

Ozona athletes qualify for regional

By T. C. Tucker

GIRLS WIN DISTRICT TENNIS

Last weekend marked the finale for all spring high school sports. For many it was the last meet of the year, for others it provided an extension of their participation in spring sports. Three senior girls won this right to advance to regionals for tennis.

Amy Jones and Julie Reagor won first place in doubles action, aiding in Ozona's 30 point total and co-champion of the girls' division. Jones and Reagor had little difficulty in their first two matches. They went into the tournament seeded third and met the second seeded team in the semis. Jones and Reagor lost the first set 3-6, but fought back in two tough sets, winning them 7-6, 7-5.

The final match followed the same pattern with Jones and Reagor losing their first set, then winning the next two, thus advancing to regional.

The other senior followed the same note, winning her first two matches with ease. Bonnie Cameron was seeded third, just as were her team mates. She, too, met the second seed and beat her in a grueling three set match, 7-5, 4-6, 6-1. Cameron lost in the finals, but will still represent the district at regional.

"This will give the girls something to look back upon," said Coach Jerry Tucker, "It's always good to go out match 7-5, 6-1, but then lost by the Ozona's own meet, won the 100m same score to Shannon Perkin. Shacklette gave a valiant effort against the eventual winner of the girls' singles district.

Mark Sellers went into his second match having won his first one, 6-2, 6-3. He would lose by that same score in his second match. Santiago Onofre lost his first match.

Travis Burks and Tommy Tucker won their first match 6-1, 6-1, but would lose to the first seeds and winners of the district. Marcos Gonzalez and Stanley Winkley were beaten by the eventual second place winners.

"I'm proud of everyone's effort throughout the year," said Coach Tucker.

This coming weekend, regional qualifying tournaments will be held. These are to serve as a warm-up and to be used to seed certain players in the regional tournament. Ozona may participate in the meet held in Junction.

SANCHEZ, GALINDO HEAD REGIONAL TRACK QUALIFIERS

Friday, April 18, was a day to remember for some and possibly a day to forget for others. The Ozona boys track team fininshed third in their usual spot behind Crane and Ballinger. The girls scored 74 points, two less than the boys, but only placed fifth overall Summer Shacklette won her first Walker of Crane a few weeks ago at dash in 11.27 seconds. Galindo would be denied the win in the 200, however, as Walker won with a time of 22.48 while Galindo had a 22.63.

Chuy Hernandez won the 300m hurdles with a time of 40.84 while Johnny Lombrano placed third in the 400m run.

Ozona barely edged out Ballinger with little more than half-a-second to spare in the mile relay. Crane won this event with Ozona finishing second almost three seconds behind.

Mile relay team members are: Harvey Fierro, Johnny Lombrana, Roger Flores and Valdo Galindo.

Maria Sanchez was the highlight for the Ozona girls, finishing second in the mile with a time of 5:43.86. Gina Heffernan of Sonora won the race in a time of 5:43.84. Sanchez also placed third in the 800m run, five seconds off first and second.

The 400m relay team of Regina Cervantez, Vanessa Miller, Lacy Miller and Tresa Crawford finished in second place a second behind the leader and a second in front of third place.

GOLFERS ADVANCE

Ozona overwhelmed the other district opponents last weekend, winning first in both girls and boys' golf play.

Members of the Lions #2 team finished eighth in the nine team tournament. They are: Andy Dews, Victor Newton, Wolv Rutherford, Bryan Harms and J. J. Baker.

The Lions will travel to Odessa April 28 and 29 to compete in the Region I meet at Mission Country Club

The girls' second team led the first day, but the first team came back to win with an overall 831. The second team shot 846.

Little League tryouts April 23-25

Tryouts for positions on six Little League teams for boys and girls ages 9-12 will be at 6:00 p.m. April 23-25 at the Little League Park, program director George Ybarra announced. All interested participants should bring a glove to the tryouts.

Regular season play will begin May 12. "During May 12-30, we will be using two Little League parks," Ybarra explained. During this time, the games will start at 6:30 p.m. and end at 8:00 p.m. "After June 1, one field will be used, and a double hitter will be played. The games will be played each Monday, Tuesday and Thursday during the season.

Students have to try out in order to be on a team. "There were only two who did not make a team last year, and they were picked up during the year," Ybarra, a 13-year veteran of the Ozona Little League program, said. "We don't allow those who have not tried out to join a team in mid-season. Everyone has to try out to be picked to be a member of a team.

