Is reactor a threat?

Town splits votes in poll

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — People who live in and near this city are split over whether the radioactive leak from a nuclear plant that sits almost in their backyards poses a threat to them, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

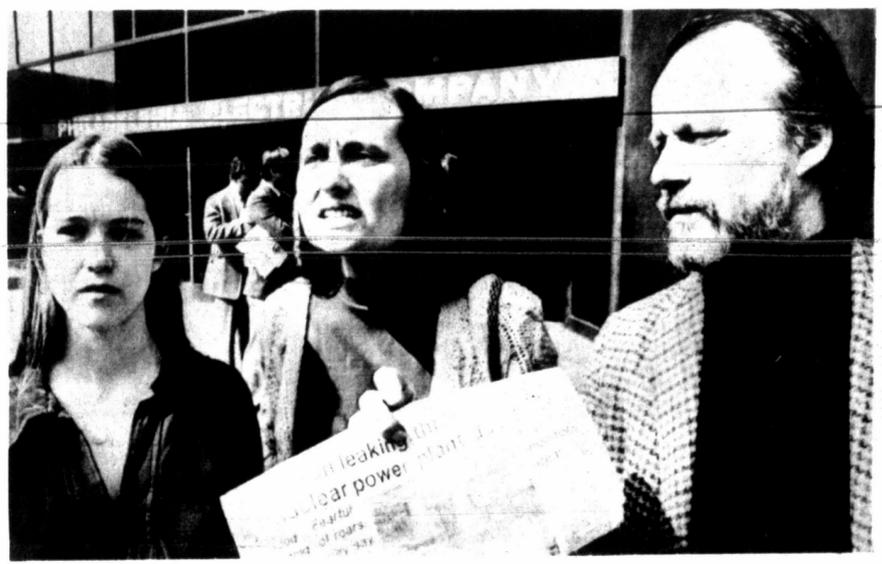

Three Mile Island nuclear power plant. 26 percent said they were very concerned.

But 47 percent of the Harrisburg area residents interviewed Thursday night viewed the accident as a crisis while 37 percent did not. Sixteen percent were not sure.

The Wednesday morning accident at the nuclear plant spawned a radioactive cloud that was detected up to 16 miles away from the plant, which sits on an island in the Susquehanna River about 10 miles from the state capital.

By late Thursday officials said there was no longer any danger for area residents. "At this point, the danger is over for people off site," said Charles Gallina, an inspector for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

JOSEPH HENDRIE, Nuclear Regulatory Commission chairman, testifies before Congress on the radiation leak at Three Mile Island nuclear power plant near Harrisburg, Pa. Meanwhile, three representatives of the anti-nuclear Keystone Alliance at Philadelphia protest the continuation of nuclear operations.

Area people leaving Three Mile Island

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Gov. Dick Thornburgh urged residents within 10 miles of the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant to stay indoors until further notice following a new release today of radioactive gas from the crippled facility. But authorities said some people were leaving the area.

Paul Critchlow, Thornburgh's spokesman, said "We are advising people within a 10-mile radius to stay indoors throughout the morning until further instructions are handed down. There is no need for an evacuation. There was a series of uncontrolled bursts of radiation from about 6:40 a.m. until about 9 a.m. this morning."

John Comey of the Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency, asked if people were evacuating the area on their own, said "They are. Businesses in Harrisburg appear to be releasing employees. People are leaving the Harrisburg area."

Paging Perry L. Moose

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff
At age eight, Perry Lee Moose must be Pampa's youngest political aficionado.

Perry Lee, a second grader at Woodrow Wilson School, has worked in political campaigns, exchanged handshakes with Jimmy Carter and chatted with State Speaker of the House Bill Clayton. Now a real honor is coming his way. On April 10 he will act as an honorary page for the Texas House of Representatives in Austin.

Pages deliver messages and run other errands for representatives. Only pages and representatives are allowed on the floor of the legislature while the House is in session.

Weather

The forecast calls for clear to partly cloudy skies today, with considerable cloudiness and cooler temperatures on Saturday. The high today is expected to reach the low 60s, with the low in the low 30s. Winds will be out of the north to northwest at 15 to 20 mph and gusty this afternoon, diminishing to 10 to 15 mph tonight. The high Thursday was 74 and the overnight low was 40.

Hart innocent

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — Gene Leroy Hart was found innocent today of three counts of murder in the sex slayings of three Girl Scouts at a summer camp in 1977.

Clements to support legislation

Porn law could tighten

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said today he will support legislation tightening state pornography laws and protecting children from portrayal in obscene materials.

He said the bills would follow the U.S. Supreme Court's "Miller" decision that makes community standards the test for determining whether something is obscene.

On another legislative matter, Clements said he would sign a bill restoring the right of ex-convicts to vote once they have completed their sentences, including parole and probation.

They should receive only cost-of-living raises from the Legislature, equal to those given state employees, and merit raises from the school boards.

What's inside

BOSTON POLICE escort Julio Rodrigues, 18, after he was arrested and charged with arson in connection with fires set in two hotels in Boston. Rodrigues, a former employee at both hotels, was arrested at a Boston bus station Thursday night.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Changing worker attitudes

Blaming a shortage of capital investment, a shift in workforce and increased government regulations, an industrialist notes that productivity growth has slowed in nearly every U.S. industry. Sidney Harman, a founder of Harmon Kardon Inc., said American industry needs a new equilibrium of heart and head to improve its decreasing productivity rate.

Harman, addressing the annual Rocky Mountain Productivity Conference, said, "Many measures show the U.S. economy last in productivity growth among the major industrial nations."

Harman is senior staff member of the Aspen Institute of Humanistic Studies, where he is designing a program dealing with the nature of work and industrial policy. He says, "ignoring the human factor in the work - place is a factor of enormous consequence to the national economy and inflation."

He drew attention to a basic adversary relationship which he said exists in much of the American workplace and is related to early management theories which claimed tension at work helped to increase productivity. He blames this for a "vast overlay of supervision which costs us enormously."

Harman seems to place his emphasis on managerial failures in creating the adversary climate. We do not take issue with his premise, and there is the logic of management maintaining a climate of leadership and example in order to dispel adversary influence. However, there are two sides to the coin of worker - management relations and general worker attitude hasn't been of the best the last few decades.

These workers who have been mostly influenced by the labor union concept of always more remuneration for less effort have left otherwise competent managers helpless to establish proper rapport with those they supervise. This attitude spills over to workers not affiliated with a union and its inhibiting effect thus infects most all industrial relations.

There probably is much that can be done and needs to be done by industrial management to show greater leadership and example which will alleviate the negative attitude which plagues our per - man productivity. Perhaps if Herman's idea had been better applied years ago, the labor unions would not have gained the hold they have on the worker's mind.

To get this nation back on the track in productivity calls for a tremendous new effort to sell Americans on the basic tenets of individual enterprise. Education and leadership are both needed to reaffirm the concept which made this nation the greatest fulfiller of human wants and needs.

It is high time to return the words, work, profit and cooperation to their proper status. It will take all the managerial skills our industries can muster to provide the education necessary to show all workers that their best possible economic condition rests solely on private competitive enterprise.

Our school will not provide such education. They are now committed, by and large, to the socialistic ideas promulgated by the nation's largest labor union: the National Education Association.

Home, managerial leadership and work experience will have to fill the gap of economic education, if attitudes are changed in a manner which will lead to greater productivity.

We have not mentioned the damaging effect of taxation which causes great loss of incentive. It is a tremendous factor in the loss of productivity and adverse attitudes which affects managers and workers alike.

Khomeini fighting the dictates of time

Americans have never been shy about telling other countries how to run their business.

So, it is not surprising to learn that Kate Millet, a Yankee-Doodle feminist and author of "Sexual Politics" has been in Iran, trying to tell Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini that he has his head in the sand where women's rights are concerned.

