasantly surprise you. Some developments actually could save you extra taxes.

The basic rules: You're entitled to the $750 exemption for a dependent if he or she (1) has less than $750 income and (2) you provide more than one-half the support for the dependent.

The exceptions: The $750 test does not apply if (1) the dependent is under 19; or (2) is a full-time student. And (3) most important, tax-free income such as Social Security does not count for the income test. In all three cases, though, you still must supply more than half the support before you get the deduction — and the good news here is that each year the IRS seems to make it easier to provide that support.

The IRS recently announced that capital outlays — TV sets, autos, etc. — count as support for dependents and can help you meet the more-than-half support needed to claim the deduction.

Say your daughter, Sue, is a full-time college student. She will earn $2,100 in 1978 and you'll give her $1,900 in cash to cover the rest of her support. You also buy her a $300 TV set for her room. Until recently, you lost a dependency deduction for Sue: your $1,900 was less than 50 percent of her support.

But under the new IRS ruling, the $300 gift counts as support you provide, which brings your contribution to $2,200, more than Sue's $1,900. And although Sue earns more than $750, that income limit doesn't apply to a child under age 19 or a full-time student.

Now suppose you buy a finance a $2,500 used car for Sue, put up only $500 of the total cost in '78. What counts for support, $500 or $2,500? The answer is $2,500 — another big break.

For what you provide as support counts as soon as it is received, not when you actually pay for it. As long as Sue gets the car this year, the entire $2,500 cost counts as support.

But whatever you do, don't make the costly error so many taxpayers already have. The cost of the car or TV set or whatever is not deductible.

That's not the point here. The only point is that the cost of the item counts toward the more-than-half support test.

Also, warns Prentice - Hall, you must handle all this right! Example 1: You give your mother, whose only income is Social Security, a TV set for her bedroom.

Result: The TV set counts as support you provide. But if your mother leaves the set in the family den and all of you use it, the TV becomes a family item and its cost doesn't count for dependency purposes. It's not for your mother's exclusive use.

Example 2: You buy a car, title and register it in your name. But your son uses it about half the time.

Result: No part of the car's cost counts as support, for you own the car and merely permit your son to use it.

What to do: Put the title and register the auto in your son's name, if he will be using it most of the time. This way, the car becomes a gift to your son, counts with your other support costs.

Example 3: Your student son, Bob, a freshman in college, also has a part-time job, wants to buy a $4,000 car this year. He has saved $1,000 for the downpayment. You provide $3,000 for his support.

Wrong way: Bob buys the car in his name, puts the $1,000 down. You lose the dependency deduction, because the full cost of the car is treated as support Bob provides for himself this year. Even though he puts down only $1,000 in '78, he gets credit for $4,000 of support.

What to do: Put the $1,000 of your $3,000 in support toward the car, let Bob supply his $1,000 toward the other support. It hasn't cost you one cent more (you're still giving $3,000 cash) but you get the full dependency deduction. Bob gets his own dependency exemption too. Everyone is a winner.

This ruling may be bad news for you, if your child already has bought a car this year, for the ruling could knock out a dependency deduction on which you have been counting.

This dramatizes the crucial significance of a mid-year tax strategy review! If that big purchase has not yet been made, you have time to set matters up in the most favorable way to you. If the purchase has been made, you have time to calculate how much more you must contribute toward a dependent's support. It will be that an added $50 or so of support could guarantee a $750 deduction for you.

Tomorrow: More vital tips on dependency deductions.

Hispanics decry violation of their human rights

DALLAS (AP) — Mexican-Americans are asking President Carter to look at human rights violations in the American Southwest before being quick to take the campaign abroad.

An unprecedented gathering was held here Tuesday of leaders from across the Mexican-American political spectrum, angered by lack of response to their complaints of police brutality and human rights violations.

The leaders, from La Raza Unida to the League of United Latin American Citizens, issued a joint resolution requesting a meeting with the president.

The meeting would be "to discuss the announcement of a White House Conference on domestic human rights and related police abuse issues and to demand that there be immediate Justice Department prosecution in the Santos Rodriguez case before July 24," the resolution states.

Rodriguez was a 12-year-old Dallas youth shot in police custody in 1973. Former Dallas patrolman Darrel Cain was convicted and sentenced to five years in connection with the shooting.

"They told us on Santos Rodriguez it's an old case," said San Antonio attorney Ruben Sandoval. He added the Justice Department recently prosecuted an even older case not involving a Spanish-surnamed person.

"I don't think the problem is just the police or the courts, I think it's also a problem with the Justice Department," he said.

Leaders threatened dire political consequences if their demands are met with indifference, and said a trip will be made to Mexico City to present information to the international press.

Ruben Bonilla, state director of LULAC, said, "I think it is necessary we make known the political ramifications. If we have to flex our political muscles, let's do it on this critical issue."

California Gov. Jerry Brown and Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy could benefit from Mexican-American votes in the 1980 Texas primary as easily as Carter did in 1976, Bonilla said.

Several references were made to a recent disturbance in a Houston park.

"You think Houston was something — there'll be other Houstons," Sandoval said. "We don't advocate that...That's a combination of people's frustration."

The Mexican-American Legal Defense and Educational Fund offered a list of 56 alleged police brutality cases since 1976, most of them in the Southwest. Seventeen were in Texas.

Vilma Martinez, MALDEF president, said her organization worked "to document that there is a pattern of official violence."

Zavala County Judge Jose Angel Gutierrez of La Raza Unida said, "Let us not be deluded into thinking it's a recent occurrence."

Mexican-Americans are not asking for new laws, Ms. Martinez said. Bureaucrats are rather being urged, "You have the law at your command. Implement it; enforce it."

U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling was criticized for his light sentences of three former Houston policemen convicted in the Joe Campos Torres case. Bonilla said an act pending in Congress would make sanction of federal judges possible.

Torres' body was found floating in Houston's Buffalo Bayou three days after his arrest in a tavern disturbance.

Bonilla was asked if the coalition pushing for human rights action could last.

"It's vitally necessary that it hold together. It's a nonpartisan type...I'm very hopeful they can hold together," he said.

Among the other organizations sending representatives to the conference were the American G.I. Forum, Incorporated Mexican-American Government Employees and Tizerina and State Rep. Paul Brown Berets. New Mexico Moreno, D-El Paso, were also land grant activist Reies Lopez present.

Gun owners deluge bureau with letters

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms recently asked for public comment on proposed new gun regulations, project officer James A. Hunt thought perhaps 7,000 firearms owners would write letters to the bureau.

But the bureau has been hit with a blizzard of mail. More than 150,000 letters have been received to date, and each day letter carriers bring thousands more.

The overwhelming majority of writers are angry gun owners adamantly opposed to the proposed regulations, which they view as a step toward national gun registration.

"I invite you personally to try and take my gun away — you might get it, but it will be when you pry my cold dead fingers from it," said a Californian.

"We certainly don't need any more red tape, expense and paperwork where firearms are concerned, and we certainly don't need a national firearms registration program of any kind," said a Nebraska resident.

The proposals would require all new weapons to carry a federal serial number. Gun dealers would be required to promptly report all gun thefts and file quarterly reports stating the disposition of each firearm.

Parachutist dies in air collision

GRIFFITH, Ind. (AP) — A parachutist was killed after he collided in the air with another skydiver during the filming of a television commercial and plummeted to the ground with an unopen chute, police said.

Lake County Coroner Albert T. Willardo identified the victim as Kevin Shea, 28, of Chicago.

