Frausto, Shields win coloring competition

THE CLARENDON ENTERPRISE has named Easton Frausto and Braylee Shields as the winners in its first annual Christmas coloring contest.

Frausto took first place in the Age 5-7 category, and Shields won in the Age 8-10 category.

The two winners are now in a competition to see whose artwork will be on the cover of next week's Santa Letter section of the ENTER-PRISE. Readers can vote for their favorite at by visiting our website at www.ClarendonLive.com.

Frausto and Shields each win $50 for their renditions of Santa Claus.

Contest second place winners earning $20 each were Anna Hardy and Kaylin Hicks, and third place winners earning $10 each were Brayson Cruse and Baylor Cruse.

Congratulations to these winners, and thank you to everyone who participated in the contest!

United Christians to meet Thursday

The United Christians Christmas breakfast will be Thursday, December 15 at 7 a.m., at the First United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall.

The special Christmas program will be brought by the very talented musicians from the Assembly of God Church.

Come for a good breakfast and a great Christmas musical program. It will be a time of fellowship with Christians celebrating the birthday of our Lord.

Fewer cows, calves mean strong cattle market in 2012

By Blair Fannin, AgriLife Extension

BRYAN - A classic case of supply and demand is predicted for the cattle market in 2012, according to a Texas AgriLife Extension Service economist.

Declining cow numbers due to drought will lead to fewer calves, causing tighter supplies across the US, said Dr. David Anderson, AgriLife Extension livestock economist.

"I think we will continue to maintain historically high prices," Anderson said recently at the Brock Faulkner-Brazos Valley Fall Cattleman's Clinic in Bryan.

Rich getting richer and so are the poor

By Jarrett Skorup

"No matter your thoughts about the Occupy Wall Street movement, the protesters were right in at least one respect: The rich are getting richer, and the poor are getting poorer."

Variations on this statement were repeated in dozens of blogs, commentaries, and even news reports in the past months. The claim comes via a Congressional Budget Office analysis that shows incomes for the top 1 percent of Americans growing by 275 percent between 1979 and 2007, while the lowest 20 percent saw their inflation-adjusted incomes grow by "only" 18 percent.

The numbers from the report are correct, but the assertions based on it are true only because of careful wording. While the "top 1 percent" had the highest growth of income, if broadened to include the top 20 percent (the usual way of analyzing such figures), the growth rate was a far less stratospheric 65 percent. This contrasts with about 40-percent growth for the middle three-fifths of all wage earners, and 18 percent for the lowest one-fifth.

Statistically, the lowest 20 percent of households are poor for one main reason: They don't work as much. Among the causes are medical issues, disability, and bad incentives. Not surprisingly, households in the top 20 percent are far more likely to include people with jobs. Here's how Professor Mark Perry, a member of the Mackinac Center's Board of Scholars and chairman of the economics department at the University of Michigan-Flint, described it:

"American households in the top income quintile have almost five times more family members working on average than the lowest quintile, and ... are far more likely ... to be well-educated, married, and working full-time in their prime earning years. In contrast, individuals in low-income households are far more likely to be less-educated, working part-time, either very young or very old, and living in singleparent households."

More significantly, the "rich getting richer" storyline insinuates that the top 1 percent and bottom 20 percent include the same individuals over time. For example, as reporter Julie Mack writes, "Overall, the numbers show that the more affluent you are, the better you've done in the past three decades." Note how this ignores the reality that many individuals who were in the poorest group years ago have long since moved up and out, while among the rich are many families who are literally nouveau riche—they've recently arrived from lower income levels.

That's the risk of relegating real people into statistical categories. Economist Thomas Sowell explained it this way: "The actual empirical evidence cited has been about what has been happening over time to statistical categories turns out to be the direct opposite of what has happened over time to flesh-andblood human beings, many of whom move from one category to another over time."