One of the six teams is still attempting to find a sponsor. The teams that will compete in Ozona Little League action will be: Mayfield Construction, coached by Jesse of high school on a winning note."

Sylvia Flores and Suzy King, the only other persons to travel back to Crane, on Saturday, had a little difficulty in their second match, but won. They were defeated in the semis, losing to the first seeds. In the third place match they were defeated again by the second seeds.

Danny Sanchez was expected to advance to regional after winning both the two mile and mile runs for the past several track meets. However, at district Sanchez was upset from his reigning throne, placing second in the mile but still winning the two mile in a time of 10:07.60. Valdo Galindo, who upset Kenny

The boys led the first day by 24 strokes, eventually winning by more than 50. Bret Hood, Copie Davis, Diron Holt, Ty McKinney and Will Seahorn made all-district with personal scores ranging from 158 for Hood to 173 for Davis.

Hood won second place medalist after shooting a 79 both days.

Blood drive May

Ozona will be having a blood drive venous drug use not prescribed by a on May 14 from 3:00 until 8:00 p.m. at the Chamber of Commerce Office.

In 1985, there were 150 pints of blood collected from this area. This year, the goal is 160 pints to assure that a safe, adequate supply of blood is on hand at all times.

17 through 65 years of age, weigh a minimum of 110 pounds.

You may not donate blood if you have or had: hepatitis, an internal malignancy within the past 10 years, diabetes requiring insulin, intra-physician, belonged to a group at high risk of contracting AIDS, sexual contact with an AIDS patient or with individuals who are at increased risk of contracting AIDS, unexplained night sweating, skin eruptions, fevers, weight loss, swollen lymph To qualify as a donor, you must be glands or persistent diarrhea.

Giving blood takes just a few minutes, is virtually painless and completely safe. You cannot contract any infectious diseases by donating blood. All materials used in the donation process are sterile and disposable...they're used once, then thrown away. The safety of giving and receiving blood has led to medical and surgical treatments by doctors so the need for new donors is always growing.

You can get a warm feeling of having helped to save a life by becoming a blood donor. You will also be on your way to joining a list of Ozona citizens who have been frequent donors.

Donating at the rate of a pint per visit (blood should not be given more often than every eight weeks), your

Summer jobs for youth

Jobs will be available for area youth again this summer through the Summer Youth Employment and Training Program operated by the Concho Valley Council of Governments. The nine-week program will be operated June 3 - July 31 and will allow youth to work up to thirty hours per week.

Public agencies and private nonprofit organizations are used as worksites.

To qualify for the program, youth must be at least 14 years of age and meet family income guidelines. Applications will be taken April 30 at Ozona High School at 3:30 p.m. Students should bring a copy of their social security card and birth certificate.

The Board of Trustees of the Crockett County Consolidated Common School District, meeting in regular session Tuesday, April 15, approved a proposal presented by Superintendent Garland Davis which allows the local school system to conduct abbreviated school days on May 6 and May 7. "The purpose of these two abbreviated school days is to grant release time to teachers so that they can begin working on sequencing curriculum areas for future curriculum guides," he explained.

several hundreds of dollars will be way through town. To help them is to given away to help needy persons on their way. "Good," you say. Wrong! Because most of it will go to crooks who didn't need it at all. "But," one They cry, they give names, places, argues, "we're giving in the Lord's Name and the recipient must bear the judgment for any wrong-doing, not us." Wrong again! Good Stewardship requires wisdom and frowns upon waste.

Our location on a major Interstate Highway sets the community up as a logical stopping place for those looking for help. I want to help those who need help. I want to help those who need help, but I want to stop the senseless giving to those who are looking for a free ride - at our expense.

In January of this year, I received a call from a man in New York state requesting the church to send him money. He said he lived in Ozona. had a bank account here, named some people here, and pleaded for us to help him return after experiencing car trouble up there. He was desperate, he said. He, his wife, and small children needed help immediately. I told him I would check it out before we dispensed any funds. A newcomer, I wanted to see if he was telling the truth. He wasn't! He called three times, we refused to send money, and, each time, he became more belligerent.

A phone call came this week from a phone company spokeswoman seeking information about this "needy soul". He has gathered several hundred dollars from churches and individuals all over "this part of the country". He has enjoyed a free ride at the expense of good people in towns like ours. He makes a good living that way.

Solomon said, "The leech has two daughters, 'Give', 'Give' " (Prov. 30:15). The leech family comes to our town every week. They are professional crooks, who, in the disguise

This year, in our little town, of "needy" people, actually rob their do them injustice and to waste our precious resources.