Sheriff's police said Shea, a professional photographer, was killed Monday when he collided with Joseph M. Wielgosz, 24, of Winnipeg, Manitoba. Wielgosz was injured and was taken to Broadway Methodist Hospital in Merrillville, police said. His condition was not released.

Police said Shea apparently was knocked unconscious when he and Wielgosz collided in the air about 20 miles east of Griffith, in northwest Indiana. Witnesses told authorities that Shea's parachute failed to open and that the other man's chute was partially open when the accident occurred.

arm under their control. Information from the reports, which would not include the name or address of private purchasers, would be stored in a Treasury Department computer.

Treasury officials repeatedly have denied that the proposals amount to gun registration. But the National Rifle Association and other "gun lobby" spokesmen have warned the proposals amount to a first step toward national gun registration, and urged gun owners to protest.

Their urgings have not fallen on deaf ears.

Of the 37,000 letters which have been read to date, Hunt said, 34,400 oppose the proposals while 2,600 support them.

Gay rights vote looks bleak in Oregon

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The vote margin was smaller but the impact for homosexuals was no softer as this university city followed the lead of three other U.S. communities and repealed an ordinance banning discrimination against gay people.

In what many had expected would be a close election, final unofficial returns late Tuesday showed 22,898 votes in favor of repeal and 13,427 opposed. The count represented 50 percent of the registered voters in the city, Oregon's second largest.

The margin, however, was not as sweeping as the recent vote in Wichita, Kan., where a 4-to-1 tally threw out a gay rights ordinance there. Voters were also overwhelmingly against similar laws in Dade County, Fla., where the margin last June was 7-to-3, and in St. Paul, Minn., with a 2-to-1 margin last month.

"If they couldn't win in Eugene, they can't win any place else, except maybe San Francisco," said Larry Dean, director of the successful repeal drive by Volunteer Organization Involved in Community Enactments.

"There will be more referendums and I suspect we'll see these gay rights laws falling one by one across the country," Dean said.

But gay rights supporters, who had spent more than twice as much as their opponents on the campaign, vowed to keep fighting discrimination.

Gay rights activists estimate that about 40 U.S. communities still have laws banning discrimination against homosexuals in jobs and housing.

About 250 disappointed supporters of gay rights held a candlelight march Tuesday night. The group formed a large circle in front of the

Tennis racket nets 10 years

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — A Fort Worth man has been sentenced to 10 years in prison for masterminding a scheme to solicit nearly a quarter of a million dollars to finance a private Wichita Falls tennis club that was never built.

State District Judge Calvin Ashley sentenced Ron DiGiorno, 39, Tuesday.

He will serve the 10 years concurrent with a 12-year federal sentence for securities violations.

DiGiorno, operator of RDG and Company, obtained money from 28 persons from throughout the country to invest in the club, Assistant District Attorney Tom Schrandt said.

He collected $240,000, including $7,500 each from eight Wichita Falls residents. Other contributors were from Minnesota, Georgia, Maryland, Idaho and Colorado.

Schrandt said Securities and Exchange Commission investigators told him DiGiorno was involved in $15 million worth of land development and investment projects in Texas.

courthouse and holding hands sang "We Shall Overcome."

"Gay people are not going to go away and we don't want anything less than our rights," said Douglas Huncke. "Keep your minds straight on that freedom or that peace, whether it is in the courts, in the streets or in the Legislature."

Another member of Eugene Citizens for Equal Rights said the group was discussing the possibility of seeking relief in the courts.

Tuesday's vote repealed an amendment which had added sexual orientation to the kinds of discrimination protected by the city's human rights ordinance. The City Council adopted the amendment last November, but it never took effect because signatures were quickly gathered to put it to a popular vote.

The anti-gay rights group shunned the Bible-quoting campaign styles of previous gay rights referendums. Instead, it argued that homosexuality was a choice and should not be protected by the same civil rights guarantees as race and religion.

Dean said his group was not gloating about the victory. He said he respects the sincerity of gay rights advocates and thinks people should have more compassion and understanding of homosexuals.

"My personal opinion is that people voted this way because they see a breakdown in our country of morals and finally they are saying enough, no more," he said. "This ordinance represented to the community an endorsement of homosexuality and they didn't want to have their families and children exposed to that. There needs to be more understanding of the gay lifestyle, but not legal approval."

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
A severe thunderstorm moved through West Texas last night and early today, lashing Denver City with hail the size of golf balls and damaging windows and mobile homes.

Wind gusts of 68 miles per hour were recorded at Guadalupe Pass about midnight. Scattered thunderstorms hit the northwestern Texas Panhandle and extreme southwestern Texas.

Absentee voting continues through Tue.

Absentee voting for the June 3 Democratic run-off for the office of county judge between Don Hinton and Robert McPherson started today and will continue through May 30 in the county clerk's office on the second floor of the Gray County courthouse.

Hinton, incumbent, had 1899 votes to McPherson's 1644 in the May 6 primary.

Hinton was appointed to the position of county judge in April 1977 after Don Cain, then judge, vacated the post to become judge of the 223rd district court.

He had served as county commissioner for precinct 2, Pampa, for more than seven years.

McPherson, a graduate of the University of Texas Law School, served as city judge during 1959 and 1960. Formerly an executive assistant to the state Commissioner of Commerce and executive director of the Public Service Commission of Alaska, he returned to the Panhandle to practice law in 1969.

Absentee voting will be on weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and noon and 1 and 5 p.m. with the exception of Monday, when the courthouse will be closed for Memorial Day.

Those who will be out of town, are older than 65, or who are ill or disabled and have a doctor's certificate may obtain a ballot through the county clerk's office and vote absentee. For information call 5-2308.

Persimmon Hills presented to library

Mrs. Joe Gordon presents to Dan Snyder, librarian at Lovett Memorial Library, a complete set of leather-bound "Persimmon Hill" magazines. "Persimmon Hill" is the official publication of the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City. Local attorney Joe Gordon is a recent past president and chairman of the board of directors and continues to serve on the board of the Hall. He said that many Pampans are active in supporting the institution, including Mrs. Nona S. Payne who is an honorary director, and Bill Arrington who is a trustee. Gordon said the Cowboy Hall of Fame was created "to preserve the history of the Old West, to present it to the youth of today, and to commemorate the courage and industry of the early pioneers." He said that issues of "Persimmon Hill" and the articles they contain "follow that same pattern." Snyder said the bound publications probably will be placed in the library's Texas Room. ## Filibuster bottles bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — If this is Wednesday, it must be Bob Dole's turn to lead the filibuster.

Opponents of proposed labor law revisions are running what amount to senatorial relay teams on and off the Senate floor to make sure they keep the bill bottled up.

At the end of the day, one team captain hands the figurative baton to another, whose team carries it the following day.

The team captains, all Republicans, are Dole of Kansas and Sens. John Tower of Texas and Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming.

There was a suggestion, as yet unheeded, that the teams select nicknames. "We tried to get them to adopt some, but no one has yet," said Mark Lubbers, an aide to Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind.

A "Daily Opposition Bulletin," published by Lugar's staff, informs senators when they are supposed to take their turns on the Senate floor.

Today's lineup: Dole was scheduled to speak from the beginning of debate until 11:30 a.m. Then Sens. Pete Domenici, R-N.M.; William Scott, R-Va.; James McClure, R-Idaho, and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., have stints of up to two hours before Dole gets a second turn.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, leading the opposition, spends several hours a day on the floor.

So far, according to Lubbers, each team captain has found enough teammates to fill up the day.

