

Cold pounds area

You didn't need a weatherman to know which way the wind was blowing this morning—temperatures were cold and the wind gusts and white stuff didn't make it any better.

The weatherman said a travel advisory is in effect today with another inch of snow expected. The temperature is only predicted to reach the upper teens while the low tonight could approach zero. However, winds are expected to diminish this afternoon and tonight. The weekend weather calls for sunny skies with temperatures reaching the low 30s, both Saturday and Sunday.

The City Maintenance Department, alerted by weather forecasts, was prepared for Thursday night's snowfall. City employees filled trucks with sand and began sanding street intersections early this morning.

City engineers didn't think any plowing would be necessary on streets today. If snow does drift and block access on any streets, it will be pushed to the middle or off to one side to keep the streets open.

Because of the unpredictable nature of winter weather in this area, the city doesn't own snow plows or blowers. Street graders are used to move snow.

In the past, large amounts of snow have been loaded on trucks and dumped outside the city. When this happens, the snow has to be shoveled by hand or, occasionally, lifted with a front end loader.

The police department equips some patrol cars with snow tires, and keeps chains in the trunks of all cars for use in heavy snowfalls. All patrol cars are checked at the end of the summer to ensure they are in good working condition for winter weather.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety reported that all Panhandle Highways were open to traffic but advised travelers to use caution while driving.

Water, water shrinking fast

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff

An impending shortage of groundwater in the Panhandle was one of several topics discussed Thursday at the 1978 annual conference of the Groundwater Management Districts Association (GMDA).

GMDA, formed in 1975, is a non-profit, regional organization for persons in all fields concerned with the development, utilization, conservation and management of groundwater. Its board of directors comprises members from Texas, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado and Oklahoma.

Held at the Hilton Inn in Amarillo, the conference opened Wednesday night and ended today.

Conference presentations began Thursday morning with reports on three current federal studies of water resources in the Great Plains. The studies center around the Ogallala aquifer, a principal groundwater source underlying regions in the High Plains states of Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas and Nebraska.

An aquifer is a water-bearing bed or stratum of permeable rock, sand or gravel capable of yielding considerable quantities of water to wells or springs. The Ogallala aquifer is considered the most important source of water available to the Panhandle and other High Plains areas.

The studies are being conducted to determine the amount of water presently stored in the Ogallala aquifer.

the local, state and national impacts of the continued depletion of the water and energy resources in the Ogallala Region, and the water supply potential of playas—natural surface depressions scattered throughout the High Plains (including the Pampa area), which act as catch basins for precipitation.

Combined findings from the studies are expected to help in evaluating both the High Plains area water resources and the consequences of a shortage in those resources, which authorities are predicting.

Conference participants were told that the withdrawal of groundwater from the Ogallala aquifer during the past few decades has greatly exceeded the rate of natural recharge, which comes only from precipitation and is negligible.

(It is estimated that in West Texas, water is being pumped out 140 times faster than it is being replenished.)

Irrigation and the nation's level of food production are reportedly threatened by this trend. Unless other water supplies are developed, experts predicted the Ogallala aquifer could be exhausted by the year 2000.

A highlight of the conference was Thursday's luncheon, featuring a speech on national water policy delivered by Pat O'Meara, executive vice president of the National Water Resources Association in Washington, D.C.

Admitting "I don't see eye-to-eye with the administration's water policies," O'Meara combined humor with gravity to criticize President Carter's approach to water conservation.

"The new buzz word in Washington D.C. is conservation," he said, adding "they left storage out of the definition. If we are marching away from storage as a national policy, let me assure you we are going to increasingly rely on groundwater." O'Meara termed this development "unfortunate."

He referred to the administration's formation of 19 task forces designed to reform national water policy. "You get this uneasy feeling that the policy reform is more for reform than any other goal," O'Meara said.

Describing the administration's proposed water-saving guidelines for housing construction as "one hell of an expensive water conservation program," O'Meara said the requirements would save only three pints a day per person. "We could save more by flushing the toilet once less each week."

"We're one of the most water-rich nations on earth," O'Meara said. Noting that arid Saudi Arabia has made a commitment to water resource development, he called on the U.S. government to do the same.

O'Meara concluded by warning that agricultural production, "the backbone of our country," will suffer unless the government develops new water resources in the High Plains.

Unemployment rate remains unchanged

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unemployment rate remained unchanged at 5.8 percent in November as adult men gained most of the 540,000 new jobs that were created, the Labor Department said today.

Women and teen-agers had made most of the employment gains during the summer, but the new report showed employment among men rising from 51.4 million to 51.9 million last month.

The proportion of the entire adult and child population holding jobs rose to a record 59.1 percent last month, the department said.

The improved unemployment picture this year has been a bright spot in an economy that has otherwise been torn by surging prices and a ballooning foreign trade deficit.

But many private economists are predicting higher unemployment next year as the Carter administration tries to drive down the inflation rate.

The jobless rate has plummeted from 9.1 percent of the labor force in May 1975 to around 6 percent most of this year, as the growing economy has created millions of new jobs. The unemployment rate also stood at 5.8 percent in October.

Unemployment had been 6 percent in September before declining to 5.8 percent in both October and November.

Although more men gained jobs in November, their unemployment rate remained at 4 percent because more of them last month had also begun looking for jobs than previously.

Following is the unemployment rate for other categories:

—Adult women 5.8 percent, up from 5.6 percent in October.

—Teen-agers 16.2 percent, down from 16.3 percent.

—White population 5 percent, down from 5.1 percent.

—Black and other minorities 11.8 percent, up from 11.4 percent.

—Full-time workers 5.2 percent, down from 5.3 percent.

—Black teen-agers, 36.2 percent, up from 34.3 percent.

The report also showed the duration of individual unemployment has declined sharply in the past year. The average unemployed person spent 7 weeks without a job in November 1977, but 6.1 weeks in October and 5.5 weeks last month.

In the past year, total employment has risen by 3.3 million to 95.7 million jobs, with adult women accounting for more than half the increase, the department said.

Last month the average work week for production workers rose 0.1 hours to 35.9 hours. Their average hourly earnings increased 0.7 percent in November and 8.7 percent for the year.

The average production worker earned $5.87 per hour in November, or $210.15 per week. All the figures are adjusted to account for seasonal variations.

Since the start of his term, President Carter has been trying to create jobs by keeping the economy growing steadily. But Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, says unemployment prospects probably will worsen in coming months.

"We are going to have to have a pause in our economic expansion" to fight inflation, he said.

Pampa College dream becomes reality

By KATHY BURR
Pampa News Staff

The dream of many Pampans finally become a reality when Clarendon College-Pampa Center held an open house Thursday night to mark the official opening of the center.

Lloyd Waters, dean of Clarendon College-Pampa Center, presided over a meeting of selected citizens from the community.

Waters said he wanted to give these people an opportunity to see Clarendon College in the beginning. "You won't see new furniture or modern equipment, but you will see cracks in the floor, you will feel cold air and you will see students in the classrooms," he added.

Over 200 students are involved in higher education in Pampa. Waters said "I feel that with proper planning Clarendon College-Pampa Center can have approximately 500 students enrolled in a short time."

Walters said that presently the college is offering 19 classes per session that can lead to a degree plan. "The spring schedule has 60 plus classes and is out of date." An additional four or five classes have been added to the schedule.

The daytime program for the spring is centered around a secretarial science program, because Walters said a need had been indicated in that area.

"It looks like there will be a large number of students available for the spring semester. In the fall we hope to expand the curriculum," Walters said, adding that the college would like to add biology and chemistry labs by next fall, but it is still in the planning stages.