> These pirates appear sincere. and dates to substantiate their plea. They can change from a Baptist to a Presbyterian going from one corner to the next. I'm saying to you that most are professionals who live on the benevolent kindness of good people.

> Please listen to what I'm saving. I don't want us as a society, a church, or an individual to stop helping those who are in need. God has always provided for those who need help. Jesus said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts 20:35). We must be compassionate toward those who have legitimate needs - it can happen to anyone. But we must stop giving to the abusers. Check it out. Don't encourage those who pilfer by giving them your money.

I hear you thinking. What do we do? Who do we help? How do we help them?

Like I say, (1) Check the situation out. Those who are honest don't mind interrogation and investigation. (2) Offer help in a more lasting form than money. Money is required to meet some needs, but it is not a magic cure-all. You've heard the old saying, "Buy a man fish, help him for a day; teach a man to fish, help him for a life-time." (3) Know how others can help in the situation. Different needs require different resources - knowing the right tool to use can help solve the problem. (4) Be kind, considerate, tenderhearted - vet firm.

News about "easy" towns gets around. Every free-loader from Florida to California will be here for the easy hand-out. But news about good people who are willing to help those who help themselves gets around, too - then only those in real need come calling.

The song is gone and the drink is bitter

By Rev. Jim Gray First Baptist Church

Several years ago, a student asked reknown Canadian physician Sir William Osler, "is it true that alcohol makes people do things better?" Dr. Osler replied, "no, it just makes them less ashamed of doing them badly."

Is it wrong to drink? Evidently, most Americans think not because. 2/3 of all adults do drink.

What does the Bible have to say about drinking? First, we must acknowledge that drinking did take place. Wine was used in the "Lord's Supper", although it was not mandated (grape juice is also fruit of the vine). Wine was also used at wedding feasts, in offerings and as a medicine.

But the Bible also points out dangers. We are warned not to be given to much wine (Titus 2:3) because it leads to violence (Prov. 4:17), it makes poor (Prov. 23:20, 21), it impairs judgement (Prov. 31:4, 5), it inflames the passions (Is. 5:11): and it enslaves the heart (Hos. 4:11). How much does it impair judgement? After three bottles of beer there is a 13 percent memory loss. After one ounce of alcohol (any kind), qualified typists committed 40 percent more errors. After one ounce, muscle reaction is retarded by 17.4 percent; time to make a decision is increased by 9.7 percent; errors due to lack of attention are increased by 35.3 percent; and errors due to lack of muscle coordination are increased by 59.7 percent. Girls who were able to say "no" become more likely to say "yes", and unwanted pregnancies occur. Alexander the Great was ruler of Macedonia at age 16, victorious general at 18, king at 20, but he died a drunkard before age 33. Strong drink enslaves the heart!

According to the Bible, drunkenness is obviously wrong. Romans 13:13 tellus us to walk properly, not in drunkenness. Gal. 5:21 counts drunkenness as one of the works of the flesh along with adultery and murder. I Peter 4:3 tells Christians that drunkenness may have been part of their past life, but it shoudl not be part of the present. In Ephesians 5:18, Paul tells us that being filled with wine will cause our disintegration.

Is it wrong to drink? Dr. Billy Graham says "it is my judgement that because of the devastating problem that alcoholism has become in America, it is better for Christians to be teetotalers, except for medicinal purposes." I agree with Dr. Graham, but the problem extends beyond alcoholism alone. Each year thousands die on our highways and more than half of these are related to drinking. Drinking is also related to broken promises, broken lives, broken homes, and broken bodies. I am told that as many as 10,000 brain cells are destroyed when a person feels even the slightest bit "tipsy"

Is drinking a disease? Many disagree on this question, but if it is: - it is the only disease that is contracted by an act of the will;

- it is the only disease that requires a license to propagate it;

- it is the only disease that is bottled and sold;

-it is the only disease that requires outlets to spread it; - it is the only disease that produces a reserve for the government:

- it is the only disease that provokes crime;

- it is the only disease that is habit forming: - it is the only disease spread by advertising: and it is the only disease without a germ or virus cause, and for which there is no human corrective medicine.

Is it wrong to drink? You must decide for yourself. A true story tells of a father who was called to the scene of a wreck. At the wreck where his daughter and three other teenagers were killed, he held his daughter's lifeless body and vowed to kill whomever had sold these girls liquor. Back at home, he found a note, "Dad, we're taking along some of your good liquor - I know you won't mind." Romans 14:13-15 says we should not be a stumbling block to others, and in Matthew 18:6 Jesus said if we cause a little one to sin, we would be better off with a millstone around our necks and cast into the ocean.

