Odds AND Ends

(BY E. I. THE ELDER)

For the past two weeks, folks, I have been telling you about the tyranny that has characterized the government of Mexico during most of its history. Just occasionally during the past 500 years has a good man risen to power in that so-called republic. The history of Mexico is largely a record of treachery and infamy—a trail of blood. With the grandest and the most charming scenery that a people could wish for as an eternal home, even a Heavenly home, it does seem that the people would be inspired day by day by their very environment to live noble and godly lives. It reminds me of that terse phrase in the greatest of all Missionary hymns, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," written by Reginald Heber more than a century ago, in which he described Ceylon as an isle where "every prospect pleases and only man is vile. In vain with lavish kindness the gifts of God are strown; the heathen in his blindness bows down to wood and stone." In Mexico, it is not exactly "wood and stone," but it is artists' love paintings and carved or molded images, that can no more hear the voice of those who bow down to them than they could if they were vile and ugly statues made of wood or stone. In Mexico also, the rulers of that nation can not only look at the majestic mountains and be unmoved but they can also look up into the starry heavens and see His mighty handiwork, and then shout defiantly, "There is no God." Yes, and then they can curse and imprison them who do worship Him.

But I thank God that not all the people of Mexico are like that. Some of the finest and most godly people in the world live there. They worship God in spite of the threats, the dangers, and the precautions that beset them. I think that they ought to be free to worship Him as they please. I think that they should be freed from the shackles with which Christian men and women were bound back in the Dark Ages. This is no longer the Sixteenth century, and this is America. I think that in this land of North America, dictators should grand Freedom of Speech, Freedom of the Press, Freedom of Religious Worship to their people or be compelled to abdicate.

Many years ago we announced the doctrine known as the "Monroe Doctrine," which declared in substance that any aggression on the part of any European power to acquire colonies on this hemisphere or to extend its system of government over any country in this hemisphere would be regarded by us as an unfriendly act. That doctrine, strengthened from time to time, has been in force ever since. For any European country today to violate that doctrine and persist in it would mean war with the United States. To me, it seems that it is just as important that the liberties of the people of a country be protected against dictators that rise to power in their own midst as it is that they be protected against dictators that arise in European countries. And we have just as much right to intervene in behalf of the liberties of the people in the one case as in the other. What I mean is that we should refuse to recognize any Government that refuses to guarantee to its people the fundamental right I have mentioned above, to wit: the Bill of Rights set forth in our own Constitution. It is high time that we are taking another step forward in behalf of human rights on our own continent.

And there are more ways of doing this thing than by trying to strangle the cat to death on butter.

The glory of Mexico spiritually are the little group of intelligent and consecrated Christian people who are brave enough to carry on in spite of persecutions and difficulties.

The glory of Mexico physically and materially are its mountains and its trees. We have already told you a good deal about its mountains, so this week we are going to tell you something about its trees. The trees in fact adorn the mountains. They also adorn many of the gulches and the valleys.

Fruits and nuts grown on trees in Mexico are oranges, lemons, apples, pineapples, papayas, bananas, coconuts, and some others.

A tourist passing through the country and observing the crops will see thousands and thousands of acres of orange orchards. The comely trees, with their heavy foliage and yellow fruit, encountered along the highway in the valleys, on the mountain slopes, and even on the tops of mountain ranges present a picture of arboreal beauty and fruitfulness that one will not soon forget. Banana plants are not so numerous not so attractive but they may be seen at intervals along the roadside for a long stretch of miles. I saw pineapples, papayas, and coconuts only in that portion of the country lying south of Mexico City. There must be a large acreage of coconut trees somewhere, for you could see nuts as large as good-sized muskmelons by the hundreds on the streets of Mexico City every day. Hulled and sliced right on the sidewalks in many places, they presented a great temptation and many people did buy and eat them as they trudged or hurried along. Since the prepared slices had been subjected to the dust and the possible germs afloat everywhere in the atmosphere, I never did so much as taste one. But I am sure that they are a very palatable home dish and doubtless count less tons of them are shipped to the United States and other countries every year.

The coconut palm is an attractive tree, but not as beautiful as the various varieties of ornamental palms.

