The Capital Murder trial of Robert Babcock was expected to get underway in Memphis, as the ENTERPRISE went to press, with jury selection beginning on Wednesday, May 30.

District Attorney Luke Inman's office said the state is not seeking the death penalty in the case. The maximum punishment range will be life in prison without parole.

The case is expected to last several days, and the ENTERPRISE will provide periodic updates on our Facebook page and on ClarendonLive.com during the trial.

Babcock is accused of beating his four-year-old son, Chance Mark Jones, who died on January 5 of last year.

Bargain shoppers will be in for a treat during the seventh annual "Trash to Treasures" garage sale event to be held in Clarendon and nearby communities this Saturday, June 2.

Twenty-one individual sales are scheduled to be held. A complete description of each sale is printed on the official Treasure Map located on the last page of this week's Enterprise.

From a tractor to a Texaco light, this weekend's sales will feature hundreds of treasures just waiting to be uncovered at bargain prices.

Other items included in this year's sales are leather recliners, a hot tub, books, a piano, a Maytag washer, and more.

"Trash to Treasures" is being promoted with advertising dollars in area communities; and many people from neighboring counties attend.

After visiting all the sales, hungry shoppers are urged to stop by sale number 21 where the Assembly of God Youth Group will be having a hamburger lunch from 11 a.m. til the food runs out.

Trash to Treasures is organized by THE CLARENDON ENTERPRISE as a service to the community.

Flags at the Cemetery

By Dr. Paul Kengor

Like many Americans, Memorial Day never ceases to move me. Rivaled only by Christmas and Easter, it's the most poignant time of the year for me, maybe because, like Christmas and Easter, it's about life, death, and remembrance.

This Memorial Day, several images stick with me:

Recently, I was sitting at the waiting room at the nearby hospital, alternately reading something and checking email on my BlackBerry, consumed by my own little modern, technological world. Over to my left, I heard an elderly gentleman saying to another elderly gentleman, "Yes, I got there in 1943, ready to deploy to Italy .... "

I looked over at the two of them. They were chatting amicably, calmly, quietly, un-ostentatiously. When the one finished a thought about the Italian campaign, the other picked up with his story about boarding a plane for Europe nearly 70 years ago. The two men sat a few feet apart, two chairs between them. I was struck by how similar they looked. Each was probably late 80s, about 5'9", 160 pounds, apparent good shape, minds sharp as tacks, wearing trousers on a very hot day, baseball caps, legs crossed, arms bent atop the back of a chair. They looked like farmers, and probably were farmers in their youth before they headed off to World War II. They were mirror images physically, could be mistaken for brothers, but their resemblance was more than that: each possessed a sort of serenity, a peace. You had the sense that if the doctor told them they had just weeks to live, they'd shrug their shoulders and say, "Well, that's a tough break, Doc. But I can't complain."

created that

Save the War of Independence and the War Between the States, we may be living in the most perilous time in our history. Much of our future prosperity or ruin will be determined by a national debate.

The country is divided when different people take different sides in a debate, and are intolerant of differing opinions. The country is really divided when different people are having entirely different debates, and refuse to recognize that two separate debates are happening. That's what's occurring on economic policy and government's role in that policy.

Folks on the left are having a onesided debate how about to deal with the economic downturn. The prevailing argument you hear from these folks is that the economy is running well below capacity. To get it up to capacity, the government should borrow and spend more. The federal government is now running annual deficits of a little over a trillion dollars. Some of these folks think the deficit should be about 1.5 trillion dollars. The progressives on the left rail against what they see as Republican economic misers who resist new borrowing. Other people, on the far right, look at liberals and steam commences to erupt from their ears. They think the liberals are out to bankrupt the country and destroy it through excessive debt. They think the federal government should provide for the national defense and stay out of the way. They propose that the government should cut spending, cut taxes, and cut oppressive regulations. Good times will then surely follow. Neither side can leave their ideological silos long enough to see that from the dawn of the republic, the federal government has played a vital role in American economic life. Government promoted industrial development in the 1700s, transportation in the 1800s, communications in the 1900s, and biotechnology today.

role, Alexander Hamilton, was the quick, a nationalist. the dead, His primary directive, & fred from George by fred gray Washington, was to enhance national power and prominence, not to make individuals rich or equal.

Hamilton's version of economic nationalism meant that he and the people who followed in his course focused on long-term structural development, not on providing jobs right now. They had their vision on the future, building the infrastructure, education and research facilities required for long-term prosperity. This nationalism also led later generations of national leaders to assume that there is a rough harmony of interests between capital and labor. Hamilton's nationalism meant that federal policy emphasized energy and opportunity, more than security, fairness, and ease. His idea on the function of the U.S. government was focused more on innovation and education. Because of these priorities, and these limits on the federal role, the government could be energetic without ever becoming massive. Throughout the 1800s, the federal government expended about 4 percent of the national gross domestic product. Even through the New Deal, it expended less than 10%. As a result, America prospered. Unfortunately, the Hamiltonian approach has been discarded. The desertion happened in three phases. Firstly came the progressive era of Theodore Roosevelt. The progressives were right to increase regulations to protect workers and consumers. But the late progressives had excessive faith in the power of gov-

Secondly came the New Deal of Franklin D. Roosevelt. He was correct to aggressively react to the Great Depression. But the New Deal's maxim - that people don't eat in the long run; they eat every day - was eventually too harsh. Politicians since have paid less attention to long-term structures and more to how many jobs they "create" in a specific month. We have been corrupted by the allure of debt, sacrificing future development for the sake of present spending and tax cuts.