Maybe the question should be is it right to drink? In view of the devastating effects, what good could it do?

TEXAS TRIVIA

A slender white evening glove was a rallying point for the Texas Army of Independence when it routed General Santa Anna's Mexican forces at San Jacinto on April 21, 1836. The glove was given to Capt. Sidney Sherman at a farewell ball for the Buckeye Volunteers of Kentucky as they left for Texas. A beautiful young girl said, "Here, Sir, is a gauge of battle; let it be bourne foremost in the fight!"

The slender little glove, waving defiantly over the Texas Army's battle flag, went proudly into the attack at San Jacinto. The glove was lost, but the flag survived. It is displayed today behind the Speaker's Rostrum in the House of Representatives at Austin.

Church of Christ retreat

Heaven Ho! Head Us Out! Move Us On! were the watch words for ladies of the Church of Christ when they attended a two day retreat at the Sid Hoover Ranch April 18-19. A sesquicentennial theme from bonnets on the 38 participants as they departed to food served contributed to the excitement of the retreat.

A fashien show of clothing worn for worship from Biblical times to the present was one of the special events of the retreat.

Peggy McWilliams spoke to the group with the topic "Mirror, Mirror on the Wall". "what's in your Vessel, Mud or Money?" was the subject addressed by Sue Arledge.

Nancy Vannoy talked about "Keeping out the Riff-Raff", and "I Can, I Will, I Must" was emphasized by Nancy Moore.

Fire believed started by lightning

Lightning is suspected as the cause of a tank battery fire April 17 on the Joe Bean Ranch.

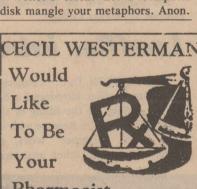

The Ozona Volunteer Fire Department received a call on the fire at 7:36 a.m. with 17 men responding. Eight individuals made the run where they used 1,200 gallons of water and 10 gallons of foam to contain and extinguish the fire.

The volunteers were back at the station at 9:30 a.m.

No damage figures were available. A small grass fire on the Troy Williams Ranch north of Ozona required 100 gallons of water to extinguish Tuesday. Six men and two trucks answered the 12:28 p.m. call. Firemen were back at the station by 1:40.

The fire was caused by a broken flare line at a Meredian Oil Company oil tank.

Grazing and productivity

By George Peacock USDA-Soil Conservation Service

One of the basic problems facing a livestock producer is how close to safely graze plants and still obtain maximum productivity over an extended period. This problem is compounded by varying climatic conditions, growth habits of different plants, and livestock preferences for different plants.

Proper grazing use will maintain or improve the quality and quantity of vegetation while maintaining enough cover to protect the soil. Understanding the basics of how plants grow will help provide insight as to the need of balancing livestock numbers with the amount of forage available.

In the spring, plants draw upon the food stored in the roots to put out the first green leaves. The roots then carry water and minerals from the soil to the leaf. Through the use of solar energy, the leaf converts water and minerals to food which is transported back to the roots. A certain amount of this food is used to keep the plant alive and if an excess is produced, it will be used for growth of leaves and roots.

Root growth is closely related to forage production. Plants maintain their maximum root vigor and growth when no more than half their leaves are removed by grazing. When 60 to 90 percent of the plant is removed, from 50 to 100 percent of the root growth is stopped. Roots are the vital supply lines of moisture and minerals to the leaves.

The ability of perennial grasses, legumes, and forbs to recover quickly after grazing makes these plants extremely valuable for forage production and soil protection. Removing too many leaves will retard forage production and damage the plant's root system. If overgrazing of the leaves continues, the plants will eventually die.

For more information or assistance concerning proper grazing use or how plants grow, contact the Soil Conservation Service, assisting the Crockett Soil and Water Conservation District.

Reavis prepares students for college

By Cynthia Harrell Hodges

Frank Reavis expects students in the upper level science and math courses at Ozona High School to have more than a vague idea of a correct chemical or mathematical formula.

Since first moving to Ozona with his family in 1967, following his graduation from Angelo State University with a major in chemistry, Reavis has attempted to prepare students for college level courses. "The courses have not changed all that much. Expectations have changed and college expectations have changed," Reavis said recently.

"I teach more in line with what colleges want from students. I continually update and modernize the material covered by each course. Colleges change texts often, while new textbooks remain here for seven to eight years."