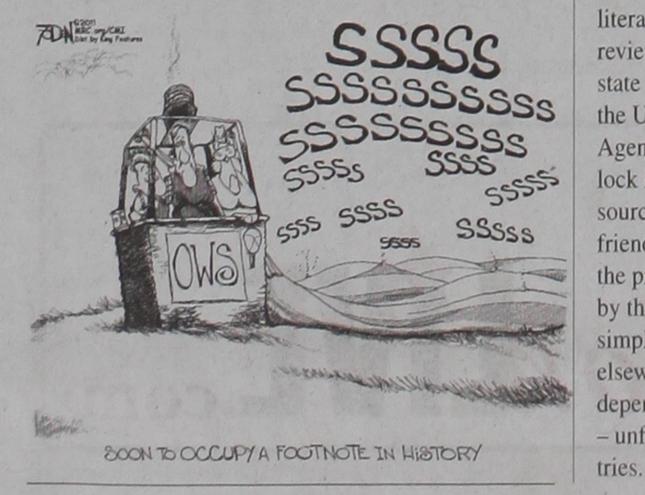

Data that tracks real people show that Sowell is correct. For example, as reported in The Wall Street Journal, IRS tax-return data shows that individuals in the bottom one-fifth back in 1996 experienced income growth of 91 percent by 2005. In contrast, individuals in the highest one-fifth saw their incomes increase just 10 percent over the same period. Incomes of households in the top 5 percent and 1 percent actually declined, by 7 percent and 24 percent, respectively.

Anecdotally, this makes sense: For example, in 1985, my father was just out of college and probably in the lowest 20 percent. But by 2007 he had moved up. Such examples are commonplace, but are completely missed by statistical aggregates.

In the late 1970s, Steve Jobs was trying to expand a struggling computer company. Bill Gates was writing code and just beginning to start working on a personal computer. And one of the founders of Google, Sergey Brin, had just arrived as a six-year-old immigrant from the USSR. These are individuals who did not enter that top 1 percent until many years later-in the process displacing former "one percenters."

It was these individuals, not statistical categories, who created companies and wealth by making products people wanted. Establishing conditions in which individuals can move up the income ladder by creating, innovating, and building is what America is all about.

Texas towns by any other names...

What's in a name? For some offthe-beaten-path communities in Texas, not a lot. For others, it is their primary marketing tool. For some, it pays homage to their earliest inhabitants. When San Antonio Express-News writer Roy Bragg recently took a look at some of the strangest names on the Texas map, he decided to Jot 'Em Down. And that list included Jot 'Em Down, Texas roughly 75 miles northeast of Dallas.

Bragg found Texas town names to satisfy every appetite, like Oatmeal, Okra, Muenster, and Lollipop. He also assembled what could be a comprehensive list of baby names for expectant parents: Celina, Anna, Maud, Louise, Edna, Sarita, Alice, Donna, Mercedes, and Maybelle, or Melvin, Nolan, Seymour, and Chester.

For many of these towns, the founders put a lot of thought into their municipality's name. While its name would suggest otherwise, the early inhabitants of Nameless, Texas were thoroughly invested in the naming process. Located in northwest Travis County, just five miles northeast of Lago Vista, Nameless was settled in 1869. Residents grew cotton or produced cedar posts and rails to make a living. By 1880, these residents were ready to make their town official and applied for a U.S. post office. The postal department rejected the names they suggested not once, but six times. Finally, in an act of frustration, the residents replied in writing, "Let the post office be postal department called their bluff. The post office called Nameless was established in 1880. The joke was relatively short-lived. Ten years later the post office was discontinued and mail was rerouted through Leander. Despite this setback, however, residents kept Nameless alive well into the 20th century. Though today all that be damned!" Much to their surprise, the marker, the cemetery and an abandoned schoolhouse, this community without a name remains on state maps. Unlike Nameless, another town profiled by Bragg was successful in securing the postmark they requested, but perhaps not the results they hoped the name would yield. In Bailey County, at the junction of State Highway 214 and of the townsite wanted to attract more settlers. But by 1940, 20 years after its founding, Needmore found itself still wanting more. With only 20 residents and two stores, the future looked bleak. Needmore peaked in 1980 with a poputhe map, only time will tell if the original residents' marketing ploy will ever

Looking across the state, Bragg found communities that give orders, like Grow, Draw and Tell. He found some that may have been named to keep others out, such as Weeping Mary or Looneyville. While some of the strangest names have left their mark on the Texas map, like Loco, Cut And Shoot, and Noodle, others' legacies were not as lasting. Take the town of Zulch, for example. While Zulch is long gone, you can rest assured knowing that North Zulch remains. While these towns may come and go, they enrich the lore of our state and remind us of how unique Texas is. So if you ever find yourself on US-67 west of San Angelo, pull over by that abandoned shack near the intersection of County Road 113. Take in the vastness of the landscape and give thanks, because you're standing in the former location of the town with the name that says it all: Best, Texas.