"If that occurs we can offer an Associate of Arts degree."

"We feel the biggest need is to obtain funds to purchase typewriters and typing tables for the spring semester."

The Pampa Center is looking at a total of approximately $70,000 in expenditures for the fall.

Tax dollars will not be used to support the college according to Walters. The college will try to hold tuition and fees to a minimum. In order to attend college full-time it will cost approximately $225, books and fees included.

During the meeting, Luther Robinson, president of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, presented Kenneth Vaughn, president of Clarendon College, with a check for $500 that had been given by an anonymous donor.

Walters concluded the meeting by saying "This is your college and we are charged with providing higher education to this area...we need your support to continue on."

Good afternoon

News in brief

The forecast for Pampa and vicinity calls for a travelers advisory with a chance of snow. There may be an additional accumulation of one inch of snow. It should be fair today through Saturday becoming very cold tonight and not as cold on Saturday. The high today will be in the teens with the low tonight near zero and the high on Saturday in the low 30s. The winds will be out of the north at 10-15 miles per hour diminishing tonight and Saturday.

$11,995 contract awarded

The Board of Trustees for the Pampa Independent School District met this morning in an emergency meeting to award a contract of $11,995 to Don Knutson, a contractor. Knutson will lay the concrete blocks and install the door units in the concession stand and restroom that is being built at Harvester Field.

Crow Gulde Inc., of Amarillo, will deliver part of the blocks immediately, with the rest arriving by Dec. 22. Knutson plans to start work on Sunday.

Six students to perform

Six former Pampa students, who are attending West Texas State University, will be performing with the Amarillo Symphony in the Civic Auditorium Saturday at 8 p.m.

The students are Albert Hensley, Debbie Lehnick, Kip Watkins, Doug Eubank, Don Adams and Molly Lewis. They will be performing the Brahms Requiem.

Pet contest still on

Neither rain nor sleet nor even today's snow will stop the Chamber of Commerce Annual Pet Contest Saturday, according to Chamber Manager Floyd Sackett.

Unless the weather changes drastically, the contest will be held at 2:30 p.m. in Clyde Carruth's Livestock Pavilion, located north of the rodeo grounds.

Panhandle studied as dump site

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An assistant Texas attorney general says the federal government is looking for states "where they won't face strong resistance" to locate nuclear waste disposal sites.

Studies are underway in Texas for possible disposal sites in the Panhandle and East Texas, said Rick Lowerre. There is a pilot disposal project at Carlsbad, N.M., 25 miles from the Texas border.

Lowerre told environmentalists Thursday 11 states have banned nuclear waste disposal sites, and a number of others have prohibited the transportation of such wastes within their boundaries.

He said federal Energy Secretary James Schlesinger has assured Texas Attorney General John Hill that Texas has the authority to veto any disposal site the federal government might pick in the state.

However, said Lowerre, the president or Congress "could tell DOE (Department of Energy) to withdraw that authority and they (DOE) would have to go along with it."

"I'm not saying we should reject the sites," said Lowerre. "I am saying the veto authority is important...we need that leverage."

Linn Draper, former director of the Nuclear Reactor Laboratory at the University of Texas, said Texas officials should insist on a thorough federal study before they permit nuclear wastes to be transported across the state.

Draper said he thought DOE would comply with such demands "if properly pressed. So far, I haven't seen that pressure."

Federal land grab

If the proposed U.S. Forest Service Rare II program is implemented, "it would increase the price of an average single-family home by $1,789 over the next two years," a timber industry study shows.

About the same time this study report was released a suit was filed in federal court to prevent land-access limitations without congressional approval.

The suit was filed in U.S. district court in Cheyenne, Wyo., in September by the Mountain States Legal Foundation. This is a Denver public interest law firm.

Rare II calls for inventory and study of an additional 62 million acres of land for possible inclusion in the National Wilderness Preservation System. Current limit is 14.6 million acres.

The suit challenges the authority of the cabinet secretaries and their bureaucracies to set aside and manage these lands as wilderness without the approval of Congress.

Pointing out that the president has "called for increased timber harvest as a means to fight inflation in housing," the study also showed that an increase of one billion board feet in the supply of timber from the national forests could reduce the costs of medium-priced housing by nearly $600.

But Rare II also has the support of President Carter, for in his environmental message to Congress he said, "The National Wilderness Preservation System must be expanded promptly, before the most deserving of federal lands are opened to other uses and lost to wilderness forever."

Administration spokesmen insist that the studies are only studies and that all factors will be taken into consideration before action is taken.

It is doubtful that this assertion will be taken at face value by any of the states involved. In Utah it was seen as "locking up more land" as wilderness and preventing it from being drilled, mined and grazed - not in the best interest of the state. Many in that state believe that the government is infested with environmentalists who want to salt away millions of acres of economically productive land.

"Industry supports the maintenance of a quality wilderness system but the emphasis should be on quality not quantity," said W.D. Hagensien of the Industrial Forestry Association in Portland, Ore.

Timber producers are in the forefront of opposition in Idaho. The Idaho Forest Council is waging a campaign against Rare II. The council says that Rare II would lock up more than half of the state's forests.

Howard McDowell, head of the Inland Forest Resource Council, says the industry is highly concerned about the 3.3 million acres of commercial forest land within the Rare II inventory. "We are highly concerned about the job and community stability and utilization of resources that, if left unmanaged, would be wasted," he said.

McDowell said the environmentalists are intransigent in their attitude. "It is not in the best interest of all forest users or those depending on Montana's national forests for their livelihood and enjoyment."

Washington bureaucrats and the environmentalists may call this push to lock up 62 million acres Rare II but many people in the West are calling it Rape I. They see little justification for locking up such an enormous amount of land.

By DON GRAFF
Mexico has two great resources in surplus supply — oil and people.

Both are of particular importance to the United States.

People, because much of Mexico's unemployable excess is being exported to the United States an annual influx of illegal immigrants estimated at 1 million.

Oil, because multiplying Mexican reserves promise to ease the world and particularly U.S. energy bind and should also contribute significantly to a solution of the people problem.

Oil is the newest and still developing story. The latest finds, announced in November, suggest that Mexican reserves may equal or even exceed those of the world leader, Saudi Arabia. The new field, stretching for 150 miles along the Gulf coast south of the port of Tampico, is estimated to hold at least 100 billion barrels, raising total Mexican reserves to more than 300 billion barrel. Of this, 125 billion barrels is considered recoverable, compared with 150 billion of Saudi oil.

New wealth and hope

The sharp boost in Mexican reserves, by the reckoning of oil experts, postpones the predicted world oil shortage until at least the 1990s and, with additional Mexican discoveries expected, quite probably much later.

For the United States, the discoveries are particularly welcome. A large new supply so close at hand simplifies transportation and lessens dependence on the OPEC cartel, which at this point Mexico does not intend to join, although its export prices are pegged to OPEC's.

Proceeds from the new oil wealth should contribute mightily to the development of the Mexican economy. Few other countries are in such dire need of a boost.

Mexico has one of the world's fastest growing populations — 3.4 percent a year. Mexico City alone is growing so rapidly that, with no lessening of the present rate of increase, it will be the world's largest by the end of the century — a supermetropolis of 32 million.

The underdeveloped Mexican economy, however, cannot absorb so many Mexicans. An estimated half of the labor force is unemployed. The gross national product per capita is $1,090, compared with a U.S. figure of $7,890.