"This week it looks like we're going to go to our bench strength a little more than we have," he said, as some senators leaving Washington in advance of the Memorial Day recess that starts Friday.

Opponents hold the floor for much of the day. At least one backer of the bill, usually either Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., or Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., is always present.

While senators on the two sides occasionally engage in a real debate, more often one lawmaker reads a prepared speech to a chamber nearly empty except for aides.

The first attempt to end the filibuster is scheduled June 7. Opponents of the bill remain hopeful they can keep the filibuster going indefinitely, but supporters say they will prevail some time after the first vote.

Oil, gas securities must be registered

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — So-called Schedule D oil and gas securities must be registered with the State Securities Board, the Texas Supreme Court ruled today.

It upheld a decision of the Texasarkana Court of Civil Appeals without writing a new opinion of its own.

Schedule D securities are reported to the U. S. Securities and Exchange Commission but are exempt by federal law from formal registration with the SEC. They get their name from the form — Schedule D — filed with the SEC.

The case arose from a suit filed by State Securities Commissioner Richard Latham against Entex Oil & Gas Co. (of Nevada), Spindletop Oil & Gas Co., Oklahoma Coal & Oil Co., Laprada Oil & Gas Co., Texas Coal & Energy Co., Paul E. Cash, J. W. Heflin and Joe B. Owen.

The court said it was obvious that since all of their sales were outside Texas, they were exempt from state regulation.

"It is noteworthy that in many instances the only non-Texas aspect of the corporate activities was the location of the investor. Those appellants engaged in sales scrupulously avoided making sales to Texas residents," the appeals court said.

The court said it was obvious that the Texas securities law applies to the Schedule D sellers even though the purchasers lived outside the state.

Space agency officials hope scientists will begin to test problems of muscle mass and calcium loss that are common to both astronauts and bed-ridden patients.

Kraft said he hoped the conference would make scientists aware that research in a gravity-free environment is now possible.

"Until now, the use of zero-gravity has been so difficult, many people just never considered it," Kraft said.

The conference was to adjourn today following a series of mini-seminars at JSC.

NASA encourages space medicine

HOUSTON (AP) — Space agency officials are taking a soft-sell approach in trying to convince doctors and scientists of the unique possibilities of medical experimentation in the zero gravity of space.

"We are, in a sense, like a business trying to develop new products," Richard S. Johnston, director of space and life sciences at the Johnson Space Center, said Tuesday.

Johnston spoke to a group of 350 doctors and scientists attending a two-day session on life sciences co-sponsored by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the University of Texas Health Science Center.

"We don't want this to be an oversell," Johnston said. "We're not talking about hospitals in space. But maybe we will talk to some people interested in studying such things as fracture healing and treatment of burn victims, which future generations may be able to consider."

Dr. Christopher Kraft, director of the Johnson Space Center, said NASA's space shuttle program would begin a series of test flights next year leading to future shuttle laboratory experiments in space.

Names in the news

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Rosemary Clooney and Helen O'Connell, members of a new act called Four Girls Four, celebrated common birthdays and some of their famous songs with a huge cake in the shape of a phonograph record.

The platter cake was presented at their Tuesday evening show here by the other members of the group, Rose Marie and Margaret Whiting.

Decorating the cake were titles of some of their hits from the 40s and 50s: "Hey There" and "Tenderly" by Miss Clooney, "Green Eyes" and "Tangerine" by Miss O'Connell.

The singers were born on May 23. They declined to specify in which year.

Four Girls Four, an act made up of individual appearances by each member, was organized earlier this spring and is beginning a national tour.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — In only six hours, Vice President Walter Mondale gave a graduation pep talk, enriched the campaign war chest of an old Senate friend and still managed to leave 'em laughing.

Mondale's visit to Rhode Island Tuesday wound up at a $100-a-plate fundraiser in Warwick that added some $35,000 to Sen. Claiborne Pell's campaign account.

Mondale laced his brief speech to some 500 Democrats with political humor and lavish praise for Pell, the state's senior senator. He stayed away from national issues.

Earlier, Mondale spoke at Providence College's commencement exercises, urging 1,071 graduates to retain their idealism as they enter the world of business.

"Too often, in the scramble for jobs and the fight to make ends meet... values get pushed aside. For you the values of compassion and idealism are not confined to youth or ivory towers."

Mondale's wife, Joan, traveled to New Hampshire Tuesday, visiting elementary schools participating in the artists-in-residence program.

Asked if her husband shared her interest in art, Mrs. Mondale, honorary chairman of the Federal Council of the Arts and the Humanities, told one youngster: "When I first met him in Minnesota, he'd never been inside an art museum before. He's learned a lot."

TOKYO (AP) — North Korean President Kim Il Sung is planning trips to Romania and Mozambique.

The North Korean Central News Agency said Tuesday that Kim will make an official goodwill visit to Romania at a convenient time. It said Kim accepted an invitation by Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, who just concluded a visit to North Korea.

The news agency reported Sunday that Kim will visit Mozambique.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Television star Carol Burnett, who left San Antonio as a 9-year-old, returned to her hometown Tuesday and was greeted by thousands of cheering admirers.

"When I leave San Antonio, I will look back on the city with great fondness and love," Miss Burnett said Tuesday. "The friendliness has just been all encompassing."

More than 20,000 persons — including about 10,000 students — gave Miss Burnett a standing ovation when she appeared at the San Antonio Independent School District awards program at Alamogordo Stadium.

"I can't believe this," she told one person on the platform.

A motorcade through downtown San Antonio took Miss Burnett to the Alamo, where she was honored by Mayor Lila Cockrell, who declared "Carol Burnett Day."

Miss Burnett was born here and moved to Los Angeles in 1941 with her mother and grandmother.

She returned to San Antonio at the invitation of the school district.

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago I discovered that my husband of 16 years was having a torrid affair with a young divorced woman in his office. We agreed to make a serious effort to restore our marriage for the sake of our children. The young woman agreed to quit her job, but so far she is still working for my husband. He isn't even looking for a replacement, and I will not feel secure as long as they are in daily contact. Human nature being what it is, it would be so easy for them to re-establish the old relationship. What do you think, Abby? I'm trying to be mature and trusting, but I still feel

THREATENED IN CHICAGO

DEAR THREATENED: No matter how pure your husband's intentions, as long as his current heartthrob remains in his office, the embers are still smoldering. Tell him that you do not expect superhuman restraint from mere mortals, and if he is sincere in his efforts to restore your marriage, he will send her on her way immediately, with helpful references.

DEAR ABBY: I have been going steady for a year with a girl I'll call "Joan," but there is another girl I like better. I don't want to hurt Joan's feelings, but I would like to drop her so I can openly date this other girl that I'm seeing secretly on the side.

Joan is a very nervous girl, and whenever I've even hinted about cooling our relationship, she gets sick. I would appreciate any help you can give me. I am 23 and Joan is 21.

STUCK IN BEVERLY HILLS

DEAR STUCK: I feel sorry for Joan, but I feel sorry for you if you continue the relationship only because you lack the courage to cool it.

Level with her, gently, but honestly. She may get sick, but she'll survive. And don't stall, or you may find yourself permanently stuck with a woman who "gets sick" whenever she doesn't get her own way. (P.S. Joan needs counseling, and I hope she realizes it.)

DEAR ABBY: Isn't it true that if two people dance well together it means they are "in tune" and "meant for each other"?

I heard somewhere that if a boy and girl dance well together, they will probably have other things in common and will most likely have a successful marriage. Please confirm this.