Reavis teaches a variety of classes at Ozona High School, and this means preparing classes in physics, chemistry, Algebra II and trigonometry and pre-calculus. To Reavis, this is one of the pluses of teaching in a small school system.

To the spare time carpenter and family man, "students haven't changed much since 1967. They still would rather play than work. I'm the same way, so it's all right."

through various computer programs. Anything you learn takes time. A computer doesn't care how long it takes you to learn a subject," said the longtime bus driver.

The subject matter in the classroom has not changed since the start of statewide school reform. HB 72 will effect the budget of the system more than the individual classroom, Reavis said.

Students must have "uninterrupted time to study. This must start when they are young. The more complicated the subject, the more time is needed to study. If students have time to study, they will do better," Reavis said. "They need to learn to concentrate. Get study methods for each course. It takes a strong desire to become a good student."

The curriculum at Ozona High School has expanded through the years. Because of the changing requirements caused by HB 72, students are now required to take three years of math to graduate instead of two. Additional lower level courses, based on consumer mathematics, have been added. The expanding V.I.C.A. program has given students more opportunities, said the teacher. "Many students don't go to college. This gives them a marketable skill quickly. They learn quickly what it takes to survive in a technical age."

and fixing the old warehouse and turning it into a first rate kitchen are his current after school activities. The fix it man and his wife, Kathy, who serves as president for the local Meals on Wheels program, both feel the program is a valuable good idea.

The Reavis enjoy visiting their daughter, Cindy, who serves as a veterinary assistant in San Angelo, fishing and gardening. The one dark spot in their 19 years in Ozona was the death of their son, Frank, a few years ago. Despite this, the Reavis family all have contributed to the betterment of life in their adopted home town.

Though beckoned by higher paying industry jobs, Reavis has chosen to remain in the teaching profession. "I like kids. I want them to have the best opportunity they can get."

Computers and calculators have helped students reduce the number of mechanical errors. "They can help with the details in math. With theories and formulas, they can't help.'

Reavis believes that a change in the teaching of mathematics, particularly in the grade school level, must take place. "Students need to know what to use math for (adding, subtracting, etc.), and how to use it, instead of just knowing the fundamentals. The mechanics tie up too much of a teacher's time.

Despite his emphasis on the scholastic side, Reavis believes that extracurricular activities are important. "These activities have good values. Though there need to be limits, this helps students have a 'well rounded background. Intramural sports and good competition help students have a better attitude toward the classroom. I wish this school offered an intramural program.

While Reavis copes with the juniors and seniors in his classes, his wife, Kathy, attempts to start the children off on the right foot in her kindergarten class. Teaching has been a family affair for the Reavis since 1971 when Mrs. Reavis started her teaching career.

The handyman in the classroom "More teaching eventually will be has been turning his leisure time done with computers. Some courses hours to the kitchen for the Meals on are already taught by self learning Wheels program. Painting, patching

Eva Walraven and Beverly Mc-Faddin, representatives of the San Angelo Alzheimer's Support Group recently presented two educational programs on Alzheimer's Disease. Although much research has been dedicated to Alzheimer's disease, the cause and cure are unknown. Alzheimer's is a complicated and degenerative disease which destroys the mind. The disease can occur at any age, but is especially prominent beyond age 65.

Many Alzheimer's victims remain in homes and receive constant supervision from a caregiver (spouse of relative). The caregiver commonly feels overburdened by the responsibility of constant care. Family support groups are essential to caregivers.

Famiy support groups offer caregivers a variety of benefits - therapy, respite, education and research. Caregivers are able to express feelings and receive help in dealing with their patient.

Many Alzheimer's patients eventually require 24 hours care, which is virtually impossible for the average caregiver. Nursing home care is usually the next step. Coping with separation thereafter can present real problems for the spouse, who is neither divorced or widowed. Feelings of loss, lonliness, and guilt are common.

The well spouse may find it difficult to relinquish day-to-day responsibility for the care of a loved one. This feeling is similar to feelings of relief and loss by a mother whose children have left home.

The lonliness and emptiness spell and "end which is not an end". Caretakers' roles are not over, and thereafter include frequent visits to the nursing home.

It is estimated that 50 percent of all patients in nursing homes have Alzheimer's Disease - regardless of whether or not it has been positively diagnosed. Alzheimer patients generally die of normal causes failure of heart, kidneys, etc., rather than the Alzheimer Disease.