The easiest, and usually only, employment alternative for those Mexicans not wanted at home has been to go north. Some cross the border legally, part of the annual U.S. alien admittance quota of 400,000. But many do not. A million "illegals" were stopped and returned to Mexico last year. But for each one intercepted, it is estimated that at least another gets through.

By the reckoning of John J. Gilligan, administrator of the Agency for International Development, 15 to 20 percent of Mexico's adult population has emigrated illegally and is working in the United States.

The illegal influx has become a major economic and social problem for the United States. Authorities seek to control it through various measures, including stepped up border patrols and most recently construction of 20 miles of fence at border crossing points with the heaviest traffic. Mexican sensibilities, long resentful of a "poor relation" relationship with the United States, are particularly inflamed by the fence which is becoming a political issue between the two countries.

Oil now offers the best prospect Mexico and the United States have ever had of dealing with their mutual problem to their mutual advantage. Oil revenues should provide Mexico with the capital for the development of an economy which can provide work and a future at home for its own people. It will be in the very best interests of the United States as a good customer and neighbor to assist Mexican efforts to the fullest possible extent.

Nowhere else in the modern world has there been such disparity between national wealth and poverty as along the 2,000-mile border shared by Mexico and the United States. Cooperative efforts to end that disparity beat a fence any day.

Refugee responsibility

By MARTHA ANGLE
and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The worst thing about the plight of the Vietnamese "boat people" — both those who survive the perils of the sea and those who do not — is the depressing familiarity of their saga.

The 2,500 refugees stranded aboard a freighter off Malaysia, and more than 200 of their less fortunate compatriots who died when their smaller boat capsized, have made headlines here and around the world.

But they are neither the first of their kind nor the last to escape unbearable oppression in their homeland and risk harrowing danger on the open seas only to find that the welcome mat they had hoped to find in the "free" world has been hastily withdrawn.

More than three years after the Communist takeover in Indochina, every nation within walking distance or boat range of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos is swamped with refugees from those nations, with more arriving daily.

Thailand and Malaysia have borne the brunt of the refugee tide and, with ample problems of their own, both nations have grown understandably edgy about offering a haven to the fleeing Indochinese.

And while the United States has a special responsibility to these helpless thousands we have not always lived up to that obligation.

Indeed, after the initial wave of Vietnamese who came to this country following the fall of Saigon in 1975, the United States has been less generous than other countries — especially France — in accepting additional refugees.

The fact is that our existing laws governing the admittance of refugees are woefully outdated and completely inadequate to cope with a continuing problem of the sort that has developed in Indochina.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has been trying for 10 years to persuade Congress to change the law to permit greater flexibility, but his efforts have been stymied by the House, where Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., ruled over the immigration subcommittee.

The Carter administration has been slow to acknowledge the necessity for legislative reform, apparently hoping the Vietnamese refugee problem would subside. Each year, the administration has set a modest quota of cases for which the Attorney General would use his parole authority to admit Indochinese refugees — and each year the quota has been filled almost as soon as it was established.

Now that Eilberg has been defeated, a major obstacle to legislative reform has been removed. Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and other administration officials are working closely with Kennedy to develop new laws that would substantially enlarge the "normal" annual quota of refugees the United States can accept and give the government flexibility to meet emergency situations like the recent Hai Hong boat case.

Public attitudes towards the Indochinese refugees tend to be mixed. Most Americans respond with an outpouring of sympathy and concern for specific, clearly identified groups of desperate refugees like the Hai Hong boat people. Yet there is considerable hostility and fear towards the refugees in general — a suspicion that they will take jobs away from Americans, add to our welfare burden and become an undigestible lump within the body politic.

Experience suggests such fears are grossly exaggerated. It costs an average of $1,000 per refugee to bring them to the United States, and another $2,000 per person to help them settle here in the first year. After that, the vast majority of Indochinese refugees make it on their own and quickly repay in taxes what the government has spent on them.

No one is suggesting that the United States assume sole responsibility for rescuing the thousands fleeing from Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. Other nations should and will continue to help out. But we clearly can and must do more than we have been able to thus far, and the president and Congress need to face up to that responsibility.

The rush to retire

Never underestimate the power of a long-term trend to roll over mere laws.

The national ban on mandatory retirement before age 70 doesn't take official effect until this coming January 1. But for the past many months, its pros and cons, impact on the work force, economy, national psyche and the like have been discussed and analyzed to an extent that it may be questioned whether there can be anything more to be said.

There is, according to The Conference Board. Surveying top corporate personnel officers of a group of major U.S. firms, the nonprofit research organization reports a consensus: The most significant aspect of the new retirement law is that it is likely to be of little significance to current retirement patterns.

In short, the trend toward early retirement is expected to continue. For some firms, the average retirement age has declined in recent years to below 60. For most responding to the survey, it is well under 65.

A number of factors are probably at work, but the primary ones appear to be pensions and health. The combination of company plans and government programs can make delayed retirement economically disadvantageous for an employee. The benefits immediately at hand are worth more than paychecks continuing into the future.

As a health problem can make the right to continue working an academic one for many individuals. Failing health is an important consideration in decisions to take early retirement, one unlikely to be much affected by the new law. In the long run, there is expected to be little impact on promotion opportunities. Advancement will not be blocked by large numbers of superannuated incumbents staying on in key positions.

Nor are corporate equal opportunity programs likely to be significantly affected. Normal retirements should continue at a rate sufficient to accommodate special efforts to hire ethnic minorities and women, although some firms foresee some possibility of an eventual "white male backlash."

But if negative consequences initially foreseen for delaying mandatory retirement turn out to have been exaggerated, so may a hoped-for advantage.

The primary intent of the law is to prevent individuals from being forced into retirement at arbitrary age levels, regardless of personal desires and physical capabilities. Should delayed retirement have encountered widespread acceptance, a not inconsequential secondary effect would be the relieving of the Social Security system of a considerable load.

Of approximately 17.6 million individuals now drawing benefits, 10.4 million retired before age 65 by the Social Security Administration's own reckoning. Early retirement has been a significant contributor to the system's strained finances in recent years.

If the present forecasts are correct, delayed retirement is going to be scant help in providing the sought-for relief.

WHERE HAS JUSTICE GONE

Last week I attended the trial of a Pampa welder and during the trial I felt that the District Attorney was doing a good job for the prosecution. But when the trial was over — I felt that something was left undone. A young man's life was taken — by a man who was only mad because of a minor traffic confrontation; who went home — drove back to where it happened — got out of his vehicle — proceeded to threaten the young man by hitting him with a 357 - Mag Pistol, and in doing so, fired the gun — killing the young man. His defense lawyer's proceeded to do a fine job of getting the sympathy of the jury — by running the Highway Patrol — Pampa Police Dept. — Hospital — Funeral Home — and witness down enough — and building the defendant up enough as a fine father - husband - and by having several jobs in his lifetime — that he could not kill someone. But he did and was assessed only 5 years — I could not believe this — because I read and hear on the news every day of people burglarizing homes and - business - getting a longer sentence than this.

I hope that if I ever kill someone I can be fortunate enough to have the same Jury and the same defense lawyers — for my trial — if this is true Justice.

I also wonder how any member of the Jury would feel and react if this young man that was killed had been their son.

It looks as though — for murder or robbery — you get what is called equal Justice for All.

A Pampa High School student reported the theft of a cabinet telephone, valued at $150, from a locker in the school drama room.

A vehicle driven by Frances W. Merriman, 1725 Holly, was struck at the intersection of Hobart and Kentucky by a vehicle that left the scene.

An employee of Ideal Food Store, 312 E. Brown, reported the theft of two hams valued at $20.

A vehicle driven by Terry Winford Bryant of Borger was westbound in the 900 block of W.