Mr. Khomeini has told his women that they no longer will wear western dresses, blue jeans, makeup and other such flashes of degradation. And instead of showing their faces in public, they once again will go to the veil.

Mr. Khomeini is a tough cookie where women are concerned, and he says he is not likely to be deterred in his efforts to clean up the place.

The women of Iran, however, are somewhat reluctant to return to the ancient Islamic law that Mr. Khomeini naively speaks of.

But our Kate also is a tough cookie, and understands the power that comes with almost any woman. And what she seems to understand is that the time of the woman has come, whether she be in the U.S. or in the dusty streets of Iran. It would be ironic, indeed, if Khomeini were to find himself undone, and his undoing could be tied directly to hemlines and stockings.

Many of the Iranian women who ascended economically as their husbands made money in the oil business have tasted freedom from the Islamic law. They simply do not want to return to being chattel. The other day, an unmarried couple received 20 lashes for "desiring sexual relations."

We realize that Kate has her own battles to fight, but who is there to say a word for the men who are suffering antiquated abuses under this religious purge? Men have been lashed with whips for gambling. The punishment for men running a brothel is death - already meted out to at least half a dozen Iranian men.

Kate even takes some of the "credit" for dumping of the shaw. Now, it's Khomeini's turn. But Kate still sees all the women of the world dominated by men, and this is myopic.

We would remind Kate that women own the majority of stock in American corporations (check Fortune's 500) and also directly own the lion's share of the land.

There is little argument with Kate over the legitimacy of equal rights for women. But she seems to think that if women led more governments of the world, things would be better. Under Golda Meir, Israel engaged in more warfare than under any previous leader. And in India, Indira Gandhi, the niece of the great pacifist Mohandas Gandhi, proved not only to be a voracious warlord but would brook no opposition. Period. So, she threw thousands of people in jail and turned the former neutral nation into a scrapping nation. And by and large, it was the men who were called on to do the dying.

Still, we favor positively the right of women anywhere in the world to dress as they please, even if it means going to such western ways as wearing nylon stockings and hot pants.

Khomeini may find that he can nationalize the oil industry, throw America out, and whip the army into line. But the re-veiling of all women's faces may prove to be his downfall.

Amendment would curb spenders

While Congress is busy raising the national debt "limit," this time to $830 billion, a group of determined citizens called the National Tax Limitation Committee is pushing to amend the Constitution to bring about an end to government borrowing.

It does seem extraordinary that a government which has the power to tax without limit the richest country on earth should need also to borrow $830 billion.

But the budget balancing amendment is being condemned by some, including Marvin Stone, editor of U.S. News and World Report, who holds that "deficit spending is indispensable at times to head off a depression or relieve acute suffering ... to revive business" and to meet "unpredictable demands of defense and war."

I have never swallowed the theory of John Maynard Keynes that government spending of borrowed money is the way to head off a depression. Business firms' spending of money borrowed on the strength of planned production stems a far more hopeful way. As to financing a war, that should not be made too easy. If the people are not willing to pay cash to finance a war, the war had better not be fought.

The enemy today is inflation, and deficit spending by the United States government is at the root of it. To finance the deficits, the Federal Reserve over - produces, or inflates, the money.

The proposed amendment "would end inflation," states Milton Friedman, in Newsweek of March 5. Friedman, who in my book is Mr. Economics, is one of the sponsors and, I would guess, one of the writers of the amendment. His recommendation of it carries weight.

The amendment is designed to curb government spending and therefore government borrowing. It would stop the government from spending an increasing proportion of the national income.

Further, when inflation is severe and threatens to be more so, as at present, it would reduce the percentage of the national income that government would be allowed to spend. This reduction, Friedman holds, would slash, if not wholly eliminate, government borrowing, and so would eradicate the root cause of inflation.

The amendment would provide that if the general price level rose 3 percent or less in a given year, government spending the following year would be allowed to rise by the same percentage as the Gross National Product (or national income) rose, but not more. Inflation of 3 percent is deemed negligible.

If, however, the general price level rose more than 3 percent, the amendment would require that the Washington spenders pull in their horns and increase their spending by less than the increase of the national income. Specifically, the increase of spending would have to be reduced by one-fourth of the inflation rate minus 3 percent.

For example, if the nation's income grew by 10 percent in a certain year and the price level rose by 7 percent, spending would be allowed to rise not 10 percent, but 10 minus the difference between 7 and 3, divided by 4, or about 9 percent. If the inflation continued another year, the spending would have to be curbed some more: until borrowing would become unnecessary. Then inflation would have to give.

It is clear that the amendment would not outlaw government borrowing completely. It is not a radical measure. But it would apply restraint in the right direction. And it would write budget control into the Constitution, not leaving government spending and borrowing to the will of Congress and the president as at present.

According to Friedman, had the amendment been in effect in the decade of 1969 to 1978, "the deficits would have been much lower than they were." The debt limit would not now be flirting with a trillion dollars, threatening national bankruptcy.

The amendment also would encourage the spenders to balance the government's budget - that is, operate on a cash basis - because they would have a strong incentive to reduce inflation to 3 percent a year or less and keep it there. Then they could increase their spending in proportion to the increase of the national income.

By reducing inflation, says Friedman, the amendment would indirectly reduce unemployment. At present, inflation raises people's dollar income but not real income. This moves them into a higher income tax bracket and the higher tax rates they pay "have reduced the incentive of people to seek employment."

Also unemployment benefits have been increased, making employment still more unattractive when compared to unemployment. Higher tax rates on business, too, have discouraged investment, which would have increased employment.

Washington officialdom will oppose the amendment. Keynesian professors, committed to government spending as the way to economic utopia, are calling the amendment "ridiculous." But the popular rebellion against mushrooming government may well write this or a similar restraint into the fundamental law of the land.

Governor's slave state

Along with many other Americans, California Gov. Jerry Brown must have enjoyed watching the recent television movie Roots. But while others were taking pleasure from watching the descendants of Kunta Kinte evolve out of a state of slavery, Jerry Brown was likely contemplating a return to such a system. His recent proposal for a system of mandatory service to the political State was, if nothing else, a cry for a return to the "good of days" of plantationism, with Jerry no doubt fashioning himself as a likely candidate for the job of Cracker-in-Chief.

Jerry showed himself to be a master at the rhetoric of slave - state politics. He spoke of a citizen's "civil obligations," which would be fulfilled by either service in the military or one of a variety of other government agencies. To his way of thinking, "the concept of service ... to the country and the future is essential. Now we serve the country not just by marching around with a rifle, but by bringing hope back to the cities, by comforting the sick, by renewing the forests and the rivers and by bringing friendships to other countries. If we combine all that into some form of national service I think that is very high on the political agenda." One recalls, in hearing such vicious proposals, the "supremacy of the State" rhetoric of Hitler and Mussolini in the 1930s as well as the provision of the Russian Constitution that "in the USSR work is the duty of every able-bodied citizen."

I have little doubt that such a proposal as Brown has offered - even though he is not the first to do so - will become law. If we have learned anything from history it is that systems of State - slavery are not forced onto people as much as they are sold to them. When Kunta Kinte's heirs - along with the rest of us - are herded back onto the federal plantations to begin their prescribed service to the State, they will be firm in the belief that they have willed their own servitude as an expression of their own "freedom." As evidence of this, consider the fact that Jerry Brown made his proposal in an address to students at Georgetown University and it was greeted by cheers from the audience!