Shrubs for rangeland revegation can help provide drought tolerance

By Robert L. Haney TAES Science Writer

Ranchers may be overlooking a good bet if they ignore shrubs and use only grasses for rangeland revegetation, according to Dr. Darrell N Ueckert, range scientist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at San Angelo.

"Shrubs have long been recognized as an important rangeland resource in many aird and semiarid regions of the world," Ueckert says. "However, for many years most shrubs were regarded as worthless invaders or increasers on rangelands in western Texas and our objectives were aimed at killing brush and growing more grass.

"Many of the native shrubs that were valuable, as forage for livestock and for wildlife food and cover, have largely been eliminated in many areas by continuous, yearlong grazing of cattle, sheep, and goats and/or by the indiscriminate application of non-selective brush control practices.

"My interest in the use of shrubs for revegetation of depleted rangeland, abandoned cropland, and disturbed sites in western Texas, evolved after observing for many years that grasses, on native rangeland and improved pastures, rapidly go dormant and decline in vigor and abundance during droughts while the deep-rooted, desert-adapted shrubs continue to grow and many even increase in abundance.

"Supplemental feeding of protein, the major expense incurred by livestock producers in western Texas, is necessary because of insufficient quantities of palatable, evergreen shrubs and cool-season grasses and forbs. Ranchers in arid regions who have an abundance of palatable, evergreen shrubs such as fourwing saltbush have to do little supplemental feeding.

"Livestock are traditionally wintered on desert ranges dominated by drought-tolerant, evergreen shrubs in the Intermountain Region of the western United States. Cattle grazed on winterfat ranges during winters of drought years have entered the spring in excellent condition.

"There is also some evidence that livestock intoxication from poisonous plants may be reduced where palatable, evergreen shrubs are readily available. A rancher at Marfa says his cattle don't eat locoweed in a pasture where fourwing saltbush is readily available.

and they continue to meet gestation requirements even after they reach full maturity. Shrub forage loses only about 40 percent of its protein from early growth to seed formation, whereas grasses lose about 75 percent.

"Secondary plant chemicals, such as tannins which interfere with protein utilization, are present in some shrubs, so laboratorydetermined crude protein values of shrub forage must be interpreted cautiously.

'Shrubs in all growth stages are considered good sources of phosphorus for animal maintenance and gestation. Deciduous (shed leaves annually) shrubs may be borderline in phosphorus content if their young twings are readily eaten.

'Shrubs, even when mature, meet the carotene requirements for lactation. The carotene content in browse decreases only slightly from early growth to maturity because of the high carotene content in the bark of young twigs. Shrubs meet the energy requirements for lactation until the time of seed or fruit production, but after fruiting do not meet the energy requirements for lactation.

'Different livestock and wildlife species have unique food preferences, but all species consume forage from shrubs and trees to some degree. Browse can be critical for balancing the nutrient intake of livestock during cold or dry seasons.

'We are presently evaluating three native species (fourwing saltbust, winterfat and littleleaf leadtree) and two introduced species (prostrate kochia and oldman saltbush), for use in western Texas.

Fourwing saltbush (also called chamisa) occurs from the westcentral Great Plains to the Coastal Range and from northern Mexico to Canada. Our data suggest that 1 acre of fourwing saltbush might provide the supplemental protein requirements for 0.5 to 1 animal unit during a 90-day period.

"In one trial, yearling Angora muttons gained an average of 1.5 pounds per head during a 1-month preliminary grazing trial on small plots of fourwing saltbush at three locations in the winter (Jan. 27-Feb. 24) of 1984.

"Stocking rates ranged from 8.5 to 25 kids per acre. No supplemental feed was provided. Saltbush forage was 96 to 99 percent utilized the end of the trial. The shrubs resprouted vigorously by March 15 and by late May were totally recovered and vigorously growing. "Fourwing saltbush is adapted to a wide range of soils and climates. It thrives in areas where annual precipitation is as low as 10 inches. The seeds are commercially available and the species is widely used for range revegetation, mine spoil reclamation, and for soil stabilization on critical areas in the Intermountain Region. Winterfat, though native to western Texas and much of the southwest and Intermountain Region, is rare in western Texas. This shrub furnishes palatable and nutritious browse for both livestock and big game.

reduces its vigor. Crude protein contents of winterfat varied from 10.1 to 16.8 percent during August through March, in a study in Washington.

"Seeds of winterfat are commercially available.

"Littleleaf leadtree is a deciduous legume, as is the mesquite. This shrub or small tree grows in dry, well-drained, rocky soils in central and western Texas and in northern Mexico. It is readily browsed by livestock and wildlife.