The ornamental palms are among the most beautiful trees to be found in Mexico and many of them have been planted out in the boulevards and in the parks in the cities. There are two leading varieties. Possibly the most popular one is what I would describe as the umbrella palm. I have seen them elsewhere and I am sure most of you have too, but I think I never saw them anywhere else with as thick foliage as they have in Mexico City. A ray of sunshine would have to wriggle around like a pig caught in the crack of a fence ever to find its way through that umbrella top. The body of the tree is large and short and the heavy umbrella top spreads out about eight or ten feet above the ground. It's good to sit down in the shade of one on a hot day and peruse a book or a magazine or, more often, just to watch the people of all sizes, shades, and colors as they trudge by.

Another outstanding, or upstanding, rather, variety of palm is the one that runs up thirty or forty feet high as straight as a telephone pole and then has a heavy tuft of spiked greenery right on the top. It does not make much shade but it causes a lot of people to "rubber-neck."

There are other palm trees that seem to be a compromise between these two extremes.

The beauty of the palm is marred in some instances when dry weather or old age causes many of the lower sword-shaped leaves to wither and drop down dead but undetached at the foot of the tree trunk. A good care-taker of a park will keep the dead leaves removed, however.

The pines, the firs, and the evergreen trees of kindred appearance and of several different species are the trees that adorn so many of the mountains and create possibly the most charming scenery to be found in North America. As one enters the mountains east of Mexico City out on the Veracruz road he soon becomes charmed with the noble pines that overshadow the road and make him wonder if this is earth or Heaven.

In the mountains surrounding the so-called Desert of the Lions, some twelve or fifteen miles south of Mexico City, are the largest (Continued)

Sgt. Newsom Is Home From Korea

Sgt. Doyle Newsom, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Newsom of Plains but formerly of Wilson, has been visiting his old Lynn county friends.

Sgt. Newsom arrived home May 8 from Korea, where he has been in action against the Chinese Communists with the 7th Division, 57th Field Artillery. He spent about nine and a half months over there.

Doyle said he was only a half mile from Pete Schaffner when the latter was wounded in action in Korea. He is hoping that he may get to see Pete, who is in a San Antonio Army hospital, before he has to report to Fort Sill, Okla., for reassignment.

Last year 79,376 trained leaders assisted county home demonstration agents in carrying home economics information to both rural and urban women and girls. This leadership training program was developed by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The car that wears its own Sun Glasses

2-door, 6-passenger Super Riviera.

You find this "eye shade" band of darker color only on the genuine "Easy-Eye Glass" pioneered by Buick, and all glass used in Buicks is ripple-free, ground and polished plate safety glass.

YOU may have to look twice to see it—but a lot of the new Buicks have a soft blue-green tone in all glass areas—plus a slightly darker band which shades down from the top of the windshield.

And you have no idea what comfort all this adds to hot-weather driving.

Its name is "Easy-Eye Glass"—which tells only half the story. While it filters out 18% of the glare (and tones down the dazzle of oncoming headlights at night)—it also cuts down sun-heat as much as 50%.

So it's the best cure we know for hot laps in summer driving, when the sun beats down on the windshield.

Maybe you'd like to try this out before you buy your next car.

And while you're trying it out—you can also discover how it feels to boss around a Fireball 8 Engine, that puts its own exclusive added wallop into a high-compression valve-in-head power plant.

You can sample the sure-footed way a Buick settles into a curve—the way the front wheels seem to seek their course automatically—the smooth surge and falterless ease with which Dynaflo Drive* feeds the power—the level confidence of Buick's million dollar ride.

You can get an idea also of the room, the comfort, the smartness, the thrill that your dollars buy in this brilliant performer.

So why not arrange for a demonstration soon?

250 People Help W. J. Jordans of Wells Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary

When Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jordan celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary Sunday at their home in the Wells community, fully 100 people were present for the dinner, and more than 250 people called during the day.

Children of the couple were hosts at the buffet style luncheon served out of doors.

Relatives and friends from various parts of the state and some from other states called to pay their respects and offer congratulations.

Since they moved to the Wells community in 1925, both Mr. and Mrs. Jordan have been very active in community affairs. Mr. Jordan served every term except one as school trustee from 1925 until the Wells district was consolidated with O'Donnell a few years ago.

He has been superintendent of the Baptist Sunday School at Wells for 27 years, and for 23 years he had a perfect attendance record.