When slavery returns to America, it will not be attended by leg chains, ships and branding irons. It will, rather, be accompanied by favorable resolutions from chambers of commerce (who will not doubt see this as an alternative to youths being out on the street); labor unions (who will welcome it as an opportunity to keep even more people out of the labor markets); and the National Council of Churches (just because it is collectivistic enough to satisfy their basic premises). The "conservatives" will embrace it as a way of keeping taxes down and because it has such a nice ring of "duty" to it, while the "liberals" will find it a perfect vehicle for their regimental pursuits. Feminists will, of course, demand their "fundamental right" to be included, while racial and ethnic minority groups will endorse the proposition provided everyone is included as a slave this time around. The "law n' order" crowd - always attracted to any program that promises incarceration and requires the carrying of "national identity cards" - will experience sheer ecstasy! Newspaper editors, television news commentators, and ministers will wax fatuous to their chuk-headed clientele about the virtues of such a program.

At some point in time - no doubt in time to celebrate George Orwell's prophecy - we will likely be ushered into Jerry Brown's brave new world of State - slavery. We will - just like antebellum blacks, the citizens of Nazi Germany, and the Incas of Peru - be issued our "national identification cards" (which we will be required to have on us at all times). We will - just as we now obediently do at airports - submit to arbitrary searches of our persons and our belongings (to make certain, of course, that none of us are runaway slaves). Like the descendants of Kunta Kinte, we will cooperate in our own victimization, believing that no other way of life is realistically thinkable, and altogether certain that our present state is preferable to those "other" nations in the world where people do not enjoy our blessings of liberty.

Farenthold may have been priced out of politics

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The woman's hair, once long and dark in the pictures on the political posters, is now white and cropped short. But the young hotel desk clerk still recognized her.

It was Frances "Sissy" Farenthold and the clerk had cast his first vote for her in the 1972 Texas gubernatorial race.

"That happens a lot. It's nice. I appreciate it. I appreciated all those votes," said Mrs. Farenthold, who got 884,000 votes after taking Dolph Briscoe into a surprising primary runoff in 1972.

But Mrs. Farenthold, 52, president of New York's Wells College for the past three years and an observer of Texas politics "from afar," says the costly 1978 Texas race may have priced her out of the gubernatorial market.

"Sure," she said Thursday when asked that question. "I always felt maybe it could be done without all of that. I don't know if that's possible anymore. I'd always hoped you wouldn't be priced out."

"But you take a place like Texas, you're not in it unless you're there with a Lear jet. You're not considered a viable candidate in this state unless you have tremendous resources. That certainly says a lot about our own guidelines."

Republican Bill Clements, an oil millionaire, spent more than $6 million in upsetting Democrat John Hill in the 1978 race. Hill spent about $4 million. Mrs. Farenthold said she ran in the 1972 and 1974 Democratic primaries for "under $1 million" each time.

"It's very worrisome," she said of the expensive campaigns. "The one grave concern I have with the process is the costliness of it. Only the very rich people can even consider putting on a race. We just don't have the participation."

Mrs. Farenthold, then a vocal, reform-minded legislator and member of the legislature's liberal "Dirty 30" in the post-Sharpstown era, came out of the pack and surprisingly finished ahead of Gov. Preston Smith and Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes in the 1972 Democratic primary.

Her low-budget, loosely-organized campaign, resting on a foundation of young voters, drew 612,000 votes, second only to Briscoe's 963,000 and forcing a runoff. She lost to Briscoe by 210,000 votes out of 1.9 million cast in the runoff and lost badly to him in 1974.

"I don't like to loiter with my political past. The 1972 race was a very vivid experience," she said, pausing for what appeared to be a nostalgic moment.

Mrs. Farenthold later drew national attention in the Democratic Party and has emerged as a national women's leader. She was in San Antonio on Thursday night to speak at a national conference on "Women and the Law" and appeared at another national conference here last week.

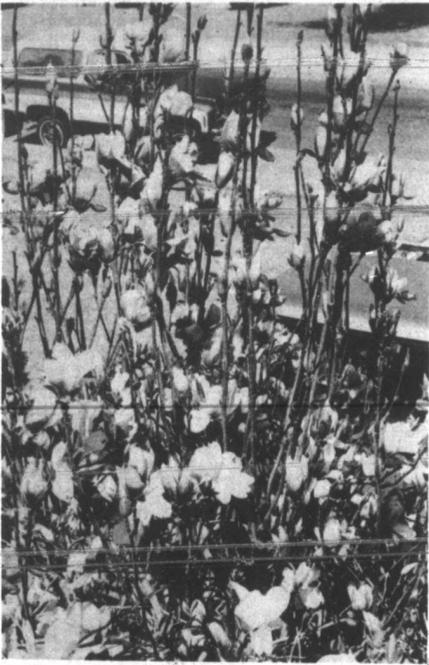

Mrs. Farenthold said she plans to return home to Texas "when I get through with the job at Wells" and indicated she hasn't ruled out a return to state politics.

"I don't know. I'm very interested in it (Texas politics). I care a lot about it. It's a tough state to run in," she said. "I'm certainly still interested. I guess Richard Nixon has taught us one thing, that's 'Never say never.'"

The state's political complexion, however, has changed since her last campaign, especially with the election last year of a Republican governor. That, she said, "kind of opens things up."

On 126-year-old Governor's Mansion

Renovation considered

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The House has approved, 95-35, a resolution that could be the first step toward renovating the 126-year-old Governor's Mansion.

But before the resolution cleared, Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, suggested some Democrats had tried to use it as a political vehicle against Republican Gov. Bill Clements.

Senators now must decide whether to accept amendments added by the House.

The resolution would create a committee of two House members, two senators and two persons appointed by Clements to consult architects and state historical agencies, then report to the Legislature on the need for repairs.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, attempted to add an amendment blocking funds for mansion renovations until Clements has signed the general appropriation bill. Clements has requested $2 million for work on the mansion.

Wilson said the mansion, built in 1853, had "been good enough for every other governor we have had."

His amendment was tabled, 65-60.

Wilson said the state could build four governor's mansions for $2 million and mentioned that some retired teachers receive only $80 a month.

"This is a waste of our money, a waste of our time. We would spend $2 million on a remodeling project, and I think we have more serious business to attend to," Wilson said.

Davis, the sponsor, said the resolution was no more than an effort to obtain information before repairing "probably the best example of architecture of that age that exists in this state."

"Perhaps some of you think this is a political game. I hope not," said Davis.

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, pressed Davis on what he meant.

"I was saying I thought some members of the House wanted to send a message to the governor that they didn't agree with his budget or some other things and wanted to use this as a vehicle to say that," Davis said.

When Washington said this was insulting to Wilson, Davis said he apologized if he had offended anyone.

State hiring practices progress

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A black legislator who distributes an annual report on state hiring practices says minority groups have made "phenomenal progress" over the past five years but the battle "has just begun."

Rep. Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas, told a news conference Thursday the state has advanced "light years" in the hiring of blacks, Mexican-Americans and women since 1974, when he made his first analysis of employment practices.

Ragsdale especially praised the state comptroller's office for hiring minorities but criticized the "poor employment record" of the state highway department.

He also said he had received complaints, mainly from blacks, that the dismissal of 63 employees of the Texas Department of Community Affairs included a "disproportionate number" of minorities.

That agency, he said, had set "an example by demonstrating what affirmative action really means."

Ragsdale said he had written Gov. Bill Clements, requesting a breakdown by race and sex of those who were fired.

"I want to know how evenly the ax did fall," Ragsdale said. The legislator's annual employment report was his fourth in five years on 38 state agencies.

"When we first examined the racial and sexual compositions of their work forces, it was clear that we were more likely to find life on the face of the sun than to find any meaningful consideration of the principles of equal employment opportunity in the personnel offices of these agencies," he said.

"Today, I am pleased to say, however, that things are quite different," Ragsdale said.

"We have seen some phenomenal progress on the part of most of these agencies," Ragsdale said.