"Crude protein contents of littleleaf leadtree forage, between May and November, averaged 21 percent. The forage of this species contains a small concentration of mimosine, a toxic amino acid. However, we grazed Angora billy kids on a pure stand of littleleaf leadtree, for 30 days with no detectable effects on blood constituents, thyroids or other organs.

"The kids lost 0.5 pounds per head during this 30-day trial, but forage availability limited intake during the last 10 days of the trial.

"The seed of this species have a very hard seed coat that must be scarified for best germination. The seedlings are very susceptible to grazing by rabbits, deer, and livestock as well as to competition from weeds.

"This shrub appears very promising as a drought-tolerant summer grazing crop for western Texas.

'Prostrate kochia, a long-lived woody shrub, is native to southcentral Eurasia, and the species is well adapted to the drier range sites. It is considered a valuable browse for wildlife and livestock.

"The shrub has demonstrated good potential for range restoration and soil stabilization on basic soils in the Intermountain Region. Transplanted seedlings of the species yielded about 16,000 pounds of herbage per acre, in a Utah study. Crude protein contents of prostrate kochia herbage ranged from 8.5 percent in January to 14.7 percent in August, in a Washington study.

"These values were comparable to those for fourwing saltbush and winterfat, in the same area. Prostrate kochia seedlings, transplanted into a field nursery at San Angelo in September 1984, are thriving and producing seed.

"Seeds of prostrate kochia rapidly lose their ability to germinate. "Oldman saltbush is native to the saline deserts of western Australia. The species is considered an important drought-resistant fodder crop in both Australia and South Africa.

By Cynthia Harrell Hodges

The Crockett County Consolidated School System, based on information received from the state tax appraisal office, will, during the 1986-87 school year, suffer major losses in state revenue education funds, according to Superintendent of Schools Garland Davis.

"At this time, we have no firm figures available as to the extent of the losses, but we are staying close touch with the tax office." Davis said the appraisal firm, Pritchard and Abbott, for the school system presently has nothing to "go on until the figures are released in July."

"I can't predict how the system will be effected until we know what kind of losses there are. We are hoping to maintain the same program levels. In order to do that, we need to maintain the present personnel levels in the system," he explained been markedly effected. If the economy continues to suffer, the long range planning cannot be done.'

Enrollment figures for the school system during the last 12 years shows a slight decrease from the 1981-82 boom year to the present level. The current level of 975 students during the present school term (this excludes 29 prekindergarten students, which would bring total enrollment to 1004) indicates the stability of the community as a whole. The 975 figure represents a 12 student increase since the 1973-74 school year.

"Such a small fluctuation in student enrollment makes very little difference in the cost of school programs. This gradual decrease in enrollment has not necessarily helped the system. State revenues are based on average daily attendance. Each decrease in the number of students attending means a slight reduction in state revenues," Davis

"In 1981-82, we evaluated fourwing saltbush, along with several grasses (Kleingrass, King Ranch bluestem, alkali sacaton, Lehmann lovegrass, and kochia) as plant materials for revegetating oilwell reserve pits (slush pits). Fourwing saltbush was the impressive 'winner' on these saline-alkaline soils, producing stands with standing crops of 6,550 to 20,000 pounds per acre, 16 months after seeding in a 17-inch per year rainfall zone.

"These results, along with knowledge of the notable reputation of fourwing saltbush as a desirable forage plant for all species of livestock and deer, convinced me that this shrub, and possibly others, has a great potential for use in revegation projects in western Texas.

"Shrubs are considered good sources of digestible protein during

"Grazing use as great as 80 percent during the winter does not adversely affect the vigor of winterfat but greater than 25 percent utilization in the growing season

'The annual yield of leaves of oldman saltbush averaged about 2,600 pounds per acre, in a South African study. Carrying capacity of oldman saltbush plantings averaged about nine sheep per acre for four-month grazing periods, and the sheep gained about 0.9 pound per head per month, while grazing the shrubs.