Lastly came Lyndon Baines Johnson's Great Society. Johnson was right to use government to do more to protect Americans from the misfortunes of capitalism and racial inequality. But he went

When the one man was fetched by an attractive young nurse, he got up, smiled, and said to her, "Nice day outside, eh?"

Both had the comportment of the gentleman American farmer, the guys who, when called to duty, did their duty - a long time ago.

Like many of you reading this article, I've encountered these men frequently in my life, but increasingly less so. I'm in my mid-40s. I came across them much more often 20 years ago.

I recall another such instance in the early 1990s. I pulled off I-95 in rural Virginia, early in the morning. It was only my fiancé and I - before all the kids we have now. We stopped at a McDonald's. Sitting there was a group of old men. They were talking about "The Big One," about "W-W-Two." One was describing what it was like at the Battle of the Bulge, as the others listened intently.

I wonder about those men at that McDonald's in Virginia. Are they still alive? Perhaps half of them are, too far and tried to bind voters to the Democratic Party with a web of social programs.

In each case, a good idea was taken to excess. A government that was energetic and limited was turned into one that is vague and fiscally unsustainable. A government that was trusted and oriented around long-term visions is now distrusted because it tries to pander to the voters' every momentary want. A government that devoted its resources toward future innovation and development now devotes its resources to health care for the middle-class elderly.

We need to have a serious debate about the future role of our government, and yet our leaders carry on separate debates while disparaging each other. Does government encourage long-term innovation or leave behind long-term debt for short-term expenditure? Does government nurture an enterprising citizenry or a secure but less energetic one?

The question is not whether government is inherently good or evil, but what government does.

I'm struggling here to provide a picture of what I regrettably know is a dying breed, a special American that my kids will not encounter in their mid-40s. What a loss that will be. These WWII vets are the essence of Americana. Norman Rockwell would have painted them for the Saturday Evening Post. And they are nearing extinction. Two decades from now, a handful will be left, and they won't be shooting the breeze in the hospital waiting room or local McDonald's.

That brings me to another image that sticks with me:

Speaking of Norman Rockwell, I live in a quintessential American small-town: the main street with the flags, trees, barber shops, old movie theatre, churches, and people who know your name. After you cross the railroad tracks to leave town, drive about three miles, you come to a cemetery. Whizzing past that cemetery on Memorial Day literally gives pause. It looks like every second or third tombstone is festooned with a tiny American flag. Could that be possible?

Sure, it could. My town (probably like yours) was founded in the 19th century. From then on, America's men went to war. From the Civil War to World War I to World War II to Korea to Vietnam, among other conflicts, each generation served and died. Most died years after getting home and starting families with their sweethearts. The flags at the cemetery bear witness.

Sadly, we're currently amid a period when we'll observe a palpable increase in the flags at the cemetery, and a corresponding decrease in the gentlemen talking about the war at the hospital or McDonald's. It's a process that's irreversible. There's nothing we mere mortals can do about it. It's in God's hands.

But there is something you can do. When you see

Buckling up simple way to save lives

By Carol Rawson,

Director, TxDOT Traffic Operations Division All of us are faced with hundreds, if not thousands, of decisions every day. Most don't involve life or death matters, but there is one simple decision that does have life-altering consequences. Choosing to wear a seat belt every time you're in a vehicle is one of those decisions. It's one act that can save your life or the life of someone you love. And it's also campaign began eleven years ago, the state's seat belt use rate has steadily climbed, and now almost 94 percent of motorists in Texas buckle up. The net effect is fewer deaths and injuries. TxDOT's crash statics indicate that 95 percent of the 778,448 Texans involved in crashes in 2010 where there were no injuries were wearing seat belts.

Texas now ranks seventh in the nation for seat belt use. In spite of all the progress we've made, one group of motorists remains significantly less likely to buckle up. That group is pickup truck drivers and passengers. Since roughly one out of every four vehicles registered in Texas is a pickup truck and pickups are twice as likely as passenger vehicles to roll over in a crash, that's cause for concern. According to a recent study by the Texas Transportation Institute, only 80 percent of pickup truck passengers buckle up. Compare that to the more than 90 percent of passengers in all other types of vehicles who regularly put on their seat belts. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that half of pickup drivers who died in traffic crashes in 2010 were not wearing a seat belt.

sense - financial or otherwise. While a " ticket for not wearing a seat belt can cost anywhere from $25 to $250 plus court costs that drive up the expense even more, drivers and passengers who do not wear seat belts put themselves at risk for the greatest cost of all - serious injury or death. Depending on the type of vehicle, wearing a seat belt reduces the risk of fatal injury by up to 60 percent.