Walter J. Jordan, born August 28, 1880, in Carlton, Hamilton county, Texas, and Miss Lula Ethel Morris, who was born November 8, 1886, in Birmingham, Alabama, were married in Carlton on May 25, 1902. They moved to Spur in 1916 and lived there until 1925, when they moved to the Wells community of Lynn county.

At the anniversary Sunday, the table was laid with an Irish linen cut-work tablecloth, white bone china candelabra, and white and gold candles. A three-tiered cake, decorated with golden wedding bells, and punch were served during the afternoon to the 250 guests.

The punch was served from a crystal bowl that had been a gift to Mr. Jordan's parents on their golden wedding anniversary. The crystal bowl is cut in shape of an orange, and is orange-colored, and has cups of matching design with gold handles.

Flower arrangements throughout the house carried out the Golden Wedding theme. Mrs. Jordan's corsage was of yellow roses, and Mr. Jordan wore a yellow rose in his coat lapel.

All the couple's children were present, namely:

Four sons, Hobart of Holbrook, Arizona, Harvie, W. O., and Leon, all of O'Donnell; and four daughters, Mrs. Edgar McClellan and Mrs. Audave Cook of Tahoka, Mrs. John Harer of Holbrook, Ariz., and Mrs. D. L. Greenwood of Spade.

There are 24 grandchildren and nine great grandchildren. All were present but three.

All of Mr. Jordan's brothers and his only sister were present. They are: J. W., Sr., of Carlton, E. C. of Amarillo, A. W. of Spur, L. F. and Mrs. G. C. Reed of Lubbock.

Relatives on Mrs. Jordan's side of the family who were present are: Mrs. G. B. Morris of Spur, sister-in-law; Hubert Morris of Wink, G. B. Morris, Jr., of Crosbyton, J. R. Morris of Wolforth, and Herman Morris of McAdoo, nephews; Mrs. Bill Middleton of Ralls, Mrs. Chas. Witt and Mrs. Homer Robinette of Calgary, and Mrs. A. L. Hill of Snyder, nieces.

POSTMASTER GENERAL WILL SPEAK MONDAY

Jesse M. Donaldson, Postmaster General, will deliver an important address on "Know Your Postal Service" over the CBS radio network Monday, June 2, at 9:30 p. m. Central Standard Time, according to W. E. (Happy) Smith, local postmaster.

and finest pine trees that I have ever seen. I believe I told you about them in a former contribution to this column. They are truly sky-scrapers, that make one really wonder if little angels flit around in their tops. They constitute a Government reservation and have strict government care and protection.

The pines and the pinons, and the firs, and the spruces all look like kinfolks and I have not been able at all times to distinguish one member of the Evergreen family from the others. Wandering around in the eastern reaches of Chapultepec Park by myself one day, I ran upon three of the most beautiful little trees that I ever saw. The trunk looked much like that of a palm, but the fern-like foliage resembled that of a cedar, only it was almost as fine and delicate as a swan's down. It looked delicate, but in fact it was strong as horse-hair. I never saw anything like it before nor since, nor have I found anybody who could tell me the name of those three fine little trees, about the size of the largest cedars you may see in Central Texas.

There are many cypress trees also in Chapultepec Park. Probably the most famous cypress in North America is the one by the side of which hard-hearted old Cortez stood and wept on the night called Nache Triste when thousands of Indians fell upon his army of Spaniards and Indian allies in Tenochtitlan and cut it to pieces. Tinochtlan was the Indian capital situated on an island in the middle of a lake where the City of Mexico now stands. It had been captured by Cortez and his army now occupied it. A series of bridges with gaps in them had been built from the island to solid ground about the edges of the lake; and when the Indians in the darkness of a stormy night made their unexpected attack on the Spaniards swarming out onto the waters of the lake in numberless canoes, the Spaniards undertook to escape by leaping or wading from one section of the bridge to another. Cortez escaped to land over the last section of the bridge and took his stand by the side of a great cypress tree, where he witnessed the fleeing remnants of his army try to make its escape. That old tree was later fenced in and preserved, and it stands there at the end of the Bridge of Alvarado's Leap, unto this day. They call it the Noche Triste Cypress in commemoration of that tragic event. The Bridge of Alvarado's Leap stood near by. Alvarado was Cortez' chief lieutenant, and it was there that he made his famous leap from one section of the bridge to another a feat which most others were unable to perform. He made himself a record right there that night as being the champion long jump hero of Mexico.