LILA IN GAINESVILLE

DEAR LILA: When two people dance well together, it means only one thing. They dance well together. Believe me, it means nothing else. If you are using dancing as a basis for compatibility in marriage, forget it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO BOBB: No one said it better than Benjamin Franklin: "If a man empties his purse into his head, no man can take it away from him. An investment in knowledge always pays the best interest." Please, hang in there and get your degree.

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb
By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My sister was in the hospital. She started to swell up in her stomach and all over her body.

The doctor said it was cirrhosis of the liver. He must be crazy. My sister never did approve of drinking. She never drank, maybe she would have a drink on Christmas Eve or a drink when her daughter got married. So it couldn't be from drinking. One doctor told her it was a poisoned liver. Please let me know what it is.

DEAR READER: Your letter is a perfect example of the point that "ignorance is not bliss." You are wrong in thinking that cirrhosis of the liver means you have been drinking too much alcohol. There are many causes for cirrhosis of the liver and only about 60 percent of the cases are associated with excess alcohol consumption. That's bad enough but it isn't 100 percent.

A liver can be damaged with a variety of chemicals, or from gallstones or various infections, including viral hepatitis. To help clarify this for you I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-8, Living With Your Liver. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Liver failure as occurs with cirrhosis of the liver can and does cause an accumulation of a lot of fluid in the abdomen particularly, and eventually generalized fluid retention.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband and I are both in our mid-20s, eat fairly well-balanced meals, but really don't get enough exercise.

I have a desk job, he is an electrician and a little more active. Could you recommend some type of exercise program to help us? I'm about five to 10 pounds overweight due to too much sitting. I'd like to lose a little but not a lot.

DEAR READER: You have asked an intelligent question — how to exercise to control overweight as opposed to what special diet you could go on.

It is the decrease in physical activity that often sets the stage for obesity.

An average adult will use about 50 calories more when walking a mile, no matter how fast or slow, as he would sitting during that time. There is some variation depending on your body weight. So if you and your husband took a mile and a half walk every day you would use about 75 calories more a day than you do now. In a year's time that is equivalent to about eight pounds of body fat.

If you are just interested in controlling obesity that is a sane and sensible program that almost anyone can follow. If you do it together it will re-enforce the habit and you are more likely to stick to it. It would also be a good time to communicate and enjoy life and your surroundings. I wish more people would do this as part of their life style.

Of course you could learn to do a number of sports that you enjoy together. Tennis is fine. Swimming is an excellent exercise. Golfing with, out the golf cart will help. The one thing you need to avoid is increasing your eating or drinking at the same time you increase your exercise. A couple of cocktails after a golf match pretty well "scotches" the benefits you may have obtained from the exercise in terms of preventing obesity.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband and I are both in our mid-20s, eat fairly well-balanced meals, but really don't get enough exercise. I have a desk job, he is an electrician and a little more

Polly's Pointers
By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY: Keep a pretty colored small sponge in the bathroom or kitchen and use for a soap dish. There will be enough soap in the sponge to wipe the sink daily or even more frequently so it always shines. Rinse sponge and squeeze well to keep soap damage down. It is a time saver as I can wipe out the sink whenever I wash my hands. — MARCIA Polly's note — Why not put the sponge on a small plate, preferably plastic if there are children around?

Sister Kate is Irish frontline heroine

EDITOR'S NOTE — Kathleen O'Hanlon is oblivious to whether they're terrorist or bystander, Protestant or Catholic. When they're delivered to her, her only concern is that the worst get treated first. She's an emergency room nurse, extraordinary.

By TED BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer
BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — To ambulance drivers in Belfast she's simply "Sister Kate," the woman waiting at the door for the victims.

Her christened name is Kathleen O'Hanlon. She can't watch a gory TV show because it makes her sick to the stomach, but she's one of the best emergency room nurses in the world.

"If someone hands me a blown-off leg or arm it doesn't bother me to stand there holding it awhile," says the petite woman with a handshake like a wrestler and the step of a birthday child.

During Northern Ireland's nine years of terrorism this nursing sister — a British colloquialism meaning senior nurse — has held more than a few mangled limbs while surgeons fought to save lives of bomb, gunshot and fire victims.

Queen Elizabeth II, defender of the Protestant Church of England, has recognized the expertise of this Irish Catholic colleen and singled her as a Member of the Order of the British Empire.

The Royal Academy of Nursing has paid tribute to her frontline cool by making her chairman of its Accident and Emergency Room Forum.

The casualty room staff at Royal Victoria Hospital speaks of her skill and humor, student nurses flock to her lectures, and one ambulance driver who's seen it all calls her "one tough cookie but a great lady."

At 47 and with no immediate family nearby, Sister Kate spends most of her time working, with time off for sleep and some television "and maybe a trashy book, some kind of silly novel." Once in a while there's a day to get away from it all, walking the wild and windy Northern Ireland coastline.

Her savings go toward an occasional visit to the families of her 20 first cousins living in the Boston area. She always takes along her Norton High School football jersey to wear when she roughhouses with the kids.

"I love it here, we have such a good team at this hospital," she says. "People say to me 'Why do you stick with it?' But I don't see why all the decent people should have to leave just because of a violent few. This is my home. I was born here, and I'm not afraid to live here."

Royal Victoria Hospital is a concrete octopus with glass tentacles splayed over acres of barricaded no-man's land dividing Roman Catholic and Protestant strongholds at the top of Falls Road, the neighborhood where Kate O'Hanlon was raised.

Its formal entrance is brooded over by a statue of Queen Victoria dressed in grime. Inside it has become renown for treating burn and blast victims. Its reputation attracts specialists from dozens of countries, including Rhodesia and South Africa, to watch new techniques for dealing with trauma cases.

Through all the internal warfare which everyone in Northern Ireland calls "the troubles," Sister Kate has listened for the insistent claxons which have become Belfast's anthem — those ambulance sirens heralding more mutilation on her sterile doorstep.

Stationed at the swinging doors leading to the underground driveway, Sister Kate makes the first instant medical judgments on casualty cases without, she says, moral judgment.

"The minute those people come through the door they cease to be instigator or victim. They become patients, and the ones who need treatment the most get the highest priority."

She says her sense of humor and love of a joke, plus years of seasoning and training, help her cope with the pressure.

"I keep calm. If I lose my head then everyone else around me is going to lose theirs. We've had up to 150 people in shock come through those doors in an hour. This isn't a job where you can flap about and say 'Oh dear, oh dear.'"

"Yesterday we had a young (British) soldier come in here with a gunshot wound and he was dead when we got him. That was yesterday. Today it's a part of history. You go on."

"But you never get used to it. When it's happening you're okay. But that night you can't sleep."

She thinks nothing of holding a blown off arm or leg.

HOME DEMONSTRATION
Marielyn Butler was nominated for the Texas Home Demonstration Association chairman last week when the Gray County Home Demonstration Council met to complete spring meetings and discuss summer events.

Nominated as delegates to THDA were Virginia Harvey, Pat Murray and Boots Barnett. Alternates were Pauline Beard, Eloise Wells and Genevieve Taylor.

Each home demonstration club is to furnish four dozen cookies for the July 6 Dress Review in the fellowship hall of the First Christian Church. For the 4-H reports, the council learned that projects for the summer include a teen leaders lab, a dress review, an electric camp, the 4-H camp and a 4-H rodeo. Donations may be made for buckles for awards at the rodeo.

Sally Brainard was awarded a scholarship from the council. That was followed by a program on embroidery.