For motorists who need the extra incentive to buckle up, law enforcement will be out in force on Texas streets and highways between May 21 and June 3 - including the Memorial Day holiday weekend - looking for and issuing a citation to drivers and passengers who aren't wearing seat belts. It comes down to this: if you're not buckled up, expect to pay up. It doesn't matter what kind of vehicle you're in. It doesn't matter where you're sitting. It doesn't matter if it's day or night. The smart choice is to buckle up, every time, everywhere, and to make sure everyone in your vehicle does the same. Buckling up is the one simple decision that all of us can make every day to save not only our own lives but also those of our loved ones. Click It or Ticket. It's the law.

Whether you're the driver or a passenger sitting in the front seat or the back, Texas law now requires everyone in a vehicle to be secured by a seat belt. Children under the age of 8 must be in a child safety seat or booster seat unless they are taller than 4 feet 9 inches.

Most Texans are buckling up, thanks to the Texas Department of Transportation's annual Click It or Ticket safety campaign. Every May, thousands of local law enforcement agencies join the Texas Department of Public Safety to ticket anyone who isn't wearing a seat belt or whose children aren't properly secured.

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting May 29 with Boss Lion Steve Hall in charge.

We had 14 members and four guests this week - Past District Gov. Bill Auvenshine and Scarlet, Nathan, and Daniel Estlack.

Lion Mike Word presented the program on the Snack Pak 4 Kids program which provides healthy snacks over the weekend to elementary age children who might not have other sources of food for those days. The program operates in several Panhandle communities and was founded by Clarendon High School graduate Dyron Howell. The cost to provide weekend snacks is about $135 per kid per school year, and Lion Word said $4,000 would operate the program in Clarendon for a school year. The club voted to donate $135 to the program, and others interested in supporting Snack Pak 4 Kids can visit snackpak4kids.org.

There being no further business, we were adjourned.

FDA Approves Treatment for Plague

Levaquin (levofloxacin) previously noted to be used in the treatment of respiratory, urinary and skin infections has been recently approved by the FDA for the treatment of plague (a bacterial infection that is rare and may cause death). This approval was based on a study in test animals.

Only 1,000 to 2,000 cases of plague occur throughout the world each year. Bubonic plague (infection of the lymph nodes), pneumonic plague (infection of the lungs), and septicemic plague (infection of the blood) are the three most common forms of plague which can be spread to humans. Plague may be contracted through bites from infected fleas, and contact with infected animals or humans. Symptoms of plague may vary depending on the type. Plague has been known to occur in New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado in the past. While side effects may occur while taking Levaquin, the benefit of being treated with this product outweighs the risks associated with plague. Streptomycin, doxycycline, and tetracycline have previously been approved for the treatment of plague.

Clarendon High School students were very successful at state UIL academic meet this spring. The Number Sense team of Hyungmo Jung, Jordan Luna, Nathan Dziedzic, and Jerami Johnson placed 3rd at the UIL State Academic Meet in Austin. Jung was 8th place overall and Luna 9th.

This completes a historic year for the team as they qualified for their first trip to Austin after winning district and regional competitions. Jung also finished a stellar year in Mathematics competition by winning the bronze medal in that event. His score would have made him a state champion in 2A classification, and the contest director said he'd never seen scores this high in 1A state math competition before.

Lydia Howard competed in two events, and brought home the state gold medal in Headline Writing. Howard had a superb year in the event, winning district and placing 3rd in regional competition to go along with her 1st place state finish. She also competed in the Science contest.

These students represented Clarendon High School very well, and sponsors are proud of their accomplishments.

Texas named a leading state for small business

AUSTIN - In recognition of National Small Business Week, Texas Workforce Commissioner Representing Employers Tom Pauken shared some good news about our state's positive climate for small businesses.

Texas ranked No. 2 in the nation for friendliness toward small businesses, just behind Oklahoma, and is the sixth-easiest place to start a small enterprise, according to a new survey promoted by Thumbtack.com.

This encouraging, two-month study of 6,022 small businesses comes on the heels of good news on the Texas jobs front – a 6.9 percent unemployment rate in April, down from 8 percent a year ago. Texas continues to trend well below the national unemployment rate of 8.1 percent.

"Having been a small businessman myself, this is great news for those contemplating setting up shop in Texas," Commissioner Pauken said. "We're 430,000 small businesses strong, and we hope to welcome thousands more new startups in the near future.

Thumbtack.com, a national online business linking more than 250,000 small businesses with potential clients, cooperated with the Kauffman Foundation to craft the survey. The survey ranked states along 15 metrics. Texas scored "A" grades in nine of the categories. Among the questions asked, the survey had business owners rate the "friendliness" of state government toward small business.