Fire report

The fire department went out on an ambulance run to 1212 E. Browning at 4:18 p.m. Thursday. Mrs. Ruth Black was having difficulty breathing. She was given oxygen and taken to Highland General Hospital.
 At 9:34 p.m. Thursday the fire department responded to a fire at 316 N. Davis. A space heater had set the floor on fire. Damage was done to the floor and the area around the heater. The property was owned by Joe Hernandez and the tenant was Fred Campos.

Death of Americans at airport in Guyana

Cult members testify today

By SUSAN AGER
 Associated Press Writer
 SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Surviving members of the Peoples Temple cult begin testimony today behind the closed doors of a federal grand jury room, as prosecutors probe the deaths of Rep. Leo Ryan and four other Americans at a jungle airstrip in Guyana.

Eleven of the 17 subpoenaed survivors arrived here by plane Thursday night. One called reports the cult may have conspired to kill Ryan "completely out of the question," predicting the grand jury investigation would fail.

"Ryan was discouraged from coming from the beginning," said Laura Johnston, 31. "We went to the jungle so we would be away from any harassment.

We were not looking for trouble. We had a community that was flourishing."

The grand jury, which meets in secret, is expected to continue its inquiry for several days.

"Basically, we're trying to confirm the identity of the shooters of Congressman Ryan," said one investigator, who asked to be unnamed.

Still in Georgetown, Guyana, are 36 of the 80 persons known to have been in the South American nation at the time of the cult's mass murder-suicide. Many of the survivors were in Georgetown — 150 miles away — when Jim Jones led more than 900 followers in a death ritual at their compound in Jonestown.

Two survivors have been charged with murder and the others are being held as potential witnesses. The Guyanese government said Thursday it was moving to allow more survivors to return to the United States for Christmas.

Ryan, three newsmen and an unhappy cult member who had wanted to leave Guyana were killed in an ambush at an airstrip near the Jonestown camp

Nov. 18. Hours later, Jones ordered the mass deaths.

Ms. Johnston, who was in Georgetown when the deaths occurred, said she was prepared to be asked "a thousand questions" in her appearance before the grand jury today.

Others who said they were to testify today were Paul McCann, 27, and Chuck Kirkendole, 30.

The other six subpoenaed survivors, including Jones' two adopted sons, were expected to arrive in San Francisco today or during the weekend.

Meanwhile, federal authorities said they were aware that Social Security checks totaling $500,000 a year were being signed over to the Peoples Temple, but were powerless to stop the practice.

Demonstration approved

By PHILIP DOPOULOS
 Associated Press Writer
 TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's military government backed down today and said it would allow opponents of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to stage a mass demonstration in Tehran Sunday. The move was a bid to head off a threatened bloody showdown with troops.

"We want to avoid a confrontation in the streets," said a military spokesman.

The government's decision was a reversal of its earlier warnings that it intended to combat "mercilessly" any political demonstrations during the emotion-charged Moslem holy month of Moharram, which reaches a peak Sunday and Monday.

The announcement was made after military Prime Minister Gen. Gholam-Reza Azhari met for several hours with army and political leaders as religious leaders demanding the shah's abdication promised a "bloodbath in the streets" if the government interfered.

The military also lifted a ban on religious processions for both days and eased the nighttime martial law curfew. The curfew will run for those two days from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m., instead of the normal start at 9 p.m.

The decision was announced only hours after the capital's martial law administrator, Gen. Gholamali Oveisi, declared that the Sunday march was illegal. Political rallies were banned under martial law imposed Sept. 8 in Tehran and 11 other cities.

Informed sources said the army was expecting demonstrations in at least 10 cities, including the holy cities of Mashhad and Qum.

Religious leaders demanding the shah's abdication had promised a "bloodbath in the streets" if the government interfered with the marches Sunday and Monday. The processions are a traditional expression of mourning for Imam Hussein, the grandson of the prophet Mohammed and the founder of the Shiite sect, but it was apparent that the leader of the anti-shah movement, exiled Ayatullah Khomeini, was planning for them to be turned into a demonstration of opposition to the ruler.

Opposition political leader Karim Sanjaby of the National Front, who was freed from jail Wednesday, urged his supporters to join the demonstration outside Telegahani's home. But there were signs of opposition to the militants from within their ranks.

Ayatullah Sharietmadari, a religious leader in Qum, called for protesters to abstain from the use of arms and give the government a chance to carry out promised reforms. Shapour Bakhtiari, a leading member of the National Front, was reported to have split with Sanjaby and to be willing to join the coalition government the shah wants to form.

Foreigners and Iranians flooded Tehran airport trying to escape before the threatened weekend violence. Thousands scrambled for plane seats after airlines cancelled runs in and out of the city Sunday and Monday, expecting trouble.

A Pentagon spokesman in Washington said President Carter decided more than 2,000 dependents of U.S. military and civilian personnel in Iran could leave at government expense, but they had to arrange their own commercial flights. There are no plans for a mass evacuation or for special charter flights, the spokesman said.

Carter also gave his first public expression of pessimism regarding the future of the shah, saying he does not know whether the monarch can survive the fight against him by religious leaders opposed to his attempts to Westernize the country and by political factions opposed to his authoritarian rule.

Wife was 'upset'

By MIKE COCHRAN
 Associated Press Writer
 HOUSTON (AP) — A one-time informant with a reputation as a "hit man" says he left a meeting with Priscilla Davis last winter convinced she wanted her millionaire husband murdered.

It's part of the strategy by defense attorneys to characterize their client, Fort Worth industrialist Cullen Davis, as the target of a conspiracy instead of the man who plotted a murder, as the state contends.

Burly, balding David Binion, 34, testified Thursday he met the shapely blond at the Davis mansion and that she was "extremely upset" and appeared "messed up on drugs."

"Did you leave the meeting with the opinion that she called you there to do harm to Cullen Davis?" Defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes asked.

"Yes," Binion replied.

On cross-examination, prosecutor Tolly Wilson posed this question:

"While you were there did she ever ask you to kill or have her husband Thomas Cullen Davis killed?"

"No," he responded.

Mrs. Davis says she never met Binion, a Houston car salesman who lived in Fort Worth at the time of the alleged meeting.

That was the highlight of testimony Thursday in and out of the presence of the jury in the murder conspiracy trial of Davis, 45.

The state contends the stoic oil heir plotted to kill his divorcee judge last August and that he paid FBI informant David McCrory $25,000 when he thought his orders had been obeyed.

Instead, McCrory, 40, the state's key witness, took his story to the FBI and cooperated in a tape-recorded scheme that led to Davis' arrest Aug. 20.

Within hours, the defense team that successfully defended Davis on a murder charge last year insisted that he had been framed.

And now they are trying to show that Davis was the target in a triangular conspiracy conceived by Mrs. Davis and perpetuated by McCrory and Fort Worth karate instructor Pat Bursleson.

Church celebrates Greens up

The First Christian Church, 18th and Nelson celebrated the hanging of the greens recently. While the Adult Chancel Choir and congregation sang, 69 children brought candles, greenery, and red bows into the sanctuary.

Two wreaths were hung on the walls. After the greens were hung the children were invited to the steps where they listened to a sermon presented by Arron Veach, the associate minister.

An acolyte lit the first advent candle in the wreath. A fresh candle is lit each week through advent. For this year the four outer candles stand for "Brilliant Star of the East", "Wisdom of the Wise Man", "Humility of the Shepherds", and "Peace of the Starlet Night in Bethlehem". The central candle, which is surrounded by the other four, stands for the coming of Christ.