The council will sponsor a weight control seminar at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the courthouse annex. The cultural arts seminar will be on July 13 and a sick plant clinic will be July 24. The council will meet again Aug. 28.

GOLDEN SPREAD PORCELAIN

Louise Goodwin of Arlington demonstrated the painting of grapes and roses at a May 12 meeting of the Golden Spread Porcelain Art Club in the Senior Citizen's Center.

The club will meet again for a "show and tell" workshop with members who have attended seminars on June 9.

WORTHWHILE DEMONSTRATION CLUB
Cancer prevention and detection were discussed at a recent meeting of the Worthwhile Home Demonstration Club, with visitors urging members to have cancer checkups and quit smoking.

Elaine Houston, county extension agent, showed three films on cancer and Margie Holland, nurse for the State Public Health Department, urged members to have a cancer checkup once a year and answered questions. Mrs. Rufe Jordan, who recently attended a meeting of the Cancer Association, urged members to quit smoking.

Members learned that June 6 to 8 will be the 4-H Roundup, with July 6 slated as the date for the 4-H dress review and July 13 the date set for the cultural project.

BETA CHI

Guests received leis and crowns at a South Sea Island celebration at Lefors High School for the last meeting of the year for the Beta Chi Conclave of Kappa Kappa Iota.

WT sets enrollment for first term

Registration for first summer term classes at West Texas State University will be from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. June 5 in the WTSU Activities Center.

First term classes begin June 6 with final examinations scheduled July 10. Second term classes will run from July 14 through Aug. 17 with registration set for 13.

For additional information, contact the WTSU registrar at (806) 365-3331.

Winners of door prizes were Margaret Parsons and Lela Harris. Each member brought a luau lunch and the president furnished a tray of Hawaiian foods and beverages.

The conclave voted to sell cookbooks next fall. Jo Ann Fenno, in-coming president, announced that she would notify members of any summer activities.

PHI EPSILON BETA
Members of Phi Epsilon Beta celebrated an "End of the Year" party at Joyzelle McIntire's house recently with beans, cornbread and homemade ice cream.

Kay Newman, outgoing president, was presented with a scrapbook, as was Alberta Jefferies, sponsor.

Secret sisters were revealed and members drew names for next year's secret sisters.

Socials are planned for the summer months with a Creek Party during June. The club will resume regular meetings during August.

Girls would be allowed in boys 4-H club events

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department, after delaying for six years, has proposed rules which would give women equal rights with men in educational programs. It helps finance.

The proposal, for example, would allow girls in 4-H clubs to participate in events that for boys, such as automobile rodeo competitions. In a proposal signed May 3, before he left for an overseas trip, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland directed his agency to abide by a section of a 1972 law which provides for "sex non-discrimination regulations in certain education programs and activities getting financial aid from the U.S. Department of Agriculture."

The proposal, officials said Monday, would make USDA the second federal department to have such regulations in force. The first was the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"This would ensure that non-enrolled participants such as applicants for 4-H membership would be protected against discrimination," the announcement said.

Discrimination based on sex would be barred in "certain education activities involving financial assistance to buy, construct, renovate or repair buildings; to give scholarships, loans, grants, wages or other funds to students; to provide services of federal personnel or to give, sell, or lease surplus other federal property to a covered recipient" getting federal aid.

As defined, recipients could include "most public or private entities such as states, counties, clubs or other organizations" the department said. The proposal involves a broad range of USDA educational grants and research programs in which universities are the primary beneficiaries. But the anti-sex discrimination rule would apply to other institutions which get USDA assistance.

According to the National Advisory Council on women's educational programs, more than $2.5 billion is involved in the various programs operated by USDA which are subject to the anti-sex discrimination division.

But since early 1975, when the department's Office of Equal Opportunity first recommended that rules be adopted to enforce the law, the department has delayed putting them into operation, according to a background paper provided by the council.

Finally, about a year ago, a complaint that "sex segregated car rodeo competitions" were permitted in the 4-H program stirred USDA officials into action, the council said.

A draft of the council's paper, part of a letter sent to Bergland and other cabinet officers last Dec. 29, was provided at the request of a reporter.

Thus, the council said, the department reconsidered its reluctance to propose the anti-sex discrimination rules and cleared the way for bringing USDA into line with the 1972 law.

The proposed rules will be open for public comment until June 15. Those may be sent to: Office of Equal Opportunity, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Woman with candy dies escaping

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — An 18-year-old woman who allegedly stole four candy bars worth 80 cents from an all-night grocery store died in a car wreck while trying to elude police, authorities said.

Brenda Goatz, a dispatcher with the Columbia Police Department, said the manager of an IGA store reported that a young woman took the candy bars without paying for them early Monday. He told police the woman fled the store when he approached her.

According to police reports, the woman, identified as Kathy Wimberly of Clarksville, pulled a friend from a car parked in front of the store and sped away, wrecking it two blocks away.

Gold team edges Green, 15-14

By DAVE MUSIC
Sports Editor

Spring football training ended Tuesday night as prospective members of the 1978-1979 Harvester football team played the intra-squad Green and Gold game.

The Gold team, quarterbacked by Greg Quarles, scored 15 points in the final half to edge the Green, 15-14. Jeff Copeland's block of an extra point attempt by the Green early in the first quarter provided the winning edge.

The Green team controlled the game in the first half, maintaining possession and field position.

Quarterback of the Green team Rick Dougherty moved his squad well, relying on option plays, the off-tackle running of Doug Smith and Richard Wuest's drives through the middle.

Julian Clark was on the receiving end of two Dougherty passes - for 19 yards and 15 yards. Clark's 15-yard reception put the green team on the scoreboard for the second time. Dougherty added two points on the conversion to set the score at Green, 14-0.

The Gold teams next possession ended when a Quarles pass was intercepted by the Green's Dwayne Dunn.

The Green was unable to move the ball and punted to Gold.

Then it was Gold's turn to give it up when the Green's Ben McCaleb fell on a fumble.

Green controlled the ball till the close of the first half.

Though the Gold offense had failed to score during the first half, the defense was beginning to hold the Green team toward the end of the second quarter. Gold defensemen Copeland, Cox and Kennedy combined for more than 20 tackles over the course of the game and figured in key defensive plays.

If the Green team had it mostly their way in the opening half, the opposite was the case during the third and fourth quarters.

Penalties and fumbles frustrated the Green's offense while the Gold offense began to establish its game.

Gold's second possession of the third quarter resulted in a score. Starting on their own 21 yard line, the Gold team went 79 yards, on passes to Rudy Rolland for 11 and 14 yards, a 10 yard reception by Keenan Henderson and a sweep to the right side by Mike Porter for 6 yards and 6 points. Louis Cox added 1 point with the kick.

Green took possession after the kick-off on their own 42 yard line but failed to gain a first down. Richard Wuest's put was blocked giving the ball to the Gold squad on the Green 25 yard line.

Gold ran three plays including a 13-yard run by Doug Kennedy for the score. Quarterback Greg Quarles ran an option to the left on the point after that tacked two more on the board. Gold led 15-14 mid-way through the fourth quarter.

Green had possession on the 42 yard line after the kick off but fumbled on the third play from scrimmage to the Gold teams' Louis Cox.

The Gold team wore down the clock before punting to the Green 19 yard line.

Green moved the ball out to the 42 yard line before Dougherty was sacked and time ran out.

For players with only 21 days of practice under their belts, the Harvesters seemed well coached, spirited and disciplined.

Next season will tell the story, but the Harvester players showed some fine individual talent and desire.