The progress Ragsdale cited included a 472.5 percent increase in the number of black employees making $10,000 or more a year, a 369.9 percent increase in the number of Mexican-Americans making that much and a 278.5 percent increase for women over that salary level.

Two 'blind bidding' bills offered

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — What bowls them over on Madison Avenue might not draw as enthusiastic a reception in Pampa or Texarkana. Sen. John Traeger told a Senate committee Thursday.

Theater owners, however, had to put in their bids last fall to show The Main Event starring Barbra Streisand and Ryan O'Neal this summer — without having seen the film, Traeger said.

He introduced two bills that would outlaw "blind bidding" and ban certain guarantees and advances exhibitors pay to movie distributors.

The Senate Economic Development Committee will continue its hearing on the measures Monday.

"If the film bombs out, the distributor gets his guarantee of $35,000. The exhibitor loses his shirt," said Traeger. D-Seguin. Exhibitors "object to having to buy a pig in a poke."

Don Adams, a former state legislator representing the Motion Picture Association of America, said passage of the bills would destroy the motion picture industry's balance.

"We've got the movies — but they've got the screens," he said.

Adams said the association is made up of 10 major film distributors.

"Fiscal disputes like this should be resolved in the marketplace," he said. "There is no public safety involved. The taxpayers' rights are not at stake."

He said producers and distributors assume a risk when they decide to put up the capital for a film.

"This is a risk business," Adams said. "The advances are simply a pledge of credit."

The Ohio law against blind bidding is presently being tested in federal court, he added.

Christopher Meacham, of the National Association of Theater Owners of Texas, said seven states have passed legislation similar to Traeger's proposals.

He showed the committee a copy of a letter to theater owners from Columbia Pictures asking for bids to be submitted by Feb. 22 for its unfinished Christmas release, The Electric Horseman.

"The Electric Horseman stars Robert Redford and Jane Fonda, was directed by Sydney Pollack (The Way We Were). Need we say more!" the letter said.

It also suggested that the exhibitors offer a minimum six weeks playtime, "a substantial guarantee" and 90 percent of the take above a "reasonable house allowance."

Meacham said the exhibitors are asking to be able to view the product before bidding. "We're not asking you to protect us so we don't have to put up that much money," he said.

Traeger said, "The exhibitors get to take this blind. The other boys are out counting their money in New York City."

"You going to put on any witnesses like Raquel or Farrah?" Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, asked. "I don't go to movies. I eat my popcorn at home."

Vaccinations available

The Texas Department of Health will be holding clinics offering vaccines that provide protection against several childhood diseases in April.

The clinics are scheduled throughout the Panhandle next month. The vaccines provide protection against polio, diphtheria, lockjaw, whooping cough, measles, rubella, and mumps. There will be no charge for the vaccinations.

The clinics are scheduled as follows:

Pampa — April 12 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Marcus Sanders Community Center, 407 S. Crawford St.

Spearman — April 2 from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at Spearman Elementary School, 511 S. Townsend St.

Wellington — April 9 from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Collingsworth County Community Action Corporation, 612 East Avenue.

Perryton — April 10 from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. at South Elementary School Auditorium, 1702 S. Grinnell St.

Cactus — April 11 from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. at Cactus Elementary School.

Shamrock — April 16 from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Planned Parenthood Office, 210 N. Wall St.

Clements gives thanks, holds off on support

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has acknowledged the support evangelist Lester Roloff gave him during his successful campaign against former Attorney General John Hill.

Departing from his prepared text at a rally of several thousand fundamentalist Christians on Thursday, the governor told Roloff he was "grateful to be here tonight, with you particularly."

Clements said he was aware of the faith and support Roloff helped provide for his successful campaign last fall.

"I appreciate that very much," the governor concluded. He did not endorse the rally's declared purpose, support of legislation to exempt certain religious child care facilities from state Department of Human Resources regulations.

Clements was due to depart after the speech, but the born again fervor of the event apparently prompted him to stay longer.

The governor and the evangelist met for the first time at the rally.

"I knew we needed a new governor," Roloff said when he introduced Clements. "People laughed; they poked fun."

"But I fought; sent out over 50,000 letters," the Corpus Christi evangelist said. "God's people have decided and broken a tradition of more than a century."

Weather

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Showers and thunderstorms dumped heavy amounts of rainfall across a vast section of Texas, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a flash flood warning for several counties in North Texas.

Some flooding was reported during the night in the Abilene area. Two tornadoes were confirmed late Thursday, but no one was injured and no significant damage was reported.

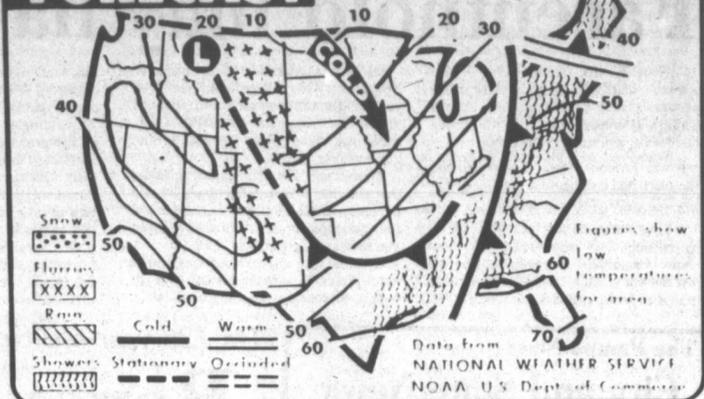

Much of North Texas, including the Dallas-Fort Worth area was under a flash flood warning early today. Forecasters warned of the possibility of rapidly rising creeks, flooded overpasses and some street flooding as lines of thunderstorms moved through the area.

At Abilene, police reported about six inches of water was going over the Lytle Lake spillway. Forecasters said the water was expected to rise. Only minor flooding resulted, officers said.

Winds gusted to 46 mph as one of the lines of thunderstorms moved through the Abilene area.

Skies were to be mostly clear in Northwest and Southwest Texas. Highs were to range from the 50s in the Panhandle to the 70s in North Central and Northeast Texas to the lower 80s in South Texas.

FORECAST

SHOWERS are expected in the forecast period Friday through Saturday morning for most of the Gulf and along the Appalachians to the northeast. Snow flurries are forecast from Montana to New Mexico. Mild temperatures are expected to continue for Atlantic coast states but colder weather is forecast elsewhere.

National weather

By The Associated Press

About half of a small low town is in shambles today after a tornado — one of 18 confirmed by the National Weather Service — roared across the nation's midsection, leaving a trail of hail and flash floods and booming thunderstorms.

At least 16 persons in the Iowa farming community of Bradyville were injured Thursday and a closed elementary school and several homes were leveled. At least four more persons were injured in nearby Madison County.

The weather service said 10 tornadoes hit Iowa. It also listed two tornadoes each in Texas, Oklahoma and Missouri, and one each in Kansas and Colorado. No injuries or damages were reported, however.

Clements gets beer bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The "little bitty beer bottle bill," allowing sale of beer in containers as small as seven ounces, has won final legislative approval.

A 97-29 House vote Thursday sent the measure to Gov. Bill Clements' desk for signature into law or veto.

Best-known provision of the bill is the one that allows sale of beer after Jan. 1, 1980, in 7- and 16-ounce containers. Existing law permits only bottles and cans that hold 12, 24 and 32 ounces.

Texas who like to buy a keg for a party party might have to switch to cases of cans. The measure would prohibit distributors from selling directly to consumers, ending at-the-dock sales of kegs of beer. Keg sales could be made only by retailers such as package stores and grocers.

Opponents of the bill say most retailers lack the space and facilities to deal in kegs.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, urged defeat of the bill because of its "three-tier" provision that allows only retailers to sell to consumers.