When the service concluded, the congregation filed out singing "Silent Night."

The symbolism of some of the items used in the service was explained by Dr. Bill Boswell. The circular wreaths represent eternity and the eternal God for centuries. Green has long been associated with life, given to us by God. Evergreen retain their color and symbolize the strength and endurance Christians should have in Christ, no matter what their problems are. Red stands for the blood of Christ shed, and the red bow, a knot, symbolizes the binding of Christians together in Christ.

This was the church's second annual Hanging of the Greens Program.

Mrs. Tommy Bowers took care of all the details.

Some religions can be demonic

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

"One religion is as good as another." That view is widely advocated and echoed these days in the name of open-minded tolerance and intellectual sophistication. "Take your pick. It makes no difference. Do your own thing."

While the attitude parades as tolerance, it actually sums up the emptiness that leads to the indiscriminate acceptance which marked the tragedy in Guyana, according to the Rev. Dr. Arthur F. Glasser, a Presbyterian scholar.

"We've become so mushy-headed and tolerant in America that people say any religion is okay, but the fact is that they can be demonic," Glasser said in an interview. "Such relativism is the curse of Biblical faith."

Glasser, dean of the school of world mission at the Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, Calif., is among those who see the relativism and nihilism of the times as leaving many unable to distinguish between religious realities and fraud, between the divine and the demonic.

"Our highly secularized society... has created a dangerous spiritual vacuum," writes philosopher John E. Smith of Yale University, adding that the despair it engenders leads people to accept "the charismatic fanatic because they believe he can deliver them from the nihilism of the times."

The Rev. John P. Newport, professor of religious studies at Rice University in Houston and author of several books on demonism and cults, says the macabre events at Guyana showed various "earmarks of the demonic," including:

"Preoccupation with pain and death, distortion and perversion of sex and family life, mind control, use of religion as a vehicle for power with the leader claiming to be God incarnate... deprivation of freedom and progression from something seemingly good to moral degeneracy."

Glasser said Fuller Seminary, an interdenominational institution now enrolling about 2,300 students in schools of missions, psychology and theology, has tediously challenged the relativistic trends.

"Our generation has produced more new religious cults than any generation in the total history of the human race," he said. "Many people are so jaded that they uncritically accept any idea that comes down the pike."

"In all this tide of relativism, the flood of eastern cults and the assumptions that any religion is okay as long as it's sincere, we've tried to face the situation and say plainly that there is truth and there is error."

He said "tolerance, in its best sense, is a virtue" and "we must allow for a measure of differences, listening to one another and learning, a principle of the ecumenical movement." But we must not get trapped in self-absorbed, insulated groups or get shut off in a Guyanese corner of subservience to totalitarian control.

An investment in Your Future ...ATTEND CHURCH

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

CREATION...

ISN'T IT AMAZING... Scientists say that there are no two snowflakes alike! How many snowflakes do you suppose there have been since the beginning of time? Billions? It staggers the imagination when one thinks of all the things that God has created from nothing.

Genesis, the first book in the bible means beginning. It tells of many of God's more major creations, and how He created all these things for the benefit of man. Attend church, study God's word and learn more of God's plan for man.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Big Jewish group tries for converts

NEW YORK (AP) — For the first time in modern history, a major, national body of Judaism has launched an active, forthright effort to win converts to the faith.

The missionary program was adopted last weekend by the board of directors of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations at the urging of its president, Rabbi Alexander Schindler.

"Millions of Americans are searching for something," he said in recommending a direct "outreach program aimed at all Americans who are unchurched and who are seeking roots in religion."

Old world high

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) — High quality, low priced heroin is flooding Western Europe, police say, resulting in a pattern of rising youth addiction and drug deaths reminiscent of the U.S. experience.

Investigators believe most of the heroin comes from the Middle East, which last year began replacing Southeast Asia as the major supplier for the European narcotics trade.

"We used to hear that the 'old world' attitude would keep drugs out of Europe," said Thomas V. Cash, special agent in charge of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration operation in Germany. "But this is very clearly not the case."

He said that the increasing prevalence of heroin, various pills and other drugs bears striking similarities to the growth of drug abuse in the United States from 1966 to 1976: "It's eerie to watch."

Heroin abuse has been on the decline in the United States in recent years — heroin-related deaths in New York City dropped from 900 in the early 1970s to about 400 this year.

In West Germany, where the drug problem is perhaps greatest, the federal criminal office reports 172 kilograms of heroin have been seized so far this year, compared with about a teaspoonful in 1968. A kilogram is 2.2 pounds.

Berndt-Georg Thamm, a Berlin drug expert, said the percentage of 12 to 16-year-olds among West Germany's 50,000 estimated heroin addicts has jumped from nearly zero to 20 percent in three years.

Heroin is sold in a purer form in West Germany, and is therefore somewhat cheaper.

For the equivalent of $85, German addicts can buy a gram of heroin, enough for about 20 injections, drug experts say. The product is 30-40 percent pure, compared with under 5 percent pure for heroin sold in the United States. In New York City, the price for a gram of heroin — the less pure variety — is $55 to $65.

Inspector Hans Johansson of the Stockholm police reported heroin seizures in Sweden climbed from 82 last year to 127 during the first nine months of this year. He termed the increase in heroin abuse among Swedish youth as "disastrous."

French police say the number of drug-overdose deaths soared from 72 last year to about 100 so far this year. They said there was also a "dramatic" increase in thefts of amphetamines and barbiturates from pharmacies.

Overdose deaths are also up in Italy — from 26 in 1975 to 57 so far this year. The government's anti-drug squad said many of the victims were between 18 and 25. In Denmark the drug death rate climbed from 39 in 1976 to 85 in the first 10 months of this year.

Why waiters stand, wait

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — They also serve who only stand and wait.

Milton, of course, was talking about the frustrations of his blindness and not about waiters who stand around listening to the customers, which is a shame, because some of the lines overheard might have cheered him up.

"I don't want the soup du jour: I had that yesterday."

"If dessert comes with the meal and consomme doesn't, can I have a salad instead? I'm on a diet."

"I always get ravioli mixed up with manicotti. Which is the one that looks like little sweat socks?"

"Does the Bombay duck come with an orange or a curry sauce?"

"Mildred, I think you'll like the Welsh rarebit; it's what they call hasenpfeffer in a German restaurant."

"Make mine the prime rib au jus without the gravy, and leave off the ice cream on the apple pie a la mode... I'm counting every calorie."

"Bring my wife a children's platter. She's got a weigh-in tomorrow at Weight Watchers."

Lines like these regularly fail to ruffle the simulated Gallic charm of Tom Walsh, a neighbor of mine up in Connecticut who has served as maitre d', captain and waiter at a number of posh and pretentious bistros, auberges and country clubs throughout commuter-land. Intutored in French, innocent of ever having drawn an accent grave in anger, this Brooklyn-born Irishman has a faultless ear that has enabled him to master Inspector Clouseau's Pink Panther patois so expertly even the chef swears at him in French.

Tom's gifted ear is always finely attuned to the prose of those he stands and waits to serve, enabling him to collect gems like:

"Chicken Kiev is the one that bleeds grease when you poke it."

"Pouboire is French for toilet... I think it's upstairs."

"Cote de Veau en Feuilleté" little white booties that will cost you an extra two bucks just for show...

People who make a profession of serving the public don't have to stand around long waiting for lines that will light up their day and, at times, simmer their sang-froid.

Warren LeRuth, the great

New Orleans chef and restaurateur, has become a connoisseur of the guilt-ridden answers his waiters receive when they ask if the customer would like to order some wine with the meal.