Bullets will make the next move

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The chess game that is playoff basketball is in full swing, with the next move up to Washington Coach Dick Motta.

His Seattle counterpart, Lenny Wilkens, made the first move on Sunday, bringing 34-year-old Paul Silas off the bench in the second half to play against Washington's Elvin Hayes after the Big E had outplayed Seattle rookie Jack Sikma in the early going.

The move paid off as Silas effectively neutralized the Bullets' high scorer, limiting Hayes to just two baskets in the second half. Meanwhile, Silas grabbed 12 rebounds as Seattle dominated the boards, enabling the Sonics to rally from a 19-point third quarter deficit to a 106-102 victory in the opening game of the National Basketball Association championship series.

With the second game of the best-of-seven playoff finals to be played here Thursday night, it is now up to Motta to counter Wilkens' move.

"Silas was a big factor in the opener, no question about it," said Motta. "We were worried about him, and I guess it was with good reason."

Motta does not expect Hayes to fade from view on Thursday. "We can correct the things we did wrong," he said, without delving into specifics. "We have adjustments we can make."

One would be to make sure Washington's playmakers are more conscious of getting the ball into Hayes, something that rarely happened when the Sonics were making their comeback on Sunday.

Hayes complained about that on Tuesday.

"Some people are saying I didn't work hard enough to get the basketball, but that is wrong," he said. "I was open and if I get the ball, I'm going to score. The guards can't take all the shots."

But Motta defended his guards, who took his team's final eight shots on Sunday and 16 of the last 22.

"I think we got it inside enough. When you get it inside, you have to put up the shots," he said. As for Hayes' comments, Motta warned, "We can't start bickering and having words."

The Sonics preferred not to blame Hayes for his ineffectiveness, but to credit Silas, who fronted the 6-foot-9 forward and discouraged the Washington players from passing him the ball.

By The Associated Press
El Paso's Jim Dorsey had things going pretty much his way for six innings in Texas League action Tuesday night against Tulsa.

He had Tulsa shut out going into the seventh, but the visitors erupted for six runs in the inning and went on to an 11-4 victory.

Dave Riviera—three-run homer was the highlight of Tulsa's big evening. Odie Davis came along an inning later and added another three-run home run, giving the win to Tulsa reliever Stan Kakubowski, 5-0, who pitched the final five innings. Dorsey, 5-2, took the loss.

In other Texas League action Tuesday, San Antonio used two big innings to defeat Shreveport 11-2. Arkansas snapped a four-game losing streak by burying Amarillo 8-1 and Jim Buckner rallied Midland to a 5-1 victory over Jackson.

San Antonio, which leads Midland by three games in the Western Division, scored four runs in the first inning and seven more in the fourth to beat Shreveport. Mickey Hatcher had a three-run homer in the first and Myron White had a solo four-bagger to get San Antonio off to an early 4-0 lead.

Thirteen batters came to the plate in San Antonio's big fourth inning, and Shreveport had to look at eight batters before finally getting the first out of the inning. Shreveport gave up three walks and five errors in the inning. Dave Stewart, 5-4, was the winner and Jim Smith, 2-4, the loser.

Arkansas rode the pitching of Pat Darcy and the power hitting of Gene Dotson. Darcy, 1-0, formerly with the Cincinnati Reds, gave up only four hits before being relieved in the eighth. Dotson hit a two-run homer and a pair of singles in four times at bat. Arkansas' Fred Tisdale also drove in two runs with a third-inning triple.

Last inning rally stops Astros, 3-2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Much has been said about pitching in the San Francisco Giants' rise to the top of the National League West, but the team's bench and its fans merit an assist for the latest dramatic chapter in the success story.

"It was tough to bat in that cold, but the fans kept yelling and got my adrenaline going," said pinch-batter Tom Heinzelman, whose single in the bottom of the ninth scored the second run in a three-run Giant rally that stunned the Houston Astros 3-2 Tuesday night.

Bill Madlock followed with a two-out single to deep right-center, scoring pinch-runner Mike Sadek from second base for the Giants' 10th victory in the past 12 games.

With the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Cincinnati Reds both losing, the Giants increased their lead to one game over both clubs.

Jack Clark and Larry Herndon started the winning rally with one-out walks off reliever Joe Sambito, 2-2. Marc Hill then belted a run-scoring single to center and was replaced by Sadek at first base.

With two down, Heinzelman batted for winner Randy Moffitt, 3-1, and lined a run-scoring single to left. Madlock's game-winning hit followed. "I was just up there looking for the ball," said Madlock, who was mobbed by teammates at first base. "We knew the Dodgers and the Reds had lost, but we were down 2-0 entering the ninth and we weren't that pumped up."

"But then Marc got his hit, and the fans were going crazy," Madlock added. "This team just won't quit. Vida Blue was leading the cheering on the bench."

"It's going to be this way all year," said Hill. "It's still early in the season, but this really was a big win for us after dropping the last two in LA."

Blue, bidding to become the league first seven-game winner, worked the first seven innings, allowing a run in the fourth and another in the fifth.

Cesar Cedeno singled, stole two bases and scored on Jose Cruz' grounder in the fourth. Roger Metzger singled, advanced on a sacrifice and scored on Enos Cabell's double for 2-0 in the fifth.

Rookie right-hander Tom Dixon blanked the Giants for seven innings, but was replaced by Sambito in the eighth. It was Dixon's first start of the season.

ROME (AP) — Most Italian rail traffic was halted by a 24-hour strike after the government and unions failed to agree on workers' wage demands. The walkout was to end this afternoon.

A series of unannounced strikes are planned by the unions through the end of May.

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Justice Hashim bin Yop ended decades of British tradition by announcing a halt to the practice of wearing wigs in court, bowing and addressing the judge as "My lord." He said the customs violate principles of Islam, the state religion.

He appeared in court Tuesday wearing his country's traditional Moslem headgear. "You may say you are bowing to the chair, but the trouble is that I am sitting on it and I don't like to be bowed at," he told the court. Malaysia became independent in 1957.

LONDON (AP) — Police say they have cracked two major drug smuggling rings and have seized cocaine and heroin worth $900,000. Scotland Yard said the seizures included liquid cocaine worth $250,000, the first time the liquid form of the drug has been confiscated in Europe.

Police made the announcement Tuesday and said the drug bust was Britain's largest in months.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Eight long-horned oryx, graceful antelope with swept-back horns not seen in Israel for 2,000 years, have arrived here from the Los Angeles Zoo. They were placed in an 8,000-acre reserve populated with other exotic creatures.

Israel bought the animals for its "Living Wild" reserve in the Negev Desert.

"Today you can find the oryx only in zoos," reserve director Abraham Yofeh said when the animals arrived Tuesday. "And not every zoo. Only at the Los Angeles Zoo were they available to us. Now that they are here I hope they will do their duty and bring us lots of little oryx."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saigon is gone and Ho Chi Minh City is being accepted officially by the United States Board on Geographic Names. A board of officials said Tuesday that the names board, which standardizes federal usage, is going along with the name given Saigon by Communist Vietnam after what had been South Vietnam fell in April 1975.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter wants $400 million channeled to private employers for training and hiring about 150,000 unskilled workers who have no jobs.

The president told a group of mayors and business leaders Tuesday that the need for assisting these jobless men and women is urgent. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, in unveiling the program, said it "will provide for the private sector to become full partners" in the government's battle against unemployment through councils to be established in 34 regions.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House wants working parents to receive tax breaks for child care payments when they use grandma or grandpa as paid baby sitters.