"What is the public interest in guaranteeing a cut to the middleman on 100 percent of the total market in this state? Let's don't reap more scorn on this Legislature by passing this bill," Peveto said.

He said it was wrong to require a product to pass through a middleman if the manufacturer wants to sell direct.

Rep. Billy Hall, D-Laredo, said Peveto was trying to "take up for the giant industry against the Texas businessman."

Before passing the bill, the House rejected, 74-54, an amendment permitting breweries to continue selling directly to their own employees, a common practice.

Rep. Ron Bird, D-San Antonio, told the House he thought Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, the sponsor, and the beer lobby had agreed to accept the amendment.

But Lewis opposed it, saying it would "destroy the concept of the bill, to establish a pure three-tier system."

"First thing you know, the employees would be out there in the wholesale beer business," Lewis said.

Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, said it was obvious the beer lobby had the House wired — and the bill "greased" for passage.

The House also passed and sent to Clements bills that would:

—Require semi-annual review by a district judge of children in custody of the Texas Department of Human Resources, including those in foster homes. Action by a court could include returning a child to his or her parents or removing a child from an undesirable foster home.

—Allow temporary members of a private club to bring up to three guests.

—Repealing the requirement that doctors itemize charges for outside laboratory work on their bills to patients. Itemization would be available only upon the patient's request.

House members passed, 101-29, a bill making it more difficult to become a pawnbroker. Persons wishing to open pawnshops would have to prove they have liquid assets of $50,000, compared with $25,000 now.

Pardon found 41 years late

LAPWAI, Idaho (AP) — David Miles maintained for more than 40 years that he was innocent of a manslaughter conviction that sent him to jail for nine months. Idaho's governor apparently agreed and granted him a pardon, but nobody told Miles until this year — 40 years after the pardon was issued.

Miles, 74, was convicted in 1937 of criminal manslaughter in connection with the death of Joe Kipp, a Nez Perce Indian, and served nine months in the Idaho County Jail and the state penitentiary.

Pardon proceedings on Miles' behalf were initiated earlier this year. But a clerk digging through old records discovered that on April 14, 1939 — only five days after Miles finished his jail term — he was given a full pardon by then Gov. C.A. Bottolfsen, now dead.

It was a pardon that, until a few weeks ago, he never knew existed.

Miles, in an interview with the Lewiston Morning-Tribune, said he never got a copy of the pardon or any notice that it had been issued.

He said that following his release from jail he was rejected for job after job because of his criminal record, and that ultimately he became an alcoholic. In 1952 he was ordained a Presbyterian minister, he said, but was shunned by congregations.

"It followed me no matter what I did, no matter how hard I tried to be a Christian," he said.

Miles maintained through the years that he was wrongfully convicted. To those who would listen, he would show a tattered letter from a Grangeville lawyer who had prosecuted his case.

The letter, written in 1954 by former Idaho County Prosecutor Harry J. Hanley, said: "I feel now that I need not hesitate to commend Miles as a good substantial law-abiding citizen and hereby do so and freely state that I believe the verdict of the jury to have been a mistake."

Henley said he had become convinced that Miles was a victim of circumstance and of an untruthful witness.

Miles kept the letter as what he thought was the only tangible piece of evidence of his innocence.

He had assumed himself to be a convicted felon — unable to vote, unable to hold down any of the number of jobs for which he submitted applications, always admitting his criminal record on them.

Grand jury to hear evidence

WHEELER — The 31st District grand jury will hear evidence here Tuesday in the case of a Michigan man charged with murder in connection with the March 19 shooting death of Charles William Hulen, 24, of Los Angeles.

Russell Russell Galer, 24, of Utica, Michigan is being held on the charge in Wheeler County Jail under $50,000 bond.

Hulen was found dead of a gun shot wound to the head next to Highway 40 three miles west of Shamrock.

A Shamrock motorist, Bill Turnbow, who had been traveling on an Interstate 40 service road, told officers what appeared to be an army tank truck stopped on the edge of the highway shortly after 1:30 that afternoon. Turnbow said he then saw a man roll what appeared to be a body over the side of the road. The truck driver jumped back into the vehicle and drove west.

Turnbow reported the incident to the Shamrock Dispatch Office.

Galer was arrested about seven miles west of where Hulen's body was discovered, while reportedly driving a fuel truck which matched the vehicle description given by Turnbow.

Galer is believed to have been ferrying the truck under contract with the Army.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: When my parents were first married, they tried for years to have a child, but could not. They finally gave up hope and adopted me. Two years later they adopted my brother. I am now 19.

After 24 years of marriage, my mother became pregnant! She was 47 and my father was 55. They were thrilled, and are now the proud parents of a baby girl. And what a beautiful baby she is!

Abby, please tell couples who think there is no hope of ever having a child to hang in there and they might be as lucky as my parents.

MARCIA

DEAR MARCIA: Your parents are luckier than some who become parents in their later years.

My medical expert, Dr. John A. Haugen, a fine obstetrician and gynecologist for over 40 years says, "A child born of a woman in her 40s runs a much greater risk of being defective." (Particularly Down's Syndrome—better known as mongolism.)

True, tests can be done in mid-pregnancy to detect abnormalities. If an abnormality exists, the pregnancy can be terminated but this (the test) is quite a major undertaking. Also, mothers in their 40s are more apt to have complications and more difficult labors. Finally, most parents in their 60s find raising teenagers no picnic.

DEAR ABBY: I went to a doctor who examined me and said I needed some medicine. He didn't write a prescription. Instead, he called his brother's drugstore and told him to have the medicine ready for me, that I'd be over to get it in a few minutes.

I was quite surprised that I wasn't given a written prescription and allowed to have it filled at my own pharmacy. I also was angry because this doctor's brother charges much higher prices than the pharmacist I usually trade with.

One of my friends asked this doctor for a written prescription. He got mad at her and refused to give her one.

Abby, shouldn't people be given their own choice of pharmacies?

MRS. O. J.

DEAR MRS. O. J.: Yes. The doctor is clearly operating outside the bounds of ethical medicine. Change doctors. And be sure to tell him why you're leaving.

DEAR ABBY: I am 10 years old and am ashamed of my mother. She tells the biggest lies, and she gossips a lot on the telephone. She will talk to one lady and pretend to be her best friend, when she is really her worst enemy. How can a person be so two-faced and then tell me that if I tell a lie God will punish me?

ASHAMED OF MOM

DEAR ASHAMED: Do as your mother SAYS, not as she does. Perhaps your mother will read this and realize that although "example" is not the ONLY teacher, it is one of the most powerful.

Dr. Lamb

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am confused. Is this statement correct? Veal is naturally a very young animal and the meat has practically no fat, even though he may have just come off his mother. Usually extreme fat and heavy marbling come only after a long time in the feedlot and it is difficult to get enough marbling unless you carry them to around 1100 pounds. This is why it is very hard to get proper marbling in very much smaller baby beef carcasses. This is why baby beef labeled meat also appears more lean.

I am a heart patient and have always bought veal when it was available and the less fat, smaller baby beef. Have I been wrong in thinking that the damaging, saturated fat comes almost entirely in the excessively fat covering and marbling? Some of your statements would lead me to believe the fat is in the fleshy parts as well. Of course, I know when we measure cholesterol in the blood, that the blood largely comes from the fleshy areas of the animals.

DEAR READER: I am not sure where you got that statement about veal, but it is not from me. To start from the beginning, veal is a calf anywhere from four to 14 weeks of age. If the calf is older, it is not veal, it is baby beef.

There are three grades of veal. The fat class, the medium fat class and the thin class. Let's start with the round of rump, thin class. Six percent of its weight is fat. That means that more than one-third of the calories in this class is from fat and nearly half that fat is saturated fat.