Where the Unexpected Is Happening

Company to develop farm fuel

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pennsylvania firm has been "very tentatively" chosen by Agriculture Department officials for federal help in developing a project to turn agricultural products into fuel.

But the program, authorized by Congress last year, is having trouble getting off the ground because most companies that have applied for aid do not meet the criteria specified.

The department's Commodity Credit Corp. board, in a regular meeting here this week, tentatively accepted — but did not give final approval — to an application by Enerco Inc., Langhorne, Pa., a spokesman said Wednesday.

But the board's spokesman, George E. Rippel, said more information and a further review of Enerco's proposal will have to be made before its application is approved.

The company proposes using mobile units to convert a wide range of forest, crop and sawmill wastes into gas, charcoal and combustible wood oil.

In the Food and Agriculture Act last year, Congress authorized USDA to help establish four pilot energy projects aimed at converting agricultural and forest products into industrial hydrocarbons and alcohols that could be used as fuel.

The law allows the department to guarantee loans — not to lend public money directly — of up to $15 million each for four such pilot projects in the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

But the law also sets some hard criteria on the kinds of projects that can be assisted.

For example, no help will go to a project unless its total energy output exceeds the energy from fossil fuels used in converting the products to fuel items.

Other standards also were set by USDA to insure that projects are truly innovative before they can be approved for assistance.

Thirty applications for federal loan guarantees were received and reviewed by an evaluation committee which, in turn, recommended four to the CCC board for "particular" consideration. Those included Enerco, which asked for a loan guarantee of $6 million to help underwrite the $7.8 million investment.

The other three higher-priority applications that went to the board and their loan-guarantee requests:

—Ercos Systems Inc., Cambridge, Mass., which proposed a project at Houston, Texas, for converting rice hulls to "low-BTU gas for burning in an associated rice mill boiler." $3 million.

—Holly Sugar Corp., Colorado Springs, Colo., for converting sugarbeet molasses and possibly other sugar and rice products and wastes into fuel-grade alcohol at Tracy, Calif. $15 million.

—Midwest Solvents Inc., Atchison, Kan., which proposed to convert sorghum grain and sugarcane molasses into industrial-grade alcohol at Santa Rosa, Texas. $15 million.

The review panel also submitted five additional applications to the CCC board for "special attention" in looking over requests for aid.

Those applications were submitted by: ADM Corn Sweeteners, Archer Daniels Midland Co., Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Guaranty Fuels Inc., Guaranty Performance Co., Independence, Kan.; Nebraska Grain Alcohol and Chemical Co., Lincoln, Neb.; Renville County Agri-Energy Corp., Olivia, Minn.; and Ecothermia Inc., Denver, Colo.

The Ambassador Bridge connecting Detroit to Windsor, Ontario, was opened to traffic in 1929.

FOCUS

Active First Lady

Rosalynn Carter is scheduled to visit Savannah, Georgia, today, to tour a housing project for low income residents of the inner city. An active member of the Carter administration, Mrs. Carter attends Cabinet meetings, works on projects such as the President's commission on Mental Health, and serves as her husband's closest adviser. She has also represented the United States on official visits to foreign countries. Many of the president's aides consider Mrs. Carter the most influential first lady since Eleanor Roosevelt. Today's visit to Savannah is part of her most recent project: helping to develop a community-based urban policy to improve conditions in the nation's cities.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the only president to be married in the White House?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — In World War II, the United States fought Italy, Germany, and Japan.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Mom and Dad were happily married for 38 years. Then Dad died. Before his death he and Mom bought two cemetery lots so they could be buried side by side. Mom even bought a headstone to match Dad's and had her name engraved on it.

Mom made her home with my husband and me for 22 years and never expressed any interest in men. Then at age 79 she met Jess, a man age my (53) who could sell ice to the Eskimos! She invited him to move in with her (in my house!) and the whole town started talking.

I told them they'd either have to get married or move, so they got married. Meanwhile, Jess was spending Mom's money faster than she could draw it out of the bank.

Four months later Jess dropped dead while jogging. Mom went to pieces. She bought a double plot and buried Jess in one and had a matching headstone made for herself so she could be buried next to him when her time came.

Abby, she already had a plot and headstone for herself beside Dad. Who needs two plots?

When Mom dies should we bury her with her first love with whom she lived for 38 years? Or with that free-loader who married her for a meal ticket?

HER DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Your mother is still living, so you need not make that decision yet. When the time comes, everything will fall into its proper place. Including Mom.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married a short time to a man who was married before, and I resent the fact that he still has the gold wedding band from his first marriage. He insists that it means nothing to him, yet he refuses to get rid of it. He asks, "What do you expect me to do with it? Throw it away?"

Abby, I can't understand his reluctance to part with a reminder of a miserable relationship that ended in a painful and unfriendly divorce.

He wears MY wedding ring now. Am I being unfair to insist that he dispose of his first wedding ring? Just knowing that he has it bugs me no end.

FORT WORTH

DEAR FORT: If you're wise, you'll say no more about it. The ring is not important; your husband's private thoughts are. And he'll have them whether he has the ring or not.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a problem with kidney stones and am enclosing a few I have passed recently. I am 66 years old. I had surgery when I was 6. A stone was removed and a few days later I was cystoscoped and another was removed.

I was not bothered again for 41 years. At that time I had kidney colic and had surgery again. A stone was removed and about eight days later kidney colic occurred once more. Since then I have passed 56 stones. For the past year or two, I average about two per month.

I don't have kidney colic now, but I have a lot of backache and other discomfort. Sometimes there is blood when the stone is being passed. If you can help me in any way it would be very much appreciated.

DEAR READER — The small stones you sent me obviously are small enough to pass and that's fortunate.

The most important thing that you can do is have your doctors find out for certain what kind of stones you have. The fact that you had stones when you were 6 years old and are a frequent stone former is a bit unusual.

Your doctors need to know the chemical composition of your stones so they can decide how best to treat you. In some forms of stones it is important to cause the urine to become alkaline. The alkaline urine will dissolve the stones and may make even fair-sized ones even smaller to the point that they can pass. Maintaining an alkaline urine in these cases will prevent the formation of new stones.

However, stones of different chemical composition may require an acid urine and, in that event, the treatment is directed toward producing an acid urine to prevent stone formation.

Until the chemical composition of your stones is known, you can't expect optimal treatment. I am sending you The Health Letter number 11-2, Kidney Stones, Treatment Has Changed. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. This Health Letter will tell you about the different kinds of stones and the treatments that are used for them.

Regardless of the chemical composition of the stone, one of the most important things you can do for yourself is to be sure that you drink plenty of fluids every day. I would recommend drinking enough to pass two or three quarts of urine around the clock. The diluted urine helps prevent the formation of large stones.

Even what you should do about your diet depends a lot on the composition of the kidney stones. If the stone formation is associated with a kidney infection, you might need to restrict calcium intake. These kinds of stones occur more often in women. Stones that are formed in the absence of any infection seldom require a restriction of calcium intake.

One can't be certain that your backache and other discomfort aren't related to kidneys. I would urge you to seek a physician who will examine the kind of stones you have and formulate treatment on that basis.

Polly's Pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — Recently I read in a magazine that one could put fabric softener on a piece of towel and put it in the dryer rather than in the washing machine. I took this one step further. I dampen the same towel with water and use with the next batch of clothes and it works just fine.

I have a beautiful leather purse with a suede interlining. The leather was hardening so I used a softening oil. It worked but it soaked into the suede lining. Is there anything I can do to help this? — MRS. P.F.

