I would I were a wild oak,
In some forest lone,
To stand through the green
Of the summer's bloom,
To see the sun and moon
In their courses run,
To see the leaves and flowers
In their beauty shown,
To see the birds and bees
In their joyous tone,
To see the clouds and rain
In their constant flow,
To see the stars and moon
In their nightly show,
To see the world as it is,
In its beauty and its gloom,
To see the life and death
In their constant flow,
To see the world as it is,
In its beauty and its gloom,

THE THUNDER STORM.

There was a man of feeble courage. There are but few scenes of either noble or elemental grandeur, upon which I have not looked, with a glow of admiration. I have stood in the front of battle, when the sword was flashing and the flag waving, and I have seen the lightning in the air. I have stood on the mountain pinnacles, when the whirlwind was reading the rocks from their rocky cliffs, and scattering them to the clouds. I have seen these things with a willing soul, that knew not that such a danger as that there is something in the thunder's voice that makes me tremble like a child. I have tried to overcome this unmanly weakness. I have called pride to my aid. I have sought for moral courage in the lessons of philosophy, but it would not answer to every view of the subject. The distant cloud, my heart shrank, quivered, and died within me.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS.

IMPORTANT TO PASSENGERS AND SHIPPERS TO THE WEST.

We publish the following by request of the New York Financial Reporter:

Amidst the numerous accidents which befall the many of our lines, it is consolatory to be able to turn to one railroad, on which human blood has never yet been spilled—no one line, on which the slightest injury to life or limb—resulting with certainty that after having escaped the perils of the deep, that so far as human presence and human freight are concerned, it will not be ruthlessly sacrificed to the false economy of cheaply constructed lines, or of badly paid employees.

IMPROVEMENT OF OUR COMMON STOCK.

From the Horse, the Lion and the Arab.

There is perhaps no one branch of agriculture which more needs improvement, or which would become productive of greater profit to the agriculturist, than that of neat cattle; and it is gratifying to observe some little interest awakening in the minds of farmers generally to this important branch of their profession. Improvement has been confined too much to the more wealthy; and the man who has been the most liberal in his expenditures to benefit the country in this particular, has not unfrequently met with the ridicule of his neighbors. But happily for such—more particularly for the country—public opinion is undergoing a change, and those who once opposed improvement, are now in some degree availing themselves of its benefits.

SAVANNAH.

"Now by St. Paul the work goes bravely on." How gratifying it is to contemplate Georgia, the empire State of the South! When the Creator of all things, by his example in the formation of the world, and by his Holy Word, gave to labor the attribute of divinity, the sweetest form of honest toil was that of the land. It which enriches and fertilizes the soil, and which has been the basis of the progress of the world.

REPLY OF SEN. S. D. BAKER.

The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a collection of Customs certain regulations in relation to the duties on foreign goods. It is a very important measure, and one which will be of great benefit to the country. It is a measure which will be of great benefit to the country. It is a measure which will be of great benefit to the country.