As a point of comparison, if you took ordinary round beef and separated all the visible fat from it, only 4.7 percent of its weight would be fat. So, if you're interested in the fat content, there's no particular advantage to using thin class veal rather than round steak. Beyond that, if you use the round of rump in the medium fat class of veal, 9 percent of its weight is fat and in the fat class, 12 percent of its weight is fat.

Part of the fat in beef or veal is in the muscle fibers itself, the kinds of fat that you can't cut away when you trim away fat for food preparation. The fatter the beef to begin with and more marbling, the more fat it will contain. But I'd like to stress again that if you use lean cuts of ordinary beef and remove all visible fat, you can do just as well with mature beef as with veal or baby beef. Both have about the same amount of cholesterol.

Polly's Pointers

by polly cramer

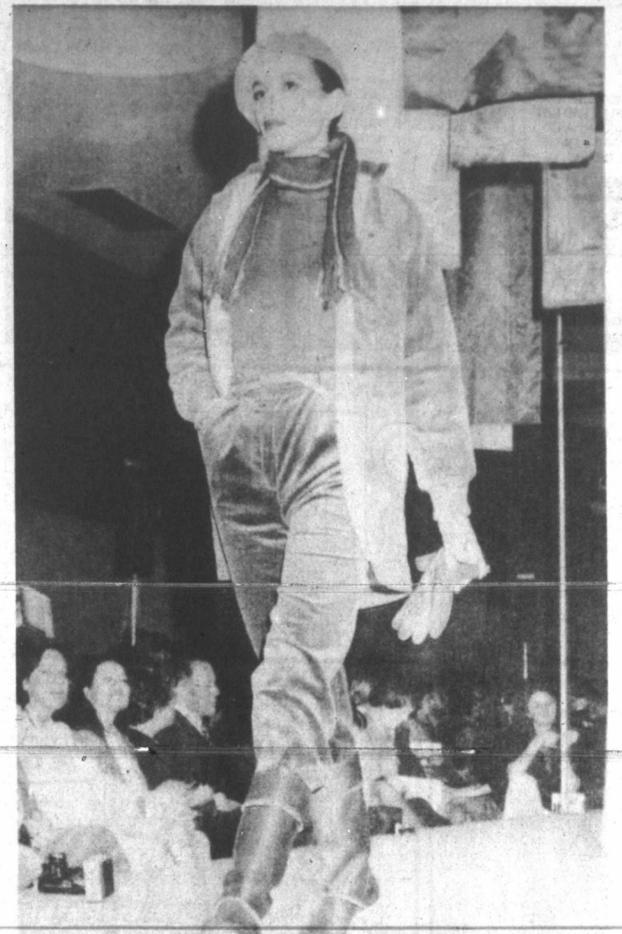

DEAR POLLY: I use plastic lids under each of the canisters on my kitchen counter and find they are a wonderful protection from rust stains.

I save all the knit scraps left from various sewing projects and cut them into squares that I piece together just as if I were going to make a quilt. I decide what I want to make—a robe blouse or whatever—and lay the pattern on the "fabric," cut it out and make an attractive garment. I have finished a lounging robe with bell sleeves and a solid-colored bodice and it is beautiful. —JACKIE

DEAR POLLY: I use leftover coffee to add color to faded nylons, lace or blouses. Just soak a half an hour or so. —MRS. J.G.F.

DEAR POLLY: A good way to put those plastic gallon jugs to good use, especially in the winter, is to fill them with sand and keep in the trunk of the car to be ready for an emergency. Fasten the caps tightly and it makes no difference if they tip over. —ELAINE

Woman's proper place? Author says 'everywhere'

By CAROL DEEGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Social historian Sheila Rothman says she is "overwhelmed" by the conflict today around social policy toward women.

"I am struck by the inability to enact day-care legislation. I am struck by the tremendous conflicts around the Equal Rights Amendment, which seems to be such a simple issue, or in the area of reproductive freedom," she said.

Ms. Rothman is a Senior Research Associate of the Center for Policy Research in New York City. She has written numerous articles and reviews in the field of history and social policy and has co-edited two books with her husband, historian David Rothman. They have two children.

Her own latest book is "Woman's Proper Place: A History of Changing Ideals and Practices, 1870 to the Present." The book describes society's shifting assumptions about woman's "proper place" and the effect of these assumptions on social policies toward women.

"I think earlier generations of women had very seriously limited and restricted and clearly defined what woman's proper place was," she said. "They had a very clear notion: it was generally the home or somewhat linked to home activity."

"I think the critical thing about today is that woman's proper place is everywhere. Unfortunately, because of conflicts, I think we are going to be living with lawsuits, challenges and counter-challenges for a long time to come," she said.

Ms. Rothman said the critical determinant was just how strong women's vested interest group, the women's movement, was going to be.

"Understanding that the name of the game is conflict, are they going to be able to represent their members' interests and women's interests at this point? And how are they going to define that? And how are they going to fight for that?"

"That's the real issue of the '80s, I think," she said.

Ms. Rothman said that only through the recognition of the great variety of needs of women could there be real promise of future progress for them.

But, she said, women's interests have been too narrowly defined.

"There are different groups who speak for women in the work force. There are different groups who speak for reproductive freedom for women, and they've all become kind of issue groups and we really haven't merged them. And I think that's going to be a problem," she said.

She said another problem was that many women still believed that a woman's proper place was in the home, and that modern-day feminists had disrupted everything.

Ms. Rothman said the women's movement had made a mistake in trying to appeal to these older women instead of to their daughters.

"The women's movement should have said, 'Do you want your daughter to be denied the right to enter medical school? Do you want your daughter to have the chance to become a lawyer?' And many women who don't see these options for themselves, who are frightened of change and can't see themselves as moving in that way, certainly don't want their daughters to be denied the chance," Ms. Rothman said.

Puerto Rican men resist changes

By CYNTHIA VICE ACOSTA
Associated Press Writer
SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — It will take Puerto Rican men at least until the next century to change their attitudes of superiority toward women, a leading local feminist says.

Dr. Milagros Lopez Garriga, president of the governor's commission for the improvement of women's rights, said men would adopt more liberal attitudes on women's rights "in two or three more generations." She notes that the island's deep Hispanic roots were inbred generations ago and that it's more convenient to keep the "status quo."

Despite 80 years of U.S. influence on this U.S. commonwealth, many of the social mores that dominate the life-style here are Spanish in origin.

In an interview, Dr. Lopez Garriga said that men's attitudes toward their female counterparts "date back to Puerto Rico's agricultural era" in the 1930s when women were expected to stay at home.

In spite of the industrial advancement made in the past 25 years, Puerto Rican society "is still underdeveloped regarding its attitudes" toward the woman's role.

Dr. Lopez Garriga said most Puerto Rican men resisted these social changes but would have no alternative but to accept them eventually. She pointed out that many U.S. laws regarding women's rights were also applicable here.

The university professor said social "equality is a more comfortable role" for both men and women.

"Men would not have to maintain the image of being a good provider and a tremendous lover, while women could cast aside their role as sweet, weak doves," she said.

However, not all Puerto Rican women agree with the liberationist views of the organization, the president acknowledged, "because they believe it's not in their best interest."

Overseer to visit local Jehovahs Witnesses soon

A circuit overseer and his wife are due to visit local witnesses according to Elmer Reed, spokesman for Jehovah's Witnesses. The visit will herald a week of activities which will include a slide presentation as the highlight of the visit.

Daniel Maurer, a traveling overseer, and his wife, Renee, are assigned to Texas circuit No. 10, of which local witnesses are a part. As a full time minister, Mr. Maurer has been in the circuit work for the past five years in Texas and Oklahoma. After living in California and both being active in the full time evangelizing work for eight years, they came to Texas in 1974.