DEAR MRS. P.F. — Suede is a bit tricky to work with but there is a commercial spray suede cleaner. Follow directions on can. Perhaps a generous application of powder, such as baby powder, would absorb the oil. It would be brushed off after a while. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — To prevent stray dogs from overturning my garbage cans on collection day I sprinkle some household ammonia on the contents.

My Pet Peeve concerns envelopes with too little glue on the flaps. — MARGARET

DEAR POLLY — I am continually reading complaints about people having mail returned for lack of postage. I send out from 50 to 200 pieces each month and have never had one letter returned. One can make stamps stick by pressing, not licking or wiping. Most people who lick stamps with their tongues or wipe them with a sponge are wiping off the glue. They should press the stamp (not wipe) and the glue would stay on the stamp. With a sponge or wet cloth press the stamp and do not wipe the glue off. — ALFRED

Setting sail for a theme cruise

John wants to tour the Caribbean Islands and record his trip in pictures. But he knows little about photography and doesn't want the hassle of attending classes in the evenings after work.

Karen is a young writer with reams of unpublished short stories and poems awaiting a publisher's perusal.

Bill and his wife, Kate, are bored by the regular Friday night backgammon game with their neighbors.

Surprisingly, the same solution may be right for each of these diverse malcontents, according to travel agents across the country. Ocean liners have added a new feature to the longstanding pleasures and benefits of ocean travel: the theme cruise.

One line, for example, has introduced theme cruises to appeal to enthusiasts of photography, the publishing world, and bridge and backgammon. John could take the two-week photography cruise, sailing April 28, 1979. It will feature Ed Meyers, executive editor of Popular Photography Magazine, to offer suggestions on improving composition, exposure, and use of the lens and filter. John can try out what he's learned while visiting an exotic circuit of Caribbean ports.

A unique, if unorthodox, approach for unknown writers like Karen to meet editors is to take the same cruise. The Norwegian America Line's Sagafjord sets sail April 14, 1979 for a two-week nine-port Caribbean cruise with editors Horace Sutton, and Carl Tucker, as well as authors, agents, and publishers to lead seminars, informal panel discussions, and autograph parties for young writers and others interested in the publishing world. Port visits will offer literary tours and talks with local writers.

For Bill and Kate, floating backgammon will be the center of interest on a cruise sailing March 31, 1979. The cruise will be hosted by backgammon expert Alexis Obolensky and others. During the 14 nights and calls at nine ports, passengers have the opportunity to play backgammon with international champions such as Obolensky and Joe Pasternak, to gain pointers on strategy, and to play in tournaments for beginners, intermediates, or advanced players. Prices for this two-week cruise range from $1,050 to $2,030 per person, double occupancy.

A perusal of 25 other cruise lines that make up the Cruise Lines International Association shows that these aren't the only theme cruises around. For example, in addition to good food, sea air, and sightseeing, you can view a solar eclipse off the Pacific coast of Mexico with leading astronomers on board to answer questions. The price tag: $1,345-$2,525.

A country-western music cruise sails round-trip from New York to Nassau and Bermuda with Hank Williams, Jr., and Kitty Wells aboard. Price: $445-$750.

Wines of Italy is the theme of Costa Line's 11-day cruise through the Caribbean on the Federico C., for $765-$1,325 per person.

Travel agents suggest that those who dismiss cruises because of the high price tags make a more detailed comparison between ocean and cross-country travel. They point out that the price of a ticket includes room, transportation, meals, and entertainment. The meals, for example, include breakfast (in bed, if you like), mid-morning bouillon on the sundeck, luncheon, afternoon tea with cakes and pastries, and a superb dinner, capped by a midnight buffet. Entertainment on board ranges from dance lessons, skeet shooting, cooking demonstrations, jogging, swimming, and sunning by day to first-run movies, nightclubs, dancing, gambling, and parties by night.

There are different cruises for different budgets. The main factor in determining the price of a cruise is its duration. Itineraries range in length from three days to three months. A travel agent can recommend a ship right for your needs and tastes, as well as cost-saving features such as a fly/cruise package that makes ships accessible even to landlocked midwesterners. The packages offer a considerable savings in airfare, and include complimentary transfers between airport and pier. In addition, a rail/sail plan is available from 105 cities. When the per-person cabin rate is at least $435, the ship line will reduce the cruise fare by the cost of the one-way ticket to Miami on Amtrak.

You, of course, are the best judge of the kind of cruise that best suits you. See a travel agent for a list of cruises available.

Luggage tips

Even if you are a seasoned traveler, a good look at your luggage situation might still be in order, according to Western International Hotels. With a well-coordinated wardrobe, careful packing and a wise purchase of pieces, you'll never have to be a slave to tons of packages.

A basic rule of thumb is to pack one regulation suitcase per adult. (If you buy a huge suitcase, you might not be able to tote it, should it become necessary.) You can then add one or more special pieces, a tote, a duffel, or a hang-up bag for general use. A hanging bag is wonderful for suits or pants suits. It's easy to pack and easy to handle enroute and when you arrive. Many of them have zippered compartments for shoes, underwear and any purchases you might make.

To recognize your luggage quickly at airports and in hotel lobbies, tie a bit of bright ribbon or cloth to the handle of each piece. Also paste labels with name, home address and phone on the inside of each piece just in case the outside tag gets lost.

Western International Hotels recommends, however, that you always lock your luggage enroute.

Energy cannot be created or destroyed. It can only be changed from one form to another.

'Animal House' left its mark

Los Angeles (AP) — You may find TV no laughing matter, but for better or for worse, you face 26 situation comedies, 10 of them new, when the networks' mid-season schedules start early next year.

A notable feature: The success of "Animal House" has left its mark on the minds of the program gurus. All three networks have collegiate sitcoms on tap for Professor Nielsen's mid-term exams.

ABC has an as-yet untitled comedy it says is based on "House." NBC has a sorority/fraternity caper, "Brothers and Sisters," while CBS has "Co-Ed Fever" in which a women's college goes coed.

(Wonder if there'll be a graduate series called "Carbon Copy.")

ABC has the most sitcoms afoot for mid-season, 12, of which three are new. Next is CBS with 10, four of them newcomers. NBC, though gearing up for a run at top-rated ABC, has but four laughers, three of them new. All four will air Friday nights.

ABC's big comedy nights are on Tuesday and Thursday; each night to offer four sitcoms. You also will detect two more on Fridays, another two on Saturdays.

At CBS, Sunday and Monday are the big sitcom nights, with four airing on each night. Another two will appear Wednesday nights.

Variety won't be the mid-season spice of TV life. Only ABC has a variety series, "The Osmond Family Hour." But Mary Tyler Moore, whose new Sunday variety series flopped, has a variation planned.

CBS calls it "The Mary Tyler Moore Hour" (titles ending in "Hour" may be TV's newest trend). It'll have the comedy star doing a situation comedy revolving around a variety show of hers.

No slot is set for it yet, though. If CBS decides to put the show on its mid-season roster, it'll have to bump another series now on the roster to make room for it.

Hospital cost controls abhorred by professionals

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — If you ask the hospital industry whether voluntary cost controls work you will get back an affirmative answer. It claims to have proved its point; it claims it has a lesson to teach others.

Not everyone will agree with the industry's own assessment, because it concedes prices rose 13.6 percent in the 12 months through August. But that, it observes, is better than the year-earlier's 16.5 percent.

And, says Alex McMahon, American Hospital Association president, the improvement will continue. "The word is out," he said: Americans are fed up with rising hospital costs, and the hospitals must respond.