Pipeline decision costly to USA

At the end of a three year comprehensive government review process, the President has an opportunity to allow construction to begin immediately on a crucial energy infrastructure project, the Keystone XL Pipeline. Instead, the President has decided to fumble away this huge economic development opportunity by postponing his decision until at least 2013. Our country can't afford the President's indecision; it's time for Congress to scoop up the ball and help ensure that this project is carried across the goal line.

The Keystone XL Pipeline is a $7 billion privately-funded pipeline that will carry more than 800,000 barrels of crude oil daily from a huge find in western Canada to American refineries in Texas and elsewhere. The pipeline will create 20,000 construction jobs and approximately 118,000 related jobs, resulting in more than $20 billion in additional private sector spending and as much as $5 billion in new local, state, and federal tax revenues.

In Texas, the pipeline would boost our state economy by an estimated $1.9 billion. For Texas' 26 oil refineries - which account for one-fourth of total U.S. oil refining capacity - the pipeline would result in 700,000 additional barrels of oil refined per day. The Keystone XL Pipeline is literally shovel-ready. It has been reviewed thoroughly by a host of state and federal agencies, including the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Once completed, it would lock in access to a stable, secure source of energy from Canada, our friendly neighbor to the north. If the project continues to be blocked by the White House, Canada will simply export crude to China and elsewhere, and the U.S. will remain dependent on - and vulnerable to - unfriendly and/or unstable coun-

The President seems to be hesitating because, in spite of detailed state and federal reviews, capitol some environcomment mental groups opposed. In fact, the Keystone XL project is nothing new. Currently more than 50,000 miles of oil pipelines crisscross America. Its final design incorporates dozens of small and large changes to protect the environment and potentially affected people and communities. Furthermore, if the pipeline is not built, Canada will export its crude across the Pacific on oil-consuming tankers, probably to nations with looser environmental rules than ours.

are unalterably by sen. kay bailey hutchison

Blocking the Keystone XL Pipeline will not keep the oil in the ground, nor will it decrease America's consumption of fossil fuels. What it will do is guarantee continuing unemployment for tens of thousands of American construction, manufacturing, transportation, and refinery workers. It will also keep America vulnerable to oil supply interruption and high prices from unstable, foreign oilproducing nations.

Since the President can't make the decision to go ahead with this project, I and 39 other Senators have introduced the North American Energy Security Act. Our legislation requires the Secretary of State to finalize a decision on the permit for the Keystone XL Pipeline project within 60 days of passage.

It's late in the fourth quarter for millions of unemployed American workers and their families. The Keystone XL Pipeline - privately funded and environmentally sound – is on the one-yard line. With a national unemployment rate that continues to hover near 9 percent, we simply can't afford to fumble away so many good-paying new jobs.

Lady Colts defeat Wheeler The seventh grade Lady Colts took on Wheeler at home and defeated them 24-21 to continue their undefeated season. After a slow first quarter, the ladies turned up their defense and increased their intensity on offense to increase their lead at the break. They were able to maintain their level of play in the second half and get the win.

Scoring: Hannah Howard 9, Briana Butler 7, Sarah Williams 6, and Jensen Hatley 2.

The eighth grade Lady Colts played hard, but fell 24-40. The ladies led after the opening period, but were shut down offensively before half time. Wheeler was able to take advantage of Clarendon's offensive slump and get the win.

Scoring: Damara Brown 8, Sterling King 4, Abby Durham 4, Chrislyn Durham 4, Alicia Medina 3, and Tessa Buckhaults 1.

The ladies will be off until January 9 when they will travel to Quanah.

Colts beat Wheeler

The seventh grade Colts demolished Wheeler on the road Monday night and earned a 38-24 win to add to their perfect season.