During the week, the Maurers will accompany local witnesses in their house-to-house visitation service, making calls on local residents to stimulate Bible discussion. Witness teaching holds that we are in the "Last Days" of this present system of things, hence the urgency noted in their preaching work now carried on in over 220 lands. They will be inviting the public to attend the featured talk given by Mr. Maurer, which will include a slide presentation entitled "A Close Look At The Church". These slides will show the origin of some of the basic doctrines included in many religious beliefs in 23 different lands. The main talk and slides will be shown at the local Kingdom Hall at 1801 Coffee. The public is invited free of charge.

The week of the visit by Mr. and Mrs. Maurer will include spiritual talks and participation by local witnesses on Tuesday evening. Upbuilding for them will be the theocratic school and service meeting held at that time. Thursday evening of the same week will include a congregational book study and featured that evening will be "New Things Learned", a program emphasizing study of the Bible.

Mr. Elmer Reed, the congregation's presiding elder, said that the week will be one of much activity. He invited the public to attend, free of charge. The public talk which ends the visit of the circuit overseer and his wife.

Hiltbrunner to lead revival

Pastor Alvin Hiltbrunner will be leading Central Baptist Church in revival services April 1-8. Assisting him with the services will be Theiss Jones, Minister of Music from the First Baptist Church in Temple, Texas, who will be leading the music for the meetings.

Dr. Hiltbrunner has been pastor of the church since November, 1978. Previously he has held varied positions in Baptist churches, including Music and Youth director and Minister of Music and Education. He has pastored churches in Leonard, Crane, Groom, Anson, and Dallas Texas. He also spent three years in evangelism, preaching over 200 revivals during that time. The pastor has preached in evangelism crusades in India in 1969 and in England in 1978.

Each night of the revival will have a special emphasis. These include: Monday, Battle of the Banners (Sunday School); Tuesday, Youth pizza supper; Wednesday, Bring your Neighbor Night; Thursday, children's hot dog supper; and Friday, senior adult night. Committee chairmen who have led in preparing for these nights are: Sunday School, Jerry Arrington; Youth, Mrs. Carol Fulcher; Children, Jerry Guinn; and Senior Adult, Mrs. Evelyn McPeak.

Other committees and their chairmen who have been concerned with advance preparation for the revival are: Visitation, James Baird.

Prayer, Mrs. Fern Prock; Music, Mrs. Marylou Russell; Publicity, Mrs. Evelyn Richardson and Revival Secretary was Mrs. Peggy Turner.

Time for revival services will be 11:45 and 7:30 Monday through Friday. Lunch will be served during the noon meeting and a nursery will be provided for all services.

That "ancient alliance" between Egypt and Israel that was cited this week in ceremonies sealing the modern peace treaty between them goes back into early biblical times.

In one case, an unusual tie between Egypt and the family of the ancient Jewish patriarch Jacob saved it from famine.

Another subsequent pact of friendship and trade was established between Israel's famed King Solomon and Pharaoh, king of Egypt. Solomon also had a pact with the Queen of Sheba in Arabia.

At the ceremonies in Washington, D.C., Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin recalled the ancient alliance with Egypt, adding that the new treaty means restored "cooperation and friendship."

New Hope to hold fifth anniversary

Rev. Vurn C. Martin pastor of New Hope Baptist Church 404 Harlem St. leads the church membership and visiting churches in celebrating the 5th anniversary of the church. Services which began Wednesday evening will climax Sunday afternoon at 3:00 p.m.

Rev. J.W. Hacket, pastor of Shiloh Baptist church Amarillo Tx. will bring the anniversary message.

A souvenir book and 5 year history of the church have been prepared by Rev. V. L. Brown and workers.

Singers to perform

The Sunday morning eleven o'clock worship service at the First Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1700 Alcock, will feature two special singing and musical groups.

Ron and Dianne Smith and the Singing Stewart family will participate in the service. These very talented groups have appeared separately at the local church in the past, but this will mark the first time for both groups to appear together.

Thompson to speak At First Christian

First Christian Church will have Rhodes Thompson as guest speaker at noon on Monday, April 2. Thompson is minister of Memorial Blvd. Christian Church, St. Louis, Missouri. He is graduate of T.C.U. and Lexington Theological Seminary.

He was named by his seminary for inclusion in the 1965 edition of Outstanding Young Men of America. He has been included in Who's Who in Religion. He has been recipient of citations for work in the area of religion and human relations. He is past president of Missouri Christian Ministers Association of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

He is presently on the boards of Central Medical Center Hospital, Food Crisis Network, and St. Louis Agency for Training and Employment. He is chaplain for two church neighborhood organizations and does volunteer work with Missouri State Probation and Parole Office.

The public is invited to meet him at a brown bag lunch from 12 to 1 o'clock in the Fellowship Hall. The event is sponsored by the Outreach Department and the Christian Women's Fellowship.

Christians to observe the death of Christ

April 11, 1979, after sunset will be observed by Christians throughout the United States as the memorial of the death of Jesus Christ," said Richard Fetter, spokesman for Jehovah's Witnesses in this area.

Some denominations in Christendom celebrate Christ's death daily, others weekly, others quarterly, but it is customary to memorialize great and meaningful events annually. Jesus instituted the memorial of His death on Nisan 14, 33 C.E. Inasmuch as He died later that day, it is logical and fitting that date be observed each year.

The memorial of Christ's death is a time of rejoicing. Shortly, in over 42,000 congregations throughout the earth, Jehovah's Witnesses will rejoice to memorialize His death. Last year, over five million persons assembled with us on this occasion. This year we are extending the invitation to all who appreciate, or who want to know more about, this very eventful, vital and life-giving occasion to join with us at our Kingdom Hall, 1701 Coffee, Pampa, in observing this memorial of Christ's death."

Mr. Bernie Bote, minister in the Pampa Congregation in Pampa, Texas will conduct this important meeting.

At the ceremonies in Washington, D.C., Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin recalled the ancient alliance with Egypt, adding that the new treaty means restored "cooperation and friendship."

In the First Book of Kings 3:1, the olden pact of about 3,000 years ago is noted at the start of Solomon's reign:

"Solomon made a marriage alliance with Pharaoh king of Egypt: he took Pharaoh's daughter, and brought her into the city of David... (Jerusalem).

The alliance is mentioned several times in the biblical accounts of that period, including extensive trade between the two countries.

The name of Pharaoh's daughter, who became one of Solomon's wives, is unspecified, but she is cited in 1st Kings 11:1 among the "many foreign women" that he loved.

The king of Egypt also presented her with a handsome dowry from the spoils of warfare, as noted in 1st Kings 9:16.

*"Thou wilt shew me the path of life:
in thy presence is fulness of Joy..."*

PSALM 16-11

HERE IS THE PATH

God Bless...

God bless Mommie, Daddie, and all my friends at church...

"Hearken unto the voice of my cry, my King, and my God."

God's word has a great deal to say about prayer, for prayer is our means to communicate with God. Through prayer we can give thanks, petition for our friends, and seek God's wisdom for our daily living.

Make prayer a daily practice in your life.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Investigators looking into 'exotic' bird market

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators are looking into what sources say may be a widespread and lucrative business of selling stolen and possibly smuggled cockatoos, parrots and other imported "exotic" birds.

Aside from the criminal aspects, the birds are posing a threat to the vast U.S. poultry industry because of the possibility of spreading exotic Newcastle disease, which is highly-contagious, into flocks of broilers and egg-laying hens.

The Agriculture Department, which handles import and other regulatory programs aimed at preventing the introduction of foreign diseases that affect animals and plants, is alarmed that exotic Newcastle could decimate poultry flocks at a time when increased production is wanted to help offset soaring retail prices of red meat.

According to federal sources, who asked not to be identified, the department's Office of Inspector General, the Justice Department and the U.S. Customs Service are involved in investigating various aspects of thievery, possible smuggling and other violations involving birds.