The alternative, McMahon fears, is controls, which are abhorred professionally and personally by many of those who run the nation's 6,000 community (nongovernment) hospitals.

"There is no stimulus to volunteering like the draft," said an associate as he explained the "VE" or voluntary effort program begun more than a year ago by the AHA and related health groups.

VE set as its major goal a 2 percent annual reduction in the rate of increase of hospital expenditures for 1978 and 1979. Not a decrease in expenses, it should be noted; merely a decrease in the increase rate.

The route to the goals was clear: They would seek no net increase in the number of hospital beds, a reduction in new capital investment, a voluntary limit on physician fee increases.

There is nothing very original in such measures, except in relation to the attitude that prevailed before. The "before" attitude was that in health care matters no expense should be spared.

As McMahon tells it, the "before" attitude emanated from the public itself, even though it was the public that later served notice it was fed up. The difference symbolizes the decades: In the 1960s the mood was expansionary; in the 1970s the mood favors conservation.

"No longer are we able to do everything we want to do," said McMahon. "We have to prioritize, just as in education and national defense." This, he said, is the current message to the industry.

Singer won triple crown

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Jimmy Bowen says he always sang off key and has grown too old to disco. But he's earned music's triple crown as a singer, record producer and record company executive.

Bowen, a cheerful 40-year-old with a penchant for whaler's hats, made the winner's circle in 1957 with the rock 'n' roll hit, "I'm Stickin' With You." He gave up singing, switched to record producing and turned out a daily double of "Strangers in the Night" by Frank Sinatra and "Everybody Loves Somebody Sometime" by Dean Martin. And he's been an executive for MCA and MGM record companies here and in Los Angeles.

His musical derby began in Texas when he teamed with Buddy Knox of "Party Doll" fame. It continued in Los Angeles when he hooked up with Sinatra and Martin. And now he's in Nashville where he's associated with country music artists like Mel Tillis.

As a rock 'n' roller, he was a contemporary of Buddy Holly, Rick Nelson, Jerry Lee Lewis.

Carl Perkins, Roy Orbison and Conway Twitty. In Nashville, he has joined other ex-rock stars like Bill Justis of "Raunchy" fame, Jimmy Gilmer who had "Sugar Shack" and "Bottle of Wine," Dave Burgess of the Champs and "Tequila" fame and Larry Henley of the Newbeats who recorded "Bread and Butter."

"I was a bad singer," Bowen recalled in an interview in his spacious second floor office. "I was always a one-eighth tone flat. But I was consistent."

"The girls screamed all the time so I didn't know how bad I was," he said. "I just shook my butt and hoped they screamed."

"I quit making records in 1959 by mutual agreement with the public. I had eight people at a couple of shows and 20 at another."

He said he believes the disco rage today is much like the "Big Band" popularity three decades ago.

"I'm too old to dance, but disco is very important today. It's a parallel to the 'Big Band' days when everyone danced. Discos seem like places where people are the stars as opposed to a place where you sit and listen. It's like a big party."

He's not as complimentary of punk rock, which he calls "a passing fad."

"Music is spread again now, but usually there's one force like Sinatra or Elvis or the Beatles. In the next year or two, I think there will be another monster artist. For a while, I thought it might be Elton John."

Regulations need coordination

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It is too early to legislate safeguards against grain elevator explosions, but the state needs to coordinate grain industry regulation, the Texas Agriculture Department has recommended.

"Grain elevator explosion safety can be likened to aircraft safety," says an agency report on the hazard. "No matter what precautions are taken, accidents are implicit in the nature of the problem."

In the last 20 years, 58 explosions have rocked Texas grain elevators. Volatile grain dust accumulates in the structures and can be ignited by static electricity, faulty wiring, smoking and other sources.

"Since research has yet to prove methods and controls which would be effective in preventing or controlling explosions," the study said, "legislative action requiring the installation of equipment is not advisable."

A grain warehouse technical committee should be established to coordinate state efforts to combat the problem, the agriculture department recommended.

The panel would coordinate state regulation, evaluate laws concerning grain warehouses and establish an accident investigation team.

The state agriculture department should establish a liaison with federal agencies regulating grain elevators.

"Based on prior recommendations, the Texas Department of Agriculture will begin grain elevator explosion safety inspections as an additional part of its responsibility to periodically inspect grain warehouses," the report continued.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown wrote grain warehouse inspectors in October of their new responsibilities.

"As part of your normal duties, I want you to pay more attention to the conditions in grain warehouses," he wrote the state inspectors.

Brown said they would conduct walk-through inspections to note safety hazards, but no disciplinary or regulatory action will be taken against safety violators. Inspectors were told to leave an unsafe elevator and not return until the hazard is corrected.

Industry bears the primary burden of financing research into elevator explosions, the report said, with supplemental funds coming from state and federal agencies.

Jones made TV movie

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Tom Jones doesn't plan to gyrate across stages belting out songs to moaning women forever, although he'd like to. He's going to become an actor, so he'll have something to fall back on.

Jones already has made a TV movie, a series pilot to be shown on NBC though no air date has been set. He's also bought what he calls "the perfect vehicle for me," the rights to a book called "The Gospel Singer," which will become his first motion picture.

"I'd like to stop time right here," said Jones, after dancing, bouncing, joking, and punching out songs for two shows at Caesar's Palace.

"Most people have a goal that they set, they want to reach it in five years or something. But I feel like I've reached what I set out to do. All I want to do is continue."

The 37-year-old Jones knows that time isn't standing still. Through daily workouts, steam room treatments after each show, the elimination of alcohol before going on stage, he is in top physical shape — as many ladies in his audiences will attest — and has never missed a scheduled performance.

He doesn't always produce those bell-like high tones on the teary ballads, as he did 10 years ago. But in his two-week Caesar's Palace appearance, renditions of the late Elvis Presley standards — "I Can't Help Falling in Love with You" and "Are You Lonesome Tonight?" — were turned into heart-tugging, sung with the earthy, masculine voice that seems classical in an era of high-pitched Bee Gees and Casidy brothers.

"I'm not getting any younger, time is getting on," he said. "I'd like to get into films and become a good actor, so that I don't have to rely totally on my voice."

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

December 9, 1978

This coming year you could make a mark in the world by becoming involved in projects where you can use your originality. There is a market for your imagination and creativity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Small groups are apt to be more to your liking than large gatherings today. Where the crowds are too big you might feel that you're lost in the shuffle. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in 1979 by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019.

Be sure to specify birth sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Success is likely today where your ambitions are concerned, because you're a strong closer. Save your trump cards to take the final trick.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Short trips are favored today, but not overnights. If you're anxious to visit friends, select those who don't live too far away.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You operate extremely well today in situations permitting you to function with a free hand. Instinctively, you'll know how to get what you go after.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Sluggish types should be avoided today. They'll cause you only frustration. You'll be bristling with energy. You should be free to act independently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your business instincts are very sharp today. See if you can uncover something profitable, or look for a good by on an item you've been wanting.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Friends won't be able to say they don't know where you stand today. You have the courage of your convictions. You'll back up what you say with action.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Challenging situations awaken the best in you today. Should a gauntlet be thrown down, you'll pick it up with alacrity.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you've been sitting on your duff a bit too much lately, involve yourself in some form of mild physical activity today. Exercise will do you good.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A situation could develop today that will enable you to manage something for another, and reap in return a part of the rewards for yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) When faced with difficult choices today, your first impulse may be to dodge them. After reflection, however, you'll be able to face them fearlessly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It would be a mistake today to let someone who isn't as familiar with your finances as you are to make decisions for you in this area. Balance your own books.