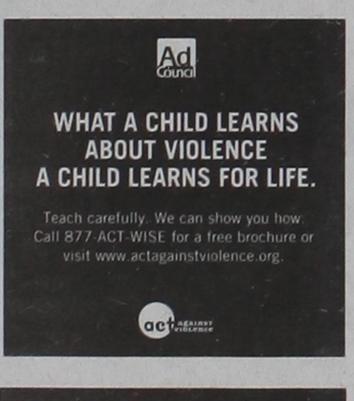

The Colts held a slight advantage after one, but turned up the scoring in the second quarter of play. They were able to secure their win in the second half of play by depending on their good defensive play. The Colts hit four three-pointers in the game and three players finished in double figures.

Scoring: Chance Lockhart 11, Keandre Cortez 10, Taylon Knorpp 10, Riley Shadle 5, and Marshal Johnson 2.

The eighth grade Colts gave it their all, but came up two points short in their 40-42 loss to Wheeler. A slow first quarter proved to be the difference in the momentum in the game as Clarendon outscored their opponent in the final three quarters. Bryce Hatley led the Colts finishing in double figures with 12 points.

Scoring: Hatley 12, Junior Ceniceros 9, Caleb Cobb 9, Chesson Sims 4, and Jonathon Taylor 4.

Both Colt teams will begin action after the break on January 9 at home beginning at 5:00 p.m.

Clarendon Church of Christ IS IT A BOOK OF SUGGESTIONS?