The investigations were disclosed after USDA announced Wednesday that it has "temporarily halted" exotic bird imports through commercially operated quarantine facilities that normally operate under department certification.

More than 80 of these establishments were shut down immediately by the order. Normally, birds are shipped to the private facilities and have to spend time in quarantine to make sure they are not diseased.

The businesses shut down handle an estimated 95 percent of the birds imported by U.S. dealers and others. However, three import centers operated by USDA in Clifton, N.J.; Miami, Fla.; and Honolulu will continue to operate.

The department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, which calls itself APHIS, said the closing were necessary because of recent outbreaks of exotic Newcastle disease in California, Florida, Arizona and Nevada.

Frank J. Mulhern, administrator of APHIS, said investigations "suggest that serious problems exist" in some of the private quarantine facilities.

"Stronger security measures must be taken to deal with the risk involved in importing birds from around the world," he said. "If this cannot be achieved, the only alternative would be to prohibit the importation of such birds."

Mulhern added that exotic Newcastle disease "appears to be reaching worldwide epidemic proportions" and that since last October the disease has been diagnosed during quarantine in 24 groups of birds from 12 different countries. Only 15 groups were found diseased in all of the preceding year.

The order does not apply to commercial shipments of birds now on their way to the United States or already in the privately owned facilities.

Although solid figures were not available, one department estimate showed that about 350,000 of the birds entered the United States through the commercial import facilities last year.

One of the sources said that the business is growing rapidly, particularly in some areas — including California — where "it's something of a status symbol" to have a foreign bird or two in the home.

Some of the birds retail legitimately for $650 and higher, depending on their rarity, with some types of cockatoos reportedly bringing around $1,000 each in some places, according to the source.

So far, according to USDA, no commercial poultry flocks have been infected by exotic Newcastle disease. Although it can be devastating to poultry, the disease "poses no health threat to people who eat eggs or poultry," the agency says.

What is scary to department officials and the industry is that exotic Newcastle may spread to poultry flocks as it did in California in 1971-73 when, for more than two years, federal and state authorities spent more than $56 million to control it.

More than 12 million birds, including egg-laying hens, were destroyed before the disease was curbed.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Agriculture Department official says a recent cancellation of an order for U.S. wheat does not signal any decline in future exports of American farm products to China.

The department announced Wednesday that China had cancelled an order for 300,000 metric tons of wheat that was to have been delivered in the 1979-80 marketing year beginning June 1.

Thomas R. Hughes, administrator of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, said Thursday he did not know why China cancelled the order but speculated that "it probably means they've just got some kind of supply and storage problem at the moment."

Gas station freak loves gas, grease

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — O.J. Thompto is a gas station freak. The dingy bells, the pungent gasoline fumes, even the grime of oil and grease: he loves it all.

Thompto, 49, makes it a particular habit to prowling the isolated rural highways of the Midwest and South on auto vacations and business trips for his insurance and bonds agency.

He can't pass an old station without stopping to chat, browse and perhaps strike a deal to add to his already formidable collection of antique filling station memorabilia. "This is something from my childhood that's leaving America," Thompto says. "It's nostalgia, from when things were simpler, easier, when people were a bit closer together."

Thompto remembers working in the tiny New Auburn, Wis., station where his father and the other area menfolk would gather.

"Gas-pump politics replaced cracker-barrel politics," he said. "We really don't have anything like that now."

Thompto, quick to point out that he began using his initials before O.J. Simpson was a gleam in a football coach's eye, has an old skinny gas pump from the 1920s in his backyard. Downstairs, his family room is crammed with stuff he has bought and begged in the three years since a whim launched this unusual hobby.

There are 30 big glass globes that used to sit atop gas pumps: the four red, white, blue and gold Standard Oil crowns, the Shell mollusk and the various domes of DX, Shelly, Sinclair, Unique, Fiore 100 and other oil companies.

There's a dollhouse-sized model of an old station fronted by twin brick columns, a battered five-gallon tin for Wadhams Tempered Motor Oil, several big signs, a carving used as the symbol of the Black Eagle Oil Co., a bunch of old quart oil bottles and a soda pop thermometer sign.

He values his junk at about $5,000 but says the real heart of his collection is the more than 300 photos he has collected of all sorts of gas stations: a Wadhams pagoda, a station with domes and minarets in Opa-Locka, Fla., a giant shell-shaped building in Winston-Salem, N.C., a pirate ship in Seattle and a castle in Madison that was voted "second most beautiful gas station" in a 1927 national contest.

O. J. THOMPTO of Madison, Wis. shows some of his treasures in his extensive collection of antiques and other memorabilia from old gasoline filling stations.

Carter watching primary moves

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Jack Ogg shoves his first chip out Monday in a high-stakes political maneuver to set up a presidential primary in Texas early next year.

President Carter and contenders for his job will watch the final, perhaps crucial, moves.

At the request of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, a possible gubernatorial candidate in 1982, Ogg is trying to steer through the Senate a bill to establish a presidential primary on March 11, 1980 — two months before the regular state primaries in May.

Virtually every major political group opposes the bill, which Ogg claims could make Texas the brightest star in the Sunbelt and take the glitter away from the trend-setting New Hampshire primary.

Supporters include some conservative Democrats — including Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton — and followers of Republican presidential candidate John Connally. The former Texas governor's campaign could soar with a solid victory in the Lone Star State against Ronald Reagan, George Bush and others.

A 7-6 favorable committee vote on March 5 reflected the split in the Senate, but Ogg said in a recent interview he will serve notice Monday he will soon ask his colleagues to approve the bill.

"There has been movement in both directions," said Ogg, D-Houston. "People who were cold at first have indicated they can support it, and some who were for it have gotten cooler."

"The nucleus is there possibly to pass it in the Senate," Ogg needs 21 of the Senate's 31 votes to start debate, but only a majority of 16 for approval.

He said at different times he has counted as many as 22 senators who might support the proposal, but those votes obviously were not firm or Ogg would have moved by now. He also said the tally of those who might vote against it has reached as high as 17.

"I've got 20 votes against it," insisted Sen. Ron Clower, D-Garland. "It'd take a damn miracle for it to pass."

Asked what he thought about Ogg's notifying the Senate a vote would come soon, Clower said, "Bold — give Ogg his due — it's bold."

Texas held its first state-financed presidential primary in 1976. It was conducted under guidelines thought to favor Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, but Carter won 92 of the 98 Democratic delegates, with Bentsen taking six. Reagan swamped Gerald Ford in the Republican primary, winning all 96 delegates.

The 1976 primary law expired after the election. Hobby and Ogg first talked last October about another presidential primary, and Ogg said they considered "everything from another so-called Bentsen bill to no primary."

The result was what critics call "the Connally bill." "I have not talked to Connally at all, nor has he contacted me," said Ogg.

"I admired him as governor. I admired him as an individual. I did not admire him for changing parties."

"Connally," Ogg acknowledges, "is a voodoo symbol to liberal Democrats" and adds fuel to the primary fires.

Ogg's argument for the March 11 primary tracks that of Hobby, who complains too much national emphasis is placed on "people slogging around in the snows of New Hampshire," which has a population no larger than some metropolitan counties in Texas.

Ogg said he wants to force candidates to give early attention to Texas' viewpoint on such paramount issues as oil and gas production.

Of the five presidential primaries in February or early March, four are in New England — New Hampshire Feb. 26 and Massachusetts, Vermont and Connecticut on March 4.

"I'd like to get 'em in Texas before they are promised out," Ogg said.

He notes, too, every president since 1952 has won the New Hampshire primary. "The races are really won in the beginning, because that's when candidates are eliminated."

A primary in Texas, with its 26 electoral votes, would overshadow New Hampshire, which has only four votes, if the Texas election followed by only two weeks, he said.