'Crude protein content of oldman saltbush is somewhat greater than that of fourwing saltbush. Transplanted seedlings of oldman saltbush have grown faster than those of fourwing saltbush at several field

Dr. Arthur C. "Skip" Casey San Angelo Central High School

The governor of the State of Texas has missed the mark with recent educational reform. The idea was positive - "Excellence in Education"; however, the effect has been and will continue to be negative. Why? The answer is that the governor and the legislative bodies have failed to listen to educational professionals; in fact, the governor has personally condemned anyone who questions any aspect of House Bill 72 as an educational heretic or a dumb football coach. The governor has effectively used this ploy, with the help of the media, to reduce a reform package that affects every aspect of public school operation to a single issue, "No-Pass, No-Play". If we are to believe what we read and hear, the governor is seeking to save the youngsters of the State of Texas from a life of ignorance by establishing rules that force students to learn before they play. Without forgetting that House Bill 72 is the bill that disenfranchised the voters of Texas by creating an appointed state school board, forced an increase in local school taxes in a majority of the state's school districts, dramatically reduced the power of the local school board, and created a sytem of merit pay that effectively destroyed the morale of the educators of the state, let's take a critical look at the issue of "No-Pass, No-Play"

The first question is, "Why do we need the rule?" The answer seems to be that the governor wants to establish that learning in the academic disciplines comes before play, the premise being that the extracurricular program is simply a group of games that youngsters participate in as a diversion, an escape from the real purpose of the public schools. The governor is fond of saying, "We send our children to school to learn, not to play," the implication being that no really important lessons are learned through participation in the extracurricular program. Certainly the academic disciplines are important; however, it is imperative that the public schools teach the concepts of loyalty, courage, commitment, and competitiveness. The most appropriate vehicle to teach these concepts is the extracurricular program. In addition to the fact that some very important lessons are taught and learned through the extracurricular program, there is overwhelming evidence that students who partici-

have more difficulty passing that their middle-class peers. These young people fail, not from lack of intelligence, but because they lack parental support and educational background. The extracurricular program is very often responsible for keeping these students in school and breaking the cycle of poverty.

3. Many students at some point in their high school career will be involved in some type of personal tragedy that will cause them to fail a six-week grading period. Death of a loved one, divorce in the family, a life-threatening illness of a parent, etc., are all situations which occur on an almost daily basis in large high schools. Students undergoing these types of trauma can be totally distracted from their studies.

4. It is entirely possible that some time during a high school career, a student will encounter a less than competent teacher. That student may fail because the teacher lacked the ability to teach, not because the student lacked the ability to learn.

5. In the world of high school competition, a separation from any activity for six weeks is difficult, if not impossible, for a student to overcome. If we deny a student enrolled in calculus the opportunity to attend class or do homework for a six weeks period, would he have any real hope of competing with students who had remained in class and received the instruction?

No rule is totally fair to all concerned; however, it simply is not at San Angelo Central High School.

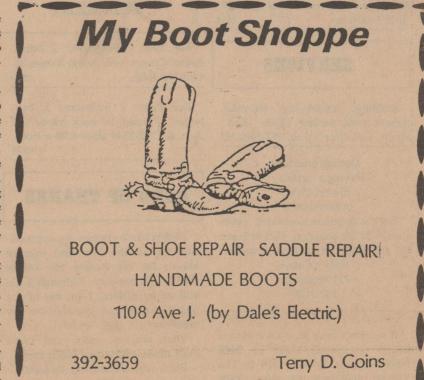

right to cause a youngster to "sit out" for six weeks because he lacks intellectual ability, was born into poverty, met with a tragic situation or was scheduled into a less than competent teacher's class.

A third question is, "What has the rule done to establish educational excellence in Texas?" The "No-Pass, No-Play" rule has created a negative effect on both the quality and quantity of education in this state. Students are dropping academic courses at an alarming rate. They avoid demanding courses and tough teachers because they fear the loss of the extracurricular eligibility. This situation may represent a problem with priorities among these students and their parents. however, high school administrators must deal with "what is," not with 'what ought to be'

We are losing academic ground on a daily basis because the "No-Pass. No-Play'' rule is punitive, negative and inappropriate.

House Bill 72 is quite possibly the worst single piece of legislation that has escaped from the Texas Legislature in the last one hundred years.

score higher on college entrance exams, have higher high school grade point averages, and have a greater chance of success in life than their non-involved counterparts. If the governor would check with high school principals, he would find that the great enemies of "Educational Excellence" in this state are not football and band, but cars and after-school jobs. The rule we need is not "No-Pass, No-Play"; it is "No-Pass, No-Drive" A second question must be, "Is the rule fair?" The following scenarios represent some facts of life in the secondary school: 1. By definition, 50 percent of the youngsters in any high school are below average. If teachers choose to challenge the upper 50 percent in the classrooms, then would it not be reasonable to assume that youngsters below that level will, on occasions, have some real difficulty passing every six weeks.

2. In every high school there are youngsters whose socio-economic position in society causes them to