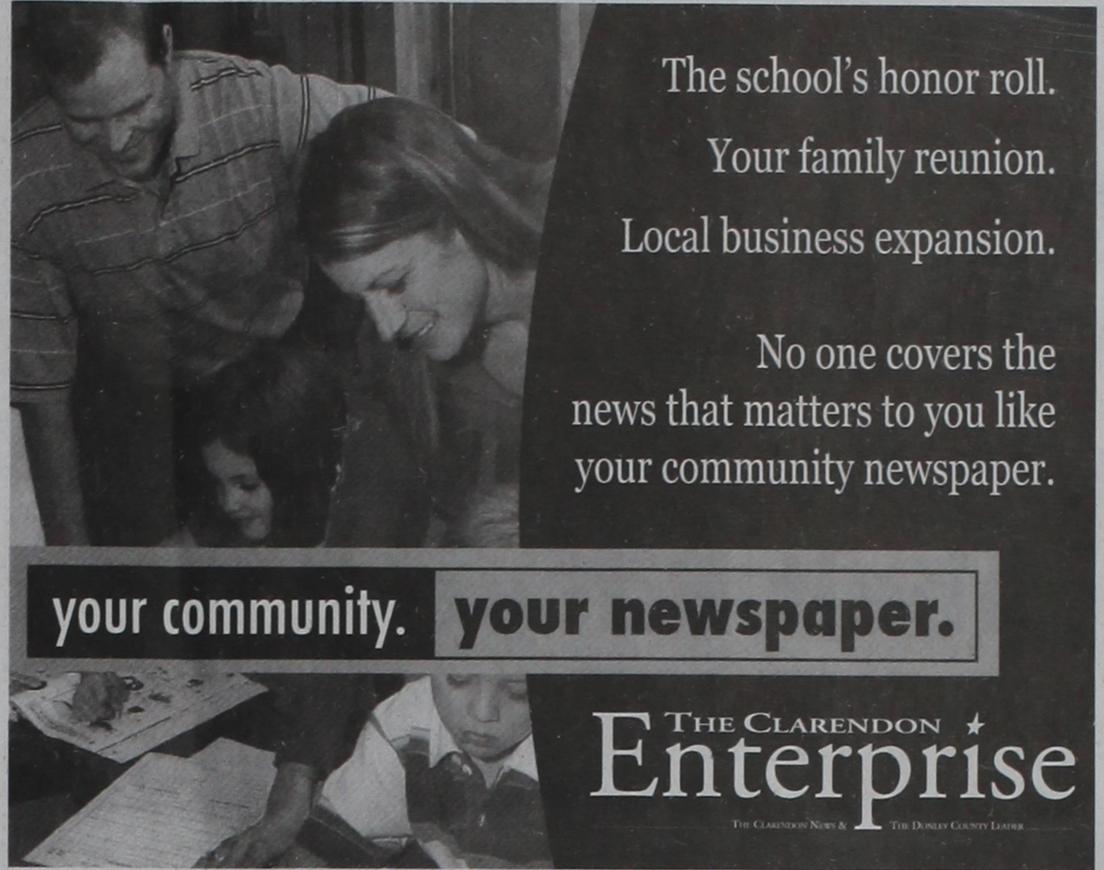

Hebrews 5:9 tells us that Jesus is the author of our salvation. John 14:15, "If you love Me, keep My commandments." Matthew 7:21, "Not everyone who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord' will enter heaven, but he who does the will of My Father." There are many other passages that bear out the same message, salvation is dependent on one's compliance with Jesus commanded.

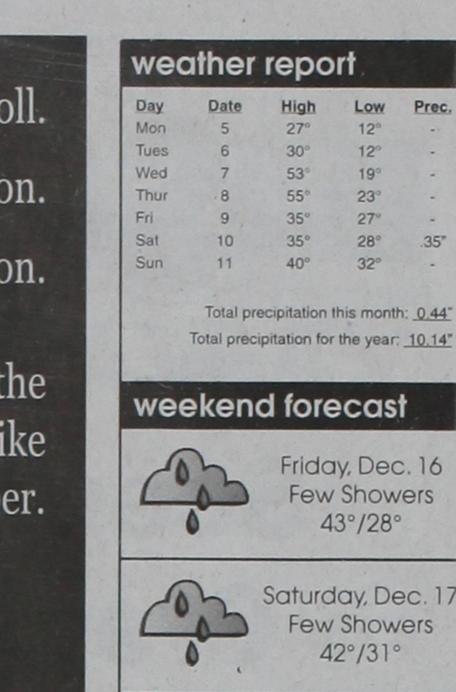

Some say that following commands are works and that doesn't get one to heaven. God's grace saves us, but how does one obtain that grace or free gift? There are stipulations on how one receives that grace. Imagine getting a phone call from the local car dealership. They say they are giving away one car, a free gift. You have been selected to receive the car, but first you must come sign some paperwork. What if you just showed up and demanded the free gift without complying with their rules? You wouldn't receive the car. Surely signing the paperwork isn't work, is it? God's grace is the same way. Obedience is part of salvation. The passage we used previously (Matt. 7:21) tells us all people calling on the name of the Lord are not saved, but those who are obedient to God's word.

Over the years, people have made the Bible a suggestion book. If you don't like a scripture or it's implication, you just ignore it or find another passage that you can twist into what you are looking for. Those who don't like the commands for baptism, they ignore plain passages like: Mark 16:16; Matt. 28:19-20; Acts 2:38; Romans 6; etc. If they don't like repentance as part of the Lord's commands, they will skip past Luke 13:3 or Acts 2:38.

When you look at leadership of the church, one can go to 1Timothy 3 and it gives qualifications for elders and deacons. Somehow, you don't see elders installed in very many religious groups. Many passages would prohibit women from leadership roles in the church, but they are ignored because it is politically incorrect to not allow women to serve in these capacities. Many folks are following their "feelings" instead of what the Book says. Could you imagine working in an office setting and telling your boss you weren't following the company's manual because you "felt" that was ok.? What if your pharmacist took your prescription for bloodpressure medicine and gave you arthritis medicine instead because he "felt" that is really what you needed? You wouldn't stand for it! God doesn't either! God will judge according to His Book one day. I would hate to have to explain why I picked and chose some passages to follow while ignoring the rest. I pray we would all follow the Bible as if it were a life or death matter, because it is, spiritually speaking.

Dad was diagnosed with Parkinson's disease 10 years ago. Recently, he started suffering from arthritis in his knees, extreme shaking and stiffness. The problem wasn't that he couldn't move, it was that his movement was too small to get anything done. That's when I talked to him about getting treatment from Accolade Homecare.

Just a couple of weeks into the program and his muscles feel stronger. He's taking bigger steps, walking up and down the stairs and getting into bed without any problems. He can even bend over to pick up the remote. Thanks to the help from Accolade, everything in his life is much better.