But the most beautiful all-year round tree in Mexico, I think, is the ash tree. The Mexicans call the Fresno tree. It is a vigorous large, shapely tree with rich foliage all the year round. There is a Fresno tree in California. It is said to be a white ash but the Indians out there called it a Fresno tree, and the town of Fresno got its name from this tree. Personally, I would not describe the Mexico tree as a "White" ash, however. Whether it is the same tree as the California Fresno or not, it grows vigorously in Mexico City and I think it is the most beautiful of all the species of trees in Chapultepec Park.

Of course, there are also a lot of other fine trees down there that I have not mentioned—the Eucalyptus tree, the Judas tree, a species of sycamore, a species of willow, a tree that looks much like a mesquite but the limbs are smoother and straighter and the leaves are more silky.

Now, I have saved the best for the last—the best at least for several months in each year

There are three varieties of flowering trees in Mexico that are worth writing home about. One appears both in the form of a tree and a vine. In Mexico they all call it the Bugambilia. When in bloom it is a veritable mass of blood-red flowers. It is not a large tree but it is conspicuous in any company. The bugambilia vine grows on walls and on stone fences and on frames made for the purpose, and as Mr. Webster might say, it is a paragon of beauty. Many people have the vines growing on their premises, which means mostly in their back yards. Few people except those living out on Millionaire Hill have any front yards. If they spend their evenings at home it is in the back yard or in a roof garden.

Next to the bugambilia are the Ta-bachines. They are trees some what larger than the bugambilia, and they delight in flaunting bouquets of richly tinted lavender or purple blooms. They are likewise seen in many parts of Mexico. Down in the beautiful old city of Taxco they occupy a conspicuous place on the mountain side. Nobody can enter the Amsterdam-Sonora Park in Mexico City without being conscious of their presence. They have almost monopolized one side of that park.

I never did learn the name of the tree that bears a golden yellow flower. But it is there in that same park doing its stuff also. Not quite as showy as the other two, but there is no need for it to envy them. It has a beauty all its own just as the blond Swedish maiden, the Spanish beauty with the flashing dark eyes, and the Rosy-cheeked Tex as girl each has a beauty that belongs to them respectively a lone. That tree adorned with flowers of gold may be related to the Texas huisache or to the charming mimosa, who knows. I don't.

But I do know that all three of these trees would take premiums at any beauty show.

I thought so much of them that I got some of my Mexican friends down there on Sunday afternoon and took their pictures along with the other flowers. I sent them off to be developed but had not gotten them back when this was written, but those should be dandy pictures.

So far, Mexico is short on water. It has few springs, rivers, or lakes. But it could have a lot of artificial lakes. I think, if the Government which owns the lands would get busy and build a lot more dams in the gorges at the Odds & Ends tourist No. 4 foot of some of those towering mountain ranges. We do not know what the average rainfall is in any part of Mexico. But we have an idea that a lot of the rain which falls during the rainy season runs off unimpeded into the Ocean or the Gulf. We have an idea that in the course of time much of this water will be impounded in lakes and utilized for irrigation and domestic purposes. We think that it would be a great thing for Mexico if she could obtain and utilize a lot more pure water and curtail the use of so much impure pulque.

Well, a botanist or a florist could tell you a lot more about the trees and the plants of Mexico than I have done, but I feel that it is time for me to quit until I learn more about the subject. So, good night.

Garden Club Has Interesting Meet

The Tahoka Garden Club met Tuesday, May 20 for a very interesting and informative program.

We were shown some very beautiful colored films featuring the rose and other flowers with all the types of pests and insects that attack them, showing kind of damage done by each and how to eliminate them.

Another film, "The Mysteries of Plant Life," which was also very interesting.

We were told by our guest speaker that we could eliminate a big percentage of our pests, by spraying the deciduous plants, such as roses, while they are dormant with a dormant spray. Then we should continue to spray during the growing season once every seven to ten days.

He recommended ortho products for all-purpose effective spraying. Some interesting flower arrangements were presented.

The next meeting will be June 17, when we will study the Iris.—Reporter.