Before voting 363 to 44 Tuesday in favor of a bill setting out that principle, the House was told that using relatives as sitters strengthens family ties.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is eligible for annual cost of living increases in federal salaries but a House committee wants its members and other high government officials excluded from the automatic pay boost.

The House Appropriations Committee voted Tuesday to include the prohibition in a $922.5 million money bill that now goes to the House floor.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's nominations for upcoming vacancies on the Joint Chiefs of Staff are expected to be approved easily in the full Senate. The Senate Armed Services Committee sent the nominations to the Senate floor by approving them unanimously Tuesday.

Air Force Gen. David Jones is in line to succeed Gen. George Brown as chairman. Gen. Lew Allen Jr. would move up to succeed Jones as Chief of Staff of the Air Force and Adm. Thomas B. Hayward had been nominated to succeed Adm. James Holloway as chief of naval operations.

WASHINGTON (AP) — New estimates of world oil reserves outline "hundreds of years of oil supplies" but at high prices, an official of the World Bank says.

Efraim Friedmann, in making his assessment Tuesday, said that while getting at new oil will be costly, some experts estimate that oil reserves could total five trillion barrels instead of the two trillion barrels thought to exist previously.

NEW YORK (AP) — Two postal workers were fired after 18 plastic bags full of undeclared mail, most of it politicians' newsletters, were discovered in a Manhattan post office.

The incident has sparked an investigation of whether the dumping is widespread. City Postmaster John Strachan said Tuesday he believes it was just an "isolated incident." Strachan declined to identify the workers who had been dismissed, saying the cases had been turned over to the U.S. Attorney's office for possible criminal prosecution.

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Sale of Georgia peanuts to Middle Eastern nations could total millions of dollars this year, a Georgia Farm Bureau official says.

When India stopped exporting peanuts to the Middle East recently, said farm bureau official Bob Marlowe, "It left the market open for us." Peanuts, peanut butter and raw shelled nuts are being sold mainly in Lebanon, Jordan, Kuwait, Bahrain and Syria, he said Tuesday.

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — Four teen-age lawbreakers spent several hours inside Southern Michigan Prison as part of a program aimed at keeping youthful offenders from turning into big-time criminals.

Sponsored by the prison's Jaycees chapter, the program brings youngsters who have run afoul of the law inside the world's largest walled prison for a first-hand look at what could be their future home. During Tuesday's visit, the youngsters, ranging in age from 13 to 18, were locked in cells, fingerprinted and told by one inmate: "We don't ever want to see you here again."

FORT THOMAS, Ky. (AP) — A letter from a 12-year-old boy gave Kentucky Gov. Julian Carroll the idea to declare Sunday "Beverly Hills Memorial Day."

Tim King of Fort Thomas wrote the governor in March about his feelings about the fire last May 28 at the Beverly Hills Supper Club in nearby Southgate, Ky., which killed 166 people. "I could see the flames in the distance and the thick black smoke rising hundreds of feet into the air," he wrote. "Indeed, though I knew no one lost there, I too was deeply touched by that disaster."

State found a offer highway had to refuse

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Bill Hamilton wants to pay the state its proper percentage of royalties from any oil drained from under a highway right-of-way.

But the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission considers that an offer it has to refuse even though it might mean thousands of dollars for highway maintenance.

Hamilton, with Hamilton Exploration of Dallas, said his company is forced to put the state's share of royalties into a bank account where it goes unaccounted because of the policy against mineral leases on highway right-of-way.

"The important thing for now is to obtain some return from this very valuable asset," Patman told the commission at its regular meeting. The panel took no action on the matter, which has been debated for at least 20 years.

"Even if it only returns to the state five cents, that's five cents in tax money we won't have to raise," Patman said.

The 211,000 acres of right-of-way are in small, narrow strips that could only be reached by angular drilling from an adjoining field.

The state grants mineral leases to similar, narrow strips of riverbed right-of-way, which last year yielded $3.4 million to the state, the senator said. Highway rights-of-way probably would bring in much more revenue, he predicted.

Hamilton said oil companies drilling on adjoining land already have equipment in place to tap reserves under roadbeds.

The highway commission of ten has considered changing the policy, but legal problems crop up, the commission chairman said.

"We're not trying to turn our backs on possible funds for the highway department," Commission Chairman Reagan Houston said. "Our problem is a practical matter. Our titles are extremely questionable. We might have some right-of-way, but we don't even have a deed to it, which goes back to the old days."

In a November 15, 1977 inter-office memo prepared for the commission, the department said that "in a very substantial portion of the lands where we own minerals the landowners simply signed the deeds handed them by a county employee without considering that they might be passing title to underlying minerals."

Patman said after the hearing he was optimistic the highway commission would revise its policy, which has been debated at least 20 years.

"I think they know the people see all the potholes and the terrible shape some of our roads are in, and they want any kind of help to fix them," he said.

Princess gets 'quickie' divorce

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret's 18-year marriage to Lord Snowdon, the former Anthony Armstrong-Jones, ended in a divorce that took just a few seconds today.

Her special procedure "quickie" divorce, one of a batch of 27, went through without hitch and it took Judge John Willis one minute, 53 seconds to dispose of the cases.

None of the divorced couples was required to be present in the court in the Gothic-style Law Courts at the end of London's Strand.

The divorce was granted by consent on the grounds the couple had been separated for two years.

Among the other 27 couples simultaneously getting decrees were Westminster office cleaner Laura Knowles and former Dragoon guardsman Michael Farr.

Most of the spectators in court were journalists.

The princess announced May 10 that she would divorce Lord Snowdon.

Although brewery heir Roddy Llewellyn, 30, has been the 47-year-old Margaret's constant companion since she and Snowdon, 48, separated in March 1976, a household spokesman said at the time of the announcement that Margaret does not plan to remarry.

The royal divorce was listed 20th in the batch of 27 as

"H.R.H. (Her Royal Highness) the Princess Margaret Rose, countess of Snowdon v Armstrong-Jones A.C.R., Earl of Snowdon."

As soon as the judge took his seat on the bench his assistant read out the names on the list.

The judge then said: "Is there any party or any person present to show cause why a decree should not be pronounced?"

There was no reply, and the judge asked whether there was "anybody to say anything on costs."

Again there was no reply, and the judge announced:

"Very well. I pronounce decrees nisi in accordance with the respective registrars' certificates."

There was silence in court and immediately the judge began talking about the next cases in his list. One, in private, related to an agreement about the future of the two royal children.

In divorce cases, no details are ever announced about provisions for any children. In this case, there is little doubt that both the princess and Snowdon have already amicably agreed about financial provisions and access to their two children, Viscount Linley, 16, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 14.

Hereford man surrenders after threat

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A New Mexico jail escapee holed up in a motel room with his wife and 2-year-old son held off police and FBI agents for eight hours early today, threatening to shoot anyone who approached.

The man surrendered about 8:30 a.m. after police had his lawyer flown in from Amarillo.

Police patiently played a waiting game during the standoff. No shots were fired.

Norbert Lynn Young, about 27, of Hereford, Texas, is wanted for parole violation in Hereford and for jail escape from Taos, N.M., about three months ago.

The stakeout at the La Quinta Inn — between Texas Stadium and Dallas-Fort Worth Airport on U.S. 183 — began at 12:30 a.m. after Irving police got a teletype message from the Deaf Smith County sheriff's office in Hereford. A deputy at Hereford said he received a report Tuesday the man was in Irving, a Dallas suburb.

Guests in nearby rooms were evacuated from the area where the man was, in the middle of the ground floor, overlooking the swimming pool.

Ranchers to plan hay on set-aside acreage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drought-stricken Texas cattlemen — searching for ways to feed their cattle — have received permission to plant and harvest hay on set-aside acreage.

But the problem besetting bureaucrats and ranchers over feeding cactus to cattle is as thorny as ever.

The Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service agreed to permit ranchers to plant hay on set-aside acreage. Prior to Tuesday's announcement, cattlemen could not harvest hay on set-aside acres.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, announced the change in ASCS policy and then attacked the agency's regulations concerning ranchers forced to feed cactus to their cattle.

"Cattle feed is at a premium in Texas," said Bentsen. "We have experienced a severe and prolonged drought in parts of the state, particularly in South Texas, and it has been relieved only somewhat by recent rains. This new ruling, which I had requested, will help to ease the crisis."

"But the drought and the bureaucratic reaction to it are causing a serious problem for cattlemen who are so hard-pressed they have been burning the thorns off cactus to use as feed."

Bentsen noted that a number of Texas counties have been declared disaster areas and are eligible for assistance under the Emergency Livestock Feed Act. ASCS officials, however, have ruled that the cost of burning cactus is not eligible for such aid.

"This argument is absurd since cactus grows wild throughout much of South Texas," began Bentsen in a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland. "Cactus is certainly not planted by these ranchers, nor is it cultivated. In fact, they cannot use it unless it is burned."

ASCS official Jerry Sitter said Tuesday that ranchers want the government to pay half the cost of the propane used to burn thorns off cactus.

"Technically, propane is not a feed and we're only authorized to pay 50 percent of the cost of purchased feed," he added. "I can understand what is happening...this is kind of a tough area. But we pay half the cost of purchased hay, for example, but we don't pay for harvesting the hay...we'll probably send this to the department's legal department for another opinion."

The Many Benefits for the Aging Foundation, which has delivered home health care in Texas since 1969, has started a new program which will make it possible for those who require less than the "skilled care" as defined by Medicare to receive help.

The program will be for those who require a licensed professional or registered nurse but can't afford to pay the regular charge and have no insurance covering particular services. The service also will benefit the patient who has been on the home health service under Medicare or some other type of insurance but who has depleted that coverage.

An example would be the client who needs a vitamin injection but has no insurance and can't afford to pay the normal charge.

For more information, contact the Panhandle Home Health Agency at Dumas, 935-6861, or Betty Monk, 274-3026.

Expert predicts hurricane loss

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. A.R. "Babe" Schwartz, chairman of the Texas Coastal and Marine Council, has told the State Insurance Board the next big hurricane will do $1 billion in damage and perhaps kill 10,000 persons.

Schwartz, D-Galveston, testified Tuesday against a proposal to cut agent commissions on windstorm policies written in the hurricane pool from 20 percent to 10 percent.

"I believe losses from the next hurricane will be $1 billion instead of $300 million (in previous ones) because of inflation and because of growth," he said.

Schwartz said a major hurricane, striking a populated area with full force, could kill 10,000 persons because of difficulties in evacuating huge numbers of people in a short time.

Directors of the pool, called the Texas Property Catastrophe Insurance Association, voted last winter to cut agent commissions as a means of discouraging assignment of policyholders to the pool.

The insurance board suspended the cut and called for hearings that began Monday.

The pool was created to spread among all Texas property insurance companies the risk of insuring buildings along the coast. For property landward of the Intracoastal Waterway, rates are the same as elsewhere in the state. Seaward, windstorm rates are triple unless — as in Galveston — property is protected by seawalls.

"We do have to depopulate the windstorm catastrophe pool. I just simply disagree you can accomplish the purpose by reducing commissions," he said.

Schwartz said agents in coastal areas earn their commissions when a hurricane strikes by serving as intermediaries between their customers and the insurance companies.

"They suffer the same losses, because they are living there, too. Their offices get blown away like anybody else's," he said.

He said losses in a hurricane could be reduced by imposing higher standards on construction than now exist. He blamed the real estate and builders' lobbies for defeating a bill to do that last session.

Sam Winters, the pool's lawyer, said in cross-examining Schwartz that the pool has no direct relationship with agents since it is not a company but a legislatively created consortium of companies.

"The catastrophe association can't hire them, it can't fire them, it can't do nothing. They (agents) have no contractual obligation to handle claims on its behalf," he said.

"The business dictates in honesty and good conscience that the agent has a responsibility to the customer that exceeds that of the pool," Schwartz replied.

WOMEN ON THE RUN

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Road Runners Club now has 1,500 women in its total membership of 6,000. In 1972 there were only two women members, Fred Lebow, club president, said.

"We get an average of 15 women joining daily," he added.

Nearly five million women in the United States now run on a regular basis, Lebow said. In 1972, only 25,000 women did so.

Disease, starvation feared in Kolwezi

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Refugees returning to Kolwezi face starvation and epidemics, the commander of French forces in Shaba Province says, while rebels were reported retreating through Zambia carrying off "many European hostages" and loot.

"We are in a dead city," Col. Yves Gras said Tuesday. He told reporters in Kolwezi the city has no water, electricity or food for the flood of returning black refugees, and with the city's vital copper mines closed, no income.

A relief official said there was a serious threat of typhoid and cholera from the hundreds of rotting corpses in the streets of Kolwezi, a city with a normal population of 100,000.

A Red Cross official returning to Kinshasa said all white victims in the town had been identified and their bodies buried, but black corpses remained in the streets. Some foreigners in Kinshasa were angry that the Belgian paratroopers, who also jumped into Kolwezi to aid in the evacuation of an estimated 2,500 foreigners, pulled out before all of the bodies had been buried.

In Paris, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing told reporters Tuesday night that the French troops will be withdrawn from Zaire as soon as they have traced foreigners still missing.

"The unit of French paratroopers sent to Kolwezi to guarantee the protection of foreign residents will return to its base as soon as it has completed its task of searching for persons who are missing or who may have been taken away as hostages," he said at the end of a meeting between France and 21 African countries.

"The Zaire government will be informed of the date of this withdrawal, so it can draw the necessary conclusions and reorganize the defense of the territory," he said.

A European relief official said as many as 300 white foreigners remain unaccounted for after the week-long occupation of Kolwezi by invading Katangan exiles from Angola. He said it was believed that some foreigners had been taken prisoner by the rebels who were driven out of the provincial capital over the weekend by about 800 French Foreign Legion paratroopers.

British newspapers reported from Lusaka, capital of neighboring Zambia, that hundreds of rebels were fleeing southern Zaire into northwest Zambia on their way back to bases in Angola.

One rebel leader told correspondents in northern Zambia that the retreating troops had "many European hostages," including women and children.

The newspaper reports in London said many of the fleeing rebels, part of the estimated 4,000 rebels who invaded southern Zaire May 12, were seen marching along jungle roads en route to Angola carrying radios, cameras, clothing, household goods and other loot. They said Zambian villagers reported seeing a 100-vehicle convoy, mostly cars and trucks stolen in Kolwezi, carrying heavily armed soldiers in the direction of Angola early Tuesday.

French soldiers operating in the bush outside Kolwezi, 840 miles southeast of Kinshasa, reported finding 20 French women and children hiding from the rebel gang that had killed male members of their families, the French Defense Ministry said.

It also said it had received unofficial information that the legionnaires also had found 20 more victims of the rebel rampage at a new massacre site. It was not known if the two discoveries were connected.

There still has been no precise count of the number of foreigners killed in the Kolwezi area, but the ministry spokesman said it may exceed 200.
